MARRIAGES.

McRAE—O'BRYANT—At the Methodist Church in Ebenezer, Miss., March 14, 1867, by Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, Rev. J. W. McRae, of Acona, Miss., to Miss Lota O'Bryant, of Ebenezer.

WELCH—BRUMFIELD—At the residence of Hon. S. P. Richardson, near Franklinton, La., March 14 1867, by Rev. N. A. Roberts, Mr. C. C. Welch to Miss Lucy Brumfield, both of Washington parish.

COOK—DUTSCH—At the home of the bride, Tchefuncta, La., March 18, 1867, by Rev. Jno. B. Kent, Mr. Archie R. Cook to Miss Louisa S. Dutsch, both of St. Tammany parish, La.

There is no reason why one should have a cough any length of time. All that is needed to allay soreness of the throat or to free the bronchial tubes from irritating mucus is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is a wonderful cough-cure, and should be in every medicine-chest.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The embankment at Rescue, Miss., has given way. Other levees on the Mississippi side stand firm.

The Senate will devote the major portion of the week to the consideration of the Anglo-American arbitration treaty.

A tornado struck Texas on March 18. Damage is reported from Denton, Fort Worth, Sherman, McKinney and Plano.

The temperance society of an Ohio town recently purchased the only saloon in the town limits, and turned all the fixtures with appropriate ceremonies.

Thursday two new gunboats were launched at San Francisco for the navy. These boats are the last of the six composite gunboats authorized by the Fifty-third Congress to be floated.

By a decision of the State Supreme Court, on March 19, Governor Pingree, who since the last election has also been holding the office of mayor of Detroit, was ousted from the latter office and a special election is ordered for April 5.

The march toward State and municipal civil service reform, in which New Orleans is well in the van, still keeps up. The Minnesota Senate has just passed a civil service bill which assures a better class of officials for both St. Paul and Minneapolis, placing all, or nearly all, of the municipal officers of those cities under civil service rules.

THERE is a right way to paint and a wrong way. The right way is to have the best paint—Pure White Lead (see list of genuine brands) and Linseed Oil—applied by a practical painter. The wrong way is to get some mixture about which you know nothing and apply it yourself or have some inexperienced, irresponsible person do it.

FREE By using National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, any desired shade is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application.

National Lead Co., 1 Broadway, New York.

A wind storm on March 19 visited Louisiana and Mississippi, doing much damage. Jackson, Miss., was in the edge of the storm, and several buildings were blown down and unroofed. The damage in Louisiana was over a wide area, reaching from Calcasieu to Concordia. It is reported that three lives were lost in the storm.

The Weather Bureau has warned the residents in the threatened districts of Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas to remove from the region of danger because of the expected high water. The water is now running over the levee at Modoc, Ark. Reports from Helena, Greenville, Vicksburg and Natchez show that the levees are holding well, and precautions have been taken to prevent a crevasse.

It is said that Mr. Cleveland will become the senior partner of Cleveland, Carlisle & Stetson. Mr. Carlisle and Mr. Stetson are already private counsel for J. Pierpont Morgan's banking firm.

When energy born of desperation, the faithful defenders of the Mississippi lines of levee have so far kept back the water. Thirty miles north of Rosedale, where there is the greatest danger of a break, there are now between 2000 and 3000 men engaged in the work of fighting back the water by means of sacks filled with earth.

FOREIGN.

Arrangements have been made for the simultaneous lighting of bonfires on every prominent height in Great Britain on the night of the anniversary of Queen Victoria's coronation.

The Prince of Wales has, for the twelfth consecutive year, been elected Grand Master of Mark Master Masons.

Emperor William of Germany had recently taken a notion that the Fatherland ought to be possessed of as fine a navy as an army; but from the unsympathetic action of the Reichstag it does not look as if his desire would be gratified.

The Cretan chiefs, mayors and notabilities are signing an address to the foreign admirals declaring that the Cretans' sole desire is union with Greece. The Cretans are also signing an address asking King George not to withdraw the Greek troops from Crete.

The sinking of a Greek transport by an Austrian warship has served to add to the gravity of the situation in Southeastern Europe. The incident serves to prove that the powers are in earnest in their determination to coerce Greece, and will not hesitate to adopt violent measures if a pacific blockade fails to accomplish the purpose in view.

While the Arlington Academy (Arlington, Ga.) was in session on Monday, the building was demolished by a cyclone. The bodies of ten children have been taken from the ruins, and ten more are fatally injured. The professors are badly hurt.

HOW I WOULD BE REMEMBERED.

BY ALICE PACKARD LUICK.

When quietly I am lying beneath the churchyard shade,
I would not be remembered by the cutting words I've said;
Nor leave a wound still bleeding from a cruel thrust I've made.

I would not by my presence cast a shadow o'er a heart,
Nor by one look or action cause the guarded tear to start;
But bear the balm of healing to soothe each painful smart.

I'd understand the heartaches, understand them by my own;
Guide where I had been mistaken, lead where I had walked alone,
Sympathize before the golden opportunity had flown.

The Constitution of Divine Love.

BY BISHOP KRENER.

The earliest sense we have of God's love is that felt upon the forgiveness of sin. It comes without expectation, because a repenting sinner seeks pardon. "Save, Lord, or I perish;" "O wretched man that I am," are the burden of his cry. He may possibly, along with this, have a thought of receiving that change of heart which Christ declared to be the "sine qua non" of access to the kingdom of God. The thought of praying for love does not come within the field of his repentance. And yet this is the first thing he is conscious of when forgiven, that he loves God, because he now realizes that God loves him.

He had expected a sense of pardon, and this he has received. But he has much more: he sees that Christ died for him; and religion seems to be the art of knowing that He died for me. The love that he feels has wholly dissipated the fear of death. He is sure that if he died to-night, he would be saved. "Perfect love casteth out fear," and he never expects to have any less fear than he now has. He realizes that "there is no fear in love." Along with this is the wonder that God should have loved him, and with it there comes a sense of humility as he contemplates the distance there is between the Creator and his creatures. There is no state too lowly to express his devotion to the Son of God:

"Overwhelmed with thy stupendous grace,
I shall not in thy presence move."

He now also realizes for the first time the idea of Sonship—an idea that never could by possibility find access to the mind of a convicted sinner. His idea of deliverance from condemnation never included the thought of a filial relation to God. "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." The surprise of such a relation is well expressed by the disciples when Christ had stilled the sea, and they awoke to find themselves within a few feet of the One that made the world, "What manner of man is this!" The thought of such a translation, from mere service to Sonship, with its infinite possibilities, seizes, rather than fills, the soul with "rapturous awe and silent love." "Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ."

He now waits to prove God's perfect will. A devotion now sets in that is like the impulse given by the Creator to a newly made planet. Through eternity itself shall this sense of holiness bear the spirit forward—a divine breath of life which kindled at the source of being. This love of Christ and this hatred of sin shall increase with the ages to come. The nature of faith has now, for the first time, become evident. Its sudden power of apprehending God, of seeing the invisible; "the evidence of things not seen," that are present, and of realizing things that are hoped for, that lie far out of sight, in the future, "the city out of sight"—all this carries with it the consciousness of having an entirely new and divinely imparted spiritual sense. A love of the Holy Scriptures, and the delight which is felt in the society of holy men, in the place of prayer, and in prayer itself; the certainty that the Lord that made the world is the one who hath forgiven his sins; the abounding joy at the sight and sounds of nature, above, beneath, about, all telling with new voices that he is a child of God, dearly beloved—these are some of the marvels that accompany that first sense of love which the Spirit gives at the instant of conversion, when we are "born again."

Surely this love is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Spirit. It is by faith through Christ, says the apostle, that we have access into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God. It reaches away to the future, being the realization of an invisible life. "Not only so," he adds, "but there are qualities in this gift of love which are brought out by tribulation." Like aniline, which contains all the colors of light, yet is in itself colorless, until it has a mordant applied of arsenic or antimony, then it yields the deep tints of Solferino or Magenta dye. So "tribulation" discovers the quality of "patience." The disciples, "when beaten, departed from the presence of the Council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for His name." "And patience worketh experience." They discover that love is not simply a passing affection, but is an ingrain quality, a part of their conscious being; that they love because they know that they are loved. And "experience worketh hope." The very troubles which they experience gives strength to the expectation wrought in them of a heavenly rest.

When the Savior had passed through the sepulchre he arose with a life beyond the grave. He was in a resurrection atmosphere. Now, as it were, approaching his disciples out of eternity, he revealed a body, a person of marvelous qualities and power. Natural in tone and action, he was yet more so in his fellowship. While they stood with him in silence and awe about the fish and bread he had prepared on the shore of Tiberias, he revealed to them the infinite love—something which as yet they knew not. The repeated inquiry, "Do you love me?" was answered, but it was asked again and again until it must have impressed them that no ordinary love was meant. And when afterward the Spirit was sent, and they were filled with this divine love which he had so repeatedly sought, then they saw why he had entrusted to this love the care of his church, his lambs and his sheep. It was a revelation of God's love for them, and Christ's love for them, which until then they knew not—a love more than any love which they felt for each other: "Lovest thou me more than these?" What an amazing discovery that beyond the river, in the realm of eternity, "all that life is love"!

The qualities into which love develops under the pressure of the world, and also in the presence of death, suggests the infinite source whence that love is derived. Looking back, rather than forward, to Him who predestinated us unto the adoption of children, by Jesus Christ to himself, before the foundation of the world, we are introduced to the first ocean of love. And then to Him in whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace; to Him that is now at the right hand of God, that maketh intercession for us, we are introduced to the second unfathomable deep of love. Nothing in time, says the apostle, can separate us from Christ's love for us; and nothing in eternity, neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height nor depth, can separate us from God's love for us.

Love is engrossed by the Spirit in the law of spiritual life which He has given us in the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians. All the hidden qualities of this divine essence is there set forth, not in any fragmentary or immature form, but in the celestial harmony of perfect love.

1. In its reflex action upon self; vaunting not itself, not easily provoked, and free from envy.

2. In its thought and regard for others; "seeketh not her own, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniqnity, but in the truth."

3. In its relation to God; "beareth all things as from His hand, believeth all things, endureth all things." "It is the Lord; let him do what seemeth him good."

4. All else may fail, but these qualities, never. Love shall abide in all its fullness of light and strength forever.

No wonder the Savior declared the first and greatest law to be the love of God; the love of a son rather than the obedience of a servant. At the close of his earthly career the Savior discoursed of the Spirit as the one who should come from heaven, and remain on earth, and abide permanently with the disciples. "Even the Spirit of truth, whom the world can not receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you." "This Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you," said St. Peter. "If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye." It is this permanent indwelling that constitutes the church "an habitation of God through the Spirit." St. Paul adds, "For God hath not given us the Spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." These great qualities of spiritual life go together, but the greatest of these is "charity."

We now avail ourself of that wonderful treatise of spiritual doctrine and experience, the Methodist Hymn Book—the work mainly of John and Charles Wesley. No treatise can compare with it for evangelical and experimental theology couched in the purest English, and in the choicest sacred lyrics ever employed in the public worship of God. They present a body of Christian truth in a psalmody of unsurpassed poetic merit. Would that every child of every Methodist family were taught this popular statement of Methodist theology! The section of the hymn book under the head of "Sanctification" is specially rich in the experience of love.

"O glorious hope of perfect love!
It lifts me up to things above;
It bears on eagles' wings;
It gives my ravished soul a taste,
And makes me for some moments feast
With Jesus' priests and kings."

"O that I might at once go up!
No more on this side Jordan stop,
But now the land possess!
This moment end my legal years;
Sorrows and sins and doubts and fears,
A howling wilderness."

It will be seen that Charles Wesley in all his hymns gets no nearer the blessing of perfect love than in this one of "earnest hope." The "howling wilderness" on "this side of Jordan" still held him. And yet he has momentary flashes of divine rapture which made him "for some moments feast with Jesus' priests and kings." Mr. Fletcher had the same experience. In Benson's Life, page 206, an account is given of his being "so filled with the love of God that he could contain no more, but cried out, 'O my God, withhold thy hand, or the vessel will burst.'" "But afterward he was afraid he had grieved the Spirit of God, and that he ought rather to have prayed that the Lord would enlarge the vessel, or suffered it to break." In Kingston's life of Mr. Fletcher, page 218, we have the Rev. Mr. Gilpin's account of "the last scene in the life of this incomparable man": ...."A few days before his dissolution he appeared to have reached that desirable point where the last rapturous discoveries are made to the souls of dying saints. Roused, as it were, with the shouts of angels, and kindled into rapture with visions of glory, he broke into a song of holy triumph, which began and ended with the praises of God's unfathomable love."

The hymns translated by Mr. John Wesley from the German and the Spanish are fully equal to any in the book, expressive of rapturous love. The 1004 of our former hymn book specially breathes this infinite love:

"Abundant sweetness while I sing,
Thy love my ravished heart o'erflows;
Secure in thee, my God and King,
Of glory that no period knows."

Perfect love was never professed by Mr. John Wesley. He was peremptory in his denial of such a profession in the Lloyd's Evening Post; so that while he advocated to the last that there was such an experience, he held it only as an essential doctrine of Methodism. While in the hour of his sublime exit he sang, "I'll praise my Maker while I've breath," he still repeated,

"I the chief of sinners am,
But Jesus died for me."

Bishop Asbury, as late as 1803, says in his diary, "I feel it my duty to speak chiefly on perfection, and, above all, to strive to attain that which I preach." In 1811 he says, "I feel great consolation and perfect love."

These great persons, in their experience of divine love, show that there are moments when that love seems to be poured directly upon the soul from its original source; so transcendent in its rapture and in such measure that the spirit of man is not able to endure it long, until the soul is about to leave the body, and then it enters a boundless expanse of love.

Usually the saint of God is fed day by day through that "faith that works by love." His faith realizes the atonement, and that brings upon his heart its reflex action of silent awe and humble love.

Drouth Sufferers.

MR. EDITOR: Allow me a little space to acknowledge receipt of the following donations from the readers of the ADVOCATE: Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., editor NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, $4; Rev. M. M. Black, Gloster, Miss., $2; Mr. M. A. Green, Marianna, Miss., $10; Mr. B. T. Lewis, Poland, La., for J. L. N. Brittian, $2.50; total, $18.50. All of which I have sent off to purchase corn. I made an order to-day and deposited $30 for corn for our drouth sufferers, which will pay for 120 bushels of corn, which will bread 120 families one week. Allow me, in behalf of the destitute, to thank the donors for their kind and generous gift. May our heavenly Father bless and prosper them abundantly during this year!

Bro. Green wanted to know how our governor could prevent other States from helping the drouth sufferers. Maybe I was not as explicit on that as I should have been. There is no law, nor no power under the heavens, that could prevent other States from sending help. But if our people were to send a man into another State to solicit aid without the governer's consent, then the governor could have him arrested and lodged in jail for obtaining goods under a false pretense. You see our governor says Louisiana is able to take care of itself; and it looks like he means exactly what he says, as he does not seem to take much stock in the welfare of the people.

With our best wishes for the ADVOCATE and its readers, I am,

Fraternally, J. LOUIS MOORE.

A Trip to Missouri.

This so far has been a very pleasant and profitable visit to me. On my way to Missouri I spent one day in St. Louis. While there I went out to see our famous Dr. Lee. I had not seen him since I met him ten years ago in Atlanta, when he married me to one of the best women that ever blessed a man's life.

Our meeting in Independence was indeed a grand success. Independence is a city of 6,000. It is located about four miles from the Missouri river, and in one of the finest sections of country I have ever seen. The soil seems to be specially adapted to the cultivation of vegetables. I was told that there had been 700 bushels of Irish potatoes gathered from one acre in a season. The people also raise great quantities of corn, oats and wheat. I saw an ear of corn that measured 35 inches in length, 8 inches in diameter, and had on it over 12,000 grains of corn. However, it may be in justice to myself to tell you it was an artificial ear.

The only objection I have to the place is that there are too many Mormons. Of the six thousand people two thousand are of that class. However, I am told that they are good citizens. Up here they call themselves "Latter Day Saints." They accept the most of our Bible, but add much more to it. They have a beautiful lot in Independence, and they are expecting to find some morning a fine temple on it built by our Lord.

We went to Kansas City, the other day, to make a special visit to our Bible Training-school. It is a big thing. The building is magnificent. It is located on a high bluff overlooking the Missouri river. We have there a fine corps of teachers, and they are doing a grand work for our beloved Methodism. When our people find out what we have in Kansas City in the way of a Bible school, they will fill it with young ladies who want to be trained to do intelligent work in the church. The school has about forty-five boarders, when it ought to be crowded with young ladies to its utmost capacity. While studying the wonderful advantages of this college, I thought of so many bright girls who are through with their literary education that ought to be in this institution preparing for church work. No one can travel as I do and not be impressed with the church's great need of more trained workers.

Let me say that I don't think that it pays to send a young lady to this school that has not received a good education, at least, in one of our best high schools. A young lady of a very limited education can't take the course. We were delighted with the young ladies we met there. It made us feel very much at home to meet our Mississippi friend, Miss Streater.

We were more than delighted with Miss Gibson, the president of the institution. She is a fine character, and well prepared for the high position she holds. As we came away from the school we prayed that this institution might be put on the heart and conscience of every woman in the church.

We also made a short visit to the home of that great and good man, Bishop Hendrix. He has a lovely home, and deep down in my heart I thanked God for it. A man that has given the best of his life and all of his life to the cause of Christ deserves a good home. As we told him and his good wife good-by and came away, we felt that we wanted to be a better and a more useful man.

But we must not close this letter until we tell your readers something about our visit to the Armour Packing Co.'s establishment. It is an immense affair—a great cruel show. The buildings cover several acres. The company, I understand, employ a thousand men. When we saw so many beeves, hogs and sheep killed here in order to sustain the life of man, we thought of the substitution idea that is so clearly taught in the Old and the New Testament, as well as in universal nature. As we walked around through the blood of these slain animals we could but think of many that tread through the blood of our Lord and count it an unholy thing. Thank God there is a place where we will see it no more. It hurts me to see men crucify my Lord afresh and put him to an open shame. I felt more sorry for the poor sheep than any. They made no resistance at all. They have a goat to lead them up to the slaughter-pen, and then he slips out and leaves them there to die. It looked very much like the devil's goats we have seen among some men and women in the church, who lead off our young people, and thereby get them into trouble. But we must close this, lest it find the waste-basket.

We are now at Richmond assisting in another revival. If we mistake not our faith, we are going to have a great time. When this meeting is over, then we shall return again to Dixie.

You may talk of your rich North and your great West, but give me old Mississippi. Among the galaxy of stars that shine in the skies of our great Union there is none that glitters with more lustre and beauty than Mississippi.

Praying the blessing of the Father upon the readers of the ADVOCATE, I am, Yours fraternally,

W. M. MCINTOSH.

Selections.

A Romanist Opinion.

L. Abbe Martin, a well-known French Romanist priest, has been making a stir by certain truthful remarks about Protestantism. In a recent article he thus described Methodism:

"By reviving every member of Protestantism, Methodism has created a multitude of centers, each with an intrinsic force really wonderful, and has given to them this twofold purpose—to seek inwardly a living experience of evangelical truth, and outwardly to propagate this truth, principally in opposition to Romanism. These are no longer simply individuals called together by chance, but a formidable army, composed of legions of the whole Protestant world, prepared to assault the Roman Catholic Church.

"Every Protestant electrified by the Methodist current feels a certain obligation—first, to possess in himself the divine life, and then to combat, attack, resist, and spread his belief to the remotest parts of the earth. From this comes that enthusiastic fervor which we see in individuals and associations—that absence of the fear of man, that need of expansion, that courage, and also, since I must say it, that generosity in seeking to win others which seem to embrace the world in its loving arms, while for this purpose it pours out its gold, its literature, and its persuasive words.

"What has been the result of this revival? The introduction of Methodism into the Protestant world has not been, as some superficial observers have believed, an event of small importance, and much less an event to be ridiculed by calling it hypocrisy or buffoonery. This revival has shaken the whole Protestant world from one pole to the other. In order to be convinced of this, one needs only to study or observe the events of the day. In its rapid and prodigious development it has invaded, dominated and electrified Protestantism in Germany, Switzerland, France, England, and the United States of America. Its freedom from any particular form permits it to penetrate all kinds of churches, national and independent. Its action on the political, social and religious world has been incalculable.

"Methodism has not yet been profoundly studied by us, for which fact we are to be blamed. It has operated not only on the learned, but on the masses, and communicated its spirit to all. The religious life of to-day, the life of action and expansion, has its center in Methodism. Orphanages, works of charity, educational institutions, propagations of the truth, evangelization, preaching, and practice—all this has been generated by Methodism, and all lives to-day through Methodism.

"This is the church of the future which the Roman Catholic Church will have to meet."—Exchange.

From the Interior.

Snnday-school superintendents, like poets, are born, not made. One of the greatest needs of the Methodist Church in the interior is effieient, live, active Sunday school superintendents, teachers, and workers. Some of them, men of sense, enterprise and thrift, are lacking in the gifts, grace and "get ups" necessary for Sunday-school work. It is a drag, a dead drag, from introduction to the benediction. The school looks like a lot of innocent lambs without a shepherd. The whole thing is dull, stupid, and insipid. No wonder the school does not prosper, and has no interest, and not one particle of attraction. It is a dead pull up a steep grade all the time. No wonder the little ones get the idea that religion and worship is a round of dull monotony and of dead forms. Some men have life enough and vigor enough in everything but in religion. This is a drag and drudgery from first to last. I often wonder if some of our so-called Sunday-schools are not the instruments of evil instead of the means of good. First-class preachers, teachers and superintendents are few and far between. Oh, if that brother would only live up and move off like he meant business, like he was in earnest, how glad the children would be, and how the Sunday-school would grew! Some men have a dolorous tone, a pious whine, for everything that pertains to worship—preaching, praying, reading hymns, Scripture lessons, opening the Sunday-school, and hearing the lessons. It is all dead and dry as dust.

Brother, next Sunday get a move on you, and do things like you meant business, as if you were alive and meant to worship the living God. Dead men, dead forms, and dead worships are not well pleasing to God, and they are killing to religion.

In the interior I believe ninety per cent. of the teachers and scholars never look at the Sunday-school lessons till Sunday morning. They put it off till the last, and then get it in a hurry. It is very easy to go through a Sunday-school and pick out the teachers that are teachers—those that have made preparation for teaching. The real teachers are, comparatively, few. "Many are called, but few chosen." The same is true of the scholars. Some study their lessons, and some do not; perhaps one in ten gets the lesson so as to know it and understand it. The others drag along, more dead than alive. We are not getting the best results from our country Sunday-schools. Some of them are better adapted to develop unbelievers than men and women of strong faith. The Jews, specially the Pharisees, went to ruin and were cursed of God while engaged in the forms and ceremonies of religion. They were diligent in tithing mint and anise and cummin—things that smelt pious—but they forgot good morals. They wore the garb of saints, but lived the lives of sinners. We should take heed lest we fall after the same example of unbelief. The Word preached, read, expounded, taught and studied, is not effective nor efficient unless it is mixed with faith by the preacher, reader, hearer, teacher, or student. Faith is the general principle of all pious progress. I could heartily wish the evils here alluded to were confined to Sunday-schools in the interior. Now and then in the remote interior sections one drops in on a Sunday-school where the superintending, the teaching, the singing and reciting are all first-class. Most of this comes of having a pious, efficient superintendent.

At one place Miss C. was teacher of the Bible class. She was educated, sprightly, vivacious, and brimful of life. She played cards for prizes, danced all the fashionable dances with the boys, ran horse-races for fun, was ring leader in every frolic, shot craps with the boys for candy, nuts, bonbons and kisses. This was the leading teacher of the first class in an interior Sunday-school. If dancers lead the dances, they will all fall into the german. Those who shoot craps for candy will crack jokes over Scripture in Sunday-school. By the way, crap-shooting is fast coming to be a fashionable diversion with our young people in some sections. In some places we have prayers in the parlor at nine to be followed by cards and crap-shooting till twelve or one. The old folks snooze and snore up stairs in utter ignorance, or unconcern, about what goes on in the parlor below. Somebody ought to wake up, or be woke up by a sharp blow. At first cards and craps must be omitted on Sunday and Sunday night, but pretty soon some one says, "The better the day the better the deed," and at it they go on Sunday as on other days. The down grade to hell is stoop and awfully slick. The start is slow, but soon the speed is a mile a minute, or more.

I wish these things were confined to the interior, where no one would see them or hear of them. The country catches the contagion in town. Alas! alas! VIATOR.

Notes of Encouragement.

The first preacher in the Mississippi Conference to raise his assessment in full for foreign missions this year is W. A. Terry, P. C., Tranquil circuit. Bro. Terry has secured all his assessments in cash and good subscriptions. May the Lord abundantly bless him and the people of his charge!

M. L. Burton, Wesson, writes that he has about secured all assessments on his charge in cash and good subscriptions. May the Holy Spirit be poured out on people and preacher!

B. S. Rayner, P. C., Fayette circuit, writes me a jubilant note saying he has collected $60 on his assessment for foreign missions, $50 of which had already been forwarded to the Conference treasurer, and that $50 more had been secured in good subscriptions. Besides all this, three missionary societies had been organized with an aggregate membership of one hundred and fifty! "They are infusing new life into the church, and are helping us in our missionary collections," he writes. Of course, they are doing that! Who ever knew a missionary society to hinder the preacher in his work, or interfere with the collections? Oh, short-sighted pastor who refuses to organize his Sunday schools and the women of his charge into missionary societies! Bro. Rayner also writes: "To-day I forward thirty-two new subscribers to 'The World for Christ.' I have preached five times on the subject of missions and distributed considerable literature. My charge seems prosperous along all lines. We are having quite a number of accessions to the church; finances are well up to date." Good for Fayette circuit and the faithful preacher in charge! May God bless them according to the riches of his glory in Christ Jesus!

Ira B. Robertson, P. C., Lake circuit, has forwarded a list of subscribers to "The World for Christ."

At Canton a Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society has been organized, and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has been awakened from a slumber of six months and reorganized. Eighty-five copies of "The World for Christ" have been subscribed for. The Sunday-school has been organized into a missionary society, and a collection is taken the first Sunday in each month. Twenty-seven accessions to the church.

Reports from the presiding elders are coming in slowly, but all write encouragingly and hopefully.

If the preachers will write to me about what they and their people are doing for the missionary cause, I shall be glad, and will reply promptly. The second Sunday in April I am to spend with Bro. Keen at Laurel and Ellisville; the second Sunday in May with Bro. Forsythe at Poarlington, and the second Sunday in June with Bro. Lewis at Crystal Springs. I hope to get to all the District Conferences and to as many camp meetings as possible this year.

T. L. MELLEN, Miss'y Sec'y.

Bible Distribution.

The attention of all who are interested in Bible distribution is called to the following facts connected with the work of the American Bible Society:

1. By organizing a Bible Committee composed of five or seven persons, and raising the sum of $25, or more, any community desiring it can have Scriptures kept on hand in their midst, so that they can be purchased at the mere cost of manufacture.

2. For supplying Sunday-school children who can read, Bibles can be had from the undersigned in every instance at the mere cost of manufacture, and at half this amount for supplying poor children.

3. The American Bible Society is very hard pressed for means to carry on its noble work, both in home and foreign fields; hence the undersigned would most earnestly urge upon all lovers of the Word of God in Mississippi and Louisiana the following requests:

1. Organize a Bible Committee, raise $25, or more, and establish a depository of A. B. S. Scriptures in every place of any importance where there is none, so that the people, especially the poor, can get the Word of Life cheap.

2. Remind all who love the children of the A. B. S. Sunday-school supply work, and see that every child who can read has a Bible of its own.

3. Call the attention of all good people to the work and needs of the A. B. S., and urge them, both by precept and example, to come up to the help of the Society in its noble work by making liberal offerings thereto. Because of a lack of means to furnish them, many needy and benighted ones are pleading in vain for the Word of God.

Offerings can be sent either to the undersigned at 725 Camp street, New Orleans, or to Wm. Faulko, Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me to state through your columns why I located and why I joined the M. E. Church. It was not because of persecutions by presiding elder, or any other persecution; nor was it my unwillingness to go to any circuit the Bishop might send me, whether it be Goose Hollow, Red Oak, or any other circuit, because I have served some of the poorest circuits before; had plenty to eat, plenty to wear, and came out with flying colors, going up to Conference with as good clothes and as good showing as any preacher. The reason I located is this: Four years ago, while traveling the Pouchatoula circuit, God impressed me with a call to the evangelistic work. I did not want to leave the itinerancy, for I know that the work of an evangelist would call me away from home for months at a time. During the four years God gave me great results, but still the Spirit kept calling, "Go into the field." Last year at the Montgomery Camp Meeting, kneeling in my tent at the midnight hour, when all was quiet and still, I heard that sweet voice still, "Go into the field." I begged and pleaded that my Father might let me stay in the Conference, but still it was, "Go;" and, to retain my sanctification, I had to keep consecrated. Consecration being my part, and sanctifying God's part, I know not what will come next; but where he leads I will follow. My life and my all is consecrated, Lord, to thee. I never felt the presence of the Lord more than in the last two months, owning, blessing, and leading. The reason I deposited my certificate of location with the M. E. Church was this: When I went home from Conference, and moved back to my old home, with my kindred and friends, to work for the salvation of sinners and sanctification of believers, the church which licensed me to preach and gave me an honorable location locked her doors; turned me out without a shelter to worship under. The M. E. Church threw her doors open and put her arms around me; bid me God-speed to go forward and work for Zion. I asked the prayers of all the brethren, that God will use me as an instrument in his hands of saving thousands of souls.

God is with us here in the meeting at Colfax. The Holy Ghost is falling on the people. Thanking you for the use of your columns, I am,

Yours fully saved and sanctified,
W. T. CURRIE.

P. S.—I do this to correct false reports, and to place myself in the proper light with the people.

Correspondence.

From an Old Subscriber.

DEAR READERS OF THE ADVOCATE: For some years I have been a reader of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and have read many communications that I admired much, and some few that I admired less; but of all that I have read in said paper, there is, nor has been, no communication that I have admired more, and said "Amen!" to more heartily, than to the piece written by Martha Andrews, of Meridian. Her remarks about Meridian life, a city or community where so many persons love to talk about Christ and his love, I am satisfied is more easy to live close to God than in a community where persons are cold and special seasons of worship rare. I am sorry to say that I live in a community where there is much coldness in religious worship; but I hope and pray for better times. Her remarks about how dear old Bro. Woodward is treated by the people of Meridian is an honor to the city at large, and the good words she has to say about her pastor should cheer him up in his ministrations; and that presiding elder who goes to his appointments and makes the woods vocal with the songs of Zion should sing more and louder after reading her cheering words about him; and then, as if to cap it all, what she says about the revival at Central Church, and the differences of opinion about sanctification and the second blessing, is so Christian-like that it seems that all Christians ought to look at and feel about the differences of opinion as she does, and all ought to covet and seek after that blessed peace which passeth all understanding, no matter what name it is called by.

I praise God and rejoice over what I have heard about the revivals at Meridian and elsewhere. God grant that the revival spirit may spread all over this country!

MR. EDITOR: I have just read an article from J. L. Moore in the ADVOCATE, of March 18, relative to the drouth sufferers. I am well pleased that you should give space in the ADVOCATE for this noble cause. And I want to say that the church throughout the Arcadia district is suffering greatly. My work—the Summerfield circuit—situated in Lincoln, Claiborne and Union parishes, is about an average of North Louisiana, so far as wealth is concerned. The people are industrious and economical as any in the State, and yet in the bounds of my circuit I find people who are destitute, not having the actual necessaries of life, and some of these people are members of our church. Bro. Moore's cause is a worthy one.

My work is doing but little in the way of growth. The Conference collections untouched, for the reason that there is no money in the country. I can not get subscribers to the ADVOCATE for the same reason. Congregations are large and appreciative. Our people are spiritual, and, with a faith in God that will not be denied, we are looking for better times. B. H. SHEPPARD, P. C.

Mrs. H. W. Foote, of North Miss. Conference
Mrs. R. R. Parker, of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

The following is the annual report of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Florence E. Russ, to the Parsonage and Home Mission Society at its recent meeting at Felicity:

"Our Parsonage and Home Mission Society is no longer struggling for existence. It has been touched by the finger of God and is destined to live. Shall we not feel honored to be counted as members? The work is three-fold; first, to assist in building and repairing of parsonages; second, to maintain mission schools among the mountain whites and the Cubans in Florida; third, home mission work. Our field is the south and southwest. When we consider that the W. P. and H. M. Society in the first six years of its organization aided and built half as many parsonages as had been built in a century before, no wonder Dr. Morton terms our organization the strong right arm of the Board of Church Extension, and calls upon the brethren to 'help the women who are trying to help you and your families to come up to the measure of their great and holy ambition.'

"This is the decennial year of our society, and efforts will be made to commemorate it worthily by raising $20,000 for the general work. This work of faith and labor of love is being enlarged and strengthened; faithful service is being rendered. When God calls us to work he prepares the way. To quote the words of one of our Bishops, 'Every pastor should respond to our requests, because the good already accomplished by this organization is an incentive to increased zeal and activity in its behalf. Destitute fields have been successfully occupied that could not otherwise have been entered. Other difficult fields would have been abandoned of necessity but for the helping hand extended by the godly women of this society.'

"The purpose of this convention is to gather up the results of the year's work for instruction and encouragement, and in the light of past success plan for the future. Not until the work is thoroughly organized and systematized can we be in direct touch with all parts of the State and furnish a perfectly accurate report.

"Three applications for aid were received during the year. Partly from a depleted treasury, and other reasons, two were rejected. Aid was granted Crowley amounting to $50. We have donated $100 for parsonage at Prudhomme City; the amount will be forwarded in a few days, and two applications are under consideration—only a question of money.

"The office of corresponding secretary is a most responsible one, and upon her faithful labors, assisted by the treasurer, depends much of the success of their auxiliary, and through them the Conference Society is strengthened. Promptness and punctuality in sending reports is very important. We are always glad to hear from the auxiliaries, and be assured that no requests for information or help of any kind will be burden a letter that it shall not be welcome.

"May the Holy Spirit guide and direct us all in what is best for the glory and honor of his name.

"Ten auxiliaries were organized during the year, four disbanded and one barely survived organization. We can do no better work than to encourage and direct the energies of the young people in the church; teach them to do real practical work through the junior auxiliaries.

"A report from our society was presented at the last session of the Louisiana Annual Conference, and thirty-five copies of Our Homes secured. Our Homes, the official organ of our society, is issued monthly, for the small sum of 50 cents per annum. How can a member feel any interest in the work if she does not take and read the paper. The better acquainted they become with the purposes and plans of the organization the more wisdom they will see in its new subscribers added to the list this year."

We feel sure that it was by mistake that the program of the Easter service for the Scarritt Bible and Training-school was inserted in the W. P. and H. M. column of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE; and lest it should mislead some, we make this statement: The Central Committee of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society is making strenuous efforts to raise a decennial offering of $20,000 to meet pressing demands, and we can not divert the money raised by this organization from its legitimate channel, except by authority of the Central Committee. The Executive Committee of your Conference society is striving to devise means to approximate the apportionment to your Conference; therefore, we urge each auxiliary to use all diligence in raising money this year; but send it to Mrs. Rowan Thayer (Greenwood, Miss.), your Conference treasurer, and through her it will go to your general treasurer to meet the demands for which you, as an organization, are pledged. While we would not restrain one benevolent impulse, nor detract from one worthy purpose, we must meet our obligations as a society before responding to other appeals

Yours in Christian love,
MRS. J. S. FEATHERSTON,
Conf. Cor. Sec'y.

If men would exert themselves as earnestly and constantly in performing duty as they do in running away from it, they would find it both easy and enjoyable. Life is beautified and ennobled by quickness to see it and readiness to do it.—Presbyterian.

An Experiment.

A New York newspaper once reported a clergyman as saying that the number of words in a Sunday newspaper is very nearly equal to the number of words in the New Testament. There are many, however, who feel that they have abundant time to read the paper, but plead the lack of time as their one great excuse for not reading the Bible. The paragraph suggested to me the question, How much time is actually necessary in order to read the Bible through? I then formed the plan of noting down the amount of time required to read the different books through at an average rate, pausing now and then to make brief memoranda. The intention was not at all to see how much could be read in a given time. I do not believe in hurrying through the Bible as one would hurry through a story-book; but it is my belief that in order to get the full force of a book—in the Bible or out of it—one should read it straight through, and as much of it at a sitting as possible. Reading the whole of Matthew is the best preparation for understanding the last two lines; of Job, for the realization of the triumph of faith; of Ruth or Esther, to get those marvelous stories in all their matchless beauty. Spend two hours some Sunday afternoon in reading the entire glorious prophecy of Isaiah; follow that with an hour and a half with Matthew, and see how the prophecy was fulfilled.

This consecutive reading need not preclude careful and prayerful study of special passages, nor does it militate against reading the same book more slowly, with note and comment. One of the greatest foes to an appreciation of the Bible as literature is scrappy, inconsecutive reading. Once at least, and as often as possible thereafter, read every book in the Bible through from beginning to end with the fewest possible delays and hindrances. Such reading, especially if begun with the prayer, "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law," will enable you to appreciate more thoroughly the Word of God as literature, to gain new revelations of its inexpressible tenderness, its deep pathos, and its unequaled beauty, manifesting the love of God and teaching us his will. You will find some things in the Bible which you didn't know were there.

In my experiment I found that the reading of the first five books of the Bible required an average of an hour and thirty-four minutes each; the books of Samuel, Kings and Chronicles an average of one hour and twenty-nine minutes each; the Psalms, two hours and forty-three minutes; Mark, one hour; Luke, one hour and forty-two minutes; John, one hour; Acts, one hour and thirty-seven minutes; while such books as Second and Third John, Jude, Philemon, Titus, and some of the prophetical books, required only from one to six minutes each. The amount of time required for the entire Old Testament was thirty-eight hours and twenty-seven minutes, and for the New Testament eleven hours and thirty-four minutes.—Prof. F. S. Goodrich, in Epworth Herald.

God will give you the victory if you do your best. You may fail in the acquisition of earthly treasures, but you can not fail to win the crown if you but try. "I, therefore, so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I not as one that beateth the air." How often do our fondest hopes fade in this life! Our cherished plans crumble, but never a soul has failed to win the sweetest joys that truly trusted God. But how few, comparatively, try to win immortal glory! They give all their time to laying up treasures on earth. How soon these treasures vanish away! The heavenly treasures will abide forever. No one can take them from us. Place your treasures in the bank of heaven, and then your life will be a pleasure here and a glorious reality in the world to come.—Exchange.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

Editor Christian Advocate.

MUL-EN-OL is the greatest of all antiseptic dressings. Is a sovereign remedy for healing flesh wounds on man or beast.

A New Cure for Cancer.

Dr Mason, the eminent cancer specialist of Virginia, has a cure that surpasses all former methods. No further need for knives to cut or plasters to burn. Practically painless. No secret discovery and no quackery. A few of the severest cases must go to the Sanitarium for personal attention, but most cases can be treated at home at small cost and cured in a short time. For information and opinion of case, if described, free of charge, write

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. F. B. Ormond, Wesley Chapel, Natchez Miss., March 16, 1897: "Our first Quarterly Conference has passed into history, and to-day the pastor and people of Wesley Chapel enter upon the second quarter with very bright and encouraging prospects indeed. Our presiding elder, Dr. Hunnicutt, has been with us several days, and his words of kind advice, admonition and encouragement have infused into the church a new life, and pastor and people are expecting still better things at Wesley Chapel. It has never been my privilege before to attend as pleasant, agreeable and harmonious Quarterly Conference as the first one with Wesley has had this year. We desire the prayers of the church in behalf of Wesley Chapel. Success to the ADVOCATE!"

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, Ebenezer, Miss., March 17, 1897: "Our first quarterly meeting for the Ebenezer circuit has passed, and, we trust, with good results. The presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Mitchell, was present. He preached with great power and demonstration of the Spirit, presided with dignity, and despatched business with skill and ability. He is one of our best. The financial reports from the stewards for the present quarter showed some improvement. We have about one third of the 'foreign mission' money in hand, and hope to be able to send fifty per cent. of it to our secretary, or all, if possible, by the middle of May. The other collections ordered by the Conference are pretty well secured by cash and subscription. The spiritual condition of our work is on the up grade. We are praying for and expecting great revivals. May the Lord help us in securing subscriptions to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and bless our editor in sending out this sound Christian literature into so many of our homes."

Rev. J. J. Garner, Smyrna, Miss., March 15 1897: "We arrived here (Salem circuit) in December from the Holly Springs district, where we left many friends only to meet new ones in our new field of labor. We have a nice little charge of four churches, a good people to serve, and about as religious as we commonly find them. We feel that the Lord is with us and blessing our labor. We are praying and expecting a good year. The indications are favorable. The Lord has been good to us in giving us a place in his vineyard to work, and in directing the Bishop to send us where he did. Of course, we are trying to do our best by the help of Him who is always willing to help. Thinking it best to take up our foreign missions now, we made the attempt and raised every dollar of it in cash and subscription. Having received the greater part of it in cash, we have been enabled to send twenty dollars to the treasurer of the Foreign Mission Board, and hope to be able to send in the remaining part soon. Feeling that the Lord is removing the difficulties out of the way, we want to walk by faith, and not by sight. 'The Lord is our refuge and strength.'"

Rev. Hyder B. Thomason, Pelican, La., March 11, 1897: "This preacher and his family were graciously received by the good people of Pelican circuit. We had itinerated several years as a country school teacher, and well knew what 'ponnding' meant, for we had been used to the kind that iron gets upon the anvil. But when we got an old-fashioned Methodist ponnding here it melted our hearts into thankfulness to God and love to all mankind. But simultaneously with our arrival we found ourselves, one and all, in the vise-like clutches of 'la grippe,' which seems to have developed an unaccountable fondness (or animosity) for preachers and their families this year. Then the good qualities of our people shone forth. We suffered for no attention and had no want unsupplied. Under the skillful and assiduous treatment of our good Dr. Arn strong we soon recovered. But the kindness of our friends continues; every day brings additional demonstrations of their liberality. They also hear most patiently with their boy preacher's shortcomings, and have the happy faculty of making him feel at home in the pulpit and everywhere else. I have completed the second round of my circuit. Have met every appointment, and have been gratified by large and attentive congregations. The roads have been unspeakably bad; so bad that I have longed for the perfection of aerial navigation. Still I have made about forty pastoral visits—most of them to people who live at such inaccessible places that they were not reached at all by former pastors. I am seeking the lost sheep. Although this work is in the dronth district, our people are in fairly good shape, and we have good prospects for a prosperous year. At a Church Conference, last Sabbath, it was reported that 'none are destitute.' All over the circuit there are signs of spiritual life. Our prayer meetings and Sunday-schools are doing well, but we greatly need an outpouring of the Spirit. I am praying for the same. Oh, that God may give me souls!"

JAMES GREER FULLILOVE.

In the rich fruitage of a well-spent life, extended long beyond the allotted portion, and filled to its close with the realized promise, "He that honoreth me I will honor," James G. Fullilove passed out of time—this little span—into the eternal life beyond on Jan. 31, 1897, aged eighty-seven years two months and seven days.

He was born in Oglethorpe county, Ga., Nov. 24, 1809, growing to manhood in a godly home, where indnstry and thrift were instilled by precept and example, and from which came sons and danghters who have made their impress on their generation for integrity, fidelity and devotion to duty.

He was most happily married on Jan. 3, 1832, to Miss Tabitha Holmes, a woman of beautiful character, blessed and beloved by all who knew her, and whose memory is as ointment poured forth, in fragrance nnfailing. Two sons—Thomas P. and James H. Fullilove—are the surviving children of this union, which was severed by the death of his wife, after more than fifty years of faithful affection. The writer remembers his heart-broken cry when the companion of a lifetime, his best friend, his loyal and wise helpmeet, lay peaceful in her coffin—"I am shipwrecked! I am shipwrecked!"

Mr. Fullilove was born of the Spirit in August, 1833, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, his life thereafter testifying daily to the genuineness of his conversion. In the ardor of business, when every nerve was strung for success, God was still supreme. His integrity was unswerving, his benevolence unbounded, his kindness and courtliness of manner that of a Christian gentleman; for behind all was the humble servant of the Lord Christ, his example and pattern.

In 1835 he moved to Noxubee county, Miss., remaining there until 1845. From thence he again moved to Jackson parish, La., where he lived until 1847, when he came to Caddo parish, his home for the remainder of his long and useful life. He died at the home of his eldest son, Mr. Thos. P. Fullilove, near Shreveport, La.

This was no ordinary life. As we view it through its long vista of years it shines with the steady faithfulness of the stars, true to the highest ideals of strong and noble manhood. His home was always open, its doors swung wide to stranger and friend alike; its hospitality was known far and near; no needy or weary one might ever pass its gates unstrengthened.

We who know them best can almost hear from the far heaven, where these two blessed ones, reunited, are rejoicing, the voice of the King "who shall say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: For I was an hungered and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me. Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

His energy knew no bounds. He was diligent in business, accumulating a large fortune in ante-bellum days, which was swallowed up with the loss of the Confederacy; when, though past middle life, with renewed determination he built a second upon the ruins of the first.

It was with great reluctance that he laid aside the responsibilities and activities of life as the infirmities of age increased. The habits of almost a century and unabated interest in affairs impelled him to continued exertion. The sunset of his days was peacefully spent in the homes of his two sons, where he was ministered to with reverent and tender care and affection; and when the summons came, "It is enough; come up higher," he faded softly out of life as a star in setting sinks from view, and full of the hope of immortality.

The only surviving brother—Mr. J. Tatnm Fullilove—aged eighty five, watched tenderly by the dying bedside. These two brothers had stood side by side through all the vicissitudes of nearly a century of life, and as the shadows of the dark valley crept between their longing, fading vision the pathetic handclasp was as much an earnest of the speedy reunion hoped for as a signal of farewell.

We who remain stand gazing steadfastly up into the open heavens, whither he has departed out of our sight, and long to be there.

He is not dead
Whose good life's labor liveth evermore;
He is but sped
To join the noble gone before.
He is not dead.

A sick woman can't be very amiable or very lovely. She must say good-by to the pleasures of life and to cupid's darts. Sickness makes a women thin and sallow and lifeless. Her hair lacks lustre, her eyes are dull, her lips colorless. Generally she is troubled with pimples, blotches and eruptive skin diseases. These conditions generally arise from one of two causes, or from a combination of both. Either the digestion is out of order and the blood impure, or there is weakness or disease of the organs distinctively feminine. Ninety-nine per cent. of all the sickness of women comes from these two causes, and so ninety-nine per cent. of all woman's sickness may be cured by the medicines that will cure these causes. Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription is for weakness and disease of the organs distinctly feminine—and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best and most widely-known remedy for all disorders of the blood, nerves or digestion. Sometimes one is needed; sometimes the other. It is safer to take both, and any woman who will do so may be assured of the return of perfect health. Both are inventions of Doctor R. V. Pierce, who is now, and has been for thirty years, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. The "Favorite Prescription," by sheer force of merit, has reached a sale greater than that of all other preparations of its kind. If you would like to know all about both of these great medicines, send twenty-one cents in one-cent stamps, to pay the cost of mailing only, and receive free a copy, paper-bound, of Dr. Pierce's 1,008-page, "Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is a complete medical library in one volume, and should be in every household. If you want it handsomely bound in French cloth, send 10 cents extra (thirty-one cents in all). Our Machine Offer.

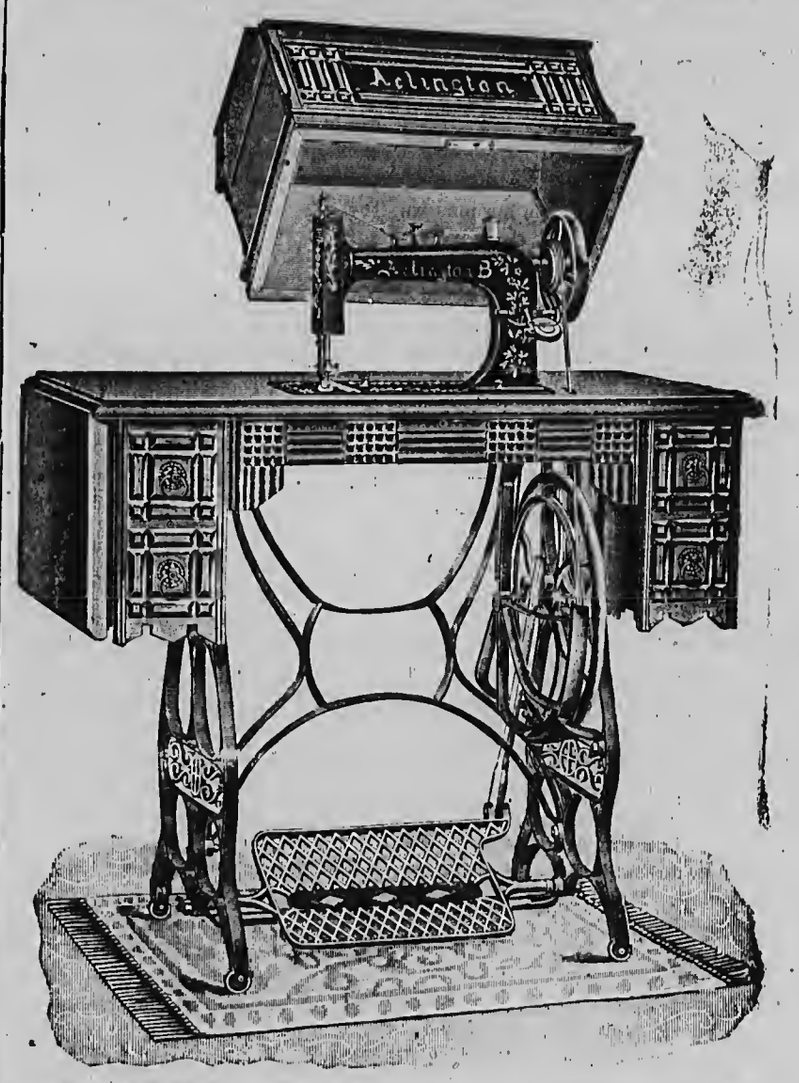
New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.



A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and frictions points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that any imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—The "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to May, '98, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40.

Could I with ink the ocean fill;
Were the whole earth of parchment made:
Were every blade of grass a quill,
And every man a scribe by trade:
To write the love of Christ to man
Would drain the ocean dry,
Nor could the roll contain the whole,
Though stretched from sky to sky.

Idleness is to character what rust is to iron.—Anon.

Generally it is not the burdens we have that crush us, but those we expect to have.

It is better to be seventy years young than forty years old.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Of what use is it for a man to make loud professions in church when the world knows that his daily life gives them the lie?

Each day is a page on which you are to write a chapter of history that shall be as lasting as eternity. What sort of history are you writing?

If wrinkles must be written upon our brows, let them not be written upon the heart. The spirit should never grow old.—James A. Garfield.

Some people talk about "honest doubt" in a way which would seem to indicate that it is the only thing that is honest. Faith may be as honest as doubt, and an ounce of honest faith is worth a ton of doubt.

Many prayers for the evangelization of the world are utterly worthless, for the reason that they mean nothing. How much sincerity is there in such a prayer from the lips of a man who never gives anything for the cause of missions?

Said an eminent surgeon to his assistants, "Don't be in a hurry, gentleman, for we have no time to lose." A wise man was he. If we want to make rapid progress, we must work carefully. Hurry is about synonymous with flurry.

Our Savior was a great talker. He talked from morning till night, and all his talk was inspiring and elevating. Here, as well as elsewhere, his example is worthy of imitation. Moroseness is not religion, or a part of it. Conversation is one of the mediums through which we are to let our light shine into the hearts of our fellow-men.

At the close of every day get yourself right with God and man. Put yourself in communion with God until you feel the blessed assurance of acceptance. Forgive all injuries received from your fellow-men, and make a firm resolve to repair, at the earliest possible moment, any wrong you may have done to another. Thus shall you continually grow in "meetness for the inheritance of the saints in light."

Hammering.

It takes more than one stroke of the hammer to drive a nail; forge a plowshare, construct a steam engine, or carve a statue. Builders and artisans know full well the value of persistent hammering, relying, not upon a few mighty strokes to shape stone and timber and put them in place, but upon a multitude of moderate, carefully directed blows. Too hard a knock might shiver the rock to pieces, or spoil the design being wrought. The workman who rains furious blows, expecting to get through in a jiffy, caring little whether what he does is well or ill done, is not the one most sought after. A physician who attempts to hammer a dangerous disease out of the system by giving one or two large doses of medicine is more than apt to kill the patient. It is related that an enthusiastic youth once pointed to a celebrated painting, and exclaimed, "Oh, if I could thus put a dream on canvass!" 'Dream' on canvass," interrupted the master; "it is the ten thousand touches with the brush you must learn to put on canvass that make your dream."

Haste to succeed, the desire to accomplish one's purpose suddenly by means of a few vigorous licks, is the reason why a large per cent. of mankind fail to accomplish anything worthy. Rome was not built in a day, nor does excellence in any department of industry come to him who will not hammer with unceasing patience. "By hammer and hand all arts do stand."

If acquiring an education were simply a matter of a few weeks' or months' application to books, many would enjoy the fruits of learning who are now content with a knowledge of the three R's, or less. Sharpening and polishing the intellect for effective service, like the making of a telescope, is not the work of a day. Says O. S. Marsden: "Have you the determination that would hammer an education from the stone quarry with Hugh Miller, the patience that would spend a lifetime tracing the hand-writing of the Creator down through the ages in the strata of the rocks? Do you love learning well enough to walk forty miles to obtain a book you could not buy with Abraham Lincoln? Would you, if necessary, wear thread-bare clothes and board yourself? Would you, like Thurlow Weed, study nights by the light of a camp-fire in a sugar orchard? If so, then you are on the royal road to learning, and by and by wisdom, more precious than rubies, will be your crown."

There are many who would like to possess a noble character, but are unwilling to hammer and forge themselves one. Because the formation of virtuous habits, like the construction of a splendid edifice, requires time and vigorous effort, not a few give over the struggle, and make light of those who, by patient continuance in well doing, seek to build themselves up into a holy temple of the Lord. However much we may desire to pass at a single bound from spiritual babehood to mature manhood in Christ Jesus, it is impossible. We can not escape the intermediate stages of development, through trials of faith, many battles with temptation, and the faithful discharge of duty. It may be pleasant to dream that faith alone will speedily secure every spiritual blessing, but to expect it to make all the Christian graces abound in their fullness without the previous development of the same through exercise is to reverse God's order.

In religion, as well as everywhere else, there is no true excellence without laborious effort. We must fight the good fight of faith, wrestle with the powers of darkness, agonize to enter in, run the race with patience, and press towards the mark. It may seem hard that we can not dispense with effort in the kingdom of grace, and trust to an omnipotent God to do everything for us; but God's "ways are not our ways." He helps in proportion to our faithfulness and obedient love for him.

Symmetry of character costs many prayers, tears, and ceaseless hammering. Many a sinner would be willing to become a saint if he could do so without effort. But this can not be. Sin is forgiven in a moment, but its blighting effects upon character are overcome only by a slow, laborious process. The subduing of sinful tempers, affections and desires, though accomplished through grace, is a toilsome process. It is as if we were rowing up stream with our Lord as helmsman. He tells us to pull one oar, and he takes the other, but he never pulls both oars for us. When we cease rowing, we either go round in a circle or are swept back by the mighty current of sin.

What a boon it would be to religious teachers if all believers, young and old, could be transformed at once into full-grown Christians, wise in the things of God, and free from all carnal affections! If a short cut to saintliness could be found, then, indeed, there would be little need of preaching to any save to sinners. But no, the rough marble of a regenerated life that has just been hewn by the Spirit from the great quarry of sinful humanity must be shaped and polished and prepared for a place in the "building which, fitly framed together, groweth into a holy temple in the Lord." Growth in grace and in the knowledge of God must be preceded and accompanied by continual instruction and exhortation, "line upon line, and precept upon precept; here a little, and there a little." The preacher who hopes to rout Satan and establish believers in the faith by the delivery of two or three powerful sermons is doomed to disappointment. The fever of sin, though driven away by an Almighty hand, leaves the victim weak and in need of milk rather than meat.

What a vast saving of time and trouble it would be if children could be made wise, obedient and religious by some lightning process! Parents, however, know that the proper training of childhood does not end with a few corrections and admonitions.

The father of John Wesley once asked his wife, Susannah Wesley, why she repeated a certain thing twenty times to one of the children. She replied, "Because nineteen times are not sufficient."

The reformer also is deceived if he thinks that a few speeches and efforts are enough to convert the masses into ardent adherents of the cause he advocates. Blow must follow blow, fact must be piled upon fact, truth upon truth. Neither prohibition nor any other moral reform can be long maintained in any commonwealth save by a constant campaign of education. We must keep hammering away with the mallet of the gospel upon the rock of indifference and wickedness until it crumbles into fragments. Our Lord bestows the energy to wield the hammer; we must direct its force.

The hammering process has its place in every field of effort, whether it be making needles, building ships, training the mind, writing books, or preparing sermons. An English clergyman once remarked to the Bishop of Litchfield: "Why, my lord, it is the easiest thing in the world to preach. Very often I choose my text after I go into the pulpit, and then go on and preach a sermon, and think nothing of it." "Ah, yes," replied the Bishop, "that agrees exactly with what I hear the people say, for they hear the sermon, and they, too, think nothing of it."

If we would attain eminent usefulness and reach full perfection, we must not shrink from the hardships, buffetings and hard knocks of life. When the hammer of affliction and misfortune descends upon us, happy are we if we endure, for then shall we receive the crown of life. "No pains, no gains; no cross, no crown."

Whosoever Will Rescue Mission.

Mr. J. H. Haag, superintendent of the Whosoever Will Rescue Mission, 608 Bienville street, has published in pamphlet form his first annual report. This mission, as our readers have already been informed, is conducted upon the principle of ministering to the bodies as well as the souls of men. Here, as well as in all large cities, there is a great deal of destitution. There are large numbers of men who are in urgent need of food, clothing, shelter, and indeed everything that makes life comfortable. Men thus situated can not be reached by ordinary ecclesiastical agencies. They do not attend our churches and will not. What they need first is the relief of their physical wants. Vain are all efforts to reach them with prayers and preachments so long as they are unsheltered, unfed and almost naked. The heart that sympathizes with their physical suffering is the only heart that can reach them with a gospel message. The hand that supplies their physical wants is the only one that can break to them the bread of everlasting life. This is the principle upon which this mission is conducted. The results have been gratifying in the extreme. Fifteen thousand meals have been furnished; five thousand persons have been clothed; thirty-one thousand one hundred and ninety-four have been lodged. The number of converts who have brought forth fruits meet for repentance is about seven hundred.

This mission is purely an individual enterprise. Bro. Haag is a member of Dryades Street Church—Rev. S. S. Keener, pastor. The mission, however, is purely an individual enterprise, which had its origin in Bro. Haag's consecrated heart and head. It has received many contributions from followers of the Man of Galilee. Those who wish to serve God by serving humanity can not do so more effectively than by sending contributions to Bro. Haag.

In Behalf of Armenia.

For the past ten days or more New Orleans has been honored with the presence of two distinguished representatives of the cause of poor, down-trodden Armenia, viz.: Miss Willimina Armstrong, general secretary of the Woman's Department of the Armenian Relief Association of America, and Dr. Hintlian, a celebrated physician, who is a native Armenian. On the twenty-fourth Miss Armstrong addressed a large audience of women in the spacious banquet hall of the St. Charles Hotel. On the night of the twenty-sixth both she and Dr. Hintlian addressed a good audience in the hall of Sophie Newcomb College.

Miss Armstrong is a physician and, having travelled extensively in Armenia, is thoroughly posted on Armenian affairs. Dr. Hintlian, with a good stereopticon, throws upon the canvass representations of scenes of Armenian suffering that are absolutely startling.

They have awakened great interest in the cause. A branch of the Armenian Relief Association has been organized with Miss Katharine Minor as chairman.

An Episcopal Firebrand.

Bishop H. M. Turner, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, in The Missioner's Voice, which he edits, the other day gave unfortunate counsel to his negro readers of the Southern States, advising them to arm themselves against lynching parties, and shoot down their assailants. He declares that he has kept this counsel to himself for seven years, lest it might meet the disapproval of his brother Bishops, but he is now determined "to speak it, preach it, tell it, and write it." This is the counsel of a madman, who "casteth firebrands, arrows and death" throughout a community. The course which he urges the colored people of the South to take would be a calamity for all concerned. No such advice as the Bishop gives is needed. On the other hand, he might wisely counsel the ministers and people who are within his influence to walk with such devotion, to cultivate such honesty and purity of conduct, and to exemplify such a character as to render them above suspicion. We deem it worthy of emphasis just here to say that we have not been able to ascertain a single instance of any crime of violence, such as has been usually punished by lynching in the South, charged against any of the colored membership or congregations, lay or clerical, belonging to our denomination in any part of the Southern States during the recent years in which mob law has been in vogue. We trust that no other negro leader will countenance the utterances of Bishop Turner. Such a policy as he advocates, if carried out to any considerable extent, would make the cause of the negroes a hopeless one, for it would deprive them of the sympathy and support of their best and most influential friends. —Central Advocate.

Sensitive persons who are always expecting to be slighted would suffer less, perhaps, if they could realize how little the air, manner and gesture of some people answer to their thoughts. One of the strongest preachers we know looks mad at his congregation when in a tender strain, and on one occasion, we remember, as he cried, "I love you," bent over the pulpit and shook his fist fiercely at the brethren in the front row.—Richmond Advocate.

At Gloster.

By invitation of the pastor, we lectured at Gloster last Friday night in the City Hall. This was our first visit to this place. Gloster is quite a thriving town, claiming a population of 1,200. The new Methodist Church is a very neat building. Its present seating arrangements are only temporary, and the lecture was the beginning of a movement to have it properly seated. A revival meeting was in progress at the Presbyterian Church. By making a change in their hour of service, our Presbyterian brethren were able to attend the lecture, which they did in full force. The attendance was sufficient to fill the hall.

We preached on Saturday night at the Presbyterian Church. Sunday morning we occupied the pulpit at the Methodist Church. On Saturday morning and on Sunday night we had the privilege of hearing Dr. R. E. Jones, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Meridian, who is assisting the Gloster pastor, Rev. Mr. Spurlin, in his meeting. Dr. Jones is a very strong preacher and deeply spiritual.

Our church in Gloster seems to be quite prosperous. We had the pleasure of visiting our old-time friend and former presiding elder, Rev. W. B. Hines, who now makes Gloster his home. He has been ill of late, but is now on his feet, and was able to be at church on Sunday. We were pleased also to meet Sister Hines. During our stay in Gloster we and our better half were domiciled at the district parsonage, which is tenanted by the presiding elder, Dr. Hunnicutt, and the pastor, Rev. M. M. Black, and their charming families. Dr. Hunnicutt is getting on finely on his district.

On Saturday evening in company with the district parsonage crowd we had a delightful drive to the Sam Jones Camp Ground, a distance of three miles or more by the carriage road, though much nearer by rail. The weather was perfect. The forests were clothed in a beautiful, many-tinted robe of verdure, profusely adorned with flowers—dogwood, crab-apple, honeysuckle, hawthorn, and the like. The camp ground is picturesquely located in a narrow hill-bordered valley, through which runs a beautiful little stream, which is fed by a number of springs which burst out from the foot of the hills. One of these springs is the centre of attraction of the campus on account of its boldness and the crystalline clearness of its waters.

Rev. J. W. Welborn.

Rev. J. W. Welborn is no more. He died this morning. He had been a Methodist preacher for sixty-three years—fourteen years a member of the South Carolina Conference. A great man has fallen.

J. W. TINNIN.

NOTES.

Mrs. C. W. Carter, of Jackson, La., is visiting friends in the city.

Dr. W. H. Milburn is booked for the commencement sermon at Cornell University.

We were pleased to meet in the city a few days since Bro. L. W. Carradine, of Fayette, Miss.

Kosciusko station is experiencing great prosperity under the pastorate of the talented and aggressive Park.

The commencement sermon of Nashville Female College will be preached by Dr. W. B. Palmore, May 13.

We were pleased to greet a few days since our genial friend, Rev. C. T. Munholland, of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. T. W. Adams has made a most auspicious beginning at Hazlehurst. The outlook is decidedly cheering.

Rev. T. B. Clifford is assisting Rev. J. M. Morse, of McComb City, in a revival meeting. He preached last Sunday for Rev. J. A. B. Jones at Magnolia, Miss.

The actual majority of the "communicants" in England are nonconformists. The Established Church is now the church of the minority. Let it cease to be established.—Central Methodist.

Prof. Thomas Carter, of Centenary College, spent several days of last week in the city attending the District Conference.

Last Sabbath was a high day at Jeanerette, La. The pastor, Rev. R. M. Blocker, received six persons into membership in the church.

Two communications in this issue tell the same story concerning the drouth sufferers—one from Rev. B. H. Sheppard, the other from Bro. J. L. Moore.

When a subscriber, whether he be preacher or layman, changes his abode, he should promptly notify us. Our subscription clerk is not omniscient, though some people seem to think so.

We regret to learn that Bro. J. V. Penn, of the Mississippi Conference, had the misfortune recently to get his ankle broken. He is now confined to his bed, but hopes soon to be out, though he will have to go on crutches for some time.

Under the skillful and energetic leadership of the Rev. J. H. Mitchell the Kosciusko district is making decided progress. He will leave to his successor a good district parsonage entirely paid for, and one of the best districts in the Conference.

Rev. R. H. Wynn has had a glorious revival at Algiers. There were twenty-two accessions to the church and a number of conversions. There was a large attendance from the beginning, and great interest. The church has experienced a great spiritual uplift.

Southern people who have followed the interesting series of articles on General Robert E. Lee in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, will be pleased to learn that a splendid colored lithograph portrait of the great Confederate is offered by the publisher of that magazine for twelve cents in stamps.

Dr. I. G. John, assistant editor of the Review of Missions, and ex-Missionary Secretary, died at Nashville on the seventeenth. He was in the seventy-first year of his age and had been in the ministry more than fifty years. He was editor of the Texas Advocate for eighteen years and Missionary Secretary eight years.

Two great revivals held by the average evangelist are enough to kill any average church. The evangelist accuses and abuses the Bishops, the presiding elders, the regular preachers, the church members—all better men than himself—and abuse, fault-finding criticism, and suspicion are the prints which remain from his work.—Arkansas Methodist.

Dr. D. W. Dillehay was married on the twenty-fifth to Miss Emma Carradine, daughter of L. W. Carradine, Fayette, Miss. The ceremony was performed in Rayne Memorial Church, the pastor, Rev. H. R. Singleton, officiating. We extend our heartiest congratulations to the youthful couple and wish them unalloyed felicity as they move along the highways of matrimonial life.

The commencement exercises of the Grenada Collegiate Institute will be held May 30-June 2. The commencement sermon will be preached by Dr. Jno. W. Boswell, and the evening sermon to the Epworth League and Missionary Society by Rev. J. A. Randolph. Dr. W. T. Belling will deliver the literary address to the senior class Wednesday, June 2, 10 A. M. The Board of Trustees will meet Tuesday, 9 A. M., June 1.

To tide poor families in New York City over periods of sickness or lack of employment, the Pawnshop Loan Society connected with Dr. Greer's church was established two years ago. Unlike ordinary pawnshops, it gives loans of money on personal property at one per cent. a month, or one-third of the usual charge; it also allows extension of time from five to six months for redemption purposes. Since its organization 68,000 needy persons have been thus assisted—the total amount loaned having been one million dollars. Last year only about two per cent. of these pledges went unredeemed. The institution was started without expectation of profit. Though broadly philanthropical, it is successful as a business and is paying a dividend of six per cent.—Zion's Herald.

Pres. Miss. State Conf. of Ep. Leagues.
Water Valley, Miss.

The Advocate for $1.

From now until the first of June we will receive new cash subscriptions at the rate of $1 for nine months. Moreover, we will give those who subscribe under this offer the benefit of our premium Bible offer. Take notice that this offer is made only to new subscribers. We will make a liberal offer to our present subscribers after awhile. Meantime, let all who are in arrears pay up, as no one who is in arrears can get the benefit of any of our special offers. Let all our preachers make this offer known to our people at once. We will send a sample Bible for use in canvassing to those who desire it. We will also send sample copies of the ADVOCATE on request.

To Preachers.

To the preacher who sends the largest number of new cash subscribers between now and the first of July we will present either an Arlington B Sewing Machine or a gold-filled watch guaranteed to be a perfect time keeper and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, whichever one may be preferred. To the preacher sending the next largest number and also to the one sending the third largest number we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, latest edition, with modern additions.

Should the successful contestant prefer it, we will pay him cash instead of the premium.

Under this offer no commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Those who wish to compete for these premiums should notify us at once.

New Orleans District Conference.

The New Orleans District Conference met in the Carondelet Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, March 25, and continued for four days. Bishop J. C. Keener presided at every session, and his presence proved a benediction to all. Rev. H. H. Ahrens was elected secretary. The reports from the different charges showed that in nearly every instance advance had been made and that Methodism is stronger in the city of New Orleans than ever before. The presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Sawyer, D. D., is greatly encouraged with the outlook for the district for the coming year.

The Conference enjoyed the presence of Rev. Thomas Carter, of Jackson, La., and Rev. J. W. Chambers, president of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss. Both made addresses setting forth the advantages of the institution which they represent.

The report of the secretary of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, Miss Lizzie G. Wasson, was a thoughtfully prepared paper and was highly encouraging.

The following were elected trustees of the Seashore Camp Grounds from the New Orleans district: E. P. Mackie, P. Werlein, W. W. Sutcliffe, W. B. Thomson, H. W. Spear, J. H. Campman, A. S. Daniels and D. Zable. The report of the president, Bro. E. P. Mackie, showed that the camp grounds was in a healthy condition and that the last meeting was a success.

Rev. J. M. Etheridge was unanimously recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial; at the same session the brother was ordained deacon by Bishop Keener.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: W. B. Thomson, A. S. Daniels, W. W. Carre and W. W. Sutcliffe. Alternates: T. J. Ferguson and J. Cohen.

The preaching during the Conference by Revs. J. M. Alford, J. F. Scurlock, C. C. Wier, S. S. Keener, J. E. Denson and Thomas Carter was of the highest order and to edification. The Memorial Service, held Sabbath afternoon, in memory of our beloved Rev. J. B. Walker, D. D., was conducted by Bishop Keener, whose tribute to his friend and our friend was touching and impressive.

The next session of the Conference will be held in the Rayne Memorial Church. A.

Orphans' Home.

I desire to call attention to resolution introduced by Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., and passed at last session of your Conference, setting apart the first Sunday in April (and the succeeding Sundays where needed on circuits) as Orphans' Day. (See Minutes, page 7.) You will also notice that Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues are requested to adopt Birthday Boxes. It is expected that every congregation, Sunday-school and Epworth League will contribute.

Mr. Clifford will represent me in the field, and will visit the District Conferences (and also charges when necessary) in the interest of the Home.

We have recently conversed with Bishop Galloway relative to the institution. He approves our methods and endorses our plans.

A Painful Silence.

At the time I wrote my first appeal in behalf of Paine Institute, and published it in all of our church papers, I addressed over two hundred and fifty personal appeals to pastors throughout our connection, and sent besides one thousand printed appeals to other pastors in our church. So far as the reports which have come to my office show, collections have been taken in eight congregations. Eleven private responses have also been received. The amount realized is $185.82. I have assurances from a number of brethren that they will at an early date take a collection for the building.

Paine Institute is being taught in what was a stable, and is but little better now. I was there recently. I love my church with my whole heart; but I stood, and looked, and was ashamed. I am certain we have a number of laymen who, if they had stood with me there, would level with the ground our present building and would erect instead a respectable one as quickly as men and money could do it.

I do not believe that our church will let this matter stop here. Will not other pastors throughout our connection, at the earliest possible date, take a collection for this building? This collection may be cash, or subscriptions may be taken, payable on or before the first of October, 1897. Please notify me, however, of the amount of the subscriptions and forward to me the cash raised, since his will help to push the movement.

Are there not laymen throughout our connection who, upon reading what has been said touching the condition of Paine Institute, will send me a contribution towards suitable buildings for Paine Institute? Several have already done so. Is there not a man who will make me a proposition which shall help me to spring the church? Is there not a man who, in the name of God, will erect the building himself? A nobler charity than this would be impossible. R. J. BIGHAM.

A "Correction" Corrected.

Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, in last ADVOCATE, "corrected the published Minutes." I have just mailed to the Doctor his original report, which exactly agrees with the Minutes. The mistake was not the mistake of the secretaries.

Again I say: Let the brethren be careful in their criticisms; I still hold their original reports.

An Easy Way to Get Started in Business.

I want to tell you how much money I have been making the past month selling a household article for a Pittsburg concern. It is a new style dish washer, and it works just lovely. Any child can wash dishes with it, and neither crack nor break the dishes, nor put their hands in the water. When I first received mine, all my neighbors heard of it, and came to see it work. They were so well pleased that I took orders for six right there, and made over $15. The next week I made $20, and during the past two weeks I have cleared $50; at the same time attended to other duties. When I wrote to Dep't A 5 of the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 81a. A, Pittsburg, Pa., for a circular telling about the dish washer, they sent me a lot of testimonials from those who are using them, and I know that I could make money selling them. If you are looking for something to do, I would advise you to write them for particulars. They started me, and they will surely do the same for you. A READER.

The Louisiana Immigration Association.

The Louisiana Immigration Association is a chartered institution formed for the purpose of securing desirable immigrants to this State. The association will keep a book in which lists of lands, with their description and price, will be entered for the inspection of such persons as may visit our State with the view of purchasing lands for homes. The office at Shreveport is in a suitable portion of the city, close to all hotels and depots.

The association will also answer all questions by intending homeseekers, who may correspond with its officers. It will also advertise Louisiana abroad, especially in the States of the Northwest. The organization is simply an organized effort to set forth the advantages of Louisiana as a home and to bring together the land-seeker and the land-seller. It relies on the patriotic, public-spirited citizens and land owners to take stock, which is $5 per share. Its charter provides that it shall pay no dividends; hence all stockholders understand that they are uniting in a collective capacity to develop the State. The present is the most suitable time for this work, as the completion of a great trunk line railway to Shreveport from the great grain producing centre, whose commercial emporium is Kansas City, brings Louisiana in close touch with Nebraska, Kansas and the great Northwest. The association earnestly requests land owners, particularly those having large bodies, to send on their lists with postage for correspondence. There will be no fee for entering the lists of lands or correspondence relative thereto.

Rev. Frederic R. Marvin, long time pastor of the First Congregational Church, of Great Barrington, Mass., and at one time a practicing physician, a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, says of Ripans Tabules: "The formula has long been in favor with medical men, and the method of preparation in the present form is modern and a great convenience. I always keep a vial of the Tabules upon my dressing table, and use them with confidence whenever occasion arises. For a disturbed condition of the digestive organs I know of nothing so good, and for an 'all-round' family remedy I do not believe there is anything better to be had."

A Boy's Manner.

"His manner is worth a hundred thousand dollars to him!" That is what one of the chief men of the nation lately said about a boy. "It wouldn't be worth so much to one who meant to be a farmer, or who had no opportunities, but to a young college student with ambitions it is worth at least a hundred thousand."

The boy was a distant relative of the man, and had been brought up by careful parents in a far-off city. Among other things he had been taught to be friendly and to think of other persons before himself. The boy was on a visit in the town where the man lived. They met on the street, and the younger, recognizing the elder, promptly went to his side and spoke to him in his cordial, happy, yet respectful way. Of course, the man was pleased, and knew that anybody would have been pleased. The sentence above was the outcome of it. A little later the boy came in the room just as the man was struggling into his overcoat. The boy hurried to him, pulled it up by the collar, and drew down the wrinkled coat beneath. He would have done it for any man, the haughtiest or the poorest.

The boy has not been in society a great deal. He has not learned orthodox selfishness. He positively can't be easy at the table until his neighbors are waited on; a chair is tortnre if he thinks anyone else is less comfortably seated! He wouldn't interrupt to let loose the wittiest or most timely remark ever thought of. He may learn to do so some day—after he has earned his hundred thousand—but it is doubtful. The expression of his kindness may become conformed to popular usage, modified, refined, but the spirit which prompts the expression will only grow with his years.

Do not misunderstand, boys. You may be truly unselfish, and yet not have this boy's prize. You may wish to do things for others, and yet feel that you know not how. The only way to learn is to try; to hesitate for no feeling of bashfulness or awkwardness, but to put into direct and instantaneous practice whatever kind, helpful thoughts occur to you.—Congregationalist.

Thackeray somewhere warns young people that the world is a looking-glass, and will return such looks, whether of sweetness or sourness, as they cast into it. This is recalled by the following suggestive passage which a secular paper furnishes:

"There are many plain young girls whose faces are lined with discontent and unhappiness. There is a drawn, perplexed expression between the eyes, and the corners of the mouth have a decided droop. These are the girls who have a settled idea that they are plain beyond remedy, and the distressing belief has deepened the lines of dissatisfaction; but in reality there is only a cloud over the face, cast by the habit of unhappiness.

"One morning a certain girl whose face was under this cloud walked out across the sunshine of the common. For a moment the gloom had lifted, the lightness of the morning and her thoughts were unusually pleasant.

"'What a pretty, happy girl that is we just passed,' she heard one of two ladies passing say to the other.

"She looked quickly around, with envy in her heart, to see the pretty girl, but she was the only girl in sight.

"'Why, they mean me! No one ever called me pretty before! It must be because I am smiling.'

"Again, as she was getting on a horse car she heard (be fates were out in her favor): 'Do see that pretty-looking girl!'

"'Well, I declare, I am always going to look happy if this is what comes of it! I have thought myself homely all my life, and here twice in one day I've been called pretty.'

"From that memorable day a new beauty has graced her social circle."—Morning Star.

"Little Weights."

"It is not always the most industrious or intelligent salesmen who succeed in our business. Sometimes a peculiarity of speech or manner will make them distasteful to customers. Note that young man who is selling towels, for example. He is too familiar. He leans over the counter, and whispers as if he were the confidential friend of every woman who buys a napkin. He means only to urge his wares, but ladies do not like it. They will not be served by him again. I shall probably be forced to discharge the poor fellow, though he means well."

The trustee of one of our colleges was asked why Prof. Blank was held in comparatively light esteem as a teacher. "He is a learned man, accurate and earnest in his teaching," said the inquirer, "and an honorable gentleman. Yet inferior men are advanced in general esteem, while he remains just where he began ten years ago." "There is but one cause for his failure," was the reply, "his untidy habits. How can it be otherwise with a man who comes on the platform with soiled linen, a greasy coat, and black finger-nails? He looks like a tramp. Good and wise as he is he does not command the respect of the students."

Dr. Wier Mitchell, in a lecture to nurses, said that competent, earnest women sometimes fail in the sick-room because of some peculiarity of habit which renders them unpleasant to their patients. Among these was the use of perfumes. No well bred persons will carry about a scent which may prove offensive to half the people whom they meet. Men and women, in every department of life, find their usefulness impaired by some little habit often unconsciously acquired.—Youth's Companion.

How to Be a Good Visitor.

Many of you girls and boys have been invited to make visits among your friends during the vacation. It is quite an accomplishment to be a good visitor; by that I mean a guest who makes no unnecessary trouble or care in a house.

The first thing to do is to conform to the rules and ways of the household. If an early breakfast is the habit, be sure to have some one to call you in time, if you can not wake up yourself. Finders work to have guests come down to the morning meal after the family have finished, especially in farm houses. You may not think it much trouble to keep your breakfast standing awhile, but it is, nevertheless. Always do what you can in the way of assisting about work, especially in places where the family do their own work. There are many things that you can do that are really helpful. Picking fruit and looking it over, shelling peas, stringing beans, and such like work, which takes time, when those who have a great deal to do are obliged to stop their more necessary work to do that of minor importance.

You boys can always see where you can save steps, time and strength for elders. On a farm there are a great many light "chores" to do which really are a great help to the tired men at night.—Selected.

The temptations to lower one's standard are constant and urgent; in other words, one is solicited continually to come down to the level of the world. He who does thus lower himself so as to curry favor with the multitude, has lost all true manliness. Let him stand on some height, no matter at what cost of pocket or pang of loneliness; let him utter a vigorous refusal to the pride of life and the lust of gain, come in whatever shape they may.—Zion's Herald.

Training Children.

I feel like begging mothers to try especially to cultivate a sense of duty in their children in regard to the food they eat. Let them be taught something of what the best and most nutritious foods are, and taught to avoid, whenever they can, anything which they consider not best to eat. After a little perseverance and careful explanation, I think most children will learn to deny themselves injurious foods and hurtful sorts of sweetmeats almost as easily as they will learn not to tell lies or strike their playmates. They should be taught that any injury to the bodily health, which they can avoid, is as much a sin and disgrace as an injury to the character would be.

And right here a word may be fitly spoken about the importance of keeping the thoughts pure. The thoughts have a subtle and wonderful influence over all bodily tendencies and conditions. Physically as well as spiritually it is largely true that "as a man thinketh in his heart so is he." Children brought up to realize what the oughts of life mean, whether in relation to themselves, their fellow-beings or the lower animal creation, are, other things being equal, far more sunny in disposition, quicker to appreciate and enjoy all sorts of real fun, and, of course, are far better able to assimilate into their own natures the spirit of all true beauty, whether in nature outside them or in human thoughts and deeds.

May the kind heavenly Father keep the hearts of all of us who are teachers and mothers in closest touch with his own, so that we may one day render a good account of the dear ones given into our care!—The Christian at Work.

The Magic of Silence.

You have often heard, "It takes two to make a quarrel." Do you believe it? I'll tell you how one of my little friends managed.

Dollie never came to see Marjorie without a quarrel. Marjorie tried to speak gently; but no matter how hard she tried, Dolly finally made her so angry that she would scon speak sharp words too.

"Oh, what shall I do?" cried poor little Marjorie.

"Suppose you try this plan," said her mama. "The next time Dolly comes in seat yourself in front of the fire and take the tongs in your hand. Whenever a sharp word comes from Dolly, gently snap the tongs, without speaking a word."

Soon afterward in marched Dolly to see her friend. It was a quarter of an hour before Dolly's temper was ruffled and her voice was raised, and as usual she began to find fault and scold. Marjorie flew to the hearth and seized the tongs, snapping them gently. More angry words from Dolly. Snap went the tongs. More still. Snap.

"Why don't you speak?" screamed Dolly in fury. Snap went the tongs.

"Speak!" she said. Snap was the only answer.

"I'll never, never come again, never!" cried Dolly.

Away she went. Did she keep her promise? No, indeed. She came next day, but seeing Marjorie run for the tongs she solemnly said if she would let them alone they would quarrel no more forever and ever.—Christian Age.

A more glorious victory can not be gained over another man than this—that, when the injury began on his part, the kindness should begin on ours.—Tillotson.

If your life is dark, then walk by faith; and God is pledged to keep you as safe as if you could understand everything.—Horace Bushnell.

A Model.

As a woman and a mother the Queen is universally acknowledged to be a model. Personally a pattern of virtue, she has banished vice from her court. When distinguished, able and devoted servants have been convicted of glaring wrong to women, she has dismissed them from her service without notice, and has told them, and the world, in the official Gazette, that the Queen has no longer need of their services." One of our leading divines, the Rev. Dr. Downes, editor of Great Thoughts, said, a little time ago, that she is "the purest woman that ever sat on a throne." Napoleon III, late Emperor of the French, once spoke of her as "virtue seated on a throne of freedom." Last, but not least, one of the Boston artillerymen, who visited England last Summer, in toasting the Queen at a public banquet, speaking as a citizen of the United States, mentioned "her queenliness as a woman, and her womanliness as a queen"—a happy phrase which won't be soon forgotten.—Guardian.

Life is continually weighing us in very sensitive scales, and telling every one of us precisely what his real weight is, to the last grain of dust.—Lowell.

HYGIENE.

A Word with the Doctor.

To whiten the teeth take a leaf of "common or garden" sage and rub them well. It has a wonderful effect.

When cooking for an invalid take great care that every vessel used is scrupulously clean, always rejecting those of copper. Enameled pots and pans are best for sick cookery, for they may be quickly cleaned with salt after use.

If there be dust, sand, or an eyelash in the eye it should be removed tenderly by means of a camel's hair-brush or the rolled point of a fine cambric handkerchief. Hold down the lower lid with the forefinger of the left hand and turn up the upper lid with the first finger.

An agreeable disinfectant for use in a sick-room is made by putting ground coffee in a saucer and in the center a small piece of camphor-gum. Light the camphor with the match, and as it burns let the coffee burn with it. The odor is healthful and refreshing.

In the event of a sudden attack of nose-bleeding, so common to children, the simple remedy of raising the right arm will check it in a few minutes.—American.

Things to Remember about Sleeping.

Sunlight is good for everything. The best number of persons to each bed is—one. Away with heavy hangings, either above or below the bed. Beware of a dusty, musty carpet—better sweetness and a bare floor. Do not fail to provide some means for ventilation during the night. Keep the head cool while sleeping, but not by a draught of cold air falling upon it. If a folding-bed must be used, contrive some way to keep it aired and wholesome. Let the pillow be high enough to bring the head in a natural position—no more nor less. Thoroughly air the sleeping room every day; air the beds and bedding as often as possible. A dark, out-of-the-way, unwholesome corner is no more fitted for a sleeping room than for a parlor. A feather bed which has done service for a generation or two is hardly a desirable thing upon which to sleep.—New York Ledger.

The question, "Is alcohol a poison?" is thus answered by Dr. Laborde, of the Paris Faculty of Medicine: "Yes, alcohol is a poison, because it produces those derangements of serious accidents, even mortal, which strike at once the body and the mind. It prevents the man walking straight, and causes him to stagger and fall; it makes him tremble and gives him convulsive shocks; it makes him foolish and criminal, driving him on to murder his mates and even his nearest relations; it reduces him to the state of an imbecile, an idiot, and a brute—that is to say, to the level, and even below that, of an animal. And, beyond that, it condemns him to be the parent of unhealthy children—deformed, epileptic, imbecile, or idiots—disposed to murder their fellows and become criminals." Such is a short picture of alcoholic poisoning or alcoholism.

YOUR ENEMY STOLE IN

An enemy stole into your house one day last week and touched you lightly in passing. You thought little of the matter at the time, for the enemy was only a vagrant current of air. But now you are beginning to learn what mischief the little intruder did, for your back is stiff and painful. Your head aches, and at times you feel dizzy. What has happened? Simply this: the cold has settled on your kidneys. They are overcharged with blood and inflamed. Instead of passing the waste matter out of the body they are damming it up in the blood. Every minute, yes, every heart beat adds to the poison in you. Normal action of the kidneys will purify the blood. Nothing else will.

Warner's Safe Cure

The friend in need. It will reduce the inflammation, so that the grip on the tissues of the blood-vessels is relaxed, and the uric acid is sent on its way out of the body.

OBITUARIES.

LAZARUS—The subject of this tribute, WILLIAM CLINTON LAZARUS, was born in Franklin county, Miss., Sept. 26, 1835; joined the Methodist Church at the age of twenty; was married to Adeline Wright who survives him, Oct. 7, 1857; died of pneumonia in Jefferson county, Jan. 16, 1897.

He leaves a large family to mourn his loss. He was surrounded in his last hours by all his living children and grandchildren, his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Paloter, of Mound City, Ill., having reached his bedside a few hours previous. He was perfectly conscious and his mind clear to the last. To his minister, who visited him, he gave a perfect testimony that he had "made his peace, calling and election sure with God." Such it is to die the death of the righteous. A kind, devoted husband; a fond, indulgent father; a faithful follower of the Lord has gone to his great reward.

Of a very reticent nature, it was the privilege of but few to know and fully appreciate the beauty and true worth of his character. Only in prayer, when his soul seemed poured out as a libation to his Maker, could we catch glimpses of the spirit that glowed within.

Two of the Christian sons but recently preceded him to the better land. These, no doubt, greeted his entrance through the pearly gates, and with glad rejoicings stand with him, and wait for those dear loved ones who still travel life's weary path with eyes so dimmed with weeping that they can scarcely see the way, but who have in their hearts the hope that they will meet again their loved ones gone before—not lost, but gone before.

A FRIEND.

She was a kind, affectionate, self-sacrificing mother; a modest, pure, humble Christian, and a devoted, faithful companion to him who preceded her to the grave by nearly a score of years. It may be truly said of her, "She lived not for herself." Her life was given for those she loved—her husband, her children, and to Him who loved her most. She suffered much. For fifteen years she was afflicted with a chronic disease which caused her constant pain. Disappointment, too, at times touched her heavily. But through it all she was patient, and saw God in cloud and tempest as well as in the clear sky, uttering never a word of complaint. Her last hour was like the calm setting of the Summer's sun, "sinking down in its tranquility." Passing through the valley, she "feared no evil," for her Lord was with her, and the same "rod" and "staff" which had been her stay through a life of more than threescore years still sustained and comforted her.

We buried her by the side of our father with the feeling that to a living man "there is something darker than darkness, more lonely than loneliness, and more silent than silence"—the space in our eye, our ear, our mind which a mother once filled, but which imagination can not now fill. Yet we would not plant over her grave the willow and the cypress, but the laurel and the palm, for she sleeps in Jesus and rests in hope of a glorious resurrection. Her son,

WM. W. MOSS.

HOLOWAY—Miss SALLIE E HOLOWAY was a native of Virginia, and lived sixty-nine years. She was soundly converted to God and became a member of the Methodist Church in early life, and continued faithful to the last. Hers was one of those thoughtful, unselfish lives unmindful of herself, but devoted to the interest and happiness of others. Especially was she attentive to orphans, several of which were cared for and reared by her. Said one who knew her long and well: "If there was a flaw in her character, it was found in indecision." She was too easily influenced. It is possible this was a virtue instead of a vice, as it perhaps evidenced an unquestioning confidence in the honesty and integrity of others. At any rate, it did not touch her relationship or fidelity to God. As strange as it may seem, she always had a horror of death until about the time of her last sickness. After a lengthy conversation on the subject with a friend this all vanished—she had no fear. For some time before her Father called her home she was in an ecstacy of joy. Over and over she shouted, 'Hallelujah! hallelujah!'"

She breathed her last in the home of her niece, Mrs. Lyda Wise, in Holmes county, Miss., Oct. 20, 1896, and her remains were buried in the beautiful cemetery at Pickens, Miss., to await the resurrection of the just.

H. C. MORRAHAD.

BYRD—Bro. WADE BYRD, aged forty-two years, died the eighth day of November, 1896. His sickness was of short duration, but his suffering was intense and severe. He was taken sick on Friday and died Saturday night, leaving a wife and seven children, with a large number of relatives and friends, in deep sorrow because of his absence. When his aged father bade him good-by for the last time in this world he smiled as one at ease, and said he was ready and not afraid to die. The writer, who visited his home a few days before his death, and while he was in good health, had a pleasant and profitable conversation with him in reference to his religious interests and his hope of immortal joys in the region beyond; worshiped with him in his home, had a pleasant service, and parted to meet no more till at the judgment bar of God.

May the sustaining grace of God be sufficient, and give consolation to them and all the relatives; strengthen their prospects; and cause some bright day!

W. J. O'BRYANT.

ADAMS—Mr. G C ADAMS was born in Franklin county, Miss., March 17, 1855, and died at his home near Meadville, Miss., Feb. 2, 1897. In 1883 he was married to Miss Ella G. Smith. He joined the M. E. Church in early life, in which he lived a member until about eighteen months before his death. He and his wife joined the Baptist Church because they were cut off from their church. He always loved the Methodist Church. He was a loving husband, a kind father. He was best liked by those who knew him best. His remains were laid away by Rev. R. S. Gale, of the Methodist Church. He leaves a wife, six children, and a host of friends and relatives to mourn his loss, though we should not weep after our loved ones who sleep in Jesus. He told his wife he was not afraid to die; that he was going to rest, and wanted her to meet him in heaven. Then cheer up, dear wife and children; weep not, for your loved one is on the other shore there, waiting and watching for you.

W. S. SMITH.

DEARMAN—Shot Saturday, the thirteenth of March, 1897, and instantly killed, JOHN AMOS DEARMAN. He was accidentally shot at Mr. S. H. Cooper's by Bro. Cooper's son, Henry, fourteen years old. Amos was nineteen years old the seventeenth day of this month.

This seemed so sad, but, still sadder, the fifteenth day of March—the day I preached Amos' funeral—I was called on to preach Sister Cooper's funeral, the mother of Henry. She was found dead in her bed about daylight. Supposed her death was caused from grief and prostration resulting in neuralgia of the heart. The doctor stayed with Sister Dearman, the mother of Amos, two days and nights. So far she is improving from the shock. Both families are near neighbors and near friends, living near Hinton, Ala. The neighborhood is sadly bereft. May the Lord sanctify this sad bereavement to the good of us all!

J. C. ELLIS, P. C.

Middleton, Miss.

SIMPSON—Mrs. SALLIE SIMPSON was born in Kentucky, Aug. 13, 1813; was converted in 1830, and lived a consecrated Christian until death. She was married to John P. Simpson the first day of May, 1832. She was the good mother of twelve children, who lived to be grown men and women, the youngest of whom is forty years old, and has one grandchild. She has sixty-three grandchildren and sixty-nine great-grandchildren living, besides those that are dead. She was always ready to work for the Master.

No condition doth Jesus bless but character. He counts no earthly state enviable, least of all a state of unbroken ease. That the happy man is the good man. What a man is in himself—not where he is, nor how he lives, nor how much he has but what a man is—is the ground of blessedness.

Your face—make it fair as nature intended. HEISKELL'S Soap is the soap that cures—that softens—that whitens the skin.

Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, etc. The most thorough, practical and progressive schools of the kind in the world, and the most patronized ones in the South. Endorsed by bankers, merchants, ministers, and others. Four weeks in bookkeeping with us are equal to twelve weeks by the old plan. Their President is author of "Draughon's New System of Bookkeeping," which cannot be taught in any other school.

$600.00 given to any college if we cannot show more written applications for bookkeepers and stenographers, received in the past twelve months, than any other five Business Colleges in the South, all "combined," can show to have received in the past five years. We expend more money in the interest of our Employment Department than any other Bus. College in Tenn. takes in as tuition. $500.00—Amount we have deposited in bank as a guarantee that we have in the past fulfilled, and will in the future fulfill, our guarantee contracts. HOME STUDY.—We have prepared, especially for home study, books on Bookkeeping, Shorthand and Penmanship. Write for price list.

PROF. DRAUGHON—I now have a position as bookkeeper and stenographer for the Southern Grocery Company, of this place; salary, $75.00 per month. I owe it all to your books on bookkeeping and shorthand prepared for home study.—Ira Armstrong, Pine Bluff, Ark.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscribers for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.15.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to April, '98. (A little later it will be May, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

It is said that two large cotton mills will be erected in Alabama.

The new Theosophical Temple at San Diego, Cal., is to cost about $500,000.

The river in front of this city has reached the "danger line," and the levees are being given watchful care.

The Second German Presbyterian Church, in this city, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of its dedication last Sunday.

The plant, franchises and pipe of the New Orlears Sewerage Company were sold, last week, at public auction to a Boston capitalist for $93,500.

The Tennessee students of the Peabody Normal College, located in Nashville, have begun a movement to raise funds for the erection of a monument to George Peabody in commemoration of his philanthropy to the South.

According to reports as we go to press, crevasses in the Mississippi river have occurred at Mound's Landing; Lake Lee, ten miles below Greenville; Pertshire and Stopp's Landing, in Bolivar county; and near Australia—all in Mississippi. Nearly all of Bolivar and Washington counties will go under water. Issaquena and parts of Sunflower and Sharkey will also be flooded. Greenville, Rosedale, Stoneville and in fact all the delta towns south of Rosedale to Vicksburg will be under water soon.

It has been found impossible to run the University of Chicago on $500,000 a year, and in response to an appeal for more funds it is announced that Mr. John D. Rockefeller has promised to augment his past gifts, aggregating $8,000 000. by a further sum of $10,000,000.

The women's clubs of Columbus, Ohio, have inaugurated a movement which is intended to assist Mark Twain to discharge his financial obligations from the sales of the books he is now at work upon. They will ask the co-operation of women's clubs everywhere, each member to pledge herself to purchase one copy.

FOREIGN.

Serious fighting has taken place in Crete between the insurgents and the Turks.

England has called a halt in the coercive measures against Greece in the Cretan difficulty. France will probably follow the lead of Great Britain.

The British government has addressed a strong protest to President Kruger, of the Transvaal Republic, in South Africa, against the proposed federation arrangement with the Orange Free State.

It is said that the objects of Cecil Rhodes' present visit to Portugal is to negotiate with that country for the purchase of Delagoa Bay, Africa. The sum offered by England, it is said, is £30,000,000. This would fill up the depleted Lisbon treasury and enable England to cut off the Boer Republic forever from a seaport, leaving them completely at the mercy of Great Britain.

A French syndicate is building a large gambling hotel at Ain Soofar, one of the stations of the Damascus railway, which is intended to form a refuge for the gamblers at Monte Carlo when the Monaco license terminates.

Negotiations are afloat at the instance of the Spanish minister for a revision of our treaties with Spain, particularly with a view to bringing the rules as to the treatment of naturalized citizens into conformity with more modern treaties.

The ambassadors of the powers have held a meeting in Constantinople to consider a dispatch from the foreign admirals in Cretan waters, stating that it is daily becoming more evident that a continuance of Turkish authority in Crete is impossible, and recommending that a European governor-general be appointed, and that the Turkish troops be withdrawn.

GOD HAS HIS WORLD IN HAND.

BY REV. H. P. LYMAN-WHEATON.

t a few good folks on the earth to-day
Are weary at sin's long reign;
ey gaze at the prospect, dull and gray,
And their hearts are touched with pain;
is message to such, like a trumpet peal,
We would sound from land to land—
riends, forget not, 'mid woe and weal,
God has his world in hand.

dread the havoc that comes to those Who set God's law at naught;
d men who sin are their own worst foes,
tern truth by nature taught.
d ye whose eyes are dim with tears,
Who fain would understand
e dark'st problems—dispel your fears,
God has his world in hand.

e the prophet wrote on his fadeless scroll
Of Christ and his peerless reign,

Letter from "Gilderoy."

When we first got here to Minter y, on the banks of Tallahatchie, wife, greatly to the amusement of children and to citizens generally, isted in calling the river the eet. I thought it was a clear case misnomer, but it is not so now, for river is the street, and Main street hat. The water has been getting her and higher for twenty days, longer. It is still rising. I have good skiffs tied up at the front e. They are home raised—manntured by one of my sons. The s say they are safe—"daisies," and easy. One is painted green, the er red. I have not tried either of m yet, and likely will not unless I obliged to do so. The boys have d every way to tote their mother one of them, but she has a holy ror of water in this shape and ntity. It would take some enragement to persuade her on the at Eastern, or a United States itor. The other day the boys got one of the skiffs just in front of door to show their mother how it was, and one of them put on w extras, just as boys generally when over the boat went bottom ards, and spilt them out in water or fifteen feet deep. I need dly say they both got wet, but did. Wife wanted me to help out, but I said: "No; I did not them in. Let them get out." they came to the surface the ger of the two apologized for boat by saying: "Don't blame boat. It is young, and not broken We were breaking it, and it w us." Experience keeps a good ol for boys. Indeed, some older le learn much in this school. exhibition did not encourage my to take a boat ride. Both of us t be growing old. We have one o many signs of approaching "They shall be afraid of which is high, and fears l be in the way." "The nd tree has begun to flourish" both of us, though "the grasshopper is not yet a burden" to either s. When younger both of us ld have enjoyed a ride in so frail shaky a craft as a skiff or dug-

I do not now care to climb up , nor to go down deep. I take risks. I was a venturesome and ewhat foolhardy boy, but I have n over all that. It took many a p and hard thump to knock it of me. Riding a circuit in a dog would not suit me very well last days. However, I would get used to it if I had it to do. s hard to learn an old dog new s." The bump of caution on my began by a fall of twenty-five from a tree, and other hard licks ed it to grow to good size. We in no danger from this river. trouble all comes from a break the levee on this side of the ty Mississippi. The people are ous and uneasy, but they go d with their work as if no danger impending. This is exactly right. Children and friends far away write as if they thought we were in imminent and immediate danger of being overwhelmed in a flood. If they could look in and see how comfortable we are, tho good cheer at home, and how all the work goes right along, they would give their fears to the wind. I suppose the flood, some four thousand years ago, took most of the people then living by surprise. Fair warning was faithfully given for a long time, but it seemed to them as idle tales. When Jonah told the people of Nineveh that the city would be destroyed in forty days, they repented in sackcloth and ashes. One hundred years later they did not heed nor repent when so faithfully and pathetically warned by Nahum. That all occurred near three thousand years ago. People act the same way now. The warning of the Savior in regard to Jerusalem was heeded by few. The final end of the world will come suddenly, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, and, although told of it, millions of people will not be ready for it. They will run then, go flying in every direction, and cry to the rocks and mountains to fall on them to hide them from the face of our coming Lord.

The people here plow, plant, trade, marry, and are given in marriage, just as though an overflow were not impending. Some dance and play cards, progressive euchre, and the like, just as they did when the waters were low. A few are more serious and prayerful than they generally are.

At family prayer this morning I found these words very full of comfort: "For this shall everyone that is godly pray unto thee in a time when thou mayest be found: surely in the floods of great waters they shall not come nigh unto him." I have read that many a time, but never till now did it so come home to me. There is some sweet passage that suits every close corner we get into in this life. Most of the inspired writers were men of large and deep experience. They had tested the promises they wrote for the comfort of others. They knew whom and what they believed. Some men and women grow too wise while they are yet too young.

GILDEROY.

Notes of Encouragement.

Dr. Andrews, presiding elder of Meridian district, reports $41.60 contributed to foreign missions by Rose Hill, and $1.47 by South Side, Meridian; 20 subscribers to The World for Christ on the Rose Hill circuit, 5 on Daleville, and 10 at Meridian, Central. The good Doctor also reports 5 Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies, 4 Juvenile, 1 Young People's, 2 Sunday-schools, 4 Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission, and 1 Juvenile Parsonage Home Mission Society. Good for the Meridian district! May the number increase! Bro. D. C. Langford and Rose Hill head the list at present.

Bro. W. W. Simmons, presiding elder of Brandon district, reports $7.25 paid to foreign missions by Walnut Grove circuit, P. H. Howse, P. C., and $1.75 by Morton circuit, W. L. Linfield, P. C., and writes: "Other brethren have collected since I saw them, but have not reported the amount. I am satisfied Brandon district will make a better report this year than last."

Dr. Monnger, for the Brookhaven district, reports $5 from Caseyville, $2.50 from Adams, $2 from China Grove, $2.65 from Whitestown, and $10 from Wesson. He also reports 20 subscribers to The World for Christ on North Wesson circuit, 10 on China Grove, and 3 on Pleasant Grove, and 4 subscribers to The Methodist Review of Missions on the Whitestown circuit. Don't all the sixteen pastors subscribe for and read the Review of Missions?

Dr. Hunnicutt writes: "Natchez district is alive to missions, some what, in parts. Jefferson Street (Natchez) has sent up $50, and $20 from her Sunday-school. [Good for Bro. T. B. Holloman and his people!] Fayette circuit is ablaze with missionary zeal. It has three missionary societies with 50 members each—all at work and paying monthly dues. It has sent $50 to the Board at Nashville. [Good!] Gloster has sent $20, and expects to send more soon. [Press the subject, Bro. Black, and Bro. and Sister Hunnicutt will help you!] Other places have sent on something, I think. We are using some diligence to collect in every place." May the Natchez district report every cent of every collection in full!

As previously announced, Sunday, April 11, will be spent by me (the Lord willing) at Laurel in the morning and Ellisville at night; Thursday, April 15, morning and night, at Forest; Friday, 16, at Pelahatchie; 29 and 30, at Water Valley with the Epworth Leaguers. The second Sunday in May I am to be at Pearlington; Wednesday, May 26, with the Vicksburg District Conference at Rolling Fork; Sunday, May 30, at old Brownsville, on the Flora circuit. Rev. R. W. Bailey is to occupy my pulpit at Canton, Sunday, April 11.

THE MISSISSIPPI ORPHANS' HOME.

The Mississippi Orphans' Home.

At the session of the Mississippi Conference which met in Natchez, Dec. 14–19, 1892, a committee of five, consisting of W. A. Gunning, A. F. Watkins, M. L. Burton, H. M. Ellis, and Peter James, was appointed "to consider the advisability of establishing a Methodist orphan asylum within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, and to formulate plans for the same." At the Conference session in Hazlehurst, in December, 1893, the committee reported that but little progress had been made, but expressed their conviction of the importance and practicability of the enterprise, and asked for further time. During the following year the attention of the public was called to the proposed orphanage, and some degree of interest excited. This led to the appointment at the session of the North Mississippi Conference, held in December, 1894, of a committee consisting of J. A. Bowen, J. M. Wyatt, and J. H. Shorard, to confer with a similar committee from the Mississippi Conference as to the practicability of establishing an orphanage under the joint patronage of the two Conferences in Mississippi.

Rev. J. A. Bowen visited the Mississippi Conference during its session in Meridian, Dec. 12–17, 1894, and the Orphans' Home Committee, after consultation with him, recommended in their report the appointment of the suggested Committee of Conference. Their report was adopted, and Bishop Keener appointed as the representatives of the Mississippi Conference: R. J. Jones, W. A. Gunning, and A. F. Watkins.

The first meeting of the joint commission was held in Winona, Miss., March 26, 1895, and the following organization was effected, viz.: President, W. A. Gunning; recording secretary, J. A. Bowen, and corresponding secretary, A. F. Watkins. After careful consideration of the subject, the commission adopted resolutions expressive of their sense of the necessity of the establishment of such an institution, and ordered the corresponding secretary to present to the Methodists of the State, through the columns of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, a report of the meeting and a plea for the Orphans' Home.

An elaborate report, setting forth the practicability of the work, and urging the importance of immediate action in the matter, was presented to the Conferences during their sessions in December, 1895, and a committee of five, consisting of three preachers and two laymen from each Conference, were appointed to constitute a Board of Directors, whose duty it was "to procure a charter, and as soon as practicable locate and put into operation the said Home." Great interest attended the adoption of this report by the two Conferences, and subscriptions were taken up amounting to over $3,100.

In Jackson, Miss., on Jan. 8, 1896, the Board of Directors, consisting of R. J. Jones, W. A. Gunning, A. F. Watkins, M. L. Burton, and John S. Turner, of the Mississippi Conference; and J. A. Bowen, J. M. Wyatt, W. S. Lagrone, J. B. Streater, and J. H. Sherard, of the North Mississippi Conference, met and organized with W. A. Gunning, president; J. M. Wyatt, vice-president; A. F. Watkins, secretary, and J. A. Bowen and M. L. Burton, treasurers. The name, "Mississippi Orphans' Home," was adopted, a committee was appointed to procure a charter, and the secretary was ordered to advertise for bids for location.

On the twenty-third of April, in Winona, Miss., a second meeting was held, at which the charter was adopted, and the town of Water Valley was selected as the location of the Home. At a subsequent meeting held in Jackson, plans for a handsome, commodious and well-appointed building were selected, and a contract for the material and erection of the building closed.

The directors were able to report at the sessions of the Conferences in December, 1896, that the funds of the orphanage amounted to $3,600 in cash and $1,300 in subscriptions, and at their request W. M. Thornton, from the Mississippi Conference, and I. T. Blount, from the North Mississippi Conference, were added to the Board of Directors.

It is hoped that every Methodist congregation in Mississippi will contribute toward this very laudable enterprise. Brethren of the Mississippi Conference will send money to Rev. M. L. Burton, Wesson, Miss., and those from North Mississippi will remit to Rev. J. A. Bowen, Water Valley, Miss. Rev. T. B. Clifford, of Water Valley, Miss., will act as field agent, and assist wherever his services are desired in representing the Home.

Religious services will be held in the orphanage chapel on Friday, April 30, under the auspices of the State Board of Directors, and during session of the State Epworth League Conference.

Sliding.

In a coasting frolic up in Maine, the other day, a little boy was seen sliding down the hill on an old family Bible. It struck a newspaper reporter as something novel, but to those who are accustomed to look beyond the average reporter's ken it is not an unfamiliar picture. Men have been using the Bible to slide down the hill on ever since it came into existence. If a church member wants to indulge in the luxury of hating his neighbor, he stretches himself out at full length on the imprecatory Psalms, and away he goes—head foremost. If he wants to break the Sabbath, he has only to lie down on a particular sentence which fell from the Savior's lips, and cut it loose from its context, and down he shoots. If it is drink he is after, Paul's advice to Timothy will let him down as smoothly as the best steel runners on the market. Or, if he is a scholar and longs for the select company of irreverent critics that have gone before, he has only to lie down on the old family Bible and whip out his pen-knife, and slash away at it, and when he comes to himself he will—be there. No; the little boy in Maine didn't invent that Bible game.—Richmond Advocate.

Thaw Them Off.

Suppose some cold morning you should go into a neighbor's house and find him busy at work on his windows, scratching away, and should ask what he was doing, and he should reply, "Why, I am trying to remove the frost, but as fast as I get it off one square it comes on another," would you not say, "Why, man, let your windows alone and kindle your fire, and the frost will come off?"

And have you not seen people who try to break off their bad habits one after another without avail? Well they are like the man who tried to scratch the frost from his windows. Let the fire of love to God, kindled at the altar of prayer, burn in their hearts, and the bad habits will soon melt away.—H. L. Hastings.

Where Infidelity Begins.

The illustrious John Randolph once said: "When I try to make myself an infidel, I fancy I feel the hand of my mother on my head and her voice sounding in my ear as she taught me to say, 'Our Father, who art in heaven.'" No child ever started out in life a skeptic. The child believes everything told it until it has been deceived by parents and persons who fail to keep their promises. Infidelity begins in the family where the first lie is told, where the first promise is broken, and where deception is practiced by old heads. —Christian Leader.

If one should undertake to account for the popular distaste of Bible reading, one would probably look for the secret in the exotic character of the Book and in those sins which vitiate the appetite for the things of God. But if one would seek a reason for that distaste which dates from early childhood, he must look for it in the impressions which are formed of the Book by children who are left to find it out for themselves. While the foreign dress of the Book may account for the aversion which some people have for it, and sin will account for the aversion of others, there are probably as many more whose distaste is due chiefly to the neglect of parents at a critical period of the child's life. It is just as easy for a child to form a wrong impression of the Bible as it is for him to form a wrong impression of any other book.—Bible Reader.

If angels in heaven ever see things on this earth, they must weep when they see that church member, who has a magnificent farm, fine living, money in bank, notes against his neighbors for loaned money at high rate of interest, walk up and pay twelve or twenty dollars a year for the support of his pastor, while his church stands closed three-fourths of the Lord's days. If devils in hell know about things on earth, they must shout with fiendish joy when they find such men worshiping in little school-houses, while their provender is stored in great barns that cost from five hundred to three thousand dollars. Does God hear the eloquent prayers of such men? If so, the Bible does not tell about it.—Baptist Standard.

We are apt to overestimate the injury which the church is likely to suffer from a particular misfortune. We can not be too zealous for the honor of the church, but we need not worry ourselves overmuch about the reproach which erring brethren may bring upon it, or about the injury which it may suffer at the hands of its enemies. There are timid saints who imagine that every time a good man goes wrong, or every time a brilliant man renounces the faith, the church receives a mortal stab; but the church has received millions of mortal (?) stabs in its life-time, and it seems to be enjoying a reasonable measure of health still.—Richmond Advocate.

Blessed is the man who has the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things, but above all the power of going out of one's self, and seeing and appreciating whatever is noble in others.—Thos. Hughes.

A soul occupied with great ideas best performs small duties; the divinest views of life penetrate most clearly into the meanest emergencies.—James Martineau.

LOST OPPORTUNITIES

BY L. C. HAYDEN

"Of all sad words by tongue or pen
The saddest is it might have been.
Thus wrote the poet long ago.
And oh, the truth, too well we know.

They've echoed down thro' many years
And caused regrets and bitter tears.
They'll echo on from day to day,
Till time and earth have passed away.

Help us, dear Lord, to faithful be;
To do thy work as planned by thee.
Help us to watchful, have a care,
When you shall call may we be there.

And never shrink from thy command
But simply ask thy guiding hand.
Alone there's nothing we can do.
Oh, God, we must be helped by you.

Claiming Too Much.

My beloved brother and fellow-worker, Rev. G. H. Galloway, in reporting his meeting at East End, Meridian, as published in the ADVOCATE, of March 23, claims entirely too much for his newly adopted pet dogma. He says, speaking of the second blessing as preached by Mrs. Mary McGee Snoll-Hall and her new husband:

"One of the truest evidences of the thoroughness of the work is found in the fact that the work has gone out from East End to Central and other portions of the city. Bro. Featherstun has for three weeks been carrying on a meeting, with about twenty-five conversions, and among his most efficient workers were many who were sanctified during my meeting at East End."

That Bro. Galloway had a good meeting at East End is a matter of rejoicing, but that it had any connection with the work at Central is not a fact in the history of our revival as I see it. That a few of the girls in E. M. F. College, who had professed the second blessing at East End, did some faithful work among their fellow-pupils, is a gratifying fact, but in no wise justifies the inference that would be drawn from his words: "and among his most efficient workers were many who were sanctified during my meeting at East End." I fear that Bro. Galloway's mistaken, but honest, desire to glorify a pet dogma has led him to thus claim for that dogma and its advocates more than the true history records them. Why did not Bro. Galloway tell us how many were converted at East End? This way of counting in all who were blessed at a meeting under the general head of "conversions and sanctifications," and then putting that sort of results in contrast with the results of meetings where only conversions are numbered, is an unfair way of glorifying a pet dogma. "About twenty-five conversions at Central," and "over one hundred converted and sanctified at East End," makes a big showing for the second blessing dogma; while in reality, if I had gotten every Christian who got an uplift in his life to name it sanctification or second blessing, I have no idea how far over the hundred mark our meeting would have run.

I hope Bro. Galloway and some others of his peculiar faith will learn by and by that they can not justly claim the whole world of true spirituality for their pet dogma, the second blessing.

It seems to me that Bro. Galloway's presentations of the above-mentioned claims for his pet dogma, as well as his personal allusions to Bros. Ellis and Woodward, were, under the circumstances, in very bad taste. It pains me to be compelled to call attention to these things; but justice demands it. If the preaching of the second blessing had accomplished good, let it rest on what it has done, and not claim for itself that which it has not done.

I have heard it reported several times recently that I had changed my views on this subject since writing my book, "Second Blessing versus Holiness." I do not know how such a rumor started; but I do know that there is not even the shadow of truth in it. My observations and experiences in this charge certainly have no tendency to change my views.

Some of the best people in my charge profess the second blessing, and some of the best people here do not believe in it. I have found no reason to believe that professing the second blessing has made any of them better; and the lives of some do not commend the dogma in the least. I see no reason to change one paragraph of what I have heretofore written.

CHRIST ALONE.

BY REV. B. F. WHITE.

"He departed again into a mountain himself alone."—St. John vi, 15.

"Christ is alone," sings the breeze in undertone.
The laughing stars, which eye unbars,
And the silent moon, in voiceless tune,
With the chirp of birds, and lowing herds,
With tender moan say, "Christ's alone."
The peaks above, in tenderest love,
Look from their heights, with glad delights,
That on their slopes a window opes,
Revealing well, in mossy dell,
The bending form, as bowed by storm,
Of them who came to light the flame
Of love divine, and cause to shine
Along life's ways a heavenly blaze
Of heavenly truth for age and youth,
Which, followed well, will break the spell
Of unbelief, and bring relief
To Adam's race, and quite efface
Satanic lies from moral skies,
And bring the day, the heavenly day,
When sin's dark night, with hellish blight,
Shall pass away, and truth's bright day
See Christ alone, can sin atone.

Floyd, La., March 24, 1897.

Dublin, Texas.

Our issue of March 25 contained a clipping from the Pacific Advocate stating that the Morrison meeting at Dublin, Texas, resulted in only one accession to the church. Seeing this, a friend of ours sends us for publication a clipping from the Methodist, which presents the results of the meeting in a very different light. We make extracts as follows:

DEAR BRO. MORRISON: Your coming to our town has blessed many perishing souls. You started a revival fire here that looks like now will never stop. I want to tell you about our protracted prayer meeting that was started soon after the holiness meeting. The holiness meeting was put on foot by the class leaders. We commenced holding them in the cottages, but the interest increased so, and the congregations got so large, we had to get into a larger house; so that noble Christian man, Capt. Smith, gave us a house that would seat about three hundred people. The first night we held our services in the house we could not all get in, so the next day the captain told us to go into his lumber pile and make the house larger. So we went to work and made our house 19x40 feet larger. The first night we found the house not sufficient to seat the anxious crowd, so Capt. Smith told us to go into his lumber again; so we added another 19x40 feet, and still hundreds of people have to stand on the outside. We have had up to date seventy-two conversions, and nearly everyone are grown people, and some of the worst men in our town. As soon as one is converted they go right to work to get some one else saved; and they all testify. We have a testimonial meeting every service, and they have me to conduct that service. It would do you good to hear the men converts testify. They seem anxious to tell the people what the Lord has done for them. As soon as the invitation is extended to the unsaved the new converts go out into the congregation and talk to their friends and get them to come to the altar. Quite a number of the conversions at the prayer meeting date their start at the holiness meeting.

Our pastor, Brother Matthews, attends the meeting, but he has not conducted any of the services, but helps in the other service. The meeting has been conducted by the laymen altogether. All denominations take part; it is indeed a union meeting. More of the converts have joined the Baptist and Christian Churches than the Methodist. We hold one service in a saloon; had good effect. We also hold one service in a prostitute house. We broke up the house by getting the girls converted. We are doing a work that has never been done in our town before.

We are going out into the highways after them. There is a fine opening here for a holiness meeting. We are anxiously waiting for the time to come for you and Sister Morrison to come back. You have certainly won the hearts of the people of Dublin.

I don't think there will be so much opposition to the meeting next year by the members. They see that the meeting did not break up the church, as was predicted by some.

Everyone of the Christians in Dublin that got the blessing of entire sanctification still testify to it; they tell it in our protracted prayer meetings. Capt. Smith says the holiness meeting did the Baptist Church more good than any meeting ever held in Dublin. Bro. Matthews said Sunday his church was more spiritual than he ever saw it. C. H. STRONG.

Mrs. H. W. Foote, of North Miss. Conference
Mrs. R. R. Parker, of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. E. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

The following is the conclusion of the annual report of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Florence E. Russ, to the Parsonage and Home Mission Society at its recent meeting at Felicity:

(Concluded.)

"The Central Committee have arranged an interesting and instructive reading course. Until recently we had no organized classes in the Louisiana Conference. Several ladies in New Orleans have agreed to begin next month. A handsome silk banner is offered to the society having the largest proportionate number of members taking this reading course.

"The department of systematic giving has had but little encouragement given it in our Conference; and if we can do no more than start a movement in this direction, surely something will have been accomplished; and if it be a good work, God will make it a permanent one. Let all that can give five cents per week for this special fund. If there are members who can not give this, then give one cent per week for one year, but give something.

"A little has been done in the department of supplies.

"Jordan Street Auxiliary, in Shreveport, sent a barrel of ready-made clothing and new material for garments to a destitute preacher's family out West, valued at $26.

"Mer Rouge, one of the youngest auxiliaries in the Conference, organized Nov. 25, 1896, have worked with an interest and zeal worthy of competition. They have raised $31.60 for local work, exclusive of dues, and contributed material for clothing for the poor, amounting to $8.25.

"Oak Ridge (juveniles), one of the oldest societies in the State, having been organized May, 1887, has done much excellent work under the able management and Christian influence of their lady manager. The past quarter they have raised $7.90, to provide comforts for an old lady, one of the 'shut ins.'

"The auxiliary at Ponchatoula, La., the only one remaining of five organized by Miss Werlein last year, is growing in interest and good work.

"Jordan Street Auxiliary, in Shreveport, though few in numbers, are active in all lines of Christian work. I never fail to receive their reports on time.

"The district secretaries of the Delhi and Alexandria districts have sent in excellent reports of work done during the year.

"It is to be regretted that the Week of Prayer was not more generally observed. Only some ten auxiliaries held service. The offerings were not so large as hoped for. The auxiliary in Jackson has the honor of raising the largest amount, and also reporting every member a subscriber for Our Homes.

"Your Conference secretary has distributed the literature quarterly, consisting of 3,310 leaflets, 400 programmes for monthly meeting, 175 leaflets for Children's Day and 70 leaflets on the connectional work; 242 programmes and leaflets for Week of Prayer, '97; 108 copies of Help, for conducting and organizing P. and H. M. work. Have written 195 letters and 252 postals; distributed 83 copies of youth annual reports and 18 copies of Our Homes gratis.

"Last October a City Mission Union was formed, consisting of two delegates from each auxiliary in New Orleans. Under their auspices a home for working women has been opened. The Tchoupitoulas Mission work has grown in interest and numbers. The Juniors in Rayne Memorial donated fifty books to the library for the Mission School. During the year the mission may move from the present rented building into a home of its own. Miss Worlein, by individual efforts, raises the amount due for rent and gas, amounting to about $25 monthly.

"Mrs. Meekins, the city missionary, residing in the mission, which is in one of the most depraved portions of our city, is one filled with the Holy Spirit, and works faithfully to 'seek and save that which is lost.' Miss Fuller, missionary in Gretna and Gouldsboro, is a most zealous worker. Her partner says of her: 'Miss Fuller has Gouldsboro; there is little for me to do.'

"Miss Werlein, whose life, talents and money are consecrated to the service of her Master, has contributed $1,000 to a loan fund in sacred memory of her sainted parents. 'No part of the amount secured and set apart as constituting the loan fund is ever donated for any purpose or used for current expenses, but is preserved without diminution as a perpetual fund, held and reserved wholly for temporary loans.'

"To the Preachers' Wives' Loan Fund we have sixteen patrons.

"The Angel Band Loan Fund has two members.

"The Baby Roll has fourteen names enrolled.

"Mrs. J. H. Campman, who filled the responsible office of Conference treasurer most faithfully for several years, was called home last June. 'Faithful unto death, she has received a crown of life.'

"The rescue work is an important feature of the home mission department.

"Bishop Duncan says to look after the neglected classes, especially among women, which is second to no service. It ranks with the most important. Our duty is to "'Lift up the fallen, laden with sin,

In tender pity lift them up to him.'

"We ponder the Master's commission, 'Go ye into all the world,' and lo, we find 'all the world' pouring its population into our country through our open gates. We have a golden opportunity to Christianize these thousands of foreigners. The great business of Christians is to bring souls to Christ. So long as there is an unsaved one, there is room for added effort in Christ's name. God's purpose is that in us shall all the nations of the earth be blest, and his name honored and glorified before men. God has placed us where our hands must mold the future's weal or woe.

"Let us each enter upon the work of the new year zealously, faithfully doing our part in the Master's vineyard."

Our Record for 1896.

Let an anthem of praise go up from the Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference for the abundant success which crowns our year's work. Through the earnest prayers and labors of our officers and members our pledges are grandly redeemed on every line. Our motto for the year's work as we entered upon it was 1,000 new members and $1,000 advance in contributions. The reports for the year ending with March show us 1,100 new members and $4,780 raised during the year, which is $1,400 in advance of last year. This includes the support of five day-schools, six Bible women, eight scholarships, seven beds, and three honorary life members, besides the regular pledge. This report shows us results as we may definitely state them; but who can tell the zealous labors, the earnest prayers, the increased love for our Master and the souls for whom he died, the quickening of our heart-lives, which lies back of these figures, and which only the Master can see; and who knows the many souls whose salvation and eternal happiness shall result from the agencies thus set in motion? Oh, sisters; how glad we should be over the successful work done for the Master, and how earnest should be our prayer that every dollar contributed and every new member gained may be mighty forces for further triumphs in this great cause.

And now, while our very beings thrill with praise for success, may there be born into every worker's heart a more earnest resolution that there shall be no diminution in this good work, but that instead it shall be carried forward with increasing power. Who of us are sorry for what we may have given or sacrificed to accomplish these results? Who does not feel that the gain in our own hearts and the great advance in the work does not unspeakably repay us for every effort put forth or every cent given?

My sisters, can you think of anything you might have accomplished with the time, or bought with the money given to this cause, during the past year, that could have yielded a fractional part of the pleasure and gain we realize as we contemplate the year's work? A valiant servant of the Lord, who had given all to his Master in foreign mission service, once said: "I have tried to give the Lord something all my life; but when I tried to give, he poured into my life such blessing I was a still greater debtor." Doubtless, we each feel now that when we tried to give God something, he has returned into our lives of his blessings, "pressed down, shaken together, running over."

Let our praise now blossom into beautiful service and sacrifice. Let this abundant blessing God has given us but constrain us to labor more zealously, pray more fervently, and give more liberally. In the very beginning of the new year's work, even before the stimulating influences of the annual meetings can be felt, let us push steadily on to another year's work. Many of our auxiliaries have a line of work mapped out for several years in the support of specials. These need not wait for further orders or suggestions, but resolutely enter upon the work assumed. Sisters, let us thank God for his rich blessing, and then ask him to teach us to do still greater things, and we will have revealed unto us still more of the fullness of his blessing. MRS. G. H. LIPSCOMB.

Selections.

"Lo! I Am with You Alway."

How discouraged you often are. Do you remember what great speech fell from the Master's lips, when he stood out radiant with resurrection glory? It seems that there must have been the shout of a new song in heaven when he said: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth—Lo! I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." And that mighty burst of utterance is all for you, discouraged soul! We can not say that resting in such truth will lift you above all discouragement. In the world ye shall have tribulation. The royal path of life leads up hill, not down. We may have to climb to reach the top, or even to sit with comfort midway. Temples of life are not built down in the marsh where poisonous vapors brood, but on the hill top. Monuments are reared where they can be seen, and he who would read only the inscription must go up. The city of God is above the white-fleeced clouds. No, we shall not be rid of the things that discourage as long as we are in this world, but put them all into one great mass, and they can be no match for either sentence of God's Word quoted above. We should catch up the damp dew of discouragement and use it to brighten our graces, as a warrior would polish his sword with his breath. This, rather than allow our discouragement to whip the manhood or womanhood out of us, and then plunge us aside to be taunted and mocked by our weakness. Strange that we are often too dull to see God's meaning in permitting discouragement to overtake us. Nothing worse could happen to some of us than to sail always with the wind. We need to be set back betimes. Many a failure in a good cause proves a savory virtue. Our wings often need clipping. Flying is not our business just yet. When we have lost a day, when our great plan is overturned, when great difficulties spring up suddenly, and it seems we can go no farther, how we are humbled, made more thoughtful and reverent, and with larger wisdom as well as a devouter and mightier faith we resume our task.—Mid Continent.

Christians should always live at their best. What would we think of a traveler who should fall into sluggish moods, and wander sometimes from the well-beaten road into the lowlands, where he would be befogged and lose his way amidst morasses? The best living requires a constant fixed purpose to do the will of God, a prayerful attitude, and the daily study of God's words. Thomas was absent one time from the company of the Apostles, and missed that spiritual feast when the risen Lord appeared to his disciples. The Christian soldier needs to have his armor on at all times, for he does not know when Apollyn will fall upon him. Christ says, "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation."

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,
Editor Christian Advocate.

MUL-EN-OL is the greatest of all antiseptic dressings. Is a sovereign remedy for healing flesh wounds on man or beast.

A New Cure for Cancer.

Dr. Mason, the eminent cancer specialist of Virginia, has a cure that surpasses all former methods. No further need for knives to cut or plasters to burn. Practically painless. No secret discovery and no quackery. A few of the severest cases must go to the Sanitarium for personal attention, but most cases can be treated at home at small cost and cured in a short time. For information and opinion of case, if described, free of charge, write

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. A. Terry, P. C., Tranquil circuit: "I have every reason to be encouraged with my success so far. I have my collections for foreign missions paid up in full and two-thirds of Conference claimants paid. The money has been forwarded. Our first Quarterly Conference was a success. The charge has paid me and the presiding elder about one-fourth of the assessment. We have four Sabbath-schools and two prayer meetings that have been in progress for some time. Pleasant Hill Church was dedicated on the fourth Sunday in February. The people who were active in the erection of that church deserve much credit and commendation for building such a nice and capacious home of worship. We are expecting a glorious year in God's name. Brethren, pray for us."

Rev Thos. J. Upton, Zachary, La., March 27, 1897: "Please allow me to say through the ADVOCATE that the work in Zachary is in no sense retrograding, but rather on the up-grade. Our people have not indicated any dissatisfaction at our return to them for the second year, but seem rather pleased than otherwise, and have manifested their satisfaction by many acts of kindness to the preacher and family. Why, sir; a few evenings since about seventy-five of them came and brought to the parsonage a fine lot of edibles of almost every kind obtainable at this season and needed by a family, and we are literally 'living on the fat of the land.' Congregations are good and attentive, and nearly a score of members have been added to the church since Conference. We love our people dearly, and are glad to know that they love us for the Master's sake. May the Lord bless them."

REVIVAL AT CENTRAL CHURCH, MERIDIAN.

On Sunday, Feb. 28, after a week of preparatory services, I began a revival at Central Church. The meeting continued with two services daily until Wednesday, March 17. The pastor did all the preaching, except two or three strong sermons by Dr. Andrews. The audiences were large at night and quite respectable at the morning services. The results of the meetings, so far as results can be tabulated, are as follows:

1. Between thirty-five and forty conversions.

2. An indefinite number of Christians blessed very sweetly and lifted to higher levels of life.

3. Accessions to the church on profession, 33; besides 18 by letter—aggregating 51.

4. Greater unity in a church disturbed for several years by a profitless theological discussion.

5. More faith in God on the part of the membership—i. e., a recognition of the truth almost lost sight of, that God will bless a church with a revival in the absence of a professional evangelist.

6. The gladdening of very many hearts so hungry for a good old-fashioned "home-made revival." I hear this sort of rejoicing everywhere I go pastoral visiting.

7. The quickening of every arm of the church work—e. g., the Sunday-school had a larger attendance on last Sunday than it has had for years—so reported the secretary.

8. A hard-worked, anxious pastor and a toiling, burdened presiding elder greatly encouraged. Thank God for it all!

In addition to those received during the revival, twenty five others have been received by certificate, making a grand total since the Annual Conference of seventy-six.

OBITUARIES.

CORBAN—The subject of this sketch, Sister ADELIA CORBAN (nee Cunningham), was born in Franklin county, Miss., Jan. 10, 1838, and died at her home near Hamburg, Miss., Jan. 22, 1897.

Sister Corban united with the M. E. Church, South, in early girlhood, but was not converted till after her marriage. She was converted at her home sometime in the year 1859. I never met her until a few evenings before her death. While her suffering was great, her mind was perfectly clear and strong. She spoke of her conversion to God, told of struggles in her Christian life, referred to her expected death, and said, "I am ready to go." May God's blessings rest on the sorrowing family.

R. A. BRELAND.

DEEN—J. B. DEEN was born Sept. 17, 1833, and died Dec. 11, 1896, at his home in Covington county, Miss. I became Bro. Deen's pastor in 1895, and was associated with him up to the time of his death. He did not join the church until late in life, not more than ten or fifteen years before his death. On account of his not having identified himself with the church in early life, which is so essential in developing Christian character, and through natural timidity, he was never foremost in the church. He was always faithful in his attendance on the divine services and the ordinances of his church. The last time he was at church he knelt at the altar rail and received the sacrament. I never saw his place vacant at church, except when unavoidably kept away. It was not my privilege to be with him during his last illness.

He was buried near his home by Bro. J. H. Evans, a former pastor. He leaves a wife and ten children to mourn his death. He was a good husband, father, neighbor, and citizen. May he and his loved ones meet around the great white throne in glory!

W. J. DAWSON.

BONNETTE—Died at her home, in Pollock, La., on Jan. 20, 1897, Mrs. IRENE LUCILE BONNETTE (nee Thrasher), wife of Dr. J. V. Bonnette, aged twenty-one years ten months and twenty-one days.

It is with more than ordinary sorrow that the writer chronicles the death of Mrs. Bonnette, a woman whose existence reflected all that was good, true, and beautiful in womanhood; whose death was no less than a calamity to the community, the extent of which is only realized now that it can not be repaired by human agency.

To those who were blessed by her love, it was a happiness. To the husband and mother, about whose hearts' hearthstones the ashes of buried hopes are strewn, and whose eyes are wet with tears of love and regret, there rests the consciousness that a happier existence is hers, inasmuch as she was prepared for death, because she was a Christian.

The wealth of a mother's love was lavished upon the darling babe, who can not realize the heavy loss she now sustains.

In contemplating her generous spirit and charitable disposition, we are forcibly reminded of these words, so beautifully spoken of another: "Had a rose been cast at her feet for every good deed, the heap would reach well nigh to heaven." Her example and deeds of kindness have embalmed her memory in the affection of those who survive.

A FRIEND.

HAILEY—Sister NANCY HAILEY, widow of Rev. C. H. Hailey, was born in Anson county, N. C., June 17, 1813, the daughter of Charles Henson. In 1848 she moved with her husband to Kemper county, Miss., where she has since made her home, rearing a family of ten children, six of whom survive her.

In her death the county lost one of its oldest and best citizens, and Union Ridge Church one of its oldest and most devout members.

As a neighbor, she was thoughtful and kind, cheerfully administering to the wants of any in poverty or in distress. As a mother, she was devoted and affectionate, entering with a true mother's heart into all the joys and sorrows of her children. Their sorrows were her sorrows, and their smiles were her smiles. Her husband was a local preacher in the M. E. Church, South, about forty years, and, as his wife, she did her part nobly. True, affectionate, and confiding, she became the queen of the household, and swayed a scepter of love. Her husband passed over the river six'een years ago, and left her in loneliness and deep sorrow.

She joined the Methodist Church in early life and remained its consistent member until the day of her death. She loved her church, its songs, and its services. To her the Bible was a message of love from God, her Father, and her hours of private devotion were seasons of sweet communion. She has been freed from all hindrances, and now offers a more perfect service, and does not see through a glass darkly, but as face to face.

J. J. GOLDEN.

DeKalb, Miss.

HANKERSON — Sister REBECCA J. HANKERSON (nee Higdon), widow of the late A. E. Hankerson, was born in Franklin county, Miss., on the tenth day of March, 1824, and died at Port Gibson, Miss., Dec. 9, 1896.

At the age of twenty years she came to Warren county, Miss., and in 1846 was happily married to Arch. E. Hankerson, with whom she lived in great peace for forty-three years. During these years she became the mother of ten children, six of whom are still living.

Sister Hankerson was a faithful and loyal member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for a period of twenty-five years, and her Christian life was one of great joy and cheerfulness. Her faith in the power of Christ to save was unfaltering, and her life and character a continual commentary upon the religion she professed.

During the latter part of her life she was a great sufferer, but always bore her afflictions with that patience and fortitude which has ever marked the experience of the pure and good.

Sister Hankerson was an affectionate wife; a kind, gentle mother, benevolent to the poor, a warm friend of her church, and a devout servant of the Master.

Her death was sudden and unexpected, but her house was in order, and her sun went down to rise again in the full-orbed splendor of eternal glory. To day she is sleeping quietly beside her loved ones in the churchyard at old Red Bone, to await the resurrection of the just. May her Christ an mantle fall upon the shoulders of her surviving children! Farewell, dear friend, but not forever; we shall meet again in the "beautiful beyond."

Don't imagine for a minute that fine dresses and accomplishments will deceive anybody. "Murder will out"—everybody knows that. Ralph Waldo Emerson said this in another way. He said practically that you couldn't hide anything you did. He said that what people do, and what they think, and what they eat show in their faces. The body is a plastic record. It shows plainly what is being done to it and with it. It tells the condition of the digestive organs. It plainly blabs about constipation. Foul breath, dull eyes, listlessness, sallowness, pimples are almost unmistakable symptoms. Don't believe that you are the only one that knows your condition. Constipation is a serious matter. There is no form of sickness it may not lead to. It fills the body with impurities. It makes it ready for the reception of any sort of disease germs. It is easy to let it run on into something serious. It is easier to cure it. There is a safe, certain, comfortable cure for such constipation. This cure comes in little vials. Its name is Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. The "Pellets" are tiny, sugar-coated granules. One is a gentle laxative; two a mild cathartic. They cure constipation in a perfectly natural way. You do not become a slave to their use. There are hundreds of preparations offered for this same purpose, but none so certain, and none so safe. The trouble with most of them is that they are violent; and in curing one disorder, start others. Dyspepsia may come just as quickly from taking strong medicines, as from taking no medicine at all. Sometimes the remedy is worse than the disease. There is no other preparation similar to Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and so there can be nothing "just as good." Druggists sell them.

Nervous!

People wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headaches, indigestion and Nervous Dyspepsia. The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood feeding the nerves on refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. Hood's Sarsaparilla feeds the nerves pure, rich blood; gives natural sleep, good digestion, is the true remedy for all nervous troubles.

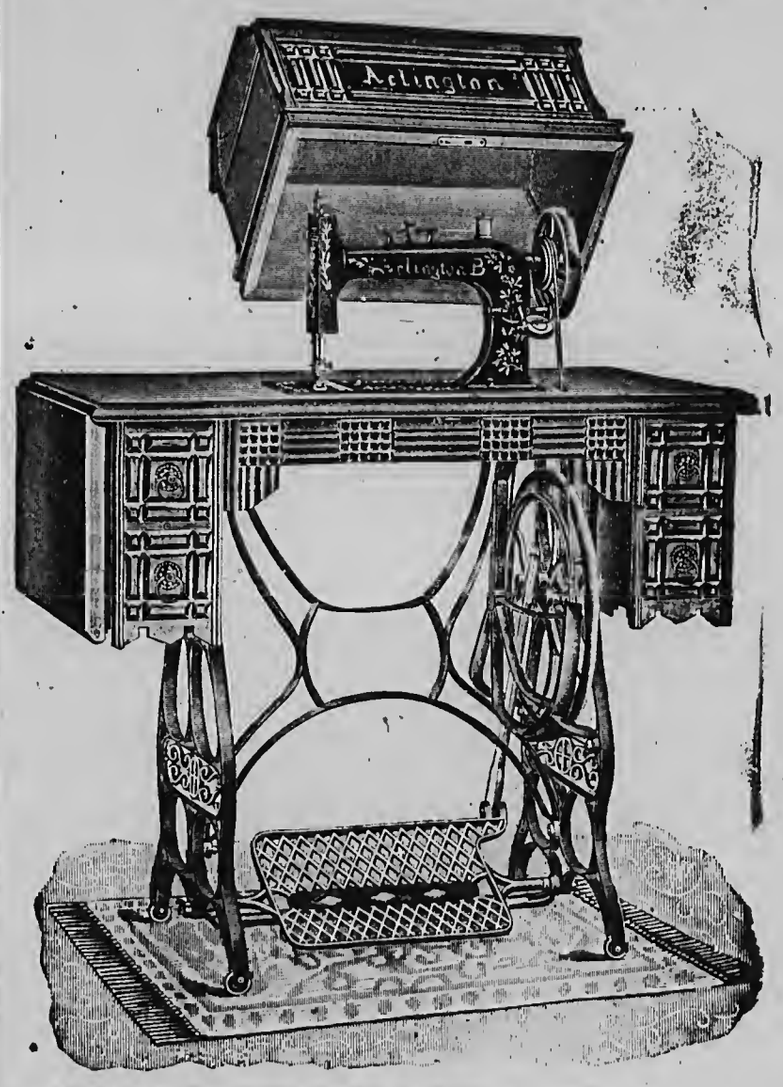
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.



A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the look stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

"The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night."
—Longfellow.

Have something to do, something to love, and something to hope for.—Dr. Chalmers.

We believe in taking religion into politics, but we don't believe in taking politics into religion.

Set yourself to the task of doing the will of God, and you will have little leisure for disputing about his plans.

If some people would give to prayer the time which they spend in growling, they and those about them would be much better off.

A religion that shouts and sings, but makes no effect to pay honest debts, is not the kind set forth in the New Testament.—Exchange.

The critic would get more good out of a sermon if he honestly and earnestly prayed for his pastor before going to church.—Presbyterian.

According to the latest definition a reformer is one who is more troubled about the sins of other people than he is about his own.—Baltimore Advocate.

There is as much difference between reading the Bible and reading about it as there is between eating dinner and reading a bill-of-fare.—Selected.

The bee works because he loves to and stings because he has to. Some men reverse this process; they work because they have to and sting because they love to.

Whenever you feel that nobody cares for you, it would be well for you to inquire, "What have I ever done to make anybody care for me, and love me?" Remember that love begets love.

The world goes into ecstacies over the sculptor who makes imitations of men, but has little to say in praise of mothers and teachers who make real men and women. In heaven this process is entirely reversed.

When Dr. Broadus said the "workers never grumble and the grumblers never work," he was close to the exact truth. Working and grumbling do not harmonize. They are two opposite forces. Religious work promotes soul health, as physical work promotes bodily health. The most ear-splitting calamity-howlers are the men who have quit honest toil and taken to crying hard times, blaming it all on somebody else.—Standard.

Promptness.

Time-killers and loiterers are a thorn in the flesh to the diligent and stumbling blocks in the way of progress. People who think that one time will do as well as another for the performance of some duty or task, can not be counted on for prompt and efficient service, or for grand achievements. An amazingly large percentage of humanity are as ignorant of the value of time as savages are of the power of steam. "Great men," as some one has said, "have ever been misers of moments." That great English statesman, Mr. Gladstone, it is stated, always carries a little book in his pocket, lest an unexpected spare moment should slip from his grasp. Hardly anything is more exasperating to an industrious man, in whose eyes moments are golden, than having to wait in idleness for some man or woman who acts as if time were the most worthless thing in the world. Triflers and time-wasters abound. What a boon it would be if the whole tribe could be reformed or transported!

In many places church goers have formed the abominable habit of arriving late at service, thus disturbing both preacher and congregation. When it is impossible to be on time, as occasionally happens, a late-comer should not feel any compunctions of conscience. But very often people are tardy at service on account of thoughtlessness and censurable neglect to start in time. It is a shame that on Sunday morning so many parents take no pains to get their children off to Sunday school in time for the opening bell. It is, alas! no uncommon thing in scores of Sunday-schools for pupils, and teachers also, to straggle in when the lessons are half over. Such dilatoriness would speedily ruin the public schools, and is but little tolerated in them. While the same methods can not be used to induce children to be prompt at the Sunday-school as in the day-school, parents, teachers and superintendents ought to resort to some expedient to secure punctuality as well as regularity in attendance.

Strangely enough, people who claim that they can't get to church before the services begin, never fail to be at the depot in time to catch a train when they wish to go on a journey; nor do they allow themselves to be late at a wedding or a show.

Sometimes preachers unwisely wait a considerable time for the choir, or for the congregation to assemble, thus punishing the punctual for their punctuality, and encouraging the tardy in their tardiness. The preacher who begins promptly, crowd or no crowd, will soon notice a considerable difference in the matter of prompt assembling. A certain good brother, whom we know quite well, once got in the habit of eating his dinner before going to the Sunday morning service because his pastor was accustomed to delay beginning until near noon for the sake of the late comers.

What an excellent thing it would be if all Christians would avoid trifling employments, and do everything exactly at the time, as the brethren of the ministry promise to do when admitted into full connection. The habit of tardiness grows fast, and, once formed, is no small barrier in the road to success. The man who fails to meet an engagement when there is no good reason for not doing so, practically tells a falsehood. Geniuses and men of education do not always succeed, but oftimes their failures are due largely to lack of promptitude and decision. In this age of push the tardy workman is sure to be left behind. People will put up with inferior work rather than be put to inconvenience and expense by delay. The business world deals harshly with procrastinators. Who would expect a railroad or a manufacturing enterprise to be successful without the rigid observance of promptness?

There is a Spanish proverb which says, "When a fool has made up his mind, the market has gone by." Sir Walter Scott was noted for his punctuality, which was one secret of his prodigious achievements. He made it a rule to answer all letters the day they were received, and by breakfast time he had "broken the neck of the day." Daniel Webster was never late at a recitation in school or college, and he carried this habit of punctuality into court, into Congress and into society. When Gen. Washington's secretary once excused his tardiness by saying that his watch was too slow, the reply was: "Then, you must get a new watch, or I must get a new secretary." The habit of promptness, if formed in youth, will be of incalculable value all through life. It is related that Napoleon once invited his marshals to dine with him, but as they did not come at the hour, he began to eat without them. They arrived just as he was arising from the table. Said he, "Gentlemen, it is now past dinner and we will immediately proceed to business." No other general realized more keenly the importance of taking advantage of "the supreme moment," which we may call "the nick of time." He said that he whipped the Austrians because they did not know the value of five minutes.

As some one has forcefully said, "Don't defer your good deeds until you have time to do them." Very little good work is ever accomplished by those who have an abundance of leisure. It is the men and women who are crowded with work who build colleges, hospitals, churches and orphan asylums, and do the great charities of the world. The summer of eternity will not be long enough to bring to maturity the fruit of a delayed action. If a star or planet were delayed one second, it might throw the whole universe out of harmony. Many a train has been wrecked and many a precious life sacrificed by reason of the dilatoriness of some railroad employee. Many a mercantile firm has gone to the wall because individuals and corporations amply able to meet their obligations promptly have delayed doing so. Cæsar's delay in reading a message thrust into his hands on the ides of March cost him his life.

"There is a tide in the affairs of men
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries."

Many a poor sinner thinks there is time enough to repent and be saved; but ere he is aware the angel of death knocks at his door, and it is forever too late. Countless thousands are following the advice and prescriptions of that agent of the devil, Doctor Put Off, who tells his patients that there is no need of haste in applying the remedy of divine grace, and thus lures them on to destruction. Reader, is this wicked quack prescribing for thee? If the Lord should say to thee, "This night thy soul shall be required of thee," what of thy readiness to meet him? Where wouldest thou expect to spend eternity. Well has it been said that "late repentance is seldom true, but true repentance is never late."

Cheering News.

Dr. W. B. Palmore, editor of the St. Louis Advocate, makes an announcement in his issue of last week, from which we quote as follows:

I propose to start a loan fund for Central Female College, at Lexington, Mo., the interest on which is to be used to aid in the education of daughters of preachers, and other worthy girls, preparing to teach in home and foreign fields.

If the preachers, ladies, laymen, Epworth Leagues and Sunday schools of our church will help me to secure 5,000 new subscribers to the St. Louis Christian Advocate, at the regular price of $2 each, I will give the entire $10,000 to the said college for the benefit of the above-named beneficiaries.

The same issue contains an article from Bishop Hendrix heartily endorsing the plan, and suggesting that the fund be called "The McAnally Loan Fund" in honor of the late Dr. McAnally, editor of the St. Louis Advocate.

This is a most gratifying piece of news. Dr. Palmore is right when he says that "one of the most imperative needs of Southern Methodism to-day is a well-endowed female college." His proposition is certainly a very liberal one. He ought to secure the five thousand new subscribers within a few weeks. The name suggested by Bishop Hendrix is pre-eminently appropriate. We congratulate the church upon the inauguration of such a movement.

Webster Science Hall, the new building erected by Major Millsaps on the campus of Millsaps College, was dedicated on the second with appropriate ceremonies. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Murrah, Hon. E. Mayes, and Gov. McLaurin. An original poem prepared specially for the occasion was read by Dr. H. Mallard DuBose. The dedicatory service was read by Bishop Galloway.

The Father of Waters.

The eyes of the nation are now fixed upon the Mississippi river. It laughs to scorn the efforts of the mightiest of nations to set bounds to its turbid tide. The entire Yazoo Delta—the garden spot of Mississippi—is inundated to a depth of several feet. The swamp regions of Arkansas have met a similar fate. No Creek, Miss., died a few days since. serious breaks have yet occurred in Louisiana, but as the river is already far above the danger line, and, as it is certain that the maximum has not yet been attained, it is almost inevitable that a part of that State will also go under. Everything that human beings can do is being done to avert the awful calamity. It will be two weeks before the danger is past. An overflow in Louisiana is more serious in its consequences than in Mississippi or Arkansas. Oftentimes a good cotton crop can be made after the water subsides, but not so with cane and rice. A general overflow means no crop at all for South Louisiana.

The Reformation of Criminals.

By a recent act of the Legislature, the State of Indiana has established a new criminal system, with the object in view of reforming criminals. Under the new procedure, the court which tries a prisoner will decide only whether or not he is guilty. If so, he is sentenced to prison without a definite term. The law of the State fixes maximum and minimum terms of imprisonment for each offense, and whether he shall endure the long term or be released with the short one is left largely in his own discretion. The prison officials, including the physician and chaplain, constitute a Board of Commissioners on Parole, and after the minimum limit of a prisoner's term has expired he may apply to the Board for his release on parole or for an absolute discharge. If his conduct has been good, and there is reason to believe that he will be law-abiding, he may be discharged or may be released on parole, but held under surveillance. The latter, of course, is likely to be done much more frequently than the former. If he misbehaves when on parole, he may be rearrested at any time, and must then serve the remainder of the maximum term. If he conducts himself properly until the expiration of that time, he gains his full liberty, or the Board may discharge him at any time, if it is found advisable to do so. The law practically takes away the pardoning power now lodged in the governor.

It is so complete a change from what we have ever had before that it is being watched with the greatest interest by penologists and all men who have studied criminology.—Times-Democrat.

Grant's Tomb.

The grounds around the tomb of General Grant are to be ready for dedication April 20, 1897, the birthday of the great commander. The cost of the work to be done will be about $120,000. The mausoleum, raised through voluntary contributions of the people, cost about $600,000 of itself, and it was made up of over 80,000 different subscriptions. The President of the United States will be present with his entire Cabinet. The North Atlantic squadron, together with as many ships of war from foreign nations as those nations may designate, will assemble in the Hudson river and fire salutes, and the diplomatic corps of all the nations of earth will be in attendance. War veterans and militia from all the States will also be in attendance at the dedication.—N. Y. Observer.

From Senate to Prize Ring.

It seems inexplicable that a man who was once the honored representative of a great State in the United States Senate, and who, by the election of his colleagues, was made Vice-President pro tempore of the United States, should cast these dignities and honors behind his back and consent to be present at a prize fight as the widely advertised, and probably well-paid, reporter of one of the most vulgar newspapers in the country. Think of it, a senator for eighteen years, and presiding officer of that dignified body, taking his place among the roughs and toughs of the land, and describing one of the most brutal exhibitions that degraded manhood has ever presented to the world. Such service undoubtedly received large pecuniary compensation, but what was gained in dollars and cents is far from being commensurate with what was lost in dignity, honor, self-respect, and character.—Exchange.

NOTES.

Rev. Daniel Loftin, of Steens' Creek, Miss., died a few days since.

We are pleased to learn that Mansfield Female College continues to prosper.

Rev. C. A. Powell, of the Seashore district, is active and alive to the interests of his district.

Bishop Charles B. Galloway will deliver an address in Taliadoga, June 22, before the Alabama Chautauqua Assembly.

Rev. J. W. Poston, of the North Mississippi Conference, has been unable, on account of poor health, to do full work during the Winter.

In response to the plea of Miss Willard, the National W. C. T. U. has sent since November last $7,000 to help the sufferers in Armenia.

At Magnolia, Miss., Bro. Clifford took a collection for the Orphans' Home amounting to $80, besides a promise of furnishing one room.

Rev. A. White, of Centerville, Miss., father of Rev. M. L. White, of the Mississippi Conference, is seriously ill. His life has been despaired of.

W. C. MacDonald, who has already given $1,500,000 to McGill University, has just made a further donation of $600,000 to that institution.—Central Methodist.

Under the administration of Rev. J. B. Stone the Winona district is making gratifying progress. All the preachers are at their posts and doing faithful work.

In the Argentine Republic, instead of fining a drunkard, they sentence him to sweep the street for eight days, and a similar punishment exists in St. Petersburg.—Guardian.

That no wine is to be served at the White House during the administration of William McKinley, meets the hearty, enthusiastic approval of all Christian America.—Exchange.

Mrs. Weber, wife of Rev. S. A. Weber, of the South Carolina Conference, and mother of Prof. W. L. Weber, of Millsaps College, died at Greenville, S. C., March 30.

Dr. J. D. Cameron is rendering faithful and efficient service on the Holly Springs district. All the interests of Zion are carefully looked after. He is gathering shekels continually for his district parsonage.

Rev. H. P. Lewis writes: "Bro. J. L. Jordon, Jr., one of our young members, died rather suddenly on the morning of March 31. He died at his home in Carthage, Miss. He leaves a young wife and two small children."

Rev. Jno. T. Sawyer, of New Orleans, will preach the commencement sermon at Whitworth College, June 6, and Rev. I. W. Cooper, president of the Board of Trustees of Whitworth College, will deliver the literary address.

A meeting is in progress at Louisiana Avenue. The pastor, Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker, is his own evangelist. He is preaching a full-orbed gospel with earnestness and unction. The attendance is good and the outlook encouraging.

To-day, as when Paul passed through Athens, the Greeks are lovers of news. In their small kingdom of less than three millions of people there are 152 newspapers, with an aggregate circulation of 175,000. News-sheets written in the language in which Xenophon chronicled the incidents of the "march up" and the retreat, are found in almost every Greek town, both on the mainland and the islands; and those who conduct them are mostly graduates from the National University who have undergone a special training for their work. Some of them employ a staff of from twenty-five to thirty men.—Zion's Herald.

Under the pastorate of this wide-awake and progressive Stevens, Harriston charge is making gratifying progress. One of the best residences in the town has been purchased for a parsonage, and is now occupied by the pastor and his family.

Rev. J. S. Oakley is in the midst of a very prosperous pastorate at Holly Springs. He is much beloved by his congregation and by the general public, with the exception of that small tribe which some one has denominated as "saloonatics."

All the Christian churches in Japan together have 111,588 members. There are in the country 858 missionaries, 831 native ministers and 951 catechists. Of the church members the Roman Catholics have 50,302 (including all baptized children), the Greek Church has 22,576 and the Protestant churches have 38,710.—Observer.

Rev. W. H. Huntley, pastor of the Lumberton charge, is having great success. Bro. Huntley serves one of the best charges in the Mississippi Conference. He expects to build a new church at Poplarville and also at Richburg—work to begin soon. He begins a protracted meeting at Lumberton on April 20, assisted by Rev. I. W. Cooper.

The New York Christian Advocate announces "that Bishop Hurst has just received $55,000 toward the endowment of the American University. Recently the University received a gift of real estate consisting of improved property valued at $25,000. This latest gift, however, is in cash and interest-bearing securities. The donor's name is withheld from the public."

Near Hodgensville, Kentucky, is the farm of 112 acres on which Abraham Lincoln was born. The log cabin stands there as it stood in 1809. The owner of this farm is a New York man who bought it for $3,000. He is now offering it to the United States government for $50,000. Let us try to admire his moderation in not asking $100,000.—Western Recorder.

Mrs. Maria Barbara Cameron, mother of Bros. J. D. and Thomas Cameron, of the North Mississippi Conference, died, March 5, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Sarah J. Powell, in Pickens county, Ala., in the ninety-fourth year of her age. She was a consistent, thoroughly consecrated Christian for seventy-five years. A memoir will appear soon from the pen of Rev. J. B. Stone.

We hear good reports from the meeting at McComb City. Large crowds are in attendance, and much interest is manifested. Most of the preaching is done by Rev. T. H. Clifford. Rev. J. A. B. Jones, of Magnolia; Rev. W. M. Williams, of Galiman, and Rev. J. T. Abney have been in attendance. Large results are expected. The pastor, Rev. J. S. Morse, is in great favor with his flock.

Mr. Gladstone has just issued a pamphlet on "The Eastern Crisis," in which he appeals "from official to personal conscience." He points out that until recently misrule and cruelty in the East produced no marked impression anywhere save in England, but now the public conscience of Western Europe has been aroused. Massacres transcending in their diversity, extent and horror all historical record have been perpetrated under the eyes of the six Powers whose ambassadors at Constantinople have "thought their feeble verbiage a sufficient counterpoise to instruments of death, shame and torture." With pardonable pride he points to his own vigorous Eastern policy in 1880, and its happy result in compelling the Turk, without incurring war, to listen to counsels of reason and justice, and honor the treaty of 1878. As soon as the Sultan saw that one of his principal ports was to be jointly occupied by England and Russia, he yielded at once. Now the government of England is pinned to the aprons of two young men without experience, whom a strange providence has placed over a population of 150,000,000 people, and we have the spectacle of "a David facing six Goliaths." And yet Crete was a part of Greece three thousand years ago, while the Ottoman rule in Crete is a thing of yesterday.—Zion's Herald.

Drouth Sufferers.

At a called session of the Relief Committee for the drouth snfferers for the 4th Ward, Bienville parish, the following statement and petition was adopted asking aid from the State or elsewhere:

To whom has been assigned the duty of canvassing the different localities of the wards to ascertain the necessities of the people, find after examination that nnless more provisions are provided our people will still be left in a suffering condition, for the reason that many in the beginning had a partial snpply and have divided until the destitution is much greater than at the beginning. In many instances the help received was barely sufficient to remnnerate those from whom they had borrowed. This help was opportune and thankfnlly received, bnt will soon be exhansted. And then what is to become of the many that are without snpplies or credlt? If they leave home to hnnt work, a large number of places will be abandened and some districts depopulated. We, yonr committee, take the liberty to pray the governor to help us, and, by the consent of the legislators, we ask that he appropriate for the dronth-stricken district the sum of $250,000. And in case the appropriation above prayed for is contrary to law and the best interests of the State, that he have these facts published and presented to the good and noble citizens of other States who are willing and anxions to help ns. We trust that the Good Spirit may guide you and all concerned who see this, and prompt overy one to do their duty.

We desire to state further that we have intervlewed the merchants of Ringgold, and that they heartily concur with ns, as they, nnder the circumstances, can not snpply the actual wants of all the sorely distressed and suffering people. We respectfully submit ths above, and will gladly answer any enqniries or receive any donation and distribute the same.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

This writer spent last Sabbath at Sturgis with Bro. H. M. Yonng and his people, preaching twice and delivering an address on Sunday school and Epworth Leagne work. The indications are that the former will improve and tha' tho latter will soon be organized. Our church here has suffered considerable loss recently by the removal of some of its most useful members; but if those remaining will co-operate in prayer and good works with their energetic pastor, prosperity will come to them. Bro. Yonng and his wife are laboring to finish the parsonage which, when completed, will be a creditable preacher's home. The appropriation made to it by the Parsonage and Home Mission Society was worthily bestowed. The noble women deserve much praise for what they are doing in this line of church work. We were delighted with the good singing by the children and yonng folks from "The Young People's Hymnal." This new publication of our church needs only to be studied and used to be approciated.

The time for Children's Day celebration is again almost at hand. It is in order for each pastor and Sunday-school superintendent to reread carefully paragraph 248, Discipline, 1894, with an eye to business. Let it be borne in mind that this observance at each church is not optional, but obligatory. If for any reason a pastor can not celebrate the day as he would according to the prescribed order, let him observe it as best he can, and good resnlts will follow. By order of the Sunday-school Board, the programs will be sent this year to every pastor in the Conference, in proportion to Snnday-school members in each charge. They may be expected by the fifteenth instant, thns giving ample time for all necessary preparation. Shonld any pastor not receive enongh programs or supplements, we will endeavor to fnrnish all that he really needs on application. After this liberal arrangement by the Snnday-school Board to fnrnish the programs without cost to the churches, it only remains for the presiding olders to call attention to it in the Quarterly Conferences, and the pastors to tako the matter properly in hand, and we will make a better record this year than over before. Let each pastor see to it that his charge does not appear blank in this colnmn of the next Minutes.

Wo are anxious for our brothren and friends of the Delta region in this time of excessive hlgh water. We are reminded of more than thirty years ago, when we had similar experiences in that conntry. May the waters soon assnage, and qniet and prosperity return to that great conntry!

Since writing the above, the dear ADVOCATE is to hand, and read with mnch interest. It is all good to the nse of edifying, bnt specially were we interested in the editorial on "Hammering," and "Viator's" article. Hope he will write again.

Spring Rsquires

That the impnrities which have acennlated in your blood during the winter shall be promptly and thoroughly expelled if good health is expected. When the warmer woather comes these impurities are liable to manifest themselves in various ways and often lead to serious illness. Unless the blood is rich and pure that tired feeling will afflict you, your appetite will fail and you will find yonrself "all run down." Hood's Sarsaparilla tones and strengt ens the system, drives out all impurities and makes pure, rich, healthy blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the one trne blood parlfier and the best spring medicine. Be snre to get only Hood's.

Missions in North Mississippi Conference.

MR. EDITOR: Will yon please pnblish tho enclosed report showing what has been dono in the North Mississippi Conferonce for missions, first qnartor? Only three presiding olders have complied with roqnest to send in reports—Tucker, Morehead and Burronghs. I report tho other districts from my book, and that may fail to give credit to some who have sent direct to T. B. Holt. If all the presiding olders had sent me report for first quarter, I could havo made correct report to you and wonld have enabled me to comply with tho request of Secretary of parent Board. I hope they will report second quarter.

Corinth District.

The pastors of the Corinth district are a faithful, loyal and consecrated band of fellow-workers. In every direction in the district there are signs of development and progress. With the plans enterprised and carried ont by these devoted pastors we look for the largest snccess.

The district is assessed for foreign missions $1,000, and in less than fonr months the pastors have raised more than one-third of that amonnt, and good news comes from many places in the district.

Our District Conference will be held abont the first of July, and at that time we desire every pastor in the district to report foreign missions and Bishops' Fnnd in full. One thonsand dollars for foreign missions and the Bishops' Fund in fnll by the District Conference is a possibility within the bonnds of the Corinth district, and ought to be realized. How many will say it shall be done?

With yonr liberal offer we onght to be able to place our Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, in many homes to help us in our great work.

Butter Made in Two Minutes.

A neighbor of mine several days ago sent for one of those Lightning churns, which are sold by a firm over in Pennsylvania. After it came we went over to see it work. We were all surprised, for it made butter in two minutes just as they said it would, and the color was so nice, too. I sent for one and since we have used it we would not be without it for three times its cost. The churn works so easy and then we get more butter than we did the old way. I can appreciate the new invention, for I know how disagreeable it is to churn for an hour on a warm day. My son is making lots of money selling the churn in this township and he never sold anything before in his life. Those who want to make money easy can get full particulars from Dep't A 5 of W. H. Baird & Co., Sta. A, Pittsburg, Pa. Anyone can make at least $100 a month selling them, as every farmer who sees it work orders one.

LOVE'S OLD SONG.

BY J. P. BRIGGS.

Rising to a lattice from the one below;
But it marks the awakening of a passion new,
And the springtime of a love, tender, fond, and true—

Love that grows more tender and is seen to glow
When the flickering shadows softly come and go,
When the heart would wither in the blighting blast,
When in death she'd seek relief, should that love not last.

Though across life's pathway darkest shadows fall,
Round a happy fireside love has triumphed over all;
Though the heart be weary, sad the day and long,
Through the years a trustful love guards it from all wrong.

Now a glorious sunset steals upon their way,
And with radiant beauty closes life's long, dying day.
Love has been their guiding star all the journey long;
Still to them at twilight comes love's old song.

Parents' Duty to Children.

Parents can not do their duty by their children unless they carefully study individual peculiarities. These peculiarities, moreover, should be traced to their source in parents and ancestry. A girl is morose and given to melancholy. Let the parents examine themselves and see if they have not bequeathed the unhappy disposition to her. Probably if free from it now, one or the other of them possessed it earlier in life. Let such a parent, instead of being impatient with his daughter, go back to his own feelings at the same age, and ask what, in the light of subsequent experience, would have been the best discipline for him then? One boy has a temper like a flame of fire; where did he get it? It is rarely hard to tell. Another has a tendency to secret vice or open wickedness; did not those who have brought him into the world in their youth pursue courses which account for his tendencies? Such inquiries complicate, necessarily, the problem of responsibility in a measure, and yet no child has any voice in saying where he shall be born, what blood shall course in his veins, what tendencies shall impel, or what aspirations thrill, him.

These two facts are, therefore, to be kept always to the front. The responsibility of each individual should be emphasized when the child is dealt with; and yet when courses of training are being decided upon, the child should be regarded not simply as an individual, but as an offspring, another link in the age-long chain of human life. The more the underlying unity of parent and child is realized, the better it will be for both. The parent should remember, the wrong he reproves in his child, in a sense is his also, his even though he turned from it years ago.

Parents should always be just to their children. The latter are not responsible for their existence, nor for their tendencies, nor for the circumstances in which they live. Perception of these facts, recognition of the law of heredity, will lead parents to be patient and save them from much injustice; many things otherwise hopelessly obscure in their children's characters it will explain; it will enable them, by recalling what helped and hindered them in earlier days, to decide what will be most helpful to their children, and make possible an adjustment of treatment to nature, so that the worse elements may be more surely eliminated and the best given opportunity and stimulus for growth; and it will enable parents more wisely to advise their children concerning the grave matter of marriage and the beginning of a home.

But after parents have done their utmost, if their ideals are ever realized and they and their children become either useful or happy, they all must be taken in hand by the love of God and made subjects of that regenerating grace which can no more be explained than the source and the distinction of the mind, but the results of which are more sure and splendid than the autumn harvests.—From Heredity and Christian Problems, by Amory H. Bradford.

Buying on Installments.

One of the most interesting phases of the commercial business of the day is the installment system as it prevails in most of the large cities of the Union. While this method certainly has its advantages, it may be questioned whether there is not in it an element which does a great deal of mischief, and leads careless and thoughtless people into financial complications from which they may find it very difficult to escape.

It looks very alluring, this offer to furnish your house without a cent of ready cash; and many an ambitious young couple find it impossible to resist the temptation to have as good as their neighbors, when it comes so easily.

The trouble is that they permit themselves to lose sight of the fact that all of these things must be paid for in due time, and that putting off the evil day does not by any means mean shirking the responsibility or making the payments less. Indeed, this installment practice is nothing more or less than a mortgage which continually accumulates interest.

The householder may have idle days, sick days, unprofitable days, and days when the outgoes are very far ahead of the incomes; but of this the installment system takes no heed whatever. The interest is at work steadily and untiringly. A mortgage never sleeps; the promise to pay works in darkness as well as in daylight, and piles up the obligations, regardless of the ability of the victim to meet it.

People who buy on the installment plan should consider quite as carefully what the end is to be as though they were paying cash down.

One of the alluring advertisements of the day is to the effect that so many cents a day will buy so much. It looks like a very little; and the anxious purchaser, taking counsel of his desires, imagines that there will be no difficulty in paying such a trifle as that. So the purchase is made, and all goes very well for a little while. Then there comes a dull time, and, in some way or other, in the agreement there seems to have been a clause entirely overlooked in the outset which exacts a certain rate of interest as a penalty for failing to meet the original obligation.—Exchange.

Pistols and Pestles.

The duelling pistol now occupies its proper place, in the museum of the collector of relics of barbarism. The pistol ought to have beside it the pestle that turned out pills like bullets, to be shot like bullets at the target of the liver. But the pestle is still in evidence, and will be, probably, until everybody has tested the virtue of Ayer's sugar coated pills. They treat the liver as a friend, not as an enemy. Instead of driving it, they coax it. They are compounded on the theory that the liver does its work thoroughly and faithfully under obstructing conditions, and if the obstructions are removed, the liver will do its daily duty. When your liver wants help, get "the pill that will,"

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

Do That Which Is Honest.

A gentleman jumping from an omnibus in New York lost his pocket-book. In a little while he discovered his loss, and hastily returned, inquiring of every one he met if a pocket-book had been found. Meeting a little girl of ten years of age he made the same inquiry. She asked, "What kind of a pocket-book?" He described it. Then unfolding her apron, "Is this it?" "Yes, that is mine; come into this store with me." The gentleman examined the papers. "That is all right," said he; "fifteen notes of a thousand dollars each. Take this note of a thousand dollars as a reward for your honesty." "No," said the little girl, "I can not take it. I have been taught in Sunday-school not to keep what is not mine, and my parents would think I had stolen it." "Take me to your parents, then!" She took him to her humble home. The gentleman not only gave the gift, but provided work for the father. Dear children, it always pays to be honest.

The Power of Influence.

A young man recently at a religious meeting told the story of his conversion. It shows how great an influence we may be exerting on others all unknown to ourselves. He said:

On my way to and from my business, I pass a certain home. I am generally on my way about their breakfast time. As I passed one day I saw the head of the house, a man only a few years older than myself, sit down to the table. He had a Bible in his hand, and in the passing glance I saw his wife and little girl, with bowed heads, waiting for him to read. It was only a glance, but it haunted me all that day. It had a purifying influence. The next morning I found myself looking into the window as I passed with curiosity, mingled with more respect than I ever had for religion. Morning after morning it was the same.

I had never been a church-goer, but one Sabbath morning I resolved to go to church near by. I was ignorant of the time, and so I dressed leisurely and sauntered in. The Sabbath-school was in session. I glanced over the classes and was pleased to see my unknown friend teaching a class of young men about my age. Before the year was past I made the good confession. That was twelve years ago, and my faith is stronger to-day than ever, but somehow I always feel that the picture I saw through the open window had more to do with my conversion than anything else.—The Mid-Continent.

The great difficulty with the young men of the present day, as well, for that matter, as the young women, is the fact that they insist upon beginning where their mothers and fathers left off, and as a natural consequence, very frequently end where their fathers and mothers began. Some one has pertinently said that in this country there are only three generations from shirt sleeve to shirt sleeve, that is to say, the grandfather begins life in his shirt sleeves as a day laborer, accumulates, becomes wealthy, passes on his wealth to his sons who enjoy it and spend it, and their sons, dissipating it even more rapidly than themselves, end as day laborers where their grandfathers began.—St. Louis Advocate.

Who does not welcome the man of cheerful and hopeful spirit? The happy countenance, the genial smile, the winning way and the timely word have an inspiring and uplifting influence. Men are attracted and won by a kindly manner and generous action. He is a benefactor who carries sunshine into the home, church and community. A bright optimism is always preferable to a gloomy pessimism.—Presbyterian.

The noblest thing in the universe is honest labor. It is the preservative principle of the world. Labor raises cities, adorns the earth, and beautifies with works of art; whitens the sea with wings of commerce; binds continents together by means of the telegraph; extinguishes barbarism and plants civilization upon its ruins. Thank God for a nation of workingmen.—Rev. G. O. Bacchus.

Fretting is a worry and a torment. He who is given to it is a plague to himself and to all about him. He finds fault with existing conditions. Nothing seems to him right or good. Men and circumstances chafe and annoy him. He can not see the good side of occurrences. He is restless and peevish. Friends try to bear with him, but it is hard work. It requires considerable love and forbearance to put up with his captious moods. It may be a means of grace and a kind of spiritual discipline, but it is one to which no friend or church member should subject another. As the Psalmist says, "it tendeth only to evil," and the sooner one gets rid of it the more is it to his credit, as well as the greater is the happiness of those associated with him. Some natures are much more liable to it than others, but prayer and grace can cure it in any and every case.—Exchange.

HYGIENE.

The Time That Food Should Be Taken.

It is evidently the intention of nature that we should put into the stomach a certain portion of food, the excitement of which, inducing a secretion of gastric fluid by its action, becomes digested. This office of the stomach being effected, it should be left in a state of repose till its powers are restored and accumulated, and this return of energy would in health be denoted by a return of appetite. It is probable that three hours may elapse in health before digestion of a moderate meal is effected, so that the stomach is empty and in a state of repose. It is, therefore, reasonable to allot the same portion of time for the same purpose when the organ is disordered, whilst we have diminished the quantity of our food in order to proportion it to the diminished powers of the organ; yet instead of pursuing this rational plan of diet, many persons are taking food every third or fourth hour, pleading in excuse that they can not do without it. The truth is that when the stomach is disordered the exertion of digesting a single meal, after its excitement and efforts have ceased, is productive of languor, sinking and inquietude, which ought to be calmed or counteracted by medicines, and not by food, for a second meal can not be digested in this state of the stomach. We often tease and disorder our stomachs by fasting for too long a period; and when we have thus brought on what may be called a discontented state of the organ, unfitting it for its office, we sit down to a meal, and fill it to its utmost, regardless of its powers or its feelings. The rules, then, for diet may be thus summarily expressed: We should proportion the quantity of food to the powers of the stomach, adapt its quality to the feelings of the organ, and take it at regular intervals of six or seven hours thrice during the day.—Charlotte Medical Journal.

Our Boys and Tobacco.

The boy who starts out in life as a user of tobacco embarks on an unknown ocean from which he can never return with the same vigor and strength of body and mind, the same sweet breath and clear eye. He may keep in sight of land for a lifetime, and live to be old, but it will be only though a combination of the most favorable circumstances over which he has no control or can not foresee. The smoker is likely any time to be wafted out into the deep waters of serious nervous disease, or injure his eyes or sense of taste, or form a love for exciting food, or even drink, or he may go down on the rock of some acute disease because he has wasted his nervous force and has not vitality enough to resist it. No other known drug except opium has produced such pronounced impressions on the nervous system, so concealed as to be unknown until it is too late to repair the injuries. The tobacco user is not so bad as the inebriate to alcohol, but he comes next to him, and in many ways is entitled to more sympathy. The day will come when there will be as vigorous a crusade against tobacco as against alcohol—a crusade not for moderate use, but for total disuse. It is for women to begin this crusade; few of them use the poison, but they see their husbands and children suffer from it, and they also suffer from it indirectly. Let us then use our influence in every way against it, and do all we can to prevent its use.—Journal of Hygiene.

A GREAT deal of nonsense has been written—and believed, about blood purifiers. What purifies the blood? " "

THE KIDNEYS PURIFY THE BLOOD

AND THEY ALONE.

If diseased, however, they cannot, and the blood continually becomes more impure. Every drop of blood in the body goes through the kidneys, the sewers of the system, every three minutes, night and day, while life endures.

Warner's Safe Cure

The heavy, dragged out feeling, the bilious attacks, headaches, nervous unrest, fickle appetite, all caused by poisoned blood, will disappear when the kidneys properly perform their functions.

Be self-convinced through personal proof.

OBITUARIES.

HUMPHRIES—Rev. AMOS HUMPHRIES was born in Catahoula parish, La., Nov. 5, 1820, and died at his home in Caldwell parish, La., Feb. 8, 1897. His mother died when he was quite a small boy, and he lived with his father and cared for him until his father's death, which was in the year 1843.

Uncle Amos, as he was familiarly called by the aged and the young, was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1845, and remained within her pale until the day of his death. After losing his father he went to Drew county, Ark., and the same year was happily married to Miss Sarah Ann Ralls, and in 1863 they moved to Union county, Ark., and spent two years, and then removed to Caldwell parish, La. They had born unto them twelve children, ten of whom are still living—five sons and five daughters; all married and live within a few miles of each other. Fifty-three grandchildren and one great-grandchild living, and six grandchildren gone to heaven before. Uncle Amos was a pure, good man, an affectionate husband, an indulgent father, a kind and accommodating neighbor, a true friend, a great peacemaker. Heaven is richer and earth is poorer when such a man dies.

Bro. Humphries was a man of very strong mind. The Bible was the Book of books with him. I suppose he had read and studied his Bible for he had worn several out through hundreds of times. The three days of his affliction with pneumonia were spent with a great deal of patience and resignation, and on being asked by his children and friends as to the future beyond the river, his reply was: "fully prepared. I have prayed and labored, preached, reproved, and exhorted, and am now going to my reward in heaven."

On being asked by his son, A. J. H., if he had any special request to make, he promptly replied that he had, and that was, that the children, grandchildren and family connection would live so as to meet him in heaven. Thank God it can still be said of our people, "they die well."

C. R. GODFREY.

THOMPSON—Died at his home, Bogue Falio, Miss., Feb. 26, 1897, Dr. ALEXANDER HAMAIM THOMPSON. He was born in Amite county, July 25, 1834. His parents moved to Pike county, where he was reared in a religious home. He graduated in the Medical College in New Orleans, La., when a young man and his life has been devoted to his chosen profession.

He was married to Miss Caloula Pepper, Dec. 11, 1856 who bore him three sons and three daughters. Two of these died in childhood. Two daughters, who have married worthy men, and two sons survive him, with the wife of his youth. His children are all grown—all members of the church. He raised a family of orphan children, and they love him as a parent. He joined the church when a young man, and was converted under the preaching of Rev. John G. Jones. He was a man of many noble traits of character, pure in his pleasures, honest in his business, kind in his home, true to his friends, and charitable to all. He enjoyed his religion. In the midst of his extended medical practice he always found time for religious duties. He had the experience of sins pardoned and the presence of the divine favor.

During his illness he called his family about him, blessed them, kissed them tenderly, commended his wife to God and to the care of his sons. He repeated passages of Scripture and encouraged his sons "to hope in God."

As he was the preachers' friend, their wise counselor, and his house ever open to them. In the absence of his beloved pastor, Rev. Mr. Sykes, the funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Jones, Brookhaven.

(By his schoolmate and friend, Wm. Hoover, and his devoted cousin, M. L. J. Hoover.)

THOMPSON—JOSEPH PARK SYKES, son of the late Alexander Thompson and Mrs. Dorothy Womack Thompson, was born near Amelia, St. Helena parish, La., April 3, 1834. Left an orphan at a tender age, he was reared by his brothers, D. W. and J. J. Thompson. At the outbreak of the Civil War, when but fifteen years old, he enlisted in the Confederate Army, and served in the army of Tennessee, being promoted for conspicuous gallantry on the battle-field of Perryville. After serving the term of his enlistment he received a discharge, and entered college at Athens, Ga., remained one year and returned to his home in Louisiana. He afterwards joined Forrest's, and served with distinction until the close of the war.

In 1866 he was married by Rev. Wm. Hoover to Miss Rosa, only daughter of the late Peter Womack and Mrs. Parmelia Womack Kemp. Through her influence, under the preaching of Rev. C. G. Andrews, he joined the Methodist Church in 1872.

He moved to Seguin, Texas, in 1874; the next year moved to Anderson.

On July 9, 1878, the wife of his youth died, leaving him four sons and an infant daughter. He possessed many noble traits of character. His life was full of self-sacrifice.

In 1880 he married Miss Laura Wetherly, who lightened every burden and sweetened his joys by her sympathy and love for him and his children. She survives him, with two

He died April 1, 1896, at Navasota, Texas. His remains were interred in Anderson.

MOORING—Mrs. ELIZABETH D. MOORING departed this life Feb. 6, 1897, at the residence of her son-in-law, Jacob Hass, in Caddo parish, La. She was born June 3, 1829; married L. C. Mooring, March 29, 1850. Six children came to bless and honor their union, all of whom survive her.

Sister Mooring was among that number pronounced by our Lord, "The salt of the earth;" a willing, hopeful, faithful worker in her Lord's vineyard, never missing the service of the sanctuary until bodily infirmities forbade. She served long in preparing the elements for the sacrament of the Lord's Supper; and when bodily strength would no longer permit her to attend the public worship, she spent the Lord's day in reading his Holy Word, our own Standard Hymn Book, and the ADVOCATE, which was ever dear to her. She was truly Methodistic, and devoutly pious day by day. Her conversion was in early life, her growth was constant, and her attainment in things divine was great.

Her death was that of the righteous, and her last hours were filled with great peace. God gave her utterance until near the last moment, and she continued as she had done through life—"witnessing for him." She insisted on her friends to be faithful, and urged her children to be good and meet her in heaven. Her godly life and her last words to her pastor bring forth these words with fresh meaning, "Happy are the dead which die in the Lord."

WHITE—WILLIAM EDWARD, son of W. T. White and Mrs. M. C. White, was born in Summit, Miss., April 4, 1870; married April 3, 1893, to Miss Alice Fitzpatrick, of New Orleans; died at the home of his parents, McComb City, Miss., Nov. 1, 1896.

The death of this young man threw over the entire community where he resided a pall of gloom. He joined the Baptist Church when a boy, and gave his heart to God. He was lovingly obedient to his parents. His young wife, now a widow, her babe an orphan, can look up to God through her tears and thank him for all the sweet memories of their brief wedded life.

Funeral services were held in the Baptist Church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Sibley, and Rev. Mr. Cumston. The eulogy pronounced by the pastor was all that his surviving relatives and friends could desire. He has passed away in the bloom of young manhood, but his pious example remains as a rich legacy to the church.

His loved ones have the prospect of meeting him in that bright world where kindred ties are never severed.

This tribute of love by his father's cousin,

M. L. J. HOOVER.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscribers for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.15.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to April, '98. (A little later it will be May, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Richardson Building, in Chattanooga, Tenn., burned on April 3. The loss on building and contents is about $500,000. Two lives were lost.

A crevasse occurred at Lockport, on Bayou Lafourche, La., on April 1. The flood measured 120 feet in width. Many sugar estates are on this bayou.

The Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad are unable to get trains through to Memphis owing to overflow and has abandoned the effort beyond Arcola, the station just south of Leland, Miss.

The water from the upper crevasses has inundated the city of Greenville, Miss. All rail communication is shut off by the flood. The water is spreading over the delta by leaps and bounds.

The Republican leaders are evidently determined to bring about the annexation of Hawaii at any cost, and they are quietly laying their plans with a view to accomplishing the end they have in view in the shortest time possible.

The Federal administration at Washington is taking a most practical and sympathetic view of the disaster in the southern part of the Mississippi Valley, the Secretary of War having telegraphed for information as to destitution and suffering, expressing an intention to urge upon Congress measures of succor and relief.

Two levees just below Helena, Ark., have given way.

Gov. Foster has issued a call to the people of Louisiana to work hard in aiding the army of skilled engineers to save every foot of levee in the State. The flood will be the greatest ever known here, and the levee system, although not fully perfected, can be made to save the fertile lands behind if citizens serve themselves to the highest exertions in the cause.

The members of the Mississippi Levee Board, whose district is being so deplorably devastated by the flood which broke through some of their levees, have memorialized Congress for help in restoring their defenses and closing the breaches made in them. They have no money with which to undertake this work, and they ask an appropriation not to exceed $100,000, to be applied to the closing of these breaks at the earliest practical moment.

The President has sent to Congress the following nominations: Andrew D. White, of New York, to be ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Germany; Wm. F. Draper, of Massachusetts, to be ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Italy; Chandler Hale, of Maine, to be secretary of the embassy of the United States at Rome, Italy; Samuel L. Gracey, of Massachusetts, consul of the United States at Fuchan, China.

A crevasse at Flower Lake, six miles below Tunica, Miss., occurred on April 4. The breaks in the lower district have already filled up the low country of Bolivar, Washington, Sharkey, Issaquena counties, and a part of Sunflower, and even now nearly all of the arable land of that section is under water. The Tallahatchie and Yazoo have submerged many thousand acres of cultivated land already. The water coming through the Flower Lake crevasse, striking a country now brimful of water, will simply spread over the Delta.

FOREIGN.

The City of Mexico seems to be keeping up with the times, or, rather, it has got ahead of them in one matter. The city council has just appointed a bicycle inspector at a salary of $40 a month. His work will be to see that the owners have their machines registered and pay their taxes.

As many of you doubtless know, I am at Millsaps College trying to fit myself for the Master's service. In order that I may be able to continue my much-needed studies another session, I must have work to do during the Summer months—June, July, August, September. I am willing to teach, to preach, or to do anything that tends toward the uplifting of humanity. Brethren, I must have work. Who will help me to get it? By way of recommendation, I refer, by permission, to Dr. W. B. Murrah.

R. L. WEBB.

ON CALVARY!

O softly whisper Jesus' name!
For us to this dark earth he came;
His errand one of love divine,
To save this sinful soul of mine.

O loudly echo Jesus' name!
Above all those of earthly fame;
He dwells on high, with power to save
The blackest soul from death's dark grave.

O shout the name, in jubilant strain,
Then ring it o'er and o'er again,
Till all mankind shall bow the knee
And say, "My King! I'll live for thee."

The Constitution of Holiness.

BY BISHOP KRENER.

St. Peter, in addressing the church of "strangers" scattered throughout Asia Minor, reminds them that they are the "elect," through the foreknowledge of the Father, and through the sanctification of the Spirit; that it is to the one end of "obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." To this he urges them as "obedient children." "As He that has called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation" (intercourse). Because it is written, "Be ye holy, for I am holy."

This "writing" to which he refers we find in the Pentateuch, addressed to the children of Israel (in Exodus xix, 4). In the desert of Sinai, while encamped before the mount, Moses went up unto God, and the Lord called unto him, saying: "Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob: Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself. Now, therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then shall ye be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine: and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation." So also in Lev. xix, 2: "Speak unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them: Ye shall be holy: for I the Lord your God am holy. Ye shall fear every man his mother, and his father, and keep my Sabbaths: I am the Lord your God." So also it is written in Lev. xx, 7, 8: "Sanctify yourselves, therefore, and be ye holy: for I am the Lord your God. And ye shall keep my statutes, and do them: I am the Lord which sanctify you."

St. Peter adds much to the weight of this ancient passage by placing it in the front of his Epistle to the Gentiles, dated at Babylon. A passage of such universal and lofty import suggests some wonderful relation between the Creator and the creature; that the Lord should base upon his own nature this demand for holiness. Is he speaking to seraphs or to sinners! Had he said, "Be ye wise, because I am wise;" or, "Be strong, because I am omnipotent;" or, "Be omniscient or omniprosent;" or, as it is in the Sermon on the Mount, "Be perfect, be merciful, as your Father in heaven is merciful"—these are all surprising; but to a fallen creature, who requires daily support, both physical and moral, none is more surprising than the command, "Be ye holy, because I am holy."

There must be some mutual ground, some likeness of nature, that constitutes the holiness of God an adequate reason for holiness in us. The very command argues it, that in some weighty respect we are like God; and as the command precedes our holiness, there must be an inherent unity of being that makes his law of holiness a reasonable law for us. This, doubtless, is to be found in the fact that the Son of God took upon himself the nature of man; therefore, the humanity of Christ has raised us to a plane of being that makes such a law reasonable for men.

The "for" may suggest a yet higher ground, namely: the obligation we are under to him personally—"for I am holy." Indebted to him, as we are, for life, and for a legal offering that satisfies the demand against us, and for his having been made a curse for us, it should be enough for us to know what he wishes to secure our obedience. He was obedient unto death for us; we may well be obedient unto death for his love. His conformity to the will of his Father was the expression of his holiness—"Not my will, but thine, be done." There can be no higher expression of a holy nature than this conformity of will to the will of God, for his will is the law of holiness, and is the transcript of the divine nature.

To implant this holiness in the mind of man was the purpose of Christ's coming into the world. To displace man's enmity toward God, with a desire to do God's will, was to recover fallen humanity, for such a desire would include all expressions of the divine will, whether the law of mercy, of meekness, of patience, of charity, or of humility—"against such there is no law." The penitent sinner oftentimes urges his vow to be wholly God's as a ground of pardon. But this would not constitute a loving desire in the Psalmist's sense, "I delight to do thy will, O God!" To aspire to do God's will, to delight in it, is a result of pardon, and not in any sense the cause of it, for whence could such a desire spring but from the consciousness of God's love—that is, from a new nature.

Holiness is the orbit of a renewed nature. As centripetal and centrifugal forces resolve into the fixed highway of a new world, so the will of man conspires with the will of God in this round of ceaseless harmony.

These forces, both of man's part and of God's part, which maintain this high equable movement, are admirably stated by St. Peter:

1. Gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace to be brought you at the revelation of Jesus Christ.

2. Fashion yourselves not according to your former lusts in your ignorance, but as obedient children; as he that hath called you is holy, be ye holy in all manner of conversation (intercourse).

3. Pass your time of sojourning here in fear, for the Father, who is without respect of persons, judgeth according to every man's work.

4. For ye know that ye were redeemed, not with corruptible things, such as silver and gold, from your vain conversation, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without spot or blemish.

5. Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you; who by him do believe in God, that raised him up from the dead, and gave him glory, that your faith and hope might be in God.

6. Seeing that ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth; being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever.

It will be seen that in this sublime movement of the soul upon the pathway of glory that the human and the divine power co-operate. The same view of holiness is given in the thirty-fifth chapter of Isaiah: "And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The Way of Holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon: it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there: and the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

How often the road carries the traveler! He has only to keep in it. So is it with the highway to the celestial city—the way of holiness. Constant fear and watchfulness lost we miss the way; constant thought of him who is the way; of his incarnation, his word, his death, his resurrection; constant memory of the Father who judgeth, without respect of persons, according to every man's work—this is the route to heaven; St. Paul's route, St. Peter's, and that of "Apostles, prophets, martyrs,

God's holiness is his moral integrity, the harmony of his attributes, the throne of his glory. The Psalmist renders it in all the impassioned warmth of his personal experience: "Thy mercy, O Lord, is in the heavens; thy faithfulness reacheth to the clouds; thy righteousness is like the great mountains; thy judgments are a great deep." In Christ we see that which no words could adequately tell: the beauty of holiness, as it springs from the birthplace of the morning; the bloom of life covered with the dew of perpetual youth. In him are blended all the graces of majesty and mercy, all the depths of humility, all the heights of holiness. At the close of that mighty career by which he redeemed the world and thrilled the universe of intelligent being, in that last prayer as the high priest of his people, he cried: "Father, I have glorified thee on the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do."

What obedience, what love, what humility, what modesty—yea, what divinity, is there in these syllables!

Several Things.

In my peregrinations to and fro on the earth I find a growing desire among our people, especially among our leading laymen, for larger districts. Shut our eyes to it, stop our ears as we may, there is a growing feeling that a change should be made at this point of our economy. Presiding elders are necessary in our economy, but it is a fact which we must recognize that in many sections of our territory the old time quarterly meeting, with its great crowds from a long distance, is largely a thing of the past. The same conditions do not exist to day that existed twenty years ago, and hence we should change our policy to meet the new conditions as they arrive. One of the chief glories of Methodism is that she has always been able to adjust herself to every condition and to meet every emergency that might arise. It is almost impossible to have preaching on Saturday in our towns; hence the presiding elder's visit is confined to the services of the Sabbath and the business meeting of the officials on Monday.

Now the desire for larger districts is not to save money, though that is not an unimportant item; nor is it to save men, though that is an important consideration; nor is it to secure the appointment of stronger men to this work, though that fact might enter into the consideration of this question; but larger districts are desired:

1. Because the work can be as efficiently served in large districts as in small ones. The presiding elder's presence is not as essential in our town and city churches as it once was, and he could very well spend most of his Sundays in the rural charges, giving special attention to new fields. He might come into the larger towns from some contiguous appointment on Sunday afternoon, preach Sunday night, and hold the Quarterly Conference on Monday. His presence is not necessary for the administration of the sacrament, but he may perform all necessary duties pertaining to his work in this way. It would not mean more work for the presiding elder—only a few more miles of travel.

2. Because the responsibility of the presiding elder's support could be distributed over a larger territory, making it as good, or better, than it is at present, and making it lighter on each particular charge.

I shall not discuss this point, but intelligent, loyal laymen see it, and believe it should be done.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

It is the youngest, but most vigorous child of Methodism. It has thus far survived the frowns of some of its brothers, the sneers of some of its sisters, and the misfortunes of some of its friends. Some folks never like a hopeful thing. They are blue themselves, and don't see why you are not blue, too. They have no use for the Epworth League, very little for the Sunday-school, and are not so powerful struck on the women's societies. Well, everyone to his taste; but I am for those young people. Many a pastor has mourned over the worldliness of his young people, and here is an opportunity to save some of them by putting them to work for Jesus; and the preacher who fails to do it has no moral right ever again to cry out over the worldliness of his young people. No wonder some preachers never amount to anything. Some of them are so severely dignified that they can't get down to where the young people live, and others—well, I have nothing but the profoundest sympathy for them.

Brother, start an Epworth League in your charge, and you will be surprised at the results.

THE LESSONS OF THE PICTORIAL IN LITERATURE.

Every picture ought to please or instruct. Some deed of mercy done, some sweet face, some fair landscape with blooming flowers and running brooks and a vine-clad cottage hard by—all have a helpful and refining effect upon human nature. The nude in art is an expression of the downfall of purity, and though men tell us that, "To the pure all things are pure," yet there are some things that are impure in themselves. God designed that we should learn to subdue, and not inflame, our passions; but every vile picture helps to destroy our moral reserve power and hasten our downfall.

Take the illustrated monthlies of America and Europe, and their pictures are not pure. The female person is exposed until it becomes evil in its suggestiveness. Read the most popular magazines of the day, and you will find that it is quite the thing for much of the female person to be exposed. May God help us! Do you say that refined literary taste demands this? Who created the taste? If it is innate, shall our great periodicals help to fan the fire "for revenue only" until it consumes us? Let an indignant public demand the exclusion of all pictures that suggest immodesty and impurity. Dear reader, you may sneer at this, but there is something in it. I can do one thing: I may not stop the publication of magazines that have these pictures, but I will not see them or permit them in my house. L.

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD,
President Mississippi State Conference of Epworth Leagues.

The Epworth League movement in Mississippi is not what it ought to be, but we are encouraged by continued reports which tell of the organization of many new Leagues.

District Epworth League Conferences will greatly help the work. Those hitherto held have proved to be instructive and inspiring. We hope each presiding elder in the State will arrange for one in his district some time during the year.

The one recently held at Coffeeville by Presiding Elder Morehead, of the Grenada district, will prove to be of immense good to the work in the future.

Water Valley alone sent eleven delegates, and two young Leaguers from the country came twenty miles in a buggy, and then traveled thirty miles on the railroad to reach the Conference.

The League in the country is overcoming many difficulties which hitherto confronted it, and letters are being often received telling of many organizations in the rural districts.

A preacher on a large circuit with a small salary writes that he has organized a League with 19 members, reorganized another, and asks for literature, etc., to organize still another.

Many preachers from different parts of the State who heretofore have not attended any of the League Conferences write that they are coming to the State Conference at Water Valley.

We hope that all who intend coming will send in their names as soon as possible in order that the committees may properly arrange for entertainment. Send names to writer of these "Echoes."

The Epworth League at Sardis will clothe two orphans in the Mississippi Orphans' Home at Water Valley. The church there had already furnished about $60, and promised to furnish the matron's room. Hurrah for Shipman and his faithful band of workers!

The League at McComb City is taking on new life. Our friend of former years—"Cliff." Owen—is president. He spent several years in Texas, and caught the enthusiasm which characterizes the Western Leaguers. Rev. Joshua M. Morse, the efficient pastor and friend of the young people, attends every meeting of his League, and by every means in his power is endeavoring to encourage them in every work of faith and labor of love.

This young people's movement in our church is bringing us closer together in the bonds of love and sympathy, and teaching us the lesson that, "One touch of nature has made the whole world kin."

During our recent visit in McComb City we addressed the young people at a special service, and at the conclusion, in response to a proposition, we shook hands with Leaguers from Birmingham, Ala.; Memphis, Tenn., and other parts, besides members of the Young People's Baptist Union and Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor.

"Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

We are obliged to the young ladies of the Port Gibson Female College for a copy of their paper, "The College Spirit." They have just organized an Epworth League, and will be represented at the coming Conference at Water Valley by Miss Ellie May Hartwell.

Rev. J. A. Randolph, corresponding secretary and treasurer of the State Conference, writes that only two Leagues have responded to his notices sent out calling for the five-cent assessment. We hope that each pastor will be kind enough when he reads this to call attention of same to his League. Five cents from each Leagner for expenses of State Conference. Bro. Randolph lives at Macon, Miss.

The "College Journal" has just reached us. It is published by the "Stratford Literary Society" of East Mississippi Female College, Meridian, Miss. The word "Stratford" revives the memories of long ago. The writer of these "Echoes" was reared not many miles distant from this historic town on the Avon, where the immortal Shakespeare was born.

The Conference at Water Valley will be a great occasion. Begin now to pray that the Holy Ghost will come upon us in great power, and that the church throughout the State may feel the influence of the revival that shall be started during the services held here.

We must know the names of those who are coming to the Conference not later than April 20. The Illinois Central railroad will sell tickets, "one fare for the round trip." The Conference opens Thursday night, April 29, at 8 o'clock, and closes Sunday night, May 2.

Children's Day Programmes.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me, through your columns, to call the attention of all our pastors and Sunday-school superintendents to Children's Day service for the third Sunday in May. The Publishing House is now ready to deliver the programmes, which have been prepared with very great care, and are sent forth with the hope that they may prove of very great interest and profit to all our young people. We have endeavored to make the programme a proper combination of that which is bright and interesting with that which is instructive and permanent.

The programme proper consists of sixteen pages, including nine songs of exceptional beauty, all but one of which are taken from our new song book, "The Young People's Hymnal." The music is given in full. There is also a supplement containing the recitations and addresses. Then there is a beautiful folder containing forty points of information of special interest to our people, and answering the forty questions asked on the programme.

The observance of Children's Day in every congregation is ordered by the General Conference. Much good is being accomplished by it. I beg that every superintendent shall order at once a sufficient supply of the programmes, and begin in time to make the occasion all that the church expects of it. Let no school fail to observe the day.

With kind greetings to all our Sunday-school workers, I am,

Fraternally,

JAMES ATKINS,
Sunday-school Editor.

Brains for the Age.

It is not enough to save men. We must build men, and we must build their brains. And the brain material which we use must have been made where science and philosophy are studied from the most earnest Christian standpoint. Men must see these things through God's light, and not through man's blind conceits. But they must see them where light is allowed to shine. As a people, we have a duty as sure and unmistakable to our colleges as we have to missions or to church extension societies, or to any other phase of our great work for which we provide admonishing columns in our Conference Minutes, and for which we urge our membership to pray and give, as looking to the judgment. Pray for the colleges. Give to the colleges. Send the young people to our colleges. Remember that the educated Paul did more to found churches and to set up the visible kingdom than all of the other apostles put together. Back up your Gamaliels with your paying praying.—Pres. James R. Day, LL.D.

Get the Toad Out.

One of Mr. Meyer's matchless illustrations: "Mr. Guinness once told me that at one time all the water failed out of his house at Cliff. They made examination. All the faucets were tight. Everything was in good order. Finally they went to the junction between the house-pipe and the great water-main, and there, squatting in the orifice, was a great toad. Of course there was a plenty of water, but it was outside the toad. None could pass it. Dear brothers, the water of God would flow through your life like a river if you would yield to it; but there is a stoppage somewhere. Get the toad out! Get the toad out! God give us some gunpowder, and blast it out, if need be."—Golden Rule.

CHRIST IS RISEN

BY REV. F. BOTTOME, D. D.

Rise, my soul! 'tis Easter morning!
Winter melting into Spring
Let the heaven and earth adorning
Shines the glory of our King
Christ is risen!
Let the world his triumph sing

All creation wakes to gladness,
Grateful odors fill the air
Songs of praise dispelling sadness
Rise upon the breath of prayer
Christ is risen!
Winds and waves the burden bear.

Saints, your floral tribute bringing
Early at his altar bow!
While the joyous bells are ringing
Lo, the grave is vacant now
Christ is risen!
Put the crown upon his brow.

Crown him, crown him, King of glory
Seated on his Father's throne;
First in all redemption's story
Men and angels make it known.
Christ is risen!
God in Christ and man made one.

Hymns.

We have read with pleasure the articles in the Review of our church—one on "Poetry as Related to the Spiritual Life;" also, "Who Wrote Our Hymns?" Abler pens than mine may do justice to their merits, but their perusal led my thoughts to the contemplation of the wonderful beauty and value of our hymns. No divine worship is complete without prayer, nor is any service really worship without the element of praise. Who that loves with David to "go up to the house of the Lord" but rejoices in the service of song? He loves to sing:

"Lord of hosts, how lovely fair
E'en on earth thy temples are."

And when praying for God's blessing on the earthly temple, he joins heartily in these petitions:"

"Come, Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove,
With all thy quickening powers."

And often the words have been blest when we sing, "Come shed abroad a Savior's love," and been the means under God of "kindling the flame" in our own hearts. When we are exhorted to live nearer to God—and who can hear but needs such advice?—we sing and often with a blessing, "Return, O Holy Dove, return," and feel that we do earnestly

"Hate the sins that made thee mourn,
And drove thee from our breast."

If our thoughts are led to the contemplation of him "whom, having not seen, we love," how appropriate are these lines:

"I see thee not, I hear thee not,
Yet art thou still with me;
And earth hath not so dear a spot
As when I meet with thee."

Should these verses be selected from Scripture, "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face," we love to sing this hymn:

"Weak is the effort of my heart,
And cold my warmest thought;
But when I see thee as thou art,
I'll praise thee as I ought."

It is indeed sadly true that many sing these sweet hymns without feeling their truth; but may it not often be that, thus singing, their minds are lifted toward his praise by the words they at first sung thoughtlessly, and thus are brought to the experience of "the truth as it is in Jesus"? But the beauty and spiritual teaching of hymns is not confined to the public worship. Though "praise waiteth for thee in Zion," yet may our Lord be acceptably worshiped in the "dwellings of Jacob." It may be that, "shut in" by providences into the privacy of home, we derive comfort from these spiritual songs, which are, next to the Holy Scripture itself, of value in the spiritual life. In the education of families the young may be especially benefited by reading, singing, or committing to memory these beautiful words. Poetry, it has been fitly said, addresses itself to the mind and soul at the highest, and ideal spiritual loveliness is the vision of the Christian poet. Those who have been trained in childhood, when memory is most retentive, feel the advantage of the mental store of beautiful thoughts expressed in our hymns. What precious memories of childhood are present with us by association with these sweet poems! On the Sabbath morning what a vivid picture is photographed on memory's tablet as we see in thought our sainted parents singing with us, "Welcome, sweet day of rest," at our morning hour of family devotions; and can we doubt that their "willing souls" long ago have "sung themselves away to everlasting bliss"? How priceless such a memory to feel with Cowper that we are children of "parents passed into the skies!" Some hymns bring again to our remembrance our early religious convictions. 'Tis a point I long to know: "Am I his, or am I not?" And we remember the comfort of the closing lines:

"If I have not loved before;
Help me to begin to-day."

On Sunday evenings it was a custom to repeat hymns in rotation, leaving one new one each week, and passing some time in repeating as many old ones as we could. It encouraged our childish and feeble prayers when we read that

"Satan trembles when he sees
The weakest saint upon his knees."

Children often shudder at death, and this hymn was quoted for our comfort:

"Jesus can make a dying bed Feel soft as downy pillows are."

Another of childhood's pictures, though a sad one, is of the desolate mother gathering her fatherless little ones to her lonely hearth, and singing with them:

"Come let us join our friends above
That have obtained the prize."

And surely it is not unscriptural to think that our earthly praise was mingled with the sainted father who had left us and ascended to sing in the heavenly choir. Another blessing of the knowledge of hymns is the sweet memory of the words when in sickness or wakefulness, we then in those words "can remember thee upon my bed," and they can be instrumental:

"If in the night I sleepless lie,
My soul with heavenly thoughts supply."

It is true, in a great measure at least, that "poets are all who love, who feel great truths, and tell them;" and we, who can not attain to the highest flight of poetic genius, can reap the benefit of genius in being familiar with their beautiful creation. The subject is one that can never be exhausted. Each has his peculiar associations, his own favorites; but let us prize these hymns next to the Word of God in Scripture, and with Keble say not only,

"Help us this and every day
To live more nearly as we pray," but as we sing, for is not every hymn a prayer? Let us learn them, teach them, and live them. We will do well to "stand in the old paths," praising the Lord by their use in his lower temple, that we may be better prepared to join the heavenly praises above, remembering that we all

"May be nearer home, Nearer now than we think."

I have submitted a few thoughts on this subject, true, though not new, and we can not prize too highly these, our church hymns, as a precious means of grace.

A Question of Law.

In the ADVOCATE, of April 1, Bro. J. Louis Moore tells us that "if our people were to send a man into another State to solicit aid without the governor's consent, then the governor could have him arrested and lodged in jail for obtaining goods under a false pretense." While very cordially endorsing the laudable labor of love in which Bro. Moore is engaged, I do not think that his statement of the law should be allowed to pass unchallenged, for the reasons that it is incorrect and a serious reflection upon our free institutions. In the abstract, any one man can secure the arrest of any other one man by properly preferring against him charges of criminal conduct; but the arrest can not be made with safety unless the requirements of the law are observed as to jurisdiction and procedure, and unless justified by probable cause. For such an offense as false pretense, the governor of Louisiana has no more authority to require the arrest of the offender than has the humblest citizen, even though the crime be committed in that State. Outside of Louisiana the governor of that State has no authority or jurisdiction whatever, and can not have anybody "arrested and lodged in jail for obtaining goods under a false pretense," or for any other reason amounting even to the gravest felony. Citizens of Louisiana, with absolute immunity from the authority of the governor of that State, can go into any State in the Union, and with perfect freedom "solicit aid without the governor's consent." Not only this, but any citizen of any State can engage in Christian or benevolent service, solicit charity for the unfortunate, and obtain goods and money from the citizens of his own or of any other State, without becoming guilty of false pretense, unless by false tokens, or statements, or forgery, or other criminal conduct both in intent and act, he defrauds people who rely upon his false representations, when he becomes amenable to the law.

1. Neither the governor, nor the courts of Louisiana within their jurisdiction, have any power to punish arbitrarily for that which is not criminal in its nature or by statute.

2. The governor of Louisiana has no authority or jurisdiction whatever to prosecute infractions of the law committed in other States.

3. To solicit aid for the unfortunate is not a crime anywhere beneath the waving folds of the Stars and Stripes.

This is not written with any intention of unduly criticising Bro. Moore, but simply to indicate that the absolute rights of the people guaranteed to them by Magna Charta, Bill of Rights, Declaration of Independence, Federal and State Constitutions, are not so insecure as the article in question might lead us to believe. Evangelists.

MR. EDITOR: I see in this week's issue of your excellent paper a note quoted from the Arkansas Methodist which moves me to pen a few dots for the columns of the ADVOCATE. The note alluded to is: "Two great revivals held by the average evangelist are enough to kill any average church. The evangelist accuses and abuses the Bishop, the presiding elders, the regular preachers, the church members—all better men than himself—and abuse, fault finding criticism and suspicion are the fruits which remain from his work."—Arkansas Methodist.

I am a local elder in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and help pastors in revivals, and have some "great revivals," and hence am oftentimes called an "evangelist." I do not specially object to the appellation, as it is scriptural; but I greatly object to being counted among the number described in the note. I got out of being so counted by counting myself above the "average evangelist," in at least a moral sense. Were I guilty of the charges contained in that paragraph, I would surrender my credentials and play the hypocrite no longer.

I don't know what the Arkansas Methodist knows about "evangelists;" but I do know that if such accusations against local-preacher evangelists can be sustained, they are amenable to the Quarterly Conferences of which they are members, and should be dealt with and made to stop the violations of vows and church courts, or expelled from the ministry. Our local ministers belong to our beloved church. From our local ranks all of our itinerant ministers come.

Some time ago I remember the common charge against local preachers was, that they did not preach enough. Now the trouble is, they preach too much.

I want it understood that if "abuse" is what it takes to constitute "the average evangelist," I am not an average one. I am either above or below—prefer to be above, and sincerely believe with all of my heart I am above such sin. God bless our dear Bishops; I love them all, and thank God for them; also our toiling presiding elders and pastors.

May the Lord pour upon us all the grace of his power, and make this a year of the greatest revivals in the history of our church! I love the church of my choice, and expect to live and die preaching within her pales so long as she will allow me.

Third Mississippi State Conference of Epworth Leagues.

MR. EDITOR: Through the columns of your widely circulated paper in Mississippi I ask for space enough to announce to all fellow-Leaguers that the third State Conference will meet in Water Valley, Miss., April 29 to May 2. An excellent program has been arranged, and we expect a large crowd to be present. I have secured very good railroad rates from all parts of the State—the Illinois Central system giving one fare for the round trip, and all other roads in the State a rate of one and one-third fare, certificate plan, to connecting points on the I. C. All delegates not living on the I. C. system should not fail to get certificate with ticket to nearest I. C. connecting point, and have certificate signed at Water Valley to secure reduced rates returning. Hoping to meet many at the Conference and also that you may be there, Mr. Editor, I am,

Yours in the work,

Our North Mississippi P. and H. M. S. is in deep sorrow for the death of Mrs. J. H. Thrasher, our faithful secretary of Corinth district. Though young in years and frail in body, her intellectual strength, earnest consecration and sound judgment made her an invaluable worker, and her zeal and enthusiasm were not only an inspiration, but also a reproach to many of longer experience. While we mourn our loss and wonder sadly who can take her place and carry on the work she has so grandly begun, the memory of her lovely life, her brightness and sweetness comes to us like a benediction, and we are grateful that she was given to us even for so short a time.

OVERFLOWED AUXILIARIES.

Our hearts go out in sympathy to some of our most zealous auxiliaries with their true-as-steel district secretary who are in the overflowed section. Some of us who have been in overflows, and who love dearly the noble old river that will sometimes play such merciless pranks on those who dwell behind its levees, know what a disastrous thing an overflow is and how discouraging to planters. We know, too, that the waters always pass off—sometimes in time for a crop (as we hope they will do this year); and how bravely and cheerfully the Delta people meet this misfortune and how quickly they rally after it is past.

This overflow will no doubt effect our parsonage and home mission work to some extent, but we feel sure these submerged auxiliaries will come together again with renewed diligence after "the falling of the waters." In the meantime, for our encouragement, I will state that our corresponding secretary has just informed me that our treasurer, Mrs. Thayer, reports that, after sending for the past quarter to the general treasurer fifty per cent. of dues and $52 from February services, and to Scarritt Bible and Training-school a part of our pledge, she has on hand enough to pay our appropriation to Sturges parsonage and leave a balance for next quarter.

Sorrowing as Those without Hope.

As a result of the recent heavy rains a sad disaster occurred in a small village not many miles from this city. On the night of the twenty-seventh of July a boarding-house situated on the banks of a small stream was swept away by the force of the rapidly rising waters, and seven of the inmates, varying in age from eight to fifty years, were drowned in the torrent. One of the sad features of this accident was that, according to the statement of the daily papers, at the time it occurred the young people of the house were preparing to indulge in a dance. We do not belong to the class of those who interpret sudden calamity as indicating God's anger against individual sinners, or as determining the moral quality of human actions; yet it is safe to say that no one, even those who are utterly worldly, or those who so strenuously contend that this so-called amusement is consistent with the maintenance of spiritual religion in the heart, would choose to meet death under these circumstances. But why not? To one who is living as he should, glorifying God in his body and in his spirit, death has no added terror if it meets him in the consolentions discharge of daily duties, or in the innocent festivities of the social circle; nor, if so overtaken, does a shadow darken our hope for their future. But what hope can we have for those who are removed from life while roveling in the delights of the theater, the brothel, the gambling-hell, the saloon, the bar-room or the dance-hall?—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Little Sins.

A gentleman crossing the English Channel stood near the helmsman. It was a calm and pleasant evening, and no one dreamed of possible danger to their good ship; but a sudden flapping of a sail, as if the wind had shifted, caught the ear of the officer on watch, and he sprang at once to the wheel, examining closely the compass. "You are half a point off the course," he said sharply to the man at the wheel. The deviation was corrected, and the officer returned to his post. "You must steer very accurately," said the looker-on, "when only half a point is so much thought of." "Ah! half a point in many places might bring us directly on the rocks," he said. So it is in life. Half a point from strict truthfulness strands us upon the rocks of falsehood. Half a point from perfect honesty, and we are steering right for the rocks of crime. And so of all kindred vices. The beginnings are always small. No one climbs to the summit at one bound, but goes the little step at a time.

How to live is the great study of the world. Dying is of comparative unimportance. Mr. Lecky writes that in the Irish legends it is told of a lake in Munster that there were two islands in it; into one of them death could never enter; but age was there and sickness and all the infirmities of life and the pains and woes of dreadful suffering; and the inhabitants, worn and feeble, bowed under burdens which they could not support and which they could not throw off, grew tired of their immortality and looked longingly over to the other island where death reigned, as to a very paradise. They launched their boats upon the gloomy and tempestuous waters and sailed for the shores where they were sure to die, and when their trembling feet trod upon them, they were at rest. We need not shrink from death if we have fulfilled the mission of our life, but welcome it as a boon and a crowning reward.—Burdett Hart, D. D., in "Always Upward."

Vacillation of character lies at the root of unsettledness of opinion—a man knowing the right and doing the wrong—not willing to do an act of manifest injustice if he can avoid it, but hesitating to prevent it for fear of a charge against himself—pitably vacillating because his hands were tied by the consciousness of past guilt and personal danger. How could such a man be certain about anything? What could a mind, wavering, unstable, like a feather on the wind, know or believe of solid, stable truth, which altereth not, but remaineth like a rock amidst the vicissitudes of the ages and the changeful fashions of the minds of men?—Great Thoughts.

Religion is a thing of the heart, and not of the intellect; as the Bible so strongly tells us, "The world by wisdom knew not God." Religion is the banquet of the spirit, not the feast of the mind; and therefore the danger is ever present when men begin to listen to the sermon as a manifestation of intellectual force, and not for its spiritual power.—F. W. Robertson.

I now see more good and more evil in all men than heretofore I did. I see that good men are not so good as I once thought they were, and I find few are so bad as either malicious enemies or censorious separating professors do imagine.—Richard Baxter.

Heaven is for the heavenly-minded. It is the blossoming and fulfillment of the heavenly life, begun here in weakness and sorrow and conflict, with doubts and fears and temptations, but sought and won by the way of faith in God and earnest striving.

A religion which consumes all the time of its votaries in observances and leaves them no time to be kind to the poor and sympathetic toward the unfortunate is a gross travesty on the name.—Southern Churchman.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. Black,
Editor Christian Advocate.

MUL-EN-OL is the greatest of all antiseptic dressings. Is a sovereign remedy for healing flesh wounds on man or beast.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. S Johns, Bayou Chicot, La., March 26, 1897: "I arrived on this circuit the last day of last year, and after three months can report fair congregations, and a reorganization of Sunday-schools. I think everything is in good trim for revivals later on. Will begin here with Bros. Manly and Hughes, of Washington. Have married five couples. I am contented and happy in the work."

Rev. J. A. Parker, P. C., Lecompte and West Alexandria: "A meeting at the latter named place resulted in six additions to the church and a great reviving of the membership; Revs. A. W. Turner, V. D. Skipper (the presiding elder), J. B. Williams and L. F. Jackson being present and assisting. Bro. Williams did most of the preaching with great acceptability to the large congregations which attended the nightly services. The meeting continued for two days, and was very general in its results."

Thos. J. Martin, Lanesville, March 29, 1897: "Bro. H. W. Ledbetter is our pastor. He is a young man of promise. He preaches well. He is full of unction, and, therefore, edifies believers. He holds the attention of his congregations throughout the service. We are looking for a forward move under his warm, spiritual preaching. May the Lord of the harvest call many such to the ministry. The people appreciate and love him. We are not doing as much as a church as we should, but it is not his fault."

Rev. Jno. B Kent, Covington, La., April 1, 1897: "This, the second year for this preacher on the Covington work, is moving off somewhat better than did the first. Congregations are nearly 100 per cent. larger than they were a year ago. So also is the Sunday-school. Two additions on profession of faith, some by letter. A kitchen and dining-room with back porch just added to the parsonage makes it a comfortable home. Bro. McIntosh will hold a tent meeting with us about first of May. Signs are hopeful. We are expecting great times. Pray for us."

Rev. D. C. Foust, Saltillo, Miss., April 3, 1897: "This preacher and his family have been very cordially received on this—the Saltillo—circuit. The people have shown their appreciation in many substantial ways. Since our arrival among them gentle breezes have been blowing in upon us; and on the evening of March 30 a storm burst into our quiet, peaceful home, which lasted only a few minutes, but left in its track about fifty packages—some of them weighing several pounds. All denominations in town were represented in this pounding. The outlook is encouraging all over the work. Congregations increasing. Prospects good for a revival. We have eight Sabbath-schools (two of them Union). We are planning to secure a parsonage, and hope to execute our plans in the near future. At our first Quarterly Conference our model presiding elder, Bro. Tucker, was with us in the spirit of the Master. The Board of Stewards made an increased assessment over that of last year for pastor's support. We are praying for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit. We hope to send soon some subscribers to the Advocate."

Rev. T. G. Freeman, Sallis, Miss., April 3, 1897: "This is my third year on the Sallis circuit. We are moving on tolerably well. I reckon my congregations are better than they have been since I came to this work. The Sunday school interest, I think, is improving. The second quarterly meeting for this year is just past. Bro. Mitchell, the presiding elder, was on hand, doing his work well. Finances real low, grazing real short, though our motto is to keep up even, not set behind. I have not tried my credit in some time; I do not think I have any. We have raised our foreign mission money and sent it off; so that much is off my hands. I make it a rule to take my foreign missions collection early in the year. Since I have adopted that rule I have had but little trouble to get my collection. I wish I could do more for your most excellent paper. I am glad you are giving us such a good paper. Every Methodist family ought to read the Advocate. I am proud of all our church papers and periodicals. I think the Review is excellent—as good as any church can produce. Dr. Hoss is the right man in the right place, with two good eyes, and both of them wide opened. I hope you can come to our District Conference this year; it meets at Pickens. I am going to try to get some subscribers to the Advocate on the $1 proposition. This is surely cheap enough for anyone. I pity the people in the overflowed regions. I fear the worst is not yet. Well, I want Cuba to secure her independence. I want Greece to whip Turkey. May the Lord bless you in your labor of love! Pray for us when it goes well with you."

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, P. C., Decatur, Miss., March 29, 1897: "At the last session of the Mississippi Conference, Bishop Hendrix 'read me out' for the Decatur circuit. We were pleased with the appointment. We have been so royally received and the people have been so good to us until that feeling has ripened into real joy and delight. Congregations are large and attentive and everything is encouraging for a glorious year. Even at this early date 'our labor is not in vain in the Lord.' During this month we have observed 'Veterans' Day' at every church. As the result, I have to-day remitted to Bro. W. M. Thornton, treasurer of Joint Board of Finance, thirty-seven dollars—two dollars more than our entire assessment for Conference claimants. My people rightly appreciate these sacred charges which the Lord has committed to our care, and deem it a happy privilege to contribute to their comfort and support. And more than this, Mr. Editor; they love Christ and his holy church, and are glad to labor and, if necessary, make sacrifices for its prosperity. We have in hand a nice sum for missions, which is being continually increased through the efforts of our faithful collecting committees. We have paid our assessment for district parsonage, and made some much needed repairs on our church here. We have held some class meetings with encouraging success. Our class meeting at Conehatta, the twentieth, was indeed glorious. Brethren, let us revive this time-honored institution of Methodism, and we will find it a great means of grace to our people. We have had five additions to the church; baptized seven infants. Our motto is, Onward and upward.' The Lord Christ, our heavenly Captain, is leading on to victory."

Rev. G. S. Morehead, Redding, Miss., April 2, 1897: "I have just been to the office and got my Advocate, came home and read the letters from some of the preachers. Oh! how it fills my soul with joy to read the letters from the boys of North Mississippi Conference. We are moving along real nicely with our work here on our charge (Chapel Hill), but there is room all along the line for improvement, especially in church work. We have organized one Epworth League on the circuit since I have been here, and we believe it will prove a great benediction to our folks. They are somewhat enthused over the work of our Epworth League. We have one ladies' prayer meeting on our work, organized in great condition, and the good Lord is blessing us in crowning our feeble efforts with the sweet roses of victory. I have witnessed so many sad scenes this year by the bedside of so many dying people. While the earth is deprived of our jewels, heaven has gained stars of glory. I don't know how long that I will live, but one thing—I am in the warfare till death. I love the grand old mother church, the church of my birth. Brethren, pray for me, that I may be a useful man for the church and my God."

SALTONSTALL—A. B. Saltonstall was born at Columbus, Miss., July 18, 1855, and died near Williamsburg, Miss., Oct. 21, 1896. He was received into the church at Shubuta by Rev. T. S. West, and was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference at Stonewall in 1888, Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, P. E.

When I became acquainted with him he was confined to his house. The recollection I have of him is of one suffering, of one patiently trusting his Lord, confiding his all to God. Through neglect of himself or some one else, he lost his license to preach in 1895, no one being able to represent him to the District Conference. He regretted not having laid down everything and devoting himself to the work of the ministry. He connected his misfortunes and bodily afflictions with his failure to do so. His one desire was to recover, that he might give all his time to his Lord's work.

He died full of faith, triumphing victoriously over the last enemy. He gave all an affectionate farewell. He left an aged mother, a wife, and two little girls that will never know a father's care.

W. J. Dawson, P. C.

THOMPSON—Mrs. Permelia Thompson was born in Alabama in 1825. Her husband, Jno. W. Thompson, died in 1861. The widow and her family of four sons removed to Monroe county, Miss., in November, 1865. Sister Thompson was happily converted when but a girl, and at once joined the Methodist Church, in whose communion she lived and labored for more than a half century. She died, after an illness of three weeks, at the home of her son, Taylor Thompson, Monroe county, Miss., Jan. 23, 1897.

Sister Thompson was a most earnest Christian woman. Her piety was of the happy, joyous sort, and identified her with that class of Christians known as "Shouting Methodists." She had a most unmistakable experience in the deep things of God, that filled her with an abiding joy and peace, and made her life a benediction to others. She was characterized not only by personal piety, but by a loyalty to the church of her choice which is seldom found. Her devotion to the church was second only to her consuming love for the Savior. She was always ready to give an intelligent reason why she was a Christian and why a Methodist. As she lived, so she died. 'Twas but a translation. For her "to live, was Christ, and to die, was gain." The legacy of such a life is of infinitely more value than all the gold and silver of earth. "Servant of God, well done!"

H. T. Cunningham.

Strongs, Miss.

When the doctor comes to prescribe for any "female weakness," the first thing he insists upon is an examination, and the treatment he prescribes is pretty sure to call for the local applications, so naturally distasteful to every modest woman. These humiliating measures are generally absolutely unnecessary, and there is seldom any reason why a woman should submit to them. This statement is made on the authority of Dr. R. V. Pierce, an eminent specialist in the treatment of diseases of women. For thirty years he has been the chief consulting physician at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription was designed for the cure of all diseases and disorders of the distinctly feminine organs. It has been successful, even beyond the expectations of its discoverer. It acts directly on these delicate and sensitive organs, and brings them back to perfect, vigorous health. Its effect is almost immediate. It allays inflammation, and stops unbearable, nerve-nagging pains, as well as unnatural, debilitating drains on the system. It corrects distressing and painful irregularities, and cures where doctors fail.

Every woman who would like to know the truth about her own physiology in health and disease, should have a copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. This remarkable book has over 1000 pages and is a complete medical library in one volume. It contains several chapters on the reproductive physiology of woman, written in plain language, and illustrated fully and very carefully. It tells exactly what the "Favorite Prescription" will do for woman, and offers many useful suggestions for the preservation of health. Nearly 700,000 copies were sold at $1.50 each. This is the greatest sale ever reached by any medical work ever printed in the English language. The new edition of half-a-million copies, paper-covered, is now offered absolutely free to any one who will send 21 one-cent stamps, to cover the cost of mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. In cloth binding 10 cents extra (31 cents in all).

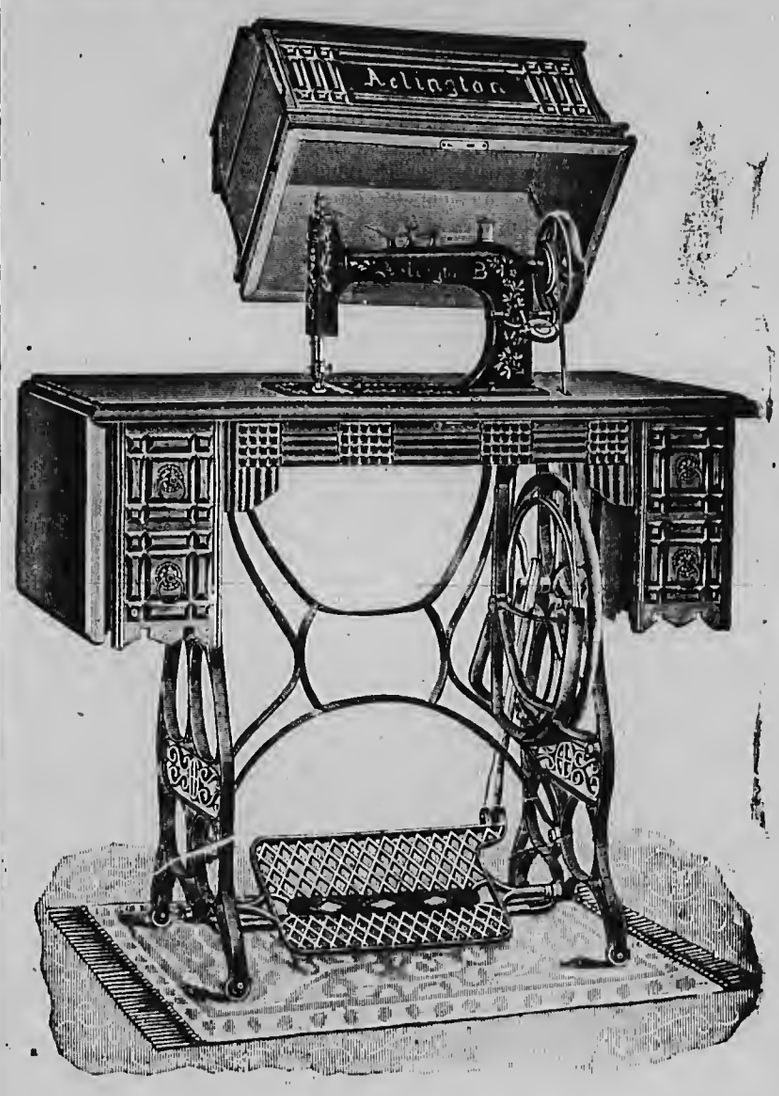
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.



A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

The Head is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

Needle Bar is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

Improved Automatic Bobbin Winder which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

Self-Threading—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

The Needle is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

Self-Threading Shuttle—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

Loose Pulley for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

Parts Subject to Wear are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

"Whether on the scaffold high,
Or in the battle's van,
The fittest place for man to die
Is where he dies for man."

Thanksgiving is good, but thanksliving is better.—Matthew Henry.

If there are mists in the valley, climb to the mountain top and you will find an unclouded sky.

Most of us do not need any one to comfort us concerning our own shortcomings. We can do that onrselves.

To-day's burden is likely to be heavy enough without adding to it the burdens of a hundred days to come.

Some people claim to have graduated in the school of Christ who have never learned the alphabet of common honesty.

Look upon the bright side of your condition, and your discontents will disperse. Pore not upon your losses, but recount your mercies.—Watson.

The toughest philosophy we have tried to master is that of the preacher who hopes to build up the church by pulling it down.—Baltimore Advocate.

Some people have a prodigious capacity for inventing plans to do nothing with the time, talents and opportunities which God has given them.

The secret of life is not to do what one likes, but to try to like that which one has to do; and one does come to like it—in time.—Dinah Muloch Craik.

It is a sad day for any man when he loses his enthusiasm—his capacity for admiration. The "nil admirari" spirit clips the wings of high endeavor and lofty achievement.

The burden of suffering seems a tombstone hung about our necks, while in reality it is only the weight which is necessary to keep down the diver while he is hunting for pearls.—Jean Paul Richter.

The man who has failed at everything he has undertaken should not conclude that he is good for nothing. He is good material out of which to make a critic of everything in heaven above and the earth beneath.

Some people make no improvement because they have no model but themselves to copy after. They are too full of themselves to see the thousand better models around them in every day life as well as in the pages of history, sacred and profane.

If you have just won a victory over Satan, don't imagine that he will never return to trouble you again. He has only gone off for re-enforcements. Even when he left Jesus in the wilderness, it is said that he departed only for a season.—Selected.

Spiritual Vision.

Faith has been appropriately called the eye of the soul. It performs the same office for the spiritual that the senses perform for the physical nature. Without it God and eternal things can never be made real to us. We may hunger and thirst ever so intensely after a knowlege of divine things, we may long ever so ardently for the revelation of Christ in us; but without faith we shall never experience the certainty of spiritual mysteries, or the renewing, transforming power of the Holy Ghost.

Our wandering steps and faltering purposes are largely due to faintness of spiritual vision. If men could be brought to behold "the bottomless pit" yawning before them just as they see a mighty mountain chasm, or a fiery furnace, if the terrors of the lost were as plain to view a destruction by fire and flood, many, doubtless, who now "walk after the flesh" would fear to do evil. If the beatitudes of heaven were as evident to our eyes as the blooming glories of some splendid flower garden, would we not set our affections more upon things above than upon things of earth?

The kingdom of heaven, however, ought to be as real to the devout believer as the things of sense. If God seems far away, it is because we look for him with the natural eye. The telescope of faith reveals that he is ever near. If a change of heart appears but an empty name, it is because we are blinded by unbelief. If we seek for God by the aid of cold reason, and search for a new heart by scientific methods, the peace of God will never be ours. "Canst thou by searching find out God?" Wicked men say, "Show us God and we will worship him," not understanding that by faith he can be clearly seen and known. Not until there is entire submission and implicit trust do the scales of sin fall from our eyes, so that we apprehend the beauties of religion. No man can see the kingdom of God until he is "born from above," nor will this miracle be wrought in us except on the condition of a present, appropriating faith. When through the exercise of a living faith "the eyes of our understanding have been enlightened," "we know whom we have believed," and perceive the exceeding riches and surpassing glory of the kingdom of grace.

The gospel means very little to people who do not cultivate the faith faculty. The majority of mankind are so taken up with material things, with the pleasures of sense, that the spiritual world seems but a myth. "The things of the Spirit" are foolishness unto them. Religion never means much to any man until he has been made "a new creature in Christ Jesus" by faith; but to the faithful believer a new world transcendently glorious is opened up to view, and as he advances in the divine life the beauties and joys of the way increase more and more. Now he begins to understand the meaning of the apostle's words: "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit."

Once when the renowned artist, Turner, was engaged on one of his most famous paintings, a lady of rank, who was watching him, said, "Why, Mr. Turner, I do not see in nature all that you depict on canvass." The great artist replied, "Don't you wish you could?" Similarly there are many professed Christians who do not see in religion the grandeur and blessedness that the truly consecrated experience. They are slow to believe that Christ can open the eyes of the heart. They have not brushed away the cobwebs of doubt, and hence they see as through a cloud.

By the aid of the microscope multitudes of living animals can be seen sporting in a single drop of stagnant water, in which with the naked eye nothing can be seen but the aqueous particles themselves. In like manner the Christian, using the microscope of faith, has visions of the glory of God that are entirely imperceptible to the eye of sense. Just as the botanist notes countless forms of beauty and instances of design in the organization of plants that to the eye of the ordinary observer are unseen; so the man who uses the eye of the spirit beholds God working everywhere and overruling everything for the good of his children.

It was the sense of the nearness of God and the truth of eternal things that influenced Moses to "suffer affliction with the people of God," for it is said that "he endured as seeing him who is invisible." Though assailed by the tempter's darts, or, in heaviness by reason of adversity and affliction, we can never despair so long as we have a realizing sense of the presence and protection of Almighty God. Though clouds and darkness be round about us, God in answer to prayer and in response to trustful faith, can open our eyes as he did those of Elisha's servant, so that we shall see

Just as the hunter by careful observation becomes more and more skillful in detecting the presence of game, so the Christian by exercising his vision should have increasingly clearer views of God and duty and destiny. Because the kingdom of heaven is within us and the adversary is invisible, our conflict with the powers of darkness at times has the semblance of a dream. Yet if we "look not at the things which are seen, but at the things that are unseen," and go forward, trusting in the invisible, but all-sufficient God, doubt will give place to certainty, expectation to fulfillment, and faith will at last be lost in sight.

As has been well said, "The reason why the indwelling of Christ is so little recognized by the majority of Christian people arises from the inwardness of his shrine." Christ enters like the gentle zephyr. We can detect no footfall in the passage, or on the stair; we can not discern what he is doing any more than we can follow the workings of nature in the roots of trees in Spring; and because his presence will yield to no test that our sense can devise, we are apt to think that he is not there, and to suppose that it can not be for us to say with Paul: "Christ is in me, the hope of glory." To those who love and trust him, however, he has promised to reveal himself. Let us ever pray that our eyes may not be holden nor our understanding darkened. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

Dedication of Webster Science Hall.

Friday, April 2, was a memorable day at Millsaps College, the occasion being the dedication of our new building, Webster Science Hall. This building, already fully described in the ADVOCATE, was completed in November last, but has only recently been occupied, some delay having been caused by the fitting up of the laboratory, and moving and cataloguing the library—the latter work admirably done by our accomplished librarian, Prof. Swearingen.

Although only partially furnished, Science Hall is a great addition to the material equipment of the college, giving ample room for academic work for many years to come.

The dedication exercises were attended by a large and appreciative audience, among whom were Governor McLaurin, Major Millsaps; Dr. Provine, president of Mississippi College; Presiding Elder Norsworthy, and Rev. R. J. Jones, of Capitol Street Church, besides Bishop Galloway and Dr. H. M. DuBose, who had prominent places on the program.

In his introductory address Dr. Murrah rehearsed briefly the history of the building and the uses for which it was designed. Alluding to the fact that in it were domiciled the departments of Law and the Ancient Classics, as well as that of Physical Science, he took occasion to declare that the purpose of the college organization would continue to be to know and teach the truth, assured that all honest investigation in legitimate fields of research would lead only to a larger knowledge of Him who is the beginning and the perfection of all truth.

Dr. Edward Mayes was then introduced, and read the address of the occasion, a paper of thrilling interest upon the history of higher education in our State. It is only a few years since our people awoke to the fact that Mississippi has a history independent of the personal and political fortunes of a score or less of prominent men; and not a few even in that intelligent audience were gratified to hear for the first time the names of Audubon, Longstreet and Barnard mentioned in connection with our institutions of learning. Indeed, the Doctor's paper, substantially written several years ago upon invitation of the United States Commissioner of Education, has much in it worthy of preservation, and a general desire is felt that it may be soon published in a form that will make it permanently accessible to our people at large.

A fitting tribute was paid, of course, to the liberality of Major Millsaps, and the devotion of Bishop Galloway and others, by which the establishment of the college was made possible.

The ode of dedication, "The House of Wisdom," written for the occasion and read by the author, Dr. H. M. DuBose, received high praise on all sides for its beauty and appropriateness.

A short, stirring address by Governor McLaurin and a dedicatory prayer by Bishop Galloway closed the exercises of the day—a bright and hopeful one in our college history.

"And this leads me to say" that the college is ready now for large contributions from its friends. Our beautiful new building is yet to be properly furnished, the scientific apparatus needs enlargement, the library must have frequent additions to its list of books, both of reference and of general literature. It must not be forgotten that a progressive school is always in need. In educational enterprises, as in all others, capital wisely used opens the way if it does not create the necessity for larger investment. "To him that hath shall be given" has a "business" meaning also.

NEW BOOKS.

A HISTORY OF METHODISM IN THE UNITED STATES. By James M. Buckley. Vol. I. and Vol. II. Christian Literature Co., New York.

The above-named work is a most admirable one. The materials for the preparation of such a work are at the present day almost bewilderingly voluminous. This material the author has utilized with rare skill and discrimination. Moreover, the work is about as thoroughly impartial as it is possible for a human production to be. From start to finish it is clearly seen that it is the author's aim to present the facts of history rather than any theorizings of his own. The literary execution is of highest order. It is sprightly and vigorous, and as lucid as a sunbeam. The author also possesses a very rare power of condensation. Few works contain so much in the same space. Within the compass of a little over nine hundred pages the reader will find all the salient features of Methodist history arranged in admirable order. In mechanical execution the work is superb. It is printed in large, clear type on the best of paper with very wide margins.

Dr. Buckley has been for some years, in our judgment, the most influential personality in the M. E. Church. Through the columns of the great connectional organ, the New York Advocate, and in the committee rooms and on the floor of the General Conference he has wielded an influence greater than that of any Bishop of the church. He is one of the few men who have had the privilege of declining the bishopric. It is well known that he would have been elected to that high office at the last General Conference if he had been willing to accept.

This work, if it does not increase his influence while living, will make it more enduring. It is destined to become a standard. The author deserves the thanks of the church for this most valuable contribution to its literature.

THE SELF-PRONOUNCING SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS' COMBINATION BIBLE, Containing the Old and New Testaments: translated out of the original tongues; and with former translations compared and revised, showing in simple form all changes, additions and omissions that appear in the revised version, enabling all Bible readers to see at a glance wherein the two versions differ. The text conformable to that of the Oxford Bible, printed at the University Press, Oxford. National Publishing Co., 239 Levant street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The above-named Bible is exactly described by the title. The text is the Authorized version. Wherever the new version differs from the old the change is indicated in foot notes, reference to which is facilitated by a well-devised system of notation. The work is well bound and well printed on good paper. It is the best combination of the two versions we have seen.

Under the pastorate of Dr. H. M. DuBose, First Church, at Jackson, Miss., is enjoying remarkable prosperity. The Sunday congregations are large, both morning and night. The attendance at prayer meeting is also remarkably large. The Epworth League is also in fine working order.

Stir Up the Brethren.

MR. EDITOR: I enclose a communication just received from Bro. Thornton, treasurer of Joint Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference. I wish you would publish this letter, just as it was written, and I hope every pastor and reader will ponder what Bro. Thornton says. How can we, who are serving charges and receiving a support for our families, be content for our less fortunate brethren to suffer want?

R. D. NORSWORTHY.

Jackson, Miss., April 9, 1897.

Lake, Miss., April 8, 1897.

Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, Jackson, Miss.—

MY DEAR BROTHER: I have received for Conference claimants from your district, first quarter, as follows: Canton, $20; Tranquil, $20; Lake City, $25.35; Yazoo City, $110; total, $175.35

Can't you stir the brethren up on this subject? I can't pay the old veterans at this rate. One district has paid less than $50; another less than $25. Yours fraternally,

W. M. THORNTON.

From a private letter from Rev. J. H. Mitchell, presiding elder of the Durant district, North Mississippi Conference, we quote as follows:

We are doing well on the district. Will soon have four new churches to dedicate—all good churches—better than any in the country. The preachers are taking their collections ordered by the Conference, and are succeeding well. A number of them have raised their foreign missionary money in full.

Rev. R. S. Woodward, of the Mississippi Conference, died at his home in Meridian on Saturday night, the tenth. The funeral services were held in Central Church. He was buried in Rose Hill Cemetery. Bro. Woodward had been for some years a prominent figure in the Mississippi Conference, filling its leading stations. He was for many years a member of the Alabama Conference. He was a man of most admirable character. Of him it could be as truly said as of any one whom we have ever known, "to know him was to love him." In the regions where he was known he has troops of ardent, devoted friends. A suitable memoir will, of course, be furnished in due time.

"Does Modern College Education Educate, in the Broadest and Most Liberal Sense of the Term?" is one of the most important inquiries that could be set on foot. This discussion, which is to be taken part in by President Gilman, of the Johns Hopkins; President Dwight, of Yale; President Schurman, of Cornell; President Morton, of the Stevens Institute; Henry Thurston Peck, of Columbia; Bishop Potter and others of the most distinguished men of both the United States and Europe, is begun in the April Cosmopolitan by a radical inquiry into the educational problem along the lines of Herbert Spencer. President Gilman will follow in a direction almost equally searching. Altogether there is promised the frankest possible expression of opinion, and it seems probable that it will be the most thorough comparison ever made of educational methods with the needs of everyday life at the close of the nineteenth century.

"If preachers only knew how much a good sermon is appreciated, they would try to give of their very best." This was a remark lately made by an attentive and observant hearer, and we think it is worthy of repetition. There are great rewards for the men who aspire to be preachers of the highest class. The talk about the failure of the pulpit to attract the best minds is largely "bosh." The best minds in the pews are ready to listen to the best minds in the pulpits. But there must be no carelessness among preachers. There must be signs of thought, of hard work in solitary hours, of study to develop the theme in pointed and lucid sentences, of search for apt illustrations, of appeals which have strong bases of argument to rest upon, in a word, of preparation made evident in every part of the discourse, and which gives it substance and glow. To such preaching men will give ear. They will appreciate its power and listen eagerly to the words uttered, through which the hearts and minds may be quickened. "A man," are the oft-quoted words of Vinet—"A man will be heard by men."—Presbyterian.

The Advocate for $1.

From now until the first of June we will receive new cash subscriptions at the rate of $1 for nine months. Moreover, we will give those who subscribe under this offer the benefit of our premium Bible offer. Take notice that this offer is made only to new subscribers. We will make a liberal offer to our present subscribers after awhile. Meantime, let all who are in arrears pay up, so no one who is in arrears can get the benefit of any of our special offers. Let all our preachers make this offer known to our people at once. We will send a sample Bible for use in canvassing to those who desire it. We will also send sample copies of the ADVOCATE on request.

The great favor in which Ayer's Pills are held all over the world has been well earned. They are easy and even pleasant to take, and for all complaints of the stomach, liver, and bowels, are the safest and most thorough medicine in pharmacy. Every dose effective.

To Preachers.

To the preacher who sends the largest number of new cash subscribers between now and the first of July we will present either an Arlington B Sewing Machine or a gold-filled watch guaranteed to be a perfect time keeper and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, whichever one may be preferred. To the preacher sending the next largest number and also to the one sending the third largest number we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, latest edition, with modern additions.

Should the successful contestant prefer it, we will pay him cash instead of the premium.

Under this offer no commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Those who wish to compete for these premiums should notify us at once.

Attention.

Dear Brethren of the Durant District, North Mississippi Conference:

You will see in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE a program of "The Preachers' Meeting" for Durant district, May 5 and 6, at McCool. Let all the preachers make it a point to be present with carefully prepared papers on subjects assigned them. We have not assigned the local preachers and laymen of the district subjects, for the reason that we did not know who of them could be present, but we very much desire that as many of them attend as possible, and that they come prepared to take part in the discussion of the subjects.

We also desire at this time to have a District Epworth League Conference. We have but few Leagues in the district, but let all the pastors get as many of their churches represented as possible, and we hope to arouse an interest in the League at this time that will result in the organization of many Leagues.

Brethren, please give attention to this notice and do your best to get an attendance. Any member of the Methodist Church in good standing will be recognized as a delegate who may attend.

All the preachers next to the river are in the middle of an inland sea—all that did not flee to the hills. I don't hear from any of them, but know they are safe. Water in my back yard is about 8 feet deep. We have one inch to spare before it is in the floor. There are now seven gaps in the Mississippi side. No mortal can describe the fearful destruction that has been wrought, but we expect God to come out of it all in the end. I have not seen an ADVOCATE in three weeks. About the only communication we have with the outside world are the messages we send through the skies. We hear from up there. Cyclones, fires, famines, all combined, are not much worse than the ceaseless roaring of waters that roll before your front door and laugh and mock as you strive to drive them back. This is a heroic people—some of the noblest on earth. We will get out of all this by the help of God.

A Chance to Make Money.

I have made $1,640 clear money in 87 days and attended to my household duties besides, and I think this is doing splendid for a woman inexperienced in business. Anyone can sell what everyone wants to buy, and every family wants a dish washer. I don't canvass at all; people come or send for the washer and every washer that goes out sells two or three more, as they do the work to perfection. You can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes. I am going to devote my whole time to this business now, and I am sure I can clear $5,000 this year. My sister and brother have started in the business, and are doing splendid. You can get complete instructions and hundreds of testimonials by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., Dep't A 5, Sta. A, Pittsburg, Pa., and if you don't make lots of money, it's your own fault, as they will pay you a salary or commission.

For Indigestion

Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

DR. PATRICK BOOTH, Oxford, N. C., says: "I have frequently prescribed it in appropriate cases of indigestion, with great satisfaction."

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

To Subscribers.

In remitting do not send us a check on your local bank. It is very expensive to us to collect these. Send by postoffice order, or express order, or registered letter, or by check on or draft on New Orleans.

Love him. Yes, and let him know
That you love him, ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead?

If you see the hot tears falling
From a brother's weeping eyes,
Share them; and by kindly sharing
Own your friendship with the skies.
Why should any one be glad
When a brother's heart is sad?

If your work is made more easy
By a friendly, helping hand,
Say so. Speak out bravely, truly,
Ere the darkness veil the land;
Should a brother workman dear
Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness,
All enriching as you go—
Leave them. Trust the Harvest Giver,
He will make each seed to grow;
So, until its happy end,
Your life shall never lack a friend.

Beecher on Ingersoll.

Mr. Beecher has now gone to his rest. The way was long for him, and often very rough. But he trod his path with a buoyant step and far-looking eyes. Great, natural, faulty, beloved, he has gone now, but his words remain. Perhaps Col. Ingersoll and those who were with him will long remember the following selected incident:

Col. Ingersoll was thrown one day into the society of Henry Ward Beecher. There were four or five gentlemen present, all of whom were prominent in the world of brains. A variety of topics were discussed with decided brilliancy, but no allusion to religion. The distinguished infidel was, of course, too polite to introduce the subject himself, but one of the party finally, desiring to see a tilt between Bob and Beecher, made a playful remark about Col. Ingersoll's idiosyncracy, as he termed it. The Colonel at once defended his views in his usual apt rhetoric; in fact, he waxed eloquent. He was replied to by several gentlemen in very effective repartee. Contrary to the expectations of all, Mr. Beecher remained an abstracted listener, and said not a word. The gentleman who introduced the topic with hope that Mr. Beecher would answer Col. Ingersoll, at last remarked:

"Mr. Beecher, have you nothing to say on this question?"

The old man slowly lifted himself from his attitude and replied:

"Nothing. In fact, if you will excuse me for changing the conversation, I will say that while you gentlemen were talking, my mind was bent on a most deplorable spectacle which I witnessed to-day."

"What was it?" at once inquired Col. Ingersoll, who, notwithstanding his peculiar views of the hereafter, is noted for his kindness of heart.

"Why," said Mr. Beecher, "as I was walking down town to-day I saw a poor lame man with crutches slowly and carefully picking his way through a cesspool of mud in the endeavor to cross the street. He had just reached the middle of the filth when a big, burly ruffian, himself all bespatted, rushed up to him, jerked the crutches from under the unfortunate man, and left him sprawling and helpless in the pool of liquid dirt, which almost engulfed him."

"What a brute he was!" said the Colonel.

"What a brute he was," they all echoed.

"Yes," said the old man, rising from his chair and brushing back his long white hair, while his eyes glittered with their old-time fire as he bent them on Ingersoll—"yes, Col. Ingersoll, and you are the man. The human soul is lame, but Christianity gives it crutches to enable it to pass the highway of life. It is your teachings that knock these crutches from under it and leave it a helpless and rudderless wreck in the slough of despond. If robbing the human soul of its only support on this earth—religion—be your profession, why, ply it to your heart's content. It requires an architect to erect a building: an incendiary may reduce it to ashes."

The old man sat down, and silence brooded over the scene. Col. Ingersoll found that he had a master in his own power of illustration and said nothing. The company took their hats and departed.—Religious Intelligencer.

"I have been driven many times to my knees by the overwhelming conviction that I had nowhere else to go. My own wisdom and that of all about me seemed insufficient for that day.—Abraham Lincoln.

A Plan in Life.

No great thing is ever accomplished without planning. There must be an end proposed and the proper steps taken to attain it. He who would build a tower must sit down and count the cost; and before he can count the cost he must consider what kind of a tower he is to build and how large it is to be, that he may be able to count the cost thereof.

There are persons who simply plan for the present day, or for the present week. The work that suits them best is the work that will bring them the most money in their hands to-day; the future they do not concern themselves with. Others plan differently; they are thinking of to-morrow, and the day after; of years and years to come. Some, in matters of health, plan for what will give them pleasure and vigor to-day, but in doing this they overlook the years of weakness, infirmity, and pain that may result from imprudence, from evil habits, from neglect.

There are people of good natural ability who waste their lives in doing work far inferior to that which they might have done, simply because they made no plans for the future, but drifted along from day to day, doing the thing which pleased them or paid them best to-day, without regard to training, qualifications, or final results.

The man who plans his life work wisely and makes his energies bend to its accomplishment, is likely to accomplish very much more than the man who simply drifts without chart or compass, carried, no one knows where, by shifting winds, by eddying currents, and heaving tides. It is not certain that we shall ever be able to carry out the plans which we form, and we are to have our plans in subservience and subjection to the will of the living God. Often the plan of life is made on high, and our ways are not as God's ways, nor are our thoughts as his thoughts. We plan in one direction, he plans in another, and we are to accept his plan, and meekly await his will.

When Mr. Spurgeon was a young man, and came to a house where he was to meet Dr. Angus, and arrange with reference to going through college, a blundering servant girl showed one visitor into one room and the other into another, where they both waited until they were weary, and went away without seeing each other. But as Mr. Spurgeon was walking away there came to him this word, "Seekest thou great things for thyself, seek them not." From that time he abandoned the plans which he had formed, and fell into the plan which God had formed for him, and doubtless accomplished tenfold more than he would have done had he adhered to his own plan and preference. The Lord has places in his work for men of highest culture. He always has use for the Galilean fisherman like Peter, and for the tinker like John Bunyan. So God may have a plan for your life, and if you are willing to be his instrument, his servant, his follower, he will guide you with his eye. And if you find yourself unable to plan in your own behalf, and simply do the work of the day with a glad and diligent heart, you will find day by day your work opening before you, your path growing plain; and there will dawn upon you by degrees the understanding of the will of the Lord, and the opening of the path of duty, by following where you may be a worker together with God, and may accomplish far more than would be possible for you to accomplish working upon any plan of your own.

The first great requisite is faithfulness and obedience, and if we have absolute fidelity to God and steadfast faith in him, then those who are faithful over a few things will be made rulers over many things, when the Lord shall come to reckon with his servants.—The Armory.

What do we live for, if it is not to make life less difficult for each other?—George Eliot.

Strengthening the Memory.

How to strengthen the memory is an interesting question. I think the best way is to use it steadily, making it serve you by giving it definite facts and events to carry, as a pack horse might on a journey. There are many phases of the problem, some people finding that they can not fix dates in their minds, others forgetting the faces and names of friends, and others still having great trouble in committing anything by rote. Devices of rhymes and associations help some persons, and others simply depend on memoranda, and do not tax their memories at all. As a rule, the more we give the memory to do, however, the more quickly and faithfully it will respond to our wishes. In little children memory is very retentive, because their minds are at the stage when impressions are easily made; you know the lines which says that in childhood our minds are "wax to receive, and marble to retain." So that we should be very careful indeed about what we say, what we do, and what we teach, where the dear little ones are concerned.

Some girls have a great deal of trouble in remembering the rules of syntax, the Latin conjugations, and the pages of history which the teacher requires to be recited exactly as they are in the book. Try the method of studying aloud. Go away by yourself to commit your lessons to memory, and then, over and over, slowly, carefully, with your mind and attention fixed on what you are doing, read phrases, sentences, and formulas over and over, and over and over, and by-and-by you will have them by heart. I have often done this when I have wished to learn a hymn or a poem, and I know that hearing what one is studying assists the mere seeing. Then, having other people in the room, talking and laughing, is very distracting to the attention. Try my method, and report results.—Harper's Round Table.

Sir Matthew Hale.

Sir Matthew Hale, the well-known Lord Chief Justice, long ago uttered some weighty sentiments: "I have by long and sound experience found that the due observance of the Sabbath and of the duties of it has been of great advantage to me. As God Almighty is the Lord of our time and lends it to us, and as it is but just we should consecrate this part of that time to him, so I have found, by a strict and diligent observation, that a due observance of this day hath ever had joined to it a blessing upon the rest of my time, and the week that hath been so begun hath been blessed and prosperous to me. And on the other side, when I had been negligent of this day, the rest of the week has been unhappy and unsuccessful to my own secular employments."

It is a good thing to keep one's temper in control. It is a sad thing to have no temper to keep in control. Some men are disturbed because they are disturbed. They regret their temptation to get angry; whereas they would be worth a great deal less in the world if they couldn't get angry. Unless they were temptable, they would be neither admirable nor efficient. Thank God if you have a quick, strong temper; and pray God to enable you to keep it in due check, and use it wisely.—Central Methodist.

Even the death of friends will inspire us as much as their lives. They will leave consolation to the mourners, as the rich leave money to defray the expenses of their funerals, and their memories will be incrusted over with sublime and pleasing thoughts, as monuments of other men are overgrown with moss.—Henry D. Thoreau.

If we desire our little ones to possess the grace and dignity that lend to manhood and womanhood their peculiar charm, we must begin their training in early youth. The father who touches his hat to his little daughter, who steps back and allows her to enter the room first, because she is a lady, says a thoughtful writer, does much to cultivate this manner, for a girl can not be in the habit of receiving and acknowledging such attentions without acquiring the grace which we desire for her, and the influence of it does not stop there. The little girl who is treated with such consideration invariably responds with a loving service which must endear her to her father's heart. What another child must be bidden to do she does spontaneously. Her feet are ready to run, and her hands are ready to work for him, so that courtesy becomes what it should be, not merely a form, but the expression of love itself; and it is the habit of her life. Perhaps the truest gentleman that I ever knew brought up his daughter by the same standard of manly honor that he did his son. Did he hear her retailing some bit of foolish gossip, "A lady never tells tales," would be his grave rebuke. Did she bump her head or pinch her chubby finger, her refuge was his arms; but his word was: "Courage, my soldier!" And sometimes when she had resisted a sharp temptation or acted with spirit and decision in a sudden crisis, he would say proudly: "That was done like a lady. Allow me to shake hands." Kisses were for every day. She was sure of his affection, and such a training naturally developed many beautiful traits of character which, added to true piety, made of her a charming Christian woman.—Christian Herald.

It is not the strongest point in a man that makes him strongest: it is his knowledge of his weakest point that makes him strong. The strength of a chain is not found in the strongest link, but in the weakest link of the chain.—Rev. R. B. Whitehead.

HYGIENE.

Colds and the Open Air.

Colds are caught more frequently by being in rooms, of which the temperature is not too high, than where it is not high enough. Both are bad, but the former is the greater evil. Halls, Sunday school-rooms, churches and crowded apartments, in general, are often too warm. Seventy degrees is sufficiently warm for anyone. Better to have it a few degrees lower than to have it higher.

In passing from a warm room into the open air the body should be kept as nearly as possible at the same temperature, either by active exercise, or by putting on extra clothing. School children should be taught this by every teacher. To let them run out from a heated room, without any extra clothing on, and heads uncovered, is suicidal. The mouth should be kept tightly shut when passing from a warm room into cold air.

Children are killed, by the hundreds of thousands, every year, by parents and teachers. Herod killed several hundred children in trying to find the Babe of Bethlehem, nineteen centuries ago. We denounce him as a great sinner, and yet the American people, who kill off their children by the scores of thousands, annually, are saints and go to church and Sunday-school, and pray most beautifully, and sing the songs of Zion most pathetically. Children are sent to school with feeble, nervous constitutions, at the age of six, when they should be out in the open air, romping and playing and getting all the health they can. They should not be confined to school a single day before they are eight or nine. They are urged on by ambitious parents and teachers to wade through problems in arithmetic and even grammar before they are ten, when they should have nothing but oral exercises and reading. These children, hot house plants, forced in their mental growth, soon droop, fail in health and die, while the dull ones, who have their out-door amusements and skipped school, become the useful men and women, because they have the bodily health and vigor.—National Educator.

OBITUARIES.

WILLIAMS—Clayton Oliver Williams, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Williams, was born at Arcola, Miss., Oct. 28, 1895, and died March 5, 1897.

On Tuesday, March 2, his nurse, a negro girl twelve years of age, became angered from some cause, and, by force, dosed the child with boiling water, from the effects of which it died as above stated. Two physicians did all within the power of medical skill to relieve it, but of no avail. Its suffering was intense, though I never saw anyone bear pain with a greater degree of fortitude. Its patience was marvelous for a child. Clayton was indeed a beautiful and exceptionally bright child. He was so manly, and yet so affectionate, that everyone who knew him admired him. He excited in them a feeling of interest and admiration. The entire community feels the loss. The funeral was conducted in the Methodist Church. At the close of the service there were not many dry eyes in the audience. The cortege was the largest I have seen for many years. The parents and grandmother are completely crushed. Had their baby sickened and died, they could have more easily borne the affliction. It is a wound too deep to be reached by human condolence and sympathy; so we would point the bereaved and sorrowing to Him who wept at the grave of Lazarus and knows all the sorrows of the heart. You have another rich treasure in heaven. Your darling waits at the beautiful gate to welcome you home. May it be your happy lot one day to join those above, and thus make an unbroken family in the kingdom of our God is the prayer of your pastor,

MONTGOMERY—Mrs Polly Ann Montgomery died Jan. 22, 1897, in the home of her brother, Dr. J Y Murry, in Ripley. She had lived here since 1841. She was in her eighty-second year; born in Lincoln county, Tenn. She was twice married—first to Berry Roberts, in McNairy county, Tenn., in 1832; second to Major H. Montgomery, of Tippah county, Miss., in 1839. Her first husband died in Ripley in 1836. She had three children, one of whom, Mrs. Sallie Wilkins, survives her, living in Arkansas. She joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at the age of sixteen. All her life thereafter was that of an humble, trusting, sweet-spirited Christian character. She joined the Methodist Church in 1893. One of her chief characteristics was trying to make others happy. The cost of self-abnegation necessary to do this seemed never to have been considered. She loved God, and rejoiced in the success of his church. She was noted for her industry, modesty, and total appreciation, fondness for her relatives and friends, and her steadiness of purpose to live in the "prepared place" forever.

Her memory is precious and valuable to us. God bless those who were so very kind and attentive, ever deeming it a special privilege to watch, to wait, to do for her through the many days she lingered on the margin of the "stream."

J. M. Wyatt.

Ripley Miss.

GERALD Sister Nancy Gerald went to her reward Feb. 26, 1897, after an illness of one month. She was a model Christian. I have known few that were more devoted to God and the church. She was born Sept 26, 1836, and lived to be sixty years old. She was converted early in life and joined the Methodist Church. It was her delight to talk on religious subjects, and especially Christian experience. She took great interest in the sick, always administering to their wants when she could. She always had a word of comfort for those that were sorrowing, and good advice for those that were out of the way.

I do not know the date of her marriage, but will say she was married when young. She has given ten children, eight of which are still living, and all are religious. She had a son who was a Methodist preacher.

Sister Gerald was a good wife and an affectionate mother. May God bless the children, and as the mother is resting sweetly in Jesus, may their last end be like unto hers!

We will miss Sister Gerald at church, and the prayer and testimony meetings, but the will of God be done.

HYATT—Action of the Board of Stewards on the death of Capt C. J. Hyatt, second Quarterly Conference, March 7, 1897:

Whereas, in the providence of God our beloved brother and fellow-laborer, Capt. C J Hyatt, has been suddenly and unexpectedly called to try the realities of another mode of existence, we, as a Board of Stewards, desire to give expression of our feelings in this sudden bereavement, realizing that we have not only lost a brother, friend, and close neighbor, but one of our main stays in the church and community; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we bow with humble submission to this dispensation of God's providence, being assured in our hearts that "he doeth all things well."

Resolved, That in the loss of our brother as bereaved of a wise counselor as a ward, the church one of its main pillars, Sunday-school a faithful teacher, and the community one of its leading citizens.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the Minutes, and a copy furnished the Vidette, the Nashville and New Orleans Christian Advocates for publication.

Geo. P. Hammerly,
Secretary and Recording Steward.

ANDERS—Mrs. Binnie R. Anders (nee Chappell, was born Aug. 4, 1874; professed conversion and joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of thirteen years, living a faithful Christian life to its close, which occurred Feb. 7, 1897.

Her religion consisted not simply in a profession—not a form of godliness and a denial of the power—but was a living reality. Such was her life and influence within the circle in which she moved that she drew her associates toward her—made friends and retained them. The extinction of such a life is a great affliction to any community that may be so unfortunate as to have such an experience.

May the blessed Comforter sustain the stricken father, mother and husband, and save the precious babe!

J H. Brown, Pastor.

RODDY—Irene May, infant daughter of Bro. T. J. and Sister Alice Roddy, died at the home of her parents in South Vicksburg, March 18, 1897, aged five months and five days.

The messenger of death came very unexpectedly. There was no warning till late in the evening, but the morning's sun found the sweet little flower of the home withered and dead.

As God gathers the jewels home our treasures in heaven are more and more. May the memory of this brief, pure life ever linger as a tie to bind the parents to the home of the innocent and the good!

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscribers for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2 35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3 15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.15.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to April, '98. (A little later it will be May, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

MARRIAGES.

BEARDSLEE—MERRELL.—At the Methodist Church in Moss Point, Miss., April 8, 1897, at 8 P. M., by Dr. Wm. T. Beall, L. E., Mr. Jos. Beardslee, Jr., and Miss Edna F. Merrell, all of Moss Point, Miss.

HARRIS—WILLIAMS.—At the residence of the bride's mother, in Shuqualak, Miss., April 4, 1897, by Rev. M. E. Tumlin, Mr. C. R. Harris, of Meridian, Miss., to Miss Lida Williams.

RAFFERTY—WALKER.—In the Methodist Church, Canton, Miss., April 7, 1897, by Rev. T. L. Mellen, Mr. Charles F. Rafferty, of Andrew, Ind., and Miss Myra E. Walker, of Madison county, Miss.

ALLMAN—FAIRLEY.—At the residence of the bride's parents, near Cross Roads, Jackson county, Miss., April 7, 1897, by Rev. J. L. Jordan, Mr. M. H. Allman to Miss Ida Fairley.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, of the North Mississippi Conference, writes: "The sewing machine is entirely satisfactory in every way. It is as good as the $65 machines sold in this community."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A crevasse occurred at Davis Island, Miss., on April 12. This island is situated in Warren county.

The citizens of Cambridge, Mass., are talking about celebrating the tenth anniversary of the town's exemption from the liquor saloon, which will soon occur.

The Connecticut Senate has passed a bill to compel town officers to display the national flag on all school buildings. The penalty for infringement is placed at $10.

The north-bound Florida special of the Southern Railway and a local south-bound passenger train collided on April 11, at Harrisburg N. C., killing three passengers and wounding six.

Mrs. Leland Stanford, of San Francisco, insured her life for $1,000,000. This is probably the largest policy ever written. The money will go to the Leland Stanford University on her death.

The Louisiana levees are being maintained by the brave and indefatigable people, despite the storms which have for weeks, with intermissions of only a few days, swept over the Mississippi Valley.

The finest block of business houses in Knoxville, Tenn., was destroyed by fire on April 8. The property losses will aggregate $1,600,000. Three men were burned to death, and several others are reported as missing.

Everybody has a good word for Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Its fame is world-wide.

WHITE LEAD is like a great many other articles offered for sale; some good, some bad. (See list of the brands which are genuine, or good.) They are made by the "old Dutch" process of slow corrosion. Avoid getting the other sort by making sure of the brand.

FREE By using National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, any desired shade is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

National Lead Co., 1 Broadway, New York.

The river continues to rise along the Louisiana front, from Arkansas City, which is just above the Louisiana State line, down to its mouth. The greatest rise was at Vicksburg, where the river is being re-enforced by the overflow water which went through the crevasses in the Mississippi Delta levee front, and thence to the Yazoo river, through which it is returning to the Mississippi at Vicksburg.

Last week the new battle-ship "Iowa," the largest of the battleships yet built for the United States Navy, was given her official speed trial over the government course, in the neighborhood of Boston. The trial proved that the ship more than met all the requirements of the contract under which she was built for the government. The "Iowa" is a sea-going battle-ship of 11,500 tons displacement.

The Agricultural Department at Washington has been figuring up the damage caused by the flood. The estimates are made up to April 6. The total area under water at the date mentioned was given at 15 800 square miles, of which about 8000 square miles of territory was in Mississippi, 4500 in Arkansas, 1750 in Missouri, 1200 in Tennessee and a small amount in Louisiana. It is estimated that the flooded district contains 39 500 farms. The total value of these farms, distributed in four States, is put at $65,000 000. The live stock on these farms reached a value of $7 500,000, with farm products on hand to the amount of $3,750,000 more.

FOREIGN.

It is said that an increase of territory has been promised King George of Greece if he will submit to the powers in the Cretan affair.

Bands of Greek brigands have crossed the border into Macedonia, and one day last week resisted the Turks in a fight which lasted all day.

It is said that 10,803 rebels in the Philippine Islands have surrendered to Spain. Aside from a few marauders in the province of Nueva Ecija, the remainder of the island is quiet. This surrender is regarded as practically settling the rebellion.

No stands are to be erected in the public parks of London during the approaching diamond jubilee commemoration. It is said that the government has refused an offer of $350,000 for the privilege of erecting a stand in the Green Park, facing Piccadilly.

Lady Henry Somerset has cabled Miss Frances Willard, president of the W. C. T. U., asking that $1,500 be spent for White Ribbon nurses in Crete, as the need there is urgent, and enough money has been sent in to support the Armenian orphans for three years.

If the accounts received from Macedonia prove correct, Europe is now on the eve of the most serious conflict since the termination of the Turco Russian war of 1877. For weeks past the relations between Turkey and Greece have been exceedingly strained, and it has been the restraining influence of the combined action of the great powers alone which has so far prevented an outbreak of hostilities.

Think of getting such a paper as the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for $1, with the privilege of our premium offers. See offer on fifth page.

Open Letter to Rev. J. M. Beard, Editor of the Pentecostal Age.

DEAR BROTHER: Consulting my references, I should have excused myself from addressing you in this public way, but your conduct in intruding yourself upon me and my people, and the preachers of the Seashore district, has been so unseemly and reprehensible that to be silent longer is not indicated by the proprieties of the case. Some plain words are hereby placed before you and the church at large.

Your recent excursion into the Seashore district, so far from being in any way creditable to you, has had the effect of depreciating you in the minds of church-loving and God-honoring people. I dare say there is not a bona-fide Methodist within the entire district who endorses your action.

You have effectually fastened the conviction that you are without regard for the limitations and restrictions of your place in the church as a local preacher.

You have shown distinctively your anarchical disposition in that you defy the law, order, and discipline of the church at whose altars you have pledged implicit and undeviating obedience.

You have shown yourself sadly lacking in your appreciation of the vows which you voluntarily assumed, to be subject to the discipline of the church, attend upon its ordinances, and support its institutions."

Your attitude to the public assumes that you occupy a place in the church, authoritatively, which gives you a carte-blanche privilege on any line where you may please to go and hold religious services in the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church (South).

You assume the right to enter any pastoral charge, in any district, in any Annual Conference bounds, appoint and hold protracted meetings without the knowledge or consent of the preacher in charge, presiding elder or anybody else, thereby assuming to yourself a largeness of liberty, peculiarly your own, which would not be indulged by any Bishop or connectional officer in the entire church.

Another thing your attention must be called to: You place your own private business enterprise before the people where you go, as though you had authority under the appointing power of the church to publish a paper and, therefore, have a right to expect the church to sustain you.

Who authorized you to publish a paper for the edification of the people called Methodist? Has any Annual Conference ordered the publication of the paper of which you are the sole custodian and proprietor? Has any Methodist Bishop discovered in you peculiar fitness for the office, and appointed you to the editorship of a paper? If not, why assume so much to yourself, and overlook all the proprieties of your inferior and self-appointed place by appealing to Methodist people to rally to you and sustain you in your staggering venture to supplant the organ of our Conference, which is entitled by every consideration of right, merit, and loyalty to the patronage of our people?

I wish to call your attention to another gross impropriety: You descend to the point of abject, humiliating compromise of the principle of moral right when you attempt to extort from the people, by public appeal and the inevitable collection, the money which is necessary to bring success to you in your doubtful business venture which is altogether your own private affair.

Your recent coming into my territory has shown you capable of misleading your brethren. You assured me in the presence of Rev. I. L. Peebles, in Hattiesburg, Miss., that your prosecuce within the bounds of my district was incidental and not designed. The facts in the case clearly prove the opposite of this statement to be true.

Your visit to McHenry, Miss., was prearranged between you and D. C. Rawls, he going in advance of you to herald your coming. Here you commenced a meeting without the knowledge or consent of our pastor, Rev. Thos. W. Brown, and that, too, on the eve of our Quarterly Conference occasion, which had been announced both in the columns of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and from the pulpit by the pastor. Fearing the consequences of such an act of bravado, you brought your service to a close.

Not content with this expression of contempt for the authorities of the church, you proceeded to Hattiesburg, Miss., where we have a stationed preacher, and which is the residence of the presiding elder of the district, and without meeting or consulting with either as to the situation, and as to whether your services were desired, you took the matter in your own hands and had posters scattered over the town announcing a meeting to begin and continue several days in a hired hall. The pastor immediately sought an interview with you, and besought you in a most brotherly manner not to interfere with him in his work. You paid no attention to his appeals, but went on with your service. When you were called upon next morning by Bro. Peebles and myself, you were still non-committal, and not until the alternity of desisting or going before a committee confronted you did you intimate what you proposed to do. You made the impression on the mind of Bro. Peebles and myself that you were here incidentally and undesignedly, and that you, of course, did not propose any further molestation. Instead of going on and doing something purposely (?) and designedly, you incidentally, accidentally turned up in another part of my district.

Now, in conclusion, I have this to say with reference to your movements: If you regard your course as manly, honorable, fraternal, loyal, or Christly, you need to be treated for more diseases than one. If the second blessing does for people what you claim that it does, you have demonstrated the fact most unequivocally that you are not a beneficiary. I shall have to insist on you staying out of my territory.

Bishop Hendrix and the presiding elders, after much prayer and solicitude, supplied the Seashore district with all the preachers that were thought to be needed to meet the demands in this territory, and you were not appointed; neither are your services needed or desired.

Hoping that you will read this letter and profit thereby, I am,

Yours for the church,

C. A. POWELL.

The "Whosoever Will" Rescue Mission New Orleans, La.

If anyone wants a practical demonstration and refreshing evidence of what can be accomplished in this, our day and generation, by simply taking God at his word and going ahead, he will be interested in the history of Bro. Haag's Rescue Mission. Its first annual report refers to it as a "veritable gospel romance." We would say that at times the story almost reaches the level of an heroic epic. Indeed, one feels that these workers of the slums—faithful, humble, of fiery zeal—are working out by God's grace new and up-to date chapters of apostolic acts.

MR. J. H. HAAG,
FOUNDER AND SUPERINTENDENT

Bro. Haag's conversion was not only genuine, but overpowering. The change was an astounding one. To his amazed friends it seemed to border on the grotesque. Imagine the young man, who had been steeped in the pleasures of a man of the world, and addicted to every form of self-indulgence, put in his appearance all of a sudden at his relatives' residences, Bible in hand, inaugurating spontaneous prayer meetings. Naturally, everybody felt alarmed and distressed: the young man, intense, high-strung, whose lines of character were in no manner drawn on a commonplace pattern, had evidently lapsed into temporary insanity; no doubt, he would soon recover; still, the business was deplorable. Instead of calming down, however, the flame of the young convert's zeal leaped daily into larger dimensions. Uncompromisingly, he plunged into publicity. Bro. Haag knew nothing about mission work, but forthwith betook himself to the slums of the city, rented a three-story house opposite a notorious resort, and opened a mission. His intention was to make it everybody's spiritual and temporal home, who was outcast, shipwrecked, and despairing of happiness and hope. Henceforth in the city of New Orleans there should be neither man, woman or child forced to echo the Psalmist's awful words: "No man careth for my soul." The mission was to extend the gospel invitation in its broadest, deepest, most literal and practical significance to whosoever would listen to it.

Then the fight begun in earnest. Friends doubted, foes sneered, slandered, and persecuted. The work continued, prospered, and grew. Devoted friends, men of downright gospel pluck and saintly women, gathered about the young missionary, advised, supported, and encouraged him. The writer's intimate acquaintance with the mission dates only two months back, and he is thus barred from giving a complete record of the names and deeds of the workers from the earliest day. So deeply, however, does he feel impressed with the fact that gospel history is being made at the Bienville Street Mission, that he would name here some of these self denying men and women. Mr. Ben H. Green has been identified with the work for nine months. Converted at the mission, to him it has become a special means of grace, a help to develop a deeply spiritual nature. Bro. Green has done excellent service in the arduous position of assistant superintendent. He has proved himself a man of whole-souled earnestness and unselfish devotion. In this place it is as well to remark that salaries are diametrically opposed to the Rescue Mission's policy. There is a fine chance for hustling work in its several departments, from executive oversight and gospel preaching down to floor scrubbing and dish washing. Plain food and modest clothing are cheerfully furnished as the Lord provides; spiritual blessings are paid on sight, to all prayerful demand, in heavenly currency; but salaried service is neither sought nor given. That stanch believer in God's Word, in doctrine and practice, Mrs. Monnet, has been an unflinching ally, friend and helper since the earliest day of the mission. Another mainstay God sent in Mrs. Elizabeth Booth Barr, wielding the powerful influence of a womanly woman, of strong character, unconditional consecration, and a deeply spiritual nature. Miss Carrie Clark will be remembered by many a poor, friendless one, as well as by her Sunday-school class. She is one of the most competent, forceful and magnetic Bible class teachers we have ever met. Mrs. J. H. Haag, whom the "boys" (some of them grey-headed) claim as their mission mother, like her husband, has given her all in all to the work, adding to it the infinite charm of an exquisite personality. Miss Emily Keller's sympathetic voice is frequently heard in solos at the mission, never failing to provoke the stormy delight of its habitues, and visibly touching the latent tenderness stored behind many an unpromising or forbidding exterior. Capt. N. Briggs and his estimable wife are also stand-bys. Bros. Demuth, Vail and others are valued helpers.

The mission no longer is a venture and an experiment. It stands an accomplished fact, crowned with spiritual success and a glorious record of good achieved. During the past year it has sheltered over 30,000 men, has dispensed 15,000 meals, and has clothed 5,000 men. There have been held 375 night meetings, 140 noon meetings, 60 outdoor meetings at the levee. Midnight meetings have been inaugurated in the heart of the most sin cursed district of the city. All in all, 80,000 men and women have been reached through the mission hall; 4,000 have gone up to the penitents' bench to be prayed for and dealt with; over 500 cases are on record of men proving steadfast and true, holding positions in the city and giving satisfaction to their employers. Outdoor relief has been granted to hundreds after personal investigation of each individual case.

The policy, methods, and running machinery of the mission—inevitable in a spiritual enterprise grappling with material sin and suffering—are clearly and definitely established on no uncertain lines. Bro. Haag believes that the poor must be helped, in order that they may be enabled to help themselves. He does no more believe in sentimental dilly dallying than the severest sociologist of Josiah Flyut's school. He would not pauperize the workingman, nor pamper the poor. But, still more: Bro. Haag would not set up a cult of pagan indifferentism. He would not subscribe to the doctrine of laissez faire that has branded the brow of every Cain since Abel's death. This young rescue missionary would shout the message of the Christ-love into the ear of every unfortunate, shipwrecked and despairing one in this great city, and he would back it up with such material help as may be called for by dire need in each particular case. Practical common sense unquestionably is one of Bro. Haag's prominent gifts, and he certainly does exercise it in painstaking scrutiny in dealing with the motley crowds that flock to him.

And, oh! the pitiable want one encounters. There are men who, without aid, must go hopelessly down; who, with a little assistance, can be saved—restored to respectability and usefulness on earth, set with their faces towards heaven. There are women who turn with shuddering form and hearts wrung by anguish from the den of sin, who would fain slip from the meshes of accursed vice. After praying and pleading with them, it is a bitter pill to send them back into sin with the cool information that for them there is no shelter, no door of refuge, no city of escape. No wonder information of this kind drove one poor repentant girl to end her life by poison. Bro. Haag feels that he must at once open a Woman's Home, trusting in God for its support. In his first annual prospectus just printed (sent to any address on application) the cry goes forth, "Men of Israel, help!"

Most generously some have given during the past year; still the balance sheet shows a heavy deficit, and the contributions seem to be limited to a number all too small. In the name of our common Savior, whose blessed will was never followed more plainly, more earnestly, more devotedly, than in these enterprises, we ask everyone whose eyes fall on these lines to consider the splendid privilege, the grave duty here extended to him. Brother, sister, you are your brother's keeper. Go to our Father and ask him, and as he bids you, so do. "And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily, I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it to one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." (Matt. xxv, 40.) D. D. H.

Bro. Haag makes a special appeal for cast off clothing for men, women, and children. He pays gladly the expressage on any package sent to him. His address is P. O. Box 1077; No. 608 Bienville street.

Selections.

The mountain was as full of the chariots of fire when the prophet's servant did not perceive them as when he did. Christ was just as much present with the disciples when their eyes were holden as when they were open. God speaks with men as truly to day as in the time of Abraham. Theodore Parker says that he was but about five or six years of age when his hand was arrested as he was about to strike a tortoise, and a voice within said, "Don't; that is wrong." When he asked his mother the meaning of it, she told him that it was the voice of God in his soul. It is because our minds are preoccupied with other matters that we fail to perceive God. Like the man with the muckrake, we fail to see the angel by our side. Blessed is the man who, as he goes about his daily business, can see God in trees and flowers and running brooks, present in every moment of time and every event of experience, working out his own loving purposes. The Psalmist recognized, as men of faith will always recognize, that temptations and opportunities, sufferings and joys, are matters of God's ordering. He therefore lives in constant relationship with God. His language is, "The Lord my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom I will trust; my buckler, and the horn of my salvation, and my high tower." —Expository Times.

There is enough in the composition of both Houses of Congress to give a sharp point to the story of the little boy who once asked his father why a chaplain was employed to pray for the members. "He does not pray for Congress," was the astute reply of the father. "He takes a look at Congress, and then prays for the country."—Exchange.

There are souls in the world who have the gift of finding joy everywhere, and leaving it behind them when they go. Their influence is an inevitable gladdening of the heart. They give light without meaning to shine. Their bright hearts have a great work to do for God.—F. W. Faber.

HOW TO LIVE.

BY HORATIUS BONAR.

He liveth long who liveth well!
All other life is short and vain.
He liveth longest who can tell
Of living most for heavenly gain

He liveth long who liveth well!
All else is life but flung away;
He liveth longest who can tell
Of true things truly done each day.

Waste not thy being back to Him
Who freely gave it freely give;
Else is that being but a dream.
'Tis but to be, and not to live.

Be what thou seemest; live thy creed
Hold up to earth the torch divine
Be what thou prayest to be made,
Let the great Master's steps be thine

Fill up each hour with what will last.
Buy up the moments as they go.
The life above, when this is past,
Is the ripe fruit of life below.

Sow truth if thou the truth wouldst reap;
Who sows the false shall reap the vain;
Erect and sound thy conscience keep;
From hollow words and deeds refrain.

Sow love, and taste its fruitage pure,
Sow peace, and reap its harvest bright;
Sow sunbeams on the rock and moor,
And reap a harvest home of light.

Missions.

It is impossible to awake the church to a live sense of her obligation toward the mission cause without first bringing to bear upon each individual member such missionary intelligence as will cause each one to realize his personal duty. Mere information is of no value unless it be of such a character as will obtain this required end. The spiritual fervor that marks the church at home toward this great subject can be very properly called the spiritual thermometer of that church. We may be intelligent, and yet be fruitless; we may pray much, and yet accomplish but little; we may give liberally, and yet largely fail of our purpose unless with every prayer and with every gift we make an effort to awake others to the same duty that weighs upon us. Certainly unless with every prayer there is a corresponding effort on the part of the one praying to bring in the kingdom of our Christ, that prayer largely is vain.

The mission and purpose of the minister, then, is to enlist a personal interest in the hearts of each individual member to the extent that not only prayers will be offered, but also with every prayer a corresponding effort will be made. "How to arouse a personal interest in each member to the extent that a personal effort will be made by each member" is the problem the church must solve. And when we take a list of the members who are alive to their duty in this great cause of the church, and compare them to the body of her members, and when we think of the enlarged possibilities and opportunities of the church to-day for entering into still larger fields of spiritual conquest, we see the urgent need of the immediate solution of this problem.

It is a fact no less astounding than true that the great body of the church is devoid of a sense of personal responsibility toward the mission cause. And this is astonishingly true with regard to the younger members of the church. And why is this true? Is it because they have ears deaf to the cries of the perishing millions of heathendom and have hearts that are not moved by the spiritual needs of the spiritually needy? Nay, it is because their co-operative interest has never been personally solicited by those whose duty it is to lead them into larger fields of spiritual conquest. The assessment for foreign and domestic missions is made, and a specified amount is apportioned to each church. So this specified amount of dollars and cents is collected, it matters not from whom, seems to be the supreme thought of the modern pastor. He forgets that the mere collecting of a specified amount of dollars and cents for the cause of missions is by no means an index to the liberality and spirituality of that church as a whole; neither is it the full measure of his duty as a pastor. He has other duties to perform of a more lasting character besides merely raising money. He is to teach, to organize into active bodies of workers, and to enlist the personal interest of each member of his church in the great work of saving souls. Say a man is pastor of a church of 200 members. Say the assessment for missions is $200, which is easily raised. Of these 200 members 50 of them give liberally of their substance to the cause of missions. Has the pastor of this people filled the full measure of his duty toward God and his church by merely collecting the full amount of the assessment from 50 of his members? How great would be the increase of usefulness of that church if the other 150 were led into as active fields of operations as the other 50! Instead of $200 for the cause of missions, a vastly increased sum would be given into the treasury of the Lord's house and a larger degree of spirituality and usefulness would mark that church.

Each member, rich or poor, is under the same binding obligation to give to the cause of Christ in proportion as his means allows, whether it be one dollar or one hundred. Those who are wealthy, and who have generally contributed of their substance to the support of the mission cause, are under no more obligation to give than the poorest member; only they are under obligation to give more, because of their larger ability. When the 50 members meet the entire assessment there is a greater tendency to stop here and report the assessment in full than to secure a small amount from the body of the church who pay nothing. But would it not be better for the body of the church, and would it not be infinitely more nearly a fulfillment of the pastor's obligations as a shepherd of the flock, to secure a small contribution from the many who pay nothing than to sit in quiet satisfaction over the thought that 50 members have met the assessment in full? This custom, long established, of the few able ones carrying the financial burden of the whole church must be done away with before the church attains that glad triumph over the world of sin. And the young men and women who constitute her membership must awaken to the great personal obligation that rests upon them individually ere we shall herald that glad morning of the millennium dawn. The young can only be be quickened to a sense of their personal obligations but by a definite organization. MABRY.

Correspondence.

Ad Nauseam.

BRETHREN OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE: In the ADVOCATE, of the eighth instant, the Conference Missionary Secretary, in his "Notes of Encouragement," refers to the various charges as more or less "ablaze with missionary zeal," and reports divers and sundry collections to date; but all for the man in foreign fields—none for the patient struggler at home.

In the article, "Missions in the North Mississippi Conference," thirty-one charges are reported as having raised $1,397.75 for foreign missions, while but four charges are reported as having raised $112.50 for domestic missions!

It is a fact worthy of sober reflection that within two months after the adjournment of Conference but $15 was sent to the treasurer for "domestic missions," and both came from charges sustained by that fund.

The Word of God draws no such imaginary line of demarkation through the missionary field. The notion is not divinely, but humanly inspired; and the man that is always talking about the man "in far-away lands among the heathen," and never so much as thinking of the missionary in dark places at home, is in spiritual darkness. The missionary setting out for his field of labor in distant lands, whatever trials await him, that of "finance" is not one of them, for he is assured that a powerful church is behind him, and that his checks will be remitted regularly, even if the church has to borrow the money.

The missionary road out at Conference for Desolation Mission feels no such assurance. The church is not behind him. No money will be borrowed to support him. Perhaps he may be forced to throw up his work in order to engage in some secular calling to support his family. At best, if he can survive until the next Conference, he will get in bulk a part of what was promised to support him.

Turning to page 12 of the Minutes, he reads Resolution No. 2, and wonders if his brethren were "hypnotized" when they voted to take the "missionary collections early, and strive to secure every dollar in cash and subscriptions during the first quarter." He would not for an instant permit the indulgence of the reflection that a Methodist preacher could lack consecration to the cause of the Master, be wanting in brotherly love, or, still less, be lacking in a proper sense of moral obligation!

To raise money to supply the wants of the worn-out soldier of Christ, to educate the coming preacher, to build churches, to furnish Bibles to the needy, to sustain the man working in the deserted and dark corners of our own land—each and all of these is as fully important as the support of the man whose lot it is to be "sent across the water."

The Rev. Timothy Simpkins may see himself wasted to a shadow while laboring for souls on Desolation Mission; but let him offer himself for China, or Japan, or Mexico—when, presto, there is a change! In the hearts of his brethren he is at once apotheosized! Listen at the clink of the dollars as they ring on the Conference table! When he returns home from his foreign voyage, mark the ovation! He is no longer plain Timothy Simpkins, but Bro. Simpkins, our missionary from China, etc.

The writer is saying nothing derogatory to the demands of the missionary cause abroad. The church is not doing a hundredth part of what she ought to do in foreign fields, or in home fields, either. The writer is not pessimistic. He is very optimistic. He desires his dilatory brethren to get in motion. Change your monotone of foreign missions, and join with it domestic missions, worn out preachers, church extension, education, Bible cause, etc., and raise the money!

In conclusion, brethren, allow me to commend to your prayerful consideration I. John iii, 17, R. V.: "But whoso hath the world's goods (including quarterage), and beholdeth his brother in need, and shutteth up his compassion from him, how doth the love of God abide in him?"

POIMENOS.

Drouth Sufferers.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to acknowledge receipt of the following amounts contributed for the relief of the drouth sufferers from the readers of the ADVOCATE, all from the State of Mississippi: Mr. W. F. Brahston, $2; Mr. Rowan Thayer, $4.10. From the Christian people of Hookston, Miss.—Mrs. Ada F. Dunbar, 50 cents; Mrs. S. O. Blanks, 25 cents; Mrs. Mittie Ethridge, $1; Mrs. Mary A. Armstrong, solicitor, $5; total, $6.75. Mr. M. C. Shell, $2.50.

Brother Shell instructed me to use his donation for some poor widow or orphans. I most heartily thank him for his instruction. There is a very destitute and worthy set of orphans at Coldwater, Winn parish, La., who shall have this donation. They are the five little children of Rev. W. F. Sanders, of the Louisiana Conference, who died at, or near Coldwater, March 17, 1897. He was a consecrated, devout Christian, and one of the best preachers I ever heard. While he was a very poor man in worldly possessions, he was rich in the grace of God. He had tremendous power over an audience. I have seen the hardest cases all torn up and in tears under his preaching. I have heard the shouts of new-born souls, and I have seen the whole church greatly revived and shouts of "Glory to God" go up at the same time from almost the entire membership. I feel that North Louisiana has lost one of its best preachers in the death of Rev. W. F. Sanders. Sister Mary L. Sanders, wife of Rev. W. F. Sanders, died of pneumonia just nine days before he died. She called her children around her bedside, and after telling them how to conduct themselves, she said: "Children, I have tried to teach you how to live; now I will show you how to die." She was perfectly rational up to death, and seemed happy right in the jaws of death.

Bro. Sanders was struck with paralysis from his waist down some time in February. Just before he died he said to S. D. Borland, his brother-in-law, with a smile on his face: "Sam, I have prepared for this a long time ago. Glory to God, I am ready." He was rational to the last. Just before breath left his body, and after his speech had left him, several of his relatives and friends were standing around his bed and some one spoke of his being prepared for heaven. He raised his hand, and his finger pointed upward. It is said by those that were there the deaths of Bro. Sanders and his wife were the most triumphant ones in this country.

Thanks to all who have come to our relief, and especially Bro. Shell for the orphan fund.

J. L. MOORE.

P. S.—Bro. and Sister Sanders both before dying requested that the children, grandma and uncle from the mother's side take and raise the children—Mrs. Allen and her son, James M. Allen.

"Dublin, Texas."

MR. EDITOR: The letter in your issue, of April 8, from Dublin, Texas, and signed by C. H. Strong, did "present the results of the meeting in a very different light" from that made by the clipping referred to. The Texas Christian Advocate, of March 4, contains an article on "The Morrison Case" by no loss authority than Dr. John H. McLean. From that article I send you a clipping, which refers to the pastor's report, and ought to be correct. So, aside from the accessions (?) of that meeting, there were other "results."

With the plain statement of law and facts bearing upon the case of Mr. Morrison, we are astonished above measure when one writer in the Tennessee Methodist says "he was expelled for preaching to the sinners of Dublin," and the editor of the (Ky.) Methodist says his expulsion was not for "love of law and order," but "hatred for the Wesleyan doctrine of a second work of grace and those who teach it." Regardless of the high-sounding, religious claims of those papers I solemnly protest against such wantonly reckless statements in the face of the published facts, wherein nothing of the kind appears in the history of the case. I further insist that the doctrine of sanctification, or perfect love, is just as dear to other hearts as those in sympathy with the sentiments and utterances of the papers referred to, and further insist that that sacred doctrine can be maintained and enjoyed without working schism in the church by overriding her law and order. We regret to say that, whilst the participants in the Dublin meeting report 165 conversions and sanctifications, the pastor of that station reports that only one person claiming to have been converted at that meeting has joined any church (and that the Christian Church), and he has since returned to the beggarly elements of the world—whilst the Methodist Church, of which Mr. Morrison was a minister, and in whose interests more especially he labored, lost as a legitimate result of such meeting one by expulsion, seven by withdrawal, with more to follow, thus vindicating the statement of the Bishop that such meetings, "held without the consent and against the remonstrance of the pastor, are an unwarranted obstruction and tend to confusion and strife." Mr. Morrison may be, and I doubt not is, sincere, but his reckless disregard of law and order will carry confusion and strife wherever he goes. It only remains to be said that such men and methods have not made the church what it is and will only tend to its disruption.

Mrs. H. W Foote, of North Miss. Conference
Mrs. R R. Parker, of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

The news from our Parsonage and Home Mission work, though not progressing as we would like, yet gives promise of better organization in the Mississippi Conference.

There have been nine more auxiliaries reported than any other quarter since this department of woman's work found a place in our ranks. Our brave corresponding secretary writes: "The women have been slow to respond until now, but we were never discouraged, for we believed the work was of God." Efforts have been made in every district to change local aid societies into P. and H. M. Societies with very little success as yet; but when our sisters better understand the workings of this organization, I feel they will gladly "wheel into line."

Through our efficient faithful coworker, Mrs. E. D. Jones, secretary of Vicksburg district, we have the following cheering items: At Oak Ridge there is a flourishing auxiliary of 26 members; collected there for all purposes $57.65. Hermanville, Bartonton, Bradley's Chapel, and Carlisle, though of small membership, all are doing something in this branch of work. Port Gibson worthily wears the honor of being the banner society of our Conference. So you see this district has six auxiliaries, and sixty-eight members, and last, but by no means least, was the enrollment of the name of Robert V. Jones, of Carlisle, Miss., on the Baby Roll, and the date of his birth Sept. 8, 1896. Now, with Miss Annie Lucille Heath and Master Robert Jones as leaders in this laudable enterprise, why don't the babies come in flocks to be enrolled?

Our P. and H. M. S. of First Church observed the week of prayer, and our thank-offering fund was about eight dollars. We have twenty-four members. Of the juvenile auxiliary that has been organized here since we reported to this column I will insert the letter of its corresponding secretary, which I hope all our readers will enjoy.

Jackson, Miss., April 9, 1897.

OUR DEAR EDITOR: On the fourteenth of March we organized "the Jackson Jewels," an auxiliary to the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. The following officers were elected: Bessie Nugent, president; Earle Frantz, vice-president; Ana McLaurin, Jr., recording secretary; Mattye Bonds, corresponding secretary; Caro Colbert, treasurer; Bessie Carnes, agent for literature.

We have copper-cent collections, and have now 82 cents in the treasury. We have enrolled twenty-five members, and our meetings are made so interesting and instructive. Our leader teaches us that God reveals himself to us, his children, through his works, and through his Word—the Bible. She illustrates this by the use of pictures. Every meeting one picture is selected that contains several forms of God's works, as we find them in the world around us, such as landscapes, children, animals, birds, flowers, trees, water, etc. One picture is shown at each meeting, and the members are required to find something in the Bible about each object, and the next meeting these references are read publicly, and up to this time we have not found any of God's works that his Word does not tell something about.

I wish the young people everywhere would adopt this picture-study; for God's promise is, "Acquaint now thyself with him and be at peace, thereby good shall come unto thee."

I want to tell you why we are called the "Jackson Jewels." In Malachi is found these beautiful words. "And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels;" and our leader told us that if we would love Jesus and work for him here, that we would be counted among his jewels when he comes!

Our president selects leaflets to be read, and at our last meeting the corresponding secretary read "The Missive of Love." I hope to always have cheering news to give you from our little band of workers.

Your little friend,

MATTYE BONDS, Cor. Sec.

We are so glad to welcome "The Jackson Jewels"—our Savior's precious gems.

"Like the stars of the morning
His bright crown adorning,
May they shine in their beauty,
Bright gems for his crown."

Applications from several parsonages for help are already before the Board—Hermanville, Lauderdale, Natchez and others. The Board will respond as far as the treasury will go, but we regret to say the demand far exceeds the power to supply.

Business Helpful to Religion.

Secular work, so far from being a hindrance to spiritual culture, as many imagine, may be made a help to holy living. The attention, consideration, patience, and self-repression which are required in business are in themselves a discipline of character, and in a good man must tend to confirm and strengthen the corresponding graces. Then there are the cares and uncertainties of business which can not fail to have a positive reflex influence on the spiritual life. The miscarriage of so many of our own plans should confirm our faith in the goodness and wisdom of providence, and be a constant reminder of our dependence upon the Almighty. The fluctuations to which all worldly things are liable should send us oftener to him who changeth not, and whose love is the only enduring portion. Our successes and our gains should lift up our hearts to the Giver of all good, without whose blessing prosperity becomes a calamity and temporal gain an inconceivable misfortune. The perfidy of the deceitful and the roguery of the unscrupulous should incite us to value more highly the truthfulness of God. And, above all, the remembrance that we brought nothing into the world, and will carry nothing hence, should constrain us to "seek first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." Thus the gulf between the secular and the sacred will be filled up, their jarring will be changed into harmony, and the consciousness that we are serving God not less in our business engagements and household duties than when presenting our praises and petitions, will make toil what it was in Eden—a source of real joy; and thus it will be impossible to tell where the secular ends and the spiritual begins, for both will unite in one mighty stream of activity and feeling.

Such a consummation, and one so devoutly to be wished, is only attainable by entire consecration to the Lord. First give him yourselves, that he may save and sanctify you; then give him your time and your talents—all you have and all you are. Associate Christ, in spirit at least, with all you do; doing all as his servants, and with a view to his glory. Do nothing upon which you can not ask his blessing; embark on no enterprise which you can not ask him to prosper. And for the rest I would simply add in closing: Carry your religious candor and uprightness into your business; bring your business activity and energy into your religion. Make your religion a part of your work and your work a part of your religion; let the same high sense of duty inspire you in the one and in the other; let a scrupulous conscientiousness characterize all you do, whether it be secular or spiritual; let Christ be your Alpha and Omega, and let his favor be prized above the profits of business. Above all, ever bear in mind that your chief end in life is not to provide for this world, which you must soon leave, but to glorify God and to enjoy him forever, and then, day by day, you will find this problem of how to harmonize the secular with the sacred solving itself; but be sure of this: it will only be on the lines indicated in our text, "Whatsoever you do in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus."—Rev. George Davidson, Edinburgh.

It is quite common to mistake our own incapacity for God's unwillingness to give. We can not take more than our hearts and lives can hold, not even of the free and abundant grace of God. The limit of blessing for every man is the limit of capacity. Even God does not put more than a pint into a pint cup. Therefore God's richest blessing is the blessing of enlargement. When a soul submits to him he causes it to grow, making room for more delight and larger power of use in every blessing. God's will to give may always be taken for granted. Our will to receive is not so sure. And when we are disposed to complain of our small share of spiritual blessing, may it not be best to ask ourselves whether it is not our will that fails and our littleness which can not find room to receive? God's apparent grudging we may be sure, is always a sign of our incapacity. What we most need, therefore, is a continual enlargement of soul which comes to men only from the continual presence of God's Spirit. God does not offer gifts at random, much less does he enlarge the soul which has no desire for him. He who thinks that spiritual capacity may be picked up anywhere along life's dusty road, and that he may set his heart upon the earth and then enjoy the full measure of the disciple's happiness besides, will surely be disappointed.—Congregationalist.

To Whom it May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mnl-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever need. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. Black,
Editor Christian Advocate.

MUL-EN-OL is the greatest of all antiseptic dressings. Is a sovereign remedy for healing flesh wounde on man or beast.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Jeanerette, La., April 12, 1897: "My congregation increases a little every week. We have a steady growth in all the interests of church work—especially in the Epworth League and Sunday-school. We have accessions to the church nearly every Sunday. Within the past two weeks the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE has more than doubled its circulation among us. We are preparing to erect a comfortable brick church within the next ten months. A widow starts the subscription with a thousand dollars. The editor is hereby invited to attend the district meeting in Jeanerette, beginning May 25."

Rev. J. P. Drake, Bay St. Louis, April 10, 1897: "Several of your readers will rejoice with me of 'the Bay' that, by the good hand of our God upon us,' we can report our pretty church here finished in a style that evokes unqualified commendation. The work was done by a Mr. J ho D. Basson, of Long Beach, who is set down as 'an artist in his line.' He is also a good man, and reliable. Any brother needing nice work well done and at very reasonable figures will find it advantageous to secure his services. The diagonal and panel work and the 'arching' show a master's hand. Of our present status in church work, and our prospects, I hope to write when more at leisure. Only this now: Let all lovers of Zion pray that 'the beauty of the Lord our God may be upon us' here more than ever before, and that in this his earthly temple every one who comes may feel his power."

Rev. R I. Allen, Pleasant Hill, La., April 10, 1897: "I was two months late in getting to my work, because of typhoid fever. I have been here now a few days more than two months, and have been strong enough to do full work. We are comfortably located in the parsonage, which is much improved by my predecessor, Bro. A. J. Jones. He has the sympathy, love and confidence of this people, and richly deserves it all. Dr. Wier was here on our first quarterly meeting doing the work of a faithful presiding elder. The people here enjoy his visits. We have Sunday-schools at all our churches. Expect to observe Children's Day in every one, and are anxious to have the programmes for it. Our Epworth League at this place is getting fairly well. Dr. Watson was elected president last night. Bro. L. W Williamson has filled the place efficiently for the past two months, and is our delegate to the State Conference at Water Valley."

Rev. O. L. Savage, Coffeeville, Miss.: "We have just closed our Second Quarterly Conference. The outlook for the year is very much that of promise. We have paid our assessments in full for foreign and domestic missions, also the Bishops' fund in full—in all, we have spent on our places of worship $626 25. Our Preachers' Institute and Epworth League District Conference met here April 6. Had one-third of the pastors of the district present. A very interesting Epworth League Conference followed the Institute. Rev. H C. Morehead, P. E., was present with us and presided. Rev. G. W. Bachman, our Conference Sunday-school agent and colporter, was with us, and gave us good literature and speeches. The next session will convene at Pittsborough, Miss. Prof. Dabney Lipscomb, of Oxford, was elected president of the Grenada District Epworth League Conference; Miss Lon Hawkins was elected vice-president. Miss Nora Farr, of Tocopola, Miss., was elected secretary and treasurer. The discussion of the Epworth League work was entered into by all the members."

Rev. Jno. A Miller, Ruston, La., April 10, 1897: "This is a year of storms and flood. Much damage has been done, and many lives lost. We deeply sympathize with our suffering friends. The North Louisiana drouth sufferers have been greatly relieved by donations from Christian sympath zers at home and abroad. If these donors could see the gratitude expressed by the recipients, they would feel amply paid for any sacrifice they may have made. The Methodist parsonage at Ruston was made the center of a most extraordinary storm last Thursday evening. It differed from ordinary storms materially in the character of debris left in its wake; with all the blowing and storming it left not a wreck in its track, only a blessing, that will cheer the inmates of this home to their dying day. The larder was absolutely overflowed with substantial groceries and good things to eat. Many of the articles will not have to be duplicated for six months or more; and the preacher's family was specially remembered in nice dresses, and some cash to replenish the pastor's depleted purse. The good ladies of Ruston know just how to do a thing of that sort—to make a preacher's family feel good. Our church is in good condition. We are looking and praying for a glorious revival of religion."

Rev. Isaac L Peebles, Hattiesburg: "I was assigned to this place last Conference, and I must confess that I am glad that I am here. Strange as it may seem, just before Bishop Hendrix read out our appointments, I was impressed that I would be sent here, although prior to this I had not received the least intimation that I would be. We arrived here in the night, but we were met by a polite porter, who conducted us to the Queen and Crescent Hotel, where arrangements had been made by our Ladies' Aid Society for our comfort the rest of the night. The next morning we were conveyed to the parsonage, where we had a cordial reception. We begun work at once, and I am thankful to our Lord to say that our success up to the present has been quite good. Up to the present we have had seventy-five accessions by certificates, vows and baptisms. Our Sunday-school is the best I have ever been pastor of before. The number and interest are increasing all the time. From this time forth we hope to give more time to the ADVOCATE. We have paid $75 to Conference claimants, which is our assessment in full. We have paid $70 for foreign missions, $18 for Bishops, $32 for Bible cause, and something on all the other collections. We have all our collections in cash and subscriptions. Pray for us to become much wiser, holier, healthier, and much more useful, Pray for our work."

Rev. G. A. Klein, P. C., Nesbit, Miss., April 8 1897: "Our dear Bro. T. C. Wier on Friday, April 2, fell and sustained a injuries which prevented his attendance upon our second Quarterly Conference. We regret the accident very much, and trust that it will not prove serious. Bro. Wier has won the hearts of this people by his kind, gentle manners. Expressions of sympathy for him are heard on all sides. He sent Bro. Shipman, of Sardis, to help us out; thus showing his fatherly solicitude for his younger preachers. His selection was very happy. The dignity of the office sits well on Shipman. He makes a good presiding officer, and understands the importance of suiting the length of his discourse to the congregation and occasion. He arrived at Horn Lake depot amid pealing of thunder and the splashing of rain. As there were but two stewards and the writer present, our presiding elder elect decided that the occasion called for a case sermon, which could best be delivered at the Quarterly Conference, so he dispensed with the morning sermon and proceeded to regale the physical man with presiding-elder chicken, cake, pie, etc. After dinner, nothing daunted by the small attendance, our good brother proceeded to business and held our Conference. He dispatched the work with elegant leisure and grace, not seeming to hurry, yet we finished all too soon. Everyone of that 'vast audience' regretted when the time for dismissal arrived. Our stewards' report shows a decided increase over last year. We feel confident that the work will prosper, because the people are praying both for the cause of Christ and for their pastor."

JOHNSON—Bro. TITUS G. JOHNSON was born in South Carolina, Oct. 6, 1817, and departed this life near Houston, Miss., March 23, 1897, after three months of severe suffering.

Bro. Johnson professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in early life. While quite a young man he moved to Mississippi, and joined the church by letter at Wesley Chapel, one of the appointments of this pastoral charge, where he remained a consistent member for more than fifty years, till God called him from his labors to his reward. Bro. Johnson was happily married in 1846 to Miss Martha J. Tucker, who departed this life in 1881. This sad event left Bro. Johnson to raise two little boys with which God had blessed this union. In this he succeeded as but few men have done, who have been left without the help and influence of a wife in forming the character of children. These two sons are now grown and have interesting families of their own. They are consistent members of the church, and are honored and honorable members of the community in which they live.

Bro. Johnson was a successful financier and had accumulated a nice property. He was a very quiet man, not being at all demonstrative either in business or religion. He was as modest and refined in his manners and as chaste in his conversation as the most cultured lady.

In the death of Bro. Johnson his children have lost a devoted father, the community a good citizen, the church a loyal member and the pastor a warm friend. He died as he had lived; in peace with his God and his neighbors. His funeral was preached by this scribe in Wesley Chapel Church in the presence of a large concourse of people. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

The publisher's prices of these Bibles are as follows: Bourgeois, $5; Minion, $3.15. We do not sell them for less than this to non-subscribers.

The little key that opens the small padlock is the real thing that opens the massive door. The door that will withstand the attack of a crowbar opens readily with the proper use of a key one-thousandth part as big and strong. Big things are not always the most useful or the most effective. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are little, so small that forty of them will go into a vial no larger round than a lead pencil and two inches long. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules, but they do their work more effectively than nauseous doses a hundred times their bulk. They are for the cure of constipation. They cure the hundred and one symptom of constipation. They cure headaches, biliousness, sour stomach, foul breath, heart-burn, palpitation of the heart and pimples, and they assist in the cure of almost every disease with which mankind is afflicted. No one can get well unless the regular, healthy action of the digestive organs is restored. The "Pellets" will do this. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative and two a mild cathartic. Without causing any pain, griping or any other unpleasantness, they will restore the natural action of the bowels, and when this is done their use may be discontinued. They are not meant to supersede Nature, but to help her, and that is all she needs. There are druggists who for the sake of a slightly greater profit, will endeavor to sell you something else which they say is "just as good." They are trying to make a profit at the expense of your health.

For the physiology of women, in health and disease, read Dr. Pierce's great work, the "Common Sense Medical Adviser." A copy, paper-covered, free to anyone who will send 21 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

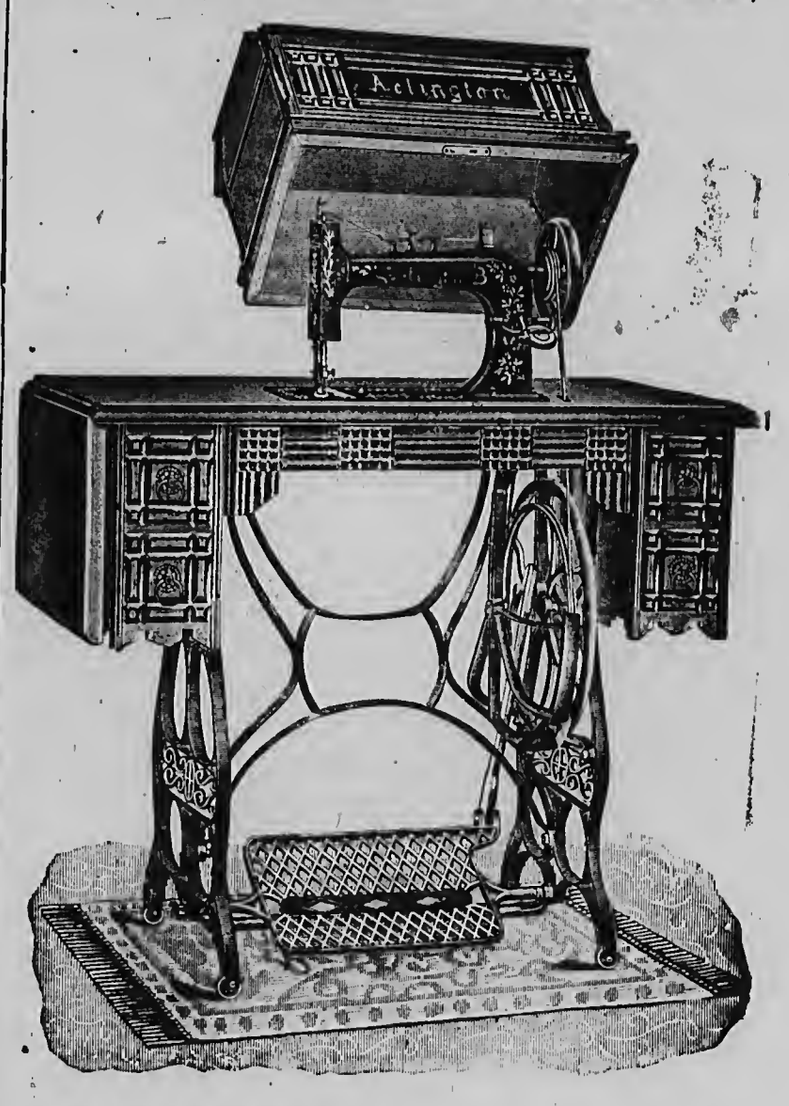
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.



A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

ARM HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20 50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to May, '98, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40.

If you have not gold and silver
Ever ready to command,
It you can not towards the needy
Reach an ever open hand;
You can visit the afflicted
Or the erring you can weep
You can be a true disciple
Sitting at the Savior's feet.

Religion is as much needed in the work shop as in the sanctuary.

Believe what you preach if you want anybody else to believe it.

Some one has described a smile as "music that you see instead of hearing it."

The disposition to say cutting things will inevitably grow upon him who indulges it.

He renders you a service who shows you your faults, whether he be friend or foe.

Talking loudly about the faults of others will not keep the world from seeing your own, though some people seem to think so.

Luther said concerning impure thoughts, "I can not prevent birds from flying over my head, but I can keep them from building their nests in my hair."

Every duty, even the least, involves the whole principle of obedience, and little duties make the will dutiful—that is supple and prompt to obey.—H. E. Manning.

When I was a young man I was sure of everything; but in a few years, finding myself mistaken in a thousand instances, I became not half so sure of most things as before. —John Wesley.

A man who lives right and is right has more power in his silence than another has by his words. Character is like bells which ring out sweet music, and which, when touched, accidentally even, resound with sweet music.—Phillips Brooks.

A young preacher recently spoke of his Sunday morning sermon as very unsatisfactory. When asked what he thought was the cause of his disappointment in the sermon, he said: "It was pulled before it was ripe." There are others.—Baltimore Advocate.

Lord Beaconsfield says: "The secret of success in life is for a man to be ready when his opportunity comes." The trouble with some people is that they are too blind to see the opportunity when it comes. Others see it, but, alas! they have not made the needful preparation.

Little self-denials, little honesties, little passing words of sympathy, little nameless acts of kindness, little silent victories over favorite temptations — these are the silent threads of gold which, when woven together, gleam so brightly in the pattern of life which God approves. —F. W. Farrar.

Formalism.

The tendency of mankind the world over is to make religion a matter of pomp and ceremony, of rites and observances, rather than of spiritual communion and the practice of goodness. To some people religion means little more than "church-going, attending a particular church, singing out of a particular hymn-book, being set within a certain regular surrounding of circumstances." Numbers are so sectarian as to believe that all who do not worship after their peculiar manner worship in vain.

There is a subtle temptation that comes to all to rest satisfied with the externals of religion, with profession and confession, and to pay little heed to the state of mind and heart. As ofttimes, on account of care and worldly anxiety, believers are not in the spirit of worship when they go to the house of God, or when the hour for private devotion arrives, they are almost sure to worship in a mechanical way, making little effort to fix their thoughts and affections upon divine things, and easing their consciences by resolving to be more devout next time. How frequently, while the minister is preaching or praying, the wits of many of his hearers are wool gathering. The business man, though apparently attentive, lays plans for the coming week; the young people picture to themselves the pleasures of the next social event; this and that member of the fair sex comments mentally upon the apparel and headgear of the sisters present; and so on with the majority of the congregation, perhaps.

Just as compositors frequently set type without taking note of the force of the "copy," so it is not uncommon for Christians to go through the forms of religion without considering their real significance, or being profited spiritually thereby. It is so easy to lapse into formalism that few escape it altogether.

The decline of spirituality is nearly always attended by ritualism, by the multiplication and emphasis of forms and ceremonies. Heart worship requires effort and attention. As familiarity with any important thing oft begets indifference to it, so familiarity with the great truths of Christianity may be followed by inattention to their spiritual character and practical exhibition. It is a sad fact that our sinfulness and love of the world sometimes draw our hearts away from God even when we attempt to worship him.

A man may congratulate himself that he is all right because he is thoroughly orthodox, and yet he may be utterly destitute of vital godliness. The Pharisees believed all the law, but though apparently the most religious, they were of all the Jews the most unspiritual. No man, however rich or respectable or cultured, is a true disciple if he loves the praise of men more than the praise of God. Not every church member who pays the preacher and attends the services of the sanctuary enjoys the power of godliness. From time to time an expression like this is heard: "I have joined the church and attended its services. I do no evil. What more could be expected?" So it is with thousands. Know thou this, O self-satisfied man—thou art not yet in the kingdom. Thou must renounce thyself, and let Christ be all in all. "In Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature." Formalism is frequently more dangerous than impiety, for the sinner knows that he is in the road to destruction; but the formalist thinks that he is secure when all the while he is asleep by the roadside, being dosed with sedatives by Satan.

A prayer or a sermon, however beautifully clothed, is vain if not backed up by faith and feeling. Artistic music in church worship, though innocent in itself, is a snare to some people who find pleasure in it, not as a means of grace, but as an end of sensuous gratification. The love of display and the court paid to fashion in many Protestant Churches is a shame to Christianity and a stumbling block to the spread of true piety.

There is a strong temptation to consider prayer, song, preaching and giving, not as means of grace, but as ends in themselves. Men may use the forms of prayer, and sing, and contribute of their store, not because they expect to be made better thereby, but because these things are commonly regarded as efficacious apart from the ultimate object sought. How plainly, however, the Apostle Paul shows that the religion of the Lord Jesus consists not in any form of worship or self-denial whatsoever, but in the love of God ruling in the heart. "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity (love), I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. . . . Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." A man might fast as often and as strictly as a Pharisee, and still be little better off unless his eye was singly fixed upon God.

While it is of the utmost importance that our performance of religious duties be characterized by regularity, we must guard against mechanical piety, which is pharisaical, joyless, and deadly. Unless we are careful always to make our profession tally with our experience, our testimony will soon have a hollow ring, and deceive nobody but ourselves. We must serve God whether we feel like it or not; but to profess what we do not feel is to bring temptation and a snare.

As Dr. Joseph Parker has well said. "If Jesus Christ were with us to-day, he would alter the religious standpoint of many men, and thunder upon their closed ears the solemn words that Christianity is not an affair of meats and drinks, of bell ringing and magic, of church-going and hymn-singing, but of life, love, pureness, sanctity of heart and completeness of consecration. This is not an affair of hand-washing, hair-combing, clothes-wearing, attitude, mechanism, or manual service. The religion of the kingdom is a condition of the heart."

Let us "examine ourselves whether we be in the faith." Do we perform our religious duties perfunctorily, or is it because we love God, and expect a blessing therein? Do we find pleasure in the path of duty, or is our devotion formal and joyless? Though forms are often abused and may become a source of temptation to the careless, to discount or to discard them it is to be guilty of infinite folly. The Master, "as his custom was," went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and, though the Son of God, submitted to all the rites of the Jewish law. Paul enjoins that "all things be done decently and in order." They who worship God after no particular method and observe no stated seasons of devotion will soon not worship him at all. But if we do not worship in spirit and in truth, our offerings are an offense unto God.

At Natchez.

In response to a joint invitation by the pastor, Rev. T. B. Holloman, and the Ladies' Aid Society, we gave a lecture in the chapel of Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, on the night of the fifteenth. A mere glance at the interior of the auditorium showed that the deft hand of women had been actively engaged in preparation for the occasion. Flowers of exquisite loveliness were there in great profusion, arranged with that exquisite taste so characteristic of the ladies of Jefferson Street Church. The audience was very fine. The seating capacity had been increased by putting a number of chairs in the aisles.

Bro. Holloman is in the midst of a very prosperous pastorate. He has large congregations not only at the Sabbath services, but also at the week-night prayer meeting. He is exceedingly popular not only among Methodists, but among others as well. The Sunday-school is remarkably flourishing.

We were domiciled during our stay in the home of Sister Mary Reed, to whom and to her interesting family we are much indebted for their generous hospitalities. We were entertained most delightfully. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of Bro. E. A. Enoch. We had the pleasure of meeting old parishioners too numerous to mention. We also met Bro. F. B. Ormond, pastor of Wesley Chapel, who is in the midst of a successful pastorate.

The pleasure of the trip to our old parish was marred somewhat by a telegram announcing the fire in the ADVOCATE office. We lost no sleep over it, however, but came home next day, cancelling, in order to do so, a lecture engagement at Centerville.

Our Fire.

At one o'clock P. M., on Thursday, the fifteenth, fire broke out in the Gauche Building, just opposite the ADVOCATE office, and in a very few hours it was a mass of smouldering ruins. This building was one of the most famous and beautiful buildings in the city. It was a magnificent specimen of Moresque architecture in imitation of the celebrated Alhambra. Its cost was more than $300,000. Despite the heroic efforts of the fire companies the flames soon spread to buildings across Camp and Poydras streets, and a number of them were reduced to ashes, among them two newspaper offices—the Telegram and the German Gazette. The ADVOCATE building was badly damaged, but not destroyed. The contents of the building were also considerably damaged. The direct loss was covered by insurance; but there will be a considerable indirect loss not covered by insurance policies. Our readers will understand the force of this language when they are informed that on account of the damaged condition of the building we are unable to use our press. Hiring press work is an expensive luxury. We were in Natchez when the fire occurred, but came home next day.

Now is a good time for delinquent subscribers to pay what they owe. We hope our preachers will aid us not only by securing new subscribers, but also by collecting from delinquents. Many people are abundantly able to pay their dues, but neglect to do so.

Our neighbor, the Times-Democrat, did a handsome thing in offering to do the press work for this week's issue of the ADVOCATE free of charge. Although, for reasons not necessary to be specified, we did not accept the offer, the generous spirit that prompted it is fully appreciated. Many thanks to our magnanimous confrere. May it long live and prosper!

The Flood.

As shown in our news columns, Louisiana as well as Mississippi is suffering from the flood. Here in the city the situation is critical. The river is about a foot higher than ever before, and is still rising and will continue to rise for probably two or three weeks. It is within the range of possibility that history may repeat itself. This city was inundated in 1735 from December until June—a period of six months. It was under water again in 1849. The levees, however, are much higher and stronger now than they were then. Moreover, a large force is now at work elevating and strengthening them. Everything that human skill and muscle can do will be done to keep out the flood, and we believe that these efforts will be successful. Yet time only can tell what the result will be. The river is eight or nine feet higher than a large part of the city.

To the Leagues of the Mississippi Conference.

GREETING.

All Epworth delegates who pass through Jackson on the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth, en route to Water Valley, will be met at the Union Depot by committees of the Jackson Leagues, who will take pleasure in showing them brotherly courtesies. Those delegates who remain in Jackson, waiting for outgoing trains, will be provided for in the houses of local Leaguers. Let all delegates wear badges, either of their local Leagues or of the Conference.

Yours for the League,

HORACE M. DUBOSE.

Lauderdale, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: Let me thank you for your editorial on "Hammering." It was unusually good.

My people are very thoughtful of their pastor, especially is this the case at Lauderdale. They exerted themselves when I was married in the reception they gave my wife.

There will be a new church built at Marion this year. We are going to have a camp meeting at the springs this year. Bro. Bonrdeaux has given us twenty acres within a quarter of a mile of the three mineral Red Sulphur, White Sulphur and Chalybeate Springs, and embracing the bold mineral spring.

H. W. VAN HOOK.

Our Hope in Politics.

Three or four years ago the nation was waiting for the salvation of the Lord through municipal reform. For the past twelve months it has been waiting as confidently for salvation through politics. Americans have always counted politics among their favorite gods, but it has been left to the present generation to pay it such honors as to excite the envy of even the Almighty Dollar. We do not worship politicians as much as we once did, perhaps, but our hope is still in politics. We worship a spirit. The heathen Chinee worships a spirit. He buys a little wooden idol, and sets it up in his home; if there is a hole in its head, the Good Spirit will enter in and his home will be safe. We do not worship our Congressmen—we prefer to abuse them; but we have a hope that if we can ever get men in Congress with an opening in their heads, the spirit of politics will enter in, and in some way or other the country will be saved. Great is politics! It has made some men rich: why should it not make us all rich? It has given some men employment: why should it not give us all employment? Why should it not cure all our ills, tie up our bruised thumbs, relieve our dyspepsia, run our business, and let us all go fishing? That is our hope, and that is why we have been crying so loudly all the year, "O Baal, hear us!" That is why we have been getting desperate and have been jumping upon the altars and cutting ourselves with knives and lancets. And though there has never been in all our history any voice or any to answer or any that regarded, our faith is unchanged: our hope is in politics!—Richmond Advocate.

I am quite unable to understand why professedly Christian men sometimes fear and severely criticise revivals. Probably not a few such critics marched in the great political processions a few weeks ago, carrying flaming torches, shouting themselves hoarse; and yet in relation to the greatest concerns of human society they insist on calmness! The very thing multitudes of men need is to get excited about the subject of religion, to feel themselves guilty sinners in peril of eternal hell, to be moved to cry with tears and outcries for help to God.—Bishop C. D. F.

The wisest things are commonplaces. The truest things are commonplaces. The things which the world most needs to hear are commonplaces. Not the one who says a most origiual thing, but he who says a commonplace thing in such a manner that the world must listen, is the greatest teacher or preacher. Prophetic eloquence is the faculty of making dry bones live. He who can speak to men of the common things of duty or righteousness with such earnestness that they take heed and consider, has had his lips touched with a coal from off the altar upon which glow the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount.—Sunday-school Times.

The Christian Register says that the attempt to naturalize the Bible miracles has proved an utter failure. So it has, and so it always will. The Bible miracles are supernatural. The Bible itself is supernatural. To "naturalize" it is to deny its pretensions, and rob it of its power. It is from above, and not from beneath. This has been the faith of the church from the beginning, and because it has held this faith, and holds it still, it has, all through its history, had "obedient to a heavenly vision." It has lived through an inspiration from heaven. Any attempt to "naturalize" any portion of the Christian faith is doomed to failure, and we are glad of it.—Presbyterian.

The commencement sermon of the East Mississippi Female College will be preached by Rev. A. F. Watkins, of Vicksburg, Miss. Bro. Watkins is one of our brainiest young men in Southern Methodism and one of our leading preachers in the Mississippi Conference. It is a happy selection for this college for this, the first year since the college has taken on new life. Bro. Watkins will give us a good sermon. Professor Benjamin Meek, LL.D., professor of English in the University of Alabama, will deliver the baccalaureate address of the college, Wednesday evening, June 2. Dr. Meek is one of the finest English scholars in this country. He is an authority in that line wherever he is known. He is also an eloquent speaker, being both scholarly and humorous in style. He is a brother of Hon. Sam Meek, of Columbus, Miss., Judge A. B. Meek, a poet and scholarly man, known throughout the South for his literary productions as well as statesmanship. This will doubtless be an interesting commencement of this most excellent institution.

BURNS AND SCALDS

are quickly soothed with Mul-en-ol, the great panacea for pain. It takes out the fire, reduces the inflammation and prevents soreness.

MUL-EN-OL

is unrivalled as a remedy for pain, both external and internal. Get a bottle now and have it ready when the time of need comes. Sold everywhere. Price 50c., $1.00, $2.00. Prepared by FINLAY, DICKS & CO., New Orleans.

To Preachers.

To the preacher who sends the largest number of new cash subscribers between now and the first of July we will present either an Arlington B Sewing Machine or a gold-filled watch guaranteed to be a perfect time keeper and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, which ever one may be preferred. To the preacher sending the next largest number and also to the one sending the third largest number we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, latest edition, with modern additions.

Should the successful contestant prefer it, we will pay him cash instead of the premium.

Under this offer no commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Those who wish to compete for these premiums should notify us at once.

The Advocate for $1.

From now until the first of June we will receive new cash subscriptions at the rate of $1 for nine months. Moreover, we will give those who subscribe under this offer the benefit of our premium Bible offer. Take notice that this offer is made only to new subscribers. We will make a liberal offer to our present subscribers after awhile. Meantime, let all who are in arrears pay up, as no one who is in arrears can get the benefit of any of our special offers. Let all our preachers make this offer known to our people at once. We will send a sample Bible for use in canvassing to those who desire it. We will also send sample copies of the ADVOCATE on request.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

Some Notes of Encouragement.

D. P. Bradford, P. C., Newton and Hickory, writes that he has organized a "Young People's Missionary Society" with 30 members at Newton, and that the society is doing well. He has forwarded $23 to the Conference treasurer of Board of Missions, and has secured nearly every dollar of the collections in cash and good subscription. He and his charge lead the Brandon district. Now let us have a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and a Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society in each church.

D. C. Farmer, L. E., supplying Wayne Mission, reports 25 subscribers to "The World for Christ." He expects to forward 25 more subscriptions very soon. He leads the Enterprise district in this item.

Dr. Monnger reports every preacher in charge in the Brookhaven district a subscriber to "The Methodist Review of Missions." No other presiding elder in our Conference can so report for any other district. When every preacher in charge and every local preacher and every intelligent laymen in our Conference takes and reads this admirable publication, our collections for foreign missions will more than double. They ought to be not less than ten times what our people contributed last year.

I would like to have the postoffice address and name of every practicing physician and druggist who is a Methodist, and resides in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference. Will not the preachers in charge furnish me with the same?

J. G. Galloway, P. C., Edwards, reports $105 paid in full for assessment for foreign missions in his charge. This makes Edwards the first charge in Vicksburg district to meet the demands.

Yazoo City, L. S. Jones, P. C., has paid one half of its assessment for foreign missions, and $40 for domestic missions.

Rev. W. C. Black, Editor CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans, La.—

DEAR BROTHER: I have written two short articles acknowledging subscriptions received from readers of the ADVOCATE, but failing to see either, I presume your columns are crowded with more important matter.

I thank you for your space for my first communications and for the sympathy and interest you have taken in our cause. Many of our people are still in a destitute condition; but as Spring has opened, with our gardens, and grass for our milk cows, things are much better than in the cold Winter. I acknowledge receipt of $1, Rev. B. S. Rayner; $2, Bay St. Louis Sunday-school. With gratitude and best wishes for your success, I am, Fraternally,

It contains no tobacco, gives speedy relief, and makes a lasting cure. For free trial sample by mail, address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 11, 12 and 13 Grant Building, Atlanta, Ga.

I have used Mul-en-ol, and find it good for many things, but especially for cutaneous diseases, cuts, burns, and corns. In every case it has been eminently successful and satisfactory. I do not want to be without it in my family. Please send it right away, and oblige, Yours truly,

SOLID INFORMATION BOILED DOWN!

During the Holidays we offered THE PEOPLE'S CYCLOPEDIA on remarkably easy terms for a definite period. Orders came pouring in; the plan was an experiment; but it proved an excellent one for placing this splendid work of reference in the homes of the people. We have decided to repeat it.

But first let us say to everyone that THE PEOPLE'S CYCLOPEDIA is not an experiment.

150,000 Sets are in the Homes of the American People.

A very high authority has entitled it "THE REIGNING TRIUMPH OF MODERN REFERENCE WORKS."

It is newly revised—rewritten down to date—A MODEL AND MARVEL OF COMPREHENSIVENESS AND CONDENSATION.

3,500 Illustrations. More than 100 Contributors.

New from Cover to Cover.

Over $100,000 have been Expended in the Production of this Work.

CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 20th, 1897.

After careful examination, the Central High School, although it is already in possession of the Britannica, American, Johnson's, and other cyclopedias, has adopted and placed in each of its several rooms a set of "The People's Cyclopedia." This has been done because this set of books has been brought up to date, furnishing valuable information along the line of recent discovery and modern invention, which is not given in any of the other cyclopedias.

The People's is clear, concise, and sufficiently full to be an admirable assistance to pupils. A set of this work in each of the high and common schools throughout the country would be of great value to both teachers and pupils.

(Signed) P. M. BROOKS, Principal.
HELEN M. REYNOLDS, Ass't Prin.

NOW FOR OUR OFFER!

From this time until further notice For One Dollar we will ship by express or freight to any part of the United States the entire set of books, with the following additional conditions: $2.00 per month for one year. You may thus become the possessors of this magnificent set of books on remarkably easy terms. Everybody can afford to buy them, and no one can afford to be without them.

In addition to the set of books we send a solid OAK CASE FREE OF CHARGE.

Note these Late Topics.

The People's Cyclopedia is the Latest of All general reference works. It contains hundreds of new articles on subjects not treated in any other cyclopedias—such, for instance, as the "X Ray," "Argon," "Horseless Carriages," "The Atlanta Exposition," "Color Photography," etc., etc. It also gives biographies of hundreds of people who have lately become famous, and whom the other cyclopedias do not mention—such, for instance, as Professor Roentgen, discoverer of the "X Ray," Ian Maclaren, Dr. Nansen, the explorer, Rudyard Kipling. It is the one Great Practical Reference Library for the Professional and Business Man, the Teacher and the Student.

Splendidly Illustrated Throughout with over three thousand five hundred engravings, including numerous engraved portraits of celebrities, and with over three hundred colored maps and charts, delineating Continents, Empires, Countries, States, Cities, Towns, Citadels; Solar, Lunar, and Planetary Systems, and every portion of the known world, and forming a Complete and Indexed Atlas of the Globe.

OUR GREAT OFFER. To secure wide spread and favorable publicity for The People's Cyclopedia we have decided to make this offer. We are sure that every set bought will create a demand for others. We are perfectly satisfied to have it compared with any or all other Cyclopedias on the market, and if it does not stand the test of comparison you will be at liberty to return the work to us, and we will cheerfully refund the dollar paid.

HOW TO SECURE A SET OF THIS GREAT WORK.

Send $1.00 to Eaton & Mains, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York City, and a full set of Six Volumes of the People's Cyclopedia, in cloth binding, will be forwarded to you at once. The balance is payable at the rate of $2.00 monthly, for one year, or about 6 1-2 cents a day. If you prefer the Half-Morocco binding, the monthly payment will be $2.50, and for Full Sheep, $2.50 per month for the year. We recommend the Half-Morocco Style, which is particularly elegant and serviceable, and will last a lifetime. If not as represented any set may be returned within ten days, and money will be promptly refunded. Our confidence that the volumes will be cheerfully paid for is shown by sending the books on payment of only $1.00. We also feel that you will thoroughly appreciate this superb new work, and speak favorably of it to others. Sample pages and illustrations sent on application until the offer is withdrawn. Address

Rev. Frederic S. Marvin, long time pastor of the First Congregational Church, of Great Barrington, Mass., and at one time a practicing physician, a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, says of Ripans Tabules: "The formula has long been in favor with medical men, and the method of preparation in the present form is modern and a great convenience. I always keep a vial of the Tabules upon my dressing table, and use them with confidence whenever occasion arises. For a disturbed condition of the digestive organs I know of nothing so good, and for an 'all-round' family remedy I do not believe there is anything better to be had."

BLESSINGS NEAR AT HAND.

BY SARAH K. BOLTON.

We look too far for blessings;
We seek too far for joys;
We ought to be like children,
Who find their choicest toys

Oftimes in nearest attic,
Or in some dingy lane;
Their aprons full of weeds or flowers,
Gathered in sun or rain.

Within the plainest cottage
Unselfish love may grow;
The sweetest, the divinest gift
Which mortals ever know.

We ought to count our joys, not woes;
Meet care with winsome grace,
For discontent plows furrows
Upon the loveliest face.

Hope, freedom, sunlight, knowledge,
Come not to wealth alone;
He who looks far for blessings,
Will overlook his own.

The Literary Labors of Genius.

Scott is said to have written "Waverley" in less than six weeks. He wrote very rapidly, seldom revised, and as a consequence, his novels are full of blunders, inaccuracies, anachronisms.

Burns committed his poems to memory as he composed them, and when he sat down to write he had before him no labor of composition, but only the task of writing down what he had already finished.

Gibbon devoted over twenty years of his life to the labor of reading for and writing the "Decline and Fall." It is one of the most stupendous literary feats ever accomplished by the labor of one man.

Thomas Moore often wrote a short poem almost impromptu. He consumed over two years in reading and preparing material for "Lallah Rookh," and two years more in writing that inimitable poem.

Irving wrote the first 120 pages of "Bracebridge Hall" in ten days; the "Alhambra" was mostly written during the three months he spent in that palace; his "Life of George Washington" required nearly five years.

Emerson is reported often to have spent from six months to a year in the composition of one or two short essays. His object was the condensation of the greatest possible thought into the fewest number of words.

Froude passed seven years in collecting materials in writing his "History of England." He was very careful in the selection of data and spent whole days in the effort to verify a single fact or citation.

One of Milton's biographers says that nearly twenty years elapsed between the sketching out of the plan of "Paradise Lost" and the completion of that work. The actual labor of composition was condensed into two or three years.

Dickens says, in the introduction to "David Copperfield," that he spent two years in the composition of that story. He did not usually require so long a time, many of his novels being finished in less than a year, and most of his shorter stories in a few days.

George Eliot is said to have written "Middlemarch" in four months. Some doubt is thrown upon this statement by the fact that she commonly worked slowly, writing with great care and deliberation, and making few erasures after her work was done.

Bancroft devoted nearly thirty years to his "History of the United States," which is not a history of the United States at all, since it ends where the history of the country properly begins. Had the work been continued on the same scale down to the present, seventy-five or eighty volumes would have been required.

Mrs. Clark required sixteen years to prepare the "Concordance to Shakespeare."

Cruden labored nineteen years on his "Concordance to the Bible," and immediately after its publication was sent to a lunatic asylum. He never entirely recoved from the mental disease induced by this gigantic undertaking.

Buckle devoted nearly twenty years to the collection of materials for his "History of Civilization." He wrote only a portion of the introduction, which remains a great monument to his literary and philosophical teachings. If the work had been finished on the same scale as begun, a hundred volumes would not have sufficed.—Exchange.

The The The Best. Rest. Test.

There are two kinds of sarsaparilla: The best—and the rest. The trouble is they look alike. And when the rest dress like the best who's to tell them apart? Well, "the tree is known by its fruit." That's an old test and a safe one. And the taller the tree the deeper the root. That's another test. What's the root,—the record of these sarsaparillas? The one with the deepest root is Ayer's. The one with the richest fruit; that, too, is Ayer's. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has a record of half a century of cures; a record of many medals and awards—culminating in the medal of the Chicago World's Fair, which, admitting Ayer's Sarsaparilla as the best—shut its doors against the rest. That was greater honor than the medal, to be the only Sarsaparilla admitted as an exhibit at the World's Fair. If you want to get the best sarsaparilla of your druggist, here's an infallible rule: Ask for the best and you'll get Ayer's. Ask for Ayer's and you'll get the best.

Benjamin Franklin.

In Paris, Benjamin Franklin was once in the company of some of the most brilliant men of France. While learned and witty, they were also very skeptical, and impolite enough to treat the Bible with great scorn—calling it not only a piece of gross deception, but saying that it was totally devoid of all literary merit.

Franklin alone dissented. When called upon for his opinion—for he was a great favorite with his friends—he excused himself from giving a direct answer such as they sought, saying that his mind had been much occupied upon a book of apparently rare excellence and force which he had purchased at a Paris bookstore. And, speaking of literary characteristics, he remarked that possibly it might interest the gentlemen present to compare his newly-acquired book with the old book which they were criticising.

"God came from Teman, and the Holy One from Mount Paran. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise. His brightness was as the light. He had horns coming out of his hand, and there was the hiding of his power. He stood, and measured the earth. He beheld, and drove asunder the nations. The everlasting hills were scattered. The perpetual hills did bow. His ways are everlasting."

These words made a deep impression. The listeners were full of admiration, and said they were superior to anything they had ever heard. They were "beautiful, grand, sublime."

Then said Mr. Franklin, 'Gentlemen, I have read to you a part of the prayer of the Prophet Habakkuk. I have read from the old Bible which you have been so severely criticising." They did not know the Bible.—American Messenger.

Self-Reliance.

Henry Ward Beecher used to tell this story of the way in which his teacher of mathematics taught him to depend upon himself:

"I was sent to the blackboard, and went, uncertain, full of whimpering.

"'That lesson must be learned,' said my teacher, in a very quiet tone, but with a terrible intensity. All explanations and excuses he trod under foot with utter scornfulness. 'I want that problem; I don't want any reasons why you haven't it,' he would say.

"'I did study two hours.'

"'That's nothing to me; I want the lesson. You need not study it at all, or you may study it ten hours, just to suit yourself. I want the lesson.'

"It was tough for a green boy; but it seasoned me. In less than a month I had the most intense sense of intellectual independence and courage to defend my recitations.

"One day his cold, calm voice fell upon me in the midst of a demonstration, 'No.'

"I hesitated, and then went back to the beginning, and on reaching the same point again, 'No!' uttered in a tone of conviction, barred my progress.

"'The next'—and I sat down in red confusion.

"He, too, was stopped with 'No!' but went right on, finished, and, as he sat down, was rewarded with 'Very well.'

"'Why,' whimpered I, 'I recited it just as he did, and you said 'No!'

"'Why didn't you say 'Yes,' and stick to it? It is not enough to know your lesson; you must know that you know it. You have learned nothing until you are sure. If all the world says 'No' your business is to say 'Yes,' and prove it.'"—Ram's Horn.

Life's Little Days.

One secret of sweet and happy Christian life is learning to live by the day. It is the long stretches that tire us. We think of life as a whole, running on for us. We can not carry this load until we are threescore and ten. We can not fight this battle continually for half a century. But really there are no long stretches. Life does not come to us all at one time; it comes only a day at a time. Even to-morrow is never ours till it becomes to-day, and we have nothing whatever to do with it but to pass down to it a fair and good inheritance in to-day's work well done and to-day's life well lived.

It is a blessed secret, this of living by the day. Anyone can carry his burden, however heavy, till nightfall. Anyone can do his work, however hard, for one day. Anyone can live sweetly, patiently, lovingly and purely till the sun goes down. And this is all that life ever really means to us—just one little day. "Do to-day's duty; fight to-day's temptation, and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things you can not see and could not understand if you saw them." God gives us nights to shut down the curtain of darkness on our little days. We can not see beyond. Short horizons make life easier, and give us one of the blessed secrets of brave, true, holy living.—British Weekly.

Literature at Home.

The question of literature at home thus becomes a very practical question. And it is especially worth talking about now, for a reason which I will try to make clear. It has happened in these later years, on account of several influences, that education even in the more intelligent families is not what it once was, and in the influx of foreign-born settlers we have a larger proportion of families than formerly in which there is no intellectual life. In education the state has undertaken to supplant the family, and the matter of the whole mental training of the young has been more and more turned over to the public school. The state is wholly inadequate to this work, for the reason that nothing can supply in tender years the place of a home intellectual atmosphere in the formation of the habits of children. If they are accustomed to see books, or to hear at table intelligent conversation about the world of men and things reported in books and periodicals and newspapers, they easily form a taste for going to the sources which will inform or interest or amuse them. They will not look upon reading as a task, but as the pleasure it is.—Charles Dudley Warner.

A Lesson in Patience.

One of the happiest little boys I ever saw is a cripple and he will never walk. His lower limbs are paralyzed, and the little fellow is wheeled around in a chair made for his especial use. When I first saw him I thought how awful it must be for a seven-year-old boy not to be able to run and play like other children, and, without thinking, I asked: "Isn't it lovely here? Don't you wish you could run and jump?"

"Yes," said the little fellow, "I might like it, but I'm happy where I am, and perhaps I'd get hurt. Little boys do."

Then I felt rebuked, and the little boy, whistling and singing in the chair, playing with whatever is given to him, the minutes of the hours by which the days are told like sunbeams lighting and gladdening life's pathway, has been a lesson to me ever since I first saw him.—Washington Star.

Good Things to Learn.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine.

Learn how to tell a story. A well-told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick-room.

Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows.

Learn to stop croaking. If you can not see any good in this world, keep the bad to yourself.

Learn to hide your aches and pains under a pleasant smile. No one cares whether you have the earache, headache or rheumatism.

Learn to attend strictly to your own business. Very important point.

Learn to greet your friends with a smile. They carry too many frowns in their own hearts to be bothered with any of yours.

Lord Macaulay.

Concerning the Sabbath as a civil institution—that is, as a weekly rest day, Macaulay writes:

"That day is not lost. While industry is suspended, while the plough lies in the furrow, while the exchange is silent, and while no smoke rises from the factory, a process is going on quite as important to the wealth of nations as any process that is performed on more busy days. Man, the machine of machines, compared with which all the contrivances of the Watts es and Arkwrights are worthless, is repairing and winding up so that he returns to his labors on Monday with clearer intellect, with livelier spirits, and with renewed corporeal vigor."

Hygiene.

Knowing How to Eat.

The London Chef insists on it that while few know how to cook, also only a few know how to eat, and it mentions Thomas Carlyle as one of those who ruined his stomach by gulping down his food in great gulps. If this be so, then we have the secret of his dyspepsia. Had he followed Gladstone's habit of giving every mouthful thirty two bites before swallowing it he might have been a gentleman instead of a crabbed and sour creature.

The most important hour that a day has in store for us, the axle on which all turns, health, business, wealth, happiness, is that hour which is ushered in by what Byron calls "the tocsin of the soul"—that is, the dinner bell. It is a time for which to prepare ourselves with a joyousness befitting such occasion, and is not to be rushed into soberly and hastily, as if it were of little or no moment.—Journal of Hygiene.

For Cold.

Flaxseed is one of the best remedies for cold on the lungs. Such a cold should never be neglected, for it may speedily result in some more serious ailment. A hot bath or fomentation by compress should immediately be taken, followed by a cool tepid sponging; the latter will prevent taking more cold. Use flaxseed, either ground or whole, pour over it boiling water, let steep, and drain off the liquor, thin it sufficiently so that it can be used for drink. To every bowlful add the juice of one lemon and sugar to make it palatable. Drink freely of this whenever thirsty, or oftener if there is little thirst. The result is wonderful.—Lutheran Observer.

BISHOP WILSON. REV. J. E. RANKIN.

Bishop Edward Wilson, D. D., LL. D., of Metuchen, N. J., says: "I have taken Warner's Safe Kidney Cure with great advantage and derived much benefit from its use, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends."

Rev. J. E. Rankin, D. D., LL. D. President of Howard University of Washington, in a most outspoken manner, says: ... "I have known of several persons who regarded themselves as greatly benefited, and some of them as permanently cured of diseases of the kidney and urinary organs by the use of Warner's Safe Cure. I have known, too, of its being used in similar cases by physicians of the highest character and standing. I do not doubt that it has great virtue. This treatment, I want in the interests of humanity, to recommend."

Among the hundreds of other testimonials as to the efficacy of Warner's Safe Cure from Ministers of the Gospel, are found those of Rev. S. R. FRAZIER, Youngstown, Ohio; Rev. D. OBITUARIES

FOWLER-BAXTER—Mrs. ANGELINA FOWLER-BAXTER was born in Jackson, La., in 1819, and in early life was married to James F. Fowler. They came to this city soon thereafter. They were both for a while members of the chapel on St. Mary street, of which Rev. Lewis A. Reed was pastor, as early as 1846. Subsequently they moved to Algiers, and were for many years identified with the fortunes of the Methodist Church there. At that time we were a feeble folk. The society was housed in a frail structure that stood just inside the levee, built of fir without lumber. The few souls that constituted the church were of primitive faith, and happy in working for the Lord. They abounded in hospitality, and aided the preacher as best they could in building up their beloved Methodism. Bro. Fowler professed and lived a godly life, and in his daily pursuit, which was that of a ship carpenter, he was unwearied in trying to save men, and in stemming the current that bore hundreds of them away, far, far away from God. They lived near the church that was afterward built, and both he and his wife were active in its Sabbath-school and in everything that tended to its support. She was a helpmeet for the good man, and raised her children in the fear of God.

After the war, when they had moved to Carrollton, she never rested until she had aroused an interest in building a new church which should supply the place of the one that had now fallen into decay. She lived to enjoy the fruit of her persistent zeal in the services of this house and this congregation.

No one who knew her can doubt that she went safely home. She was to the last very attentive to all her Christian obligations. She prayed an excellent prayer, such as only those who truly know God can pray. Toward the last she could only desire, as David, to dwell in the house of God, that she might see the beauty of the Lord and enquire in his temple. It was her habit, as that of the aged Anna, to speak of her Lord to everyone she met, and to exhort everyone to be religious.

Very late in life she married again. Judge E. O. Baxter lived but a few years after their marriage, and preceded her in the spirit world. She leaves several grandchildren, who mourn her loss, and represent her devotion to the church. Her memory is blessed. "She hath done what she could."

J. C. KEENAN.

In memory of Mrs. A. Fowler-Baxter:

WITHIN THE HAVEN.

"She is not dead, but sleepeth."
Ah, consolation sweet!
Take heart, dear one, who weepeth—
She rests at Jesus' feet.

Faltering, the pilgrim yearneth
For joys that never will cease;
The eye of faith discerneth
The path to eternal peace.

Weary, the bird flies homeward;
Its pinions flutter—fail;
'Tis gently clasped, borne God-ward
To Christ, our "All in all."

The soul, so brave, so trusting,
Hath found its recompense;
And now 'tis safely resting
In the "Rock"—a sure "Defense."

Rest on, dear saint, rest ever;
Look on thy Savior's face;
Naught shall thy spirit sever
From the sunshine of God's grace.

DED.

WILLIAMS—Miss LILLY K. WILLIAMS, daughter of Rev. J. L. and F. A. Williams, was born in Claiborne parish, La., July 11, 1875, and died at Ilico, Lincoln parish, La., March 8, 1897.

She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in her sixth year under her father's ministry, and has lived a consistent Christian life since that time. She usually enjoyed religion, and was an active Christian when opportunity offered. She would lead in prayer at the grove meetings which were held during the revival meetings at Harmony Chapel, the place of her membership.

I was her pastor during the past two years, and spent much time at Bro. Williams'. His wife's health was very bad, and the domestic duties fell upon Sister Keate (as we knew her), and she ministered us with pleasure, and never seemed tired ministering to the comfort and pleasure of the pastor. Through him she instilled the interest of the church, and seemed to realize that in ministering to the servant she ministered to the Master. She did it with grace and cheerfully.

She was a pleasant companion to the young, being cheerful, sunshiny, and pious. She was intelligent, and would have made a very useful Christian, as she was growing in interest in religion and in the knowledge of her Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

This is an intense bereavement to her father, following so closely upon the death of her mother, which occurred during last Fall, and she being the comfort of his old age. Nothing seemed to give her more delight than to minister to the comfort and happiness of her parents. This she did, especially during her mother's feeble health and her father's bereavement after her mother's death.

Her father says: "I think she suffered more for some time before she died than anyone that I have ever seen. She slept but little, and that little sitting in her chair. When she did lie down it required two strong men to turn her over," and yet she never murmured or complained.

Her illness was protracted, and she was gradually sinking for six months; yet she was cheerful up to the time that I left the work. She now rests with Christ, and her suffering is over. May her father—God's aged servant who has fought so many battles for the Master—find comfort in that fact, and be drawn nearer the Master, and may the whole family be by it cultivated for duty and glory!

ROBERT RANDLE,
Once her pastor.

Big Cane, La.

BONNETTE—Mrs. IRENE LUCILE BONNETTE (nee Thrasher), aged twenty-one years ten months and ten days, wife of Dr. J. V. Bonnette, departed this life at her home in Pollock, La., on the twentieth day of January, 1897, of bronchopneumonia.

She united with the M. E. Church, South, in early childhood—1881—under the pastorate of Rev. A. T. Gallnway. Her walk with God became closer while attending Oak Cliff College, Dallas, Texas, 1893-91. There, as elsewhere, her amiable traits, noble worth and arduous application won for her the love, confidence and esteem of both pupils and teachers.

On the twenty-seventh of June, 1894, she was happily married to Dr. J. V. Bonnette, of Pollock, La. Possessed of amiability, thoughtful care and sacrificing spirit, as well as a vivacious, sprightly disposition, she won friends as by magic. Still it was in the home circle that her charms shone most resplendantly. Those who knew her best loved her most.

So sweet, so gentle was she towards her mother and grandmother that she is missed from the childhood home as though but its recent inmate. In her own home, where she had so nobly presided for less than three years, her Christian character and love were manifested in beautifying her life, and in constant and untiring devotion to her beloved husband. Fond and indulgent as a mother, she spared no pains to promote the welfare and comfort of her little girl babe not yet a year old), who can not realize her great loss.

Sister Bonnette loved her church, and was unremitting in her efforts to advance its interests. She delighted in entertaining the preachers, and always made them comfortable by making them feel at home.

She died as she lived: in the triumphs of a living faith. She gave assurance of having put her trust in the Lord, and said that should she be called away, all would be well. These assurances linger like sweet incense in the memories of friends and loved ones.

The church has lost a faithful member, the little babe a devoted mother, and the husband a loving wife, but their loss is her eternal gain. May the blessings of God comfort and sustain the sorrowing ones, and bring them together again where parting is no more!

SKINNER—Francis SKINNER, third son of Lemuel and Nicey Skinner, was born in Darlington district, S. C., May 23, 1815, and died Feb. 10, 1897.

In 1831 he was married to Miss Martha A. Belk, a consecrated Christian, who comforted him sixty one years and fell on sleep. This union was blessed with seven children, two of whom survive him.

He was actively engaged in farming, having moved to Alabama, and about 1839 to Lowndes county, Miss.; thence to Noxubee; thence in 1855 to Pickens county, Ala.

He joined the M. E. Church, South, at Hebron Church in 1833, was for some time steward, and was a liberal supporter of the church. He rendered valuable services toward the comfort of the membership.

A strong constitution was his, and his elastic step gave no sign that he had passed fourscore. He enjoyed the confidence and esteem of all who knew him. He loved the songs of Zion, preferring those of his earlier life.

Every attention that loved ones could bestow, and medical skill, could not stay the dreaded pneumonia. He expressed himself ready to go, leaning on the arms of his Savior.

He sleeps beside his companion in Odd Fellows' Cemetery, Macon, Miss.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

When you see a preacher making the Gospel of the Cross small by degrees, and miserably less until there is not enough of it left to make soup for a sick grasshopper, get you gone! As for me, I believe in the colossal, a need as deep as hell, and a grace as high as heaven. I believe in an infinite God, and an infinite atonement—in an infinite love and mercy—in an everlasting covenant ordered in all things and sure, of which the substance and reality is an infinite Christ.—Spurgeon.

A New Cure for Cancer.

Dr. Mason, the eminent cancer specialist of Virginia, has a cure that surpasses all former methods. No further need for knives to cut or plasters to burn. Practically painless. No secret discovery and no quackery. A few of the severest cases must go to the Sanitarium for personal attention, but most cases can be treated at home at small cost and cured in a short time. For information and opinion of case, if described, free of charge, write

DR. SCOTT MASON,

Contention and disputation are not the mark of either a great mind or a calm, sweet spirit. The thinker quietly does his best to make his meaning clear, but if there is still lack of perception on the part of his hearers, he simply waits for that justification which time is sure to bring.—James Mudge.

It's the soap you use! If you want your complexion clear and healthy, soft and delicate as a baby's, use HEISKELL'S Soap.

If you are troubled with eczema, tetter or any disease of the skin use the Ointment—HEISKELL'S Ointment. It will cure it speedily. Soap 25c., Ointment 50c. At druggists or by mail. JOHNSTON, HOLLOWAY & CO., 131 Commerce St., Philada.

How many days

1,388 8/9 days, about four years. Now if you are one of those poor, plodding women who are trying to get along with the old-fashioned ways of washing, stop and think what all that Pearline (use no soap) means. Don't you suppose most of these millions of women who use it are just as careful and particular as you are? And if Pearline were not what we say it is, or if anything could be urged against it, would women be using it in any such way?

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 503 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, etc. The most thorough, practical and progressive schools of the kind in the world, and the best patronized ones in the South. Indorsed by bankers, merchants, ministers, and others. Four weeks in bookkeeping with us are equal to twelve weeks by the old plan. Their President is author of "Draughon's New System of Bookkeeping," which cannot be taught in any other school.

$600.00 given to any college if we cannot show more written applications for bookkeepers and stenographers, received in the past twelve months, than any other five Business Colleges in the South, all "combined," can show to have received in the past five years. We expend more money in the interest of our Employment Department than any other Bus. College in Tenn. takes in as tuition. $500.00—Amount we have deposited in bank as a guarantee that we have in the past fulfilled, and will in the future fulfill, our guarantee contracts. HOME STUDY.—We have prepared, especially for home study, books on Bookkeeping, Shorthand and Penmanship. Write for price list.

PROF. DRAUGHON—I now have a position as bookkeeper and stenographer for the Southern Grocery Company, of this place; salary, $75.00 per month. I owe it all to your books on bookkeeping and shorthand prepared for home study.—Irl Armstrong, Pine Bluff, Ark.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

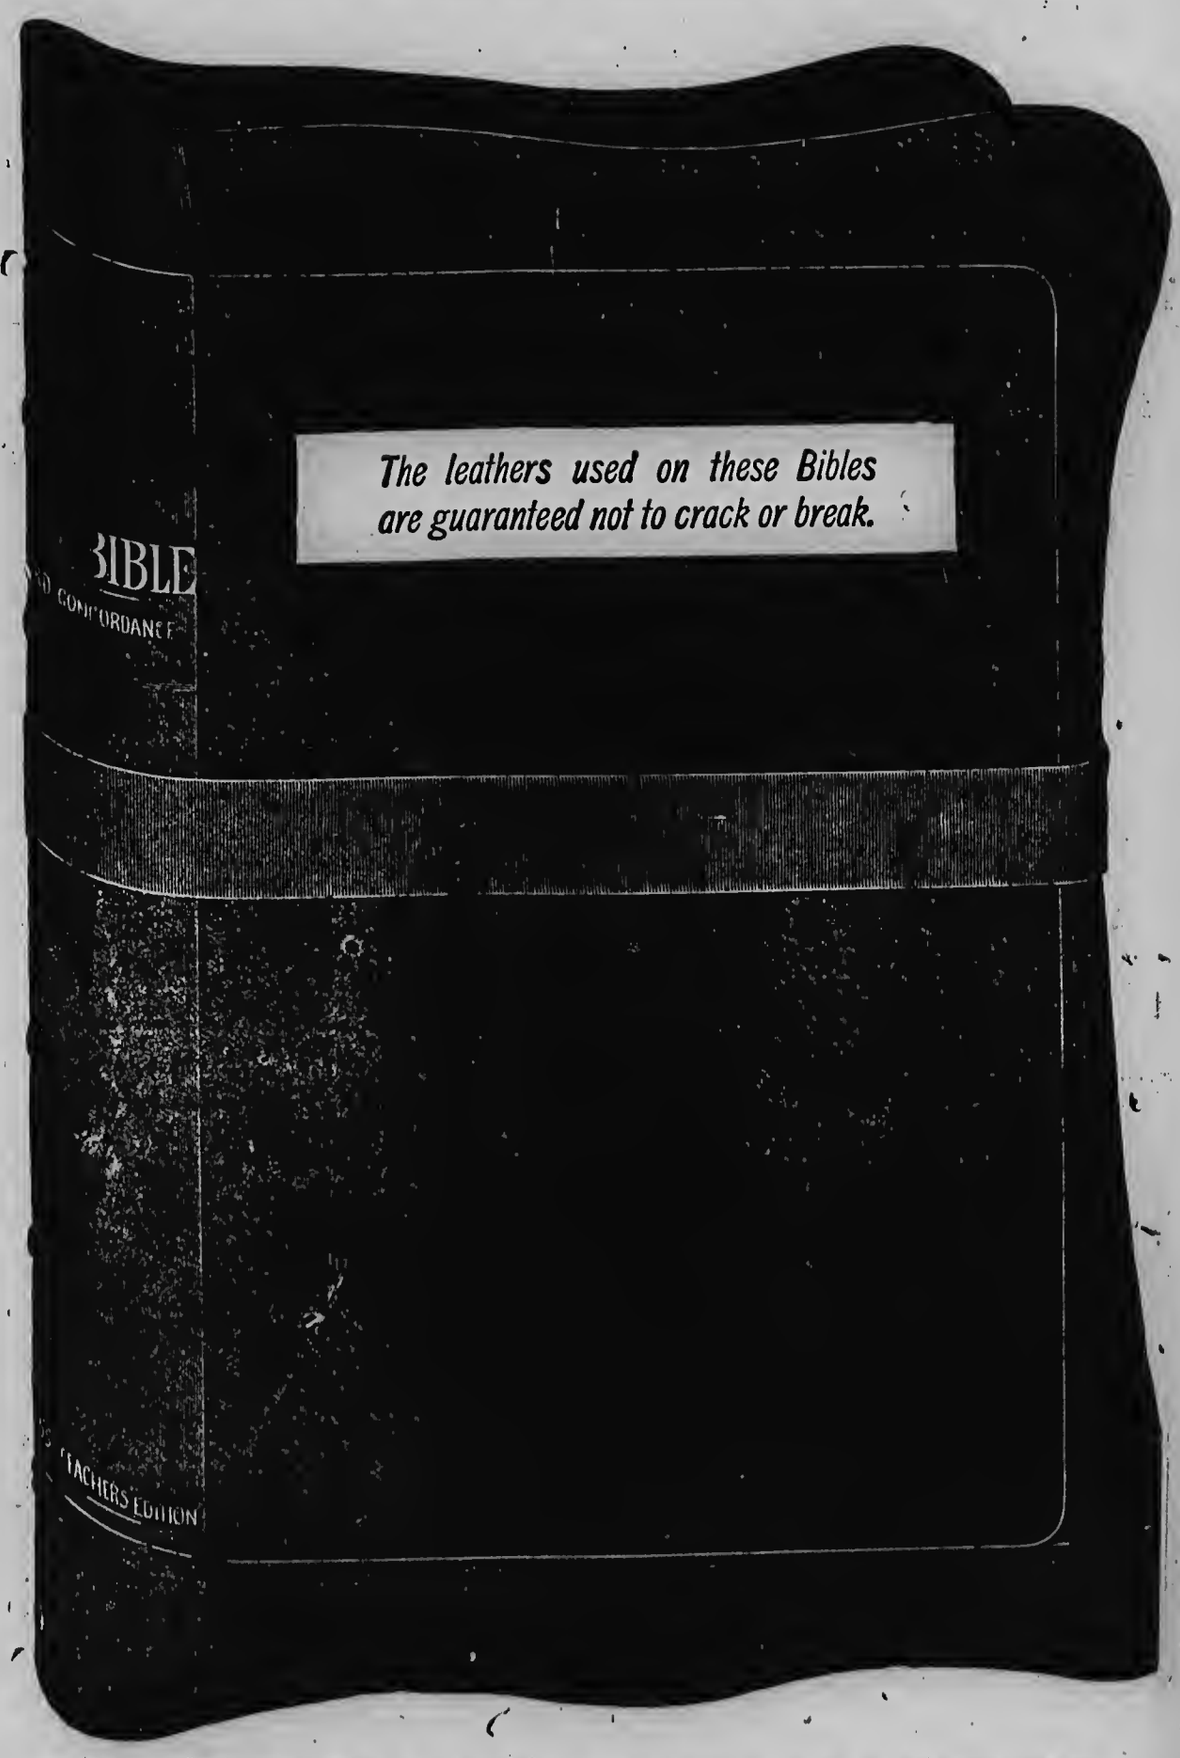
Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"



The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscribers for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.15.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance viz., to April, '98. (A little later it will be May, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Manual training for girls is to be introduced in the public schools of Chicago.

Philadelphia is raising a fund of $50,000 to insure the success of the Saengerfest which is to be held in that city in June.

Water is rapidly climbing up on the Tensas front. A two hundred and fifty foot break has occurred on the west bank of Lafourche.

One of the subjects that will be considered at the U. C. V. reunion at Nashville next month will be the question of school histories.

A marble bust of Frances E. Willard is to be presented to the Northwestern University, at Evanston, Ill., by Mrs. J. C. Shaffer, of Chicago. Miss Willard is an alumna of that institution.

The contest for control of the federal patronage among the Louisiana Republicans is maintained with unabated spirit, and the members of the Cabinet are getting a familiar acquaintance with the details of Louisiana politics.

Two mass meetings were held in this city last Sunday—one at the St. Charles Hotel, the other at Carrollton. As a result of these meetings all needed funds have been guaranteed to aid the Orleans Levee Board in strengthening the line of earth which protects the city.

The situation in Madison parish, La., is growing hourly worse. The flood of water going through the Biggs break in the levee is fast covering the low lands, and is flooding Bayou Vidal and the greater part of the lands in the southern part of the parish. The water has reached Tallulah, the parish site, some eighteen miles west of Delta.

The fire which destroyed the Moresque Building on Thursday, as well as the offices of the German Gazette and Telegram, on Camp street, and damaged the building and stock of this paper, and other valuable property on Camp and Poydras, was one of the most dangerous and destructive known here for some time; and it very nearly proved one of the worst New Orleans has ever had.

The Louisiana State Board of Medical Examiners, on behalf of the State Medical Society, held an examination recently, at which there were sixty seven applicants, four of whom were colored. Among the successful ones was Dr. Emma Wakefield, a colored woman, who was passed with honors. She is the first woman to be licensed to practice medicine in Louisiana.

FOREIGN.

It is becoming daily more evident that the British government is preparing quietly, but firmly for a tilt with the Boers of the Transvaal.

Austrian torpedo boats were fired on by the insurgents near Kissamo while chasing Greek blockade runners. There has been sharp fighting around Candia between the Turks and the insurgents.

Reports are being widely commented upon in Spanish circles that peace will very soon be established in Cuba through negotiations now in progress between the administration at Washington, the Madrid government and the Cuban Junta at New York, the latter supported by Gen. Calixto Garcia and the Cuban government in the field.

The long-looked for crisis in the southeastern part of Europe has at length arrived, and the outbreak of war, which the powers of Europe have dreaded, has taken place. Turkey, wearied at the frequent and persistent aggressions on the part of Greece, gave the Greek minister at Constantinople his passports, and declared that a state of war with Greece existed.

All uncertainty as to the result of the trouble in Crete is now at an end, as war between Turkey and Greece has been formally declared. Turkey has placed her subjects in Greece under the protection of the German ambassador at Athens, and the United States minister at Constantinople has consented to accord protection to the Greeks remaining in the Turkish capital.

A Dollar Well Invested.

One dollar at compound interest, well invested, at the end of a century will be worth a thousand dollars; at the end of two centuries will be worth a million dollars; at the end of three centuries will be worth a billion dollars. If man can make so much out of invested funds, how much can God make? How much do you suppose the dollar you give to Christ will be worth two or three centuries after this, when you behold its glorious fruit in the millennial age?—Christian Alliance.

THE HIGHER LIFE.

BY ADELAIDE PROCTER.

To play through life a perfect part,
Unnoticed and unknown;
To seek no rest in any heart,
Save only God alone;
In little things to own no will,
To have no share in great;
To find the labor ready still,
And for the crown to wait;

Upon the brow to bear no trace
Of more than common care;
To write no secret in the face
For men to read it there;
The daily cross to clasp and bless
With such familiar zeal
As hides from all that not the less
The daily weight you feel;

In toils that praise will never pay,
To see your life go past;
To meet in every coming day
Twin-sister of the last;
To hear of high heroic things,
And yield them reverence due,
But feel life's daily sufferings
Are far more fit for you.

To own no secret, soft disguise
To which self-love is prone,
Unnoticed by all other eyes,
Unworthy in your own;
To yield with such a happy art,
That no one thinks you care,
And say to your poor, bleeding heart:
"How little you can bear!"

O 'tis a pathway hard to choose,
A struggle hard to share,
For human pride would still refuse
The nameless trials there;
But since we know the gate is low
That leads to heavenly bliss,
What higher grace could God bestow
Than such a life as this?

Some Glimpses of Munsey.

BY IMMANUEL PADRONOWSKI.

claimed Sir Philip Sidney: "I r heard the old song of Percie Douglas, that I found not my moved more than with a trum- Anyone who can read Mnn- sermons without stir must be phlegmatic, or capable of a self- inment we don't envy and don't es to possess. But Munsey not only "in- s the understanding, but corrects nlarges the heart."

e sermons of Munsey are a dis- contribution to the pulpit liter- of our language, and will on- until it ends. This is very high , to be sure; but we are ea- ned to utter it. We should said as much, we hope (for one's respect makes one desire to have ourage to avow his convictions), ve never seen Bishop Keener's atr, or had we never seen the tes to Munsey collated by the p at the close of the first series ese sermons—tributes we never until we had read all these ser- and noted all the conclusions are the basis of this article.

hen we first read the Bishop's ate we were just short of ement at the tremendous sig- nce and import of its breadth logium. After reading some- of these sermons we were k with its justice, and we re- d to say, "Avaunt all dread of pations of extravagance from ritic, under the august sanctions ch an authority."

is worth while to focus some of ost glowing rays of the Bish- anegyric, so as to buttress our stimate. On page 16 of the in- ction Bishop Keener says: re are many who will cherish emory of his genius and friend- as the most impressive and val- xperience of a life-time." On 16 and 17: "On the eternity of on retribution, and on the work ation, he pronounced discourses that constituted an event in the life of the hearer never to be forgotten." On page 17: "And yet, above all, his imaginative lift and creative power could only be compared to that of the sixth book of Paradise Lost in its sustained grandeur." On page 18: "It is questionable to my mind if there ever lived any greater master of an audience, either in this country or England." These are only a few expressions from the Bishop's tribute; but the reader will observe the immeasurableness of their commendation.

It almost deters comment to say anything about Munsey after Bishop Keener's description. For breadth of survey, nice discrimination of attributes, felicity and force of characterization, vividness of point, "rich economy of expression," yet freedom and play of periods, it is a masterpiece. Still we venture thus far:

William Elbert Munsey, D. D., was not only a genius, but an intellectual and psychological prodigy. Outside the testimony of many most competent estimates, one needs only to read his sermons for internal evidence most irrefutable. He had an intellect of rare acumen and robustness, and an imagination one of the most imperial ever vouchsafed to man. Considering his lack of education, his struggles with "res angusta domi," and his short life, the marvel is that he produced what he has. From internal evidence there is incontestable proof that his taste was ripened by; his judgment, as well as years, chastening his imagination, guiding its flight, but not impairing its wing. He had a finesse, not to say intuition, of research, so that, on any theme, he brought to its discussion and elucidation not only the ripe result of the labor and learning of master minds in their respective spheres, but he fused these in the crucible of his own mind and heart, and poured them in molten wealth upon his theme. This aptitude and felicity of endowment reminds one of Erskine, who, although not a deeply read lawyer, yet "pro hac vice" could concentrate in his speeches all the riches of black-letter lore, and all centuries of the ripest erudition of law, and elucidate his positions to the wonder and delight of most learned compeers. It is worth while to quote Lord Campbell's remarks in the "Lives of the Lord Chancellors" to emphasize this trait of Erskine's wonderful gifts. He says: "Regularly trained to the profession of the law; having practiced thirty years at the bar, having been attorney general over seven years, having been present at many trials of high treason, and having conducted several myself, I again peruse, with increased astonishment and delight, the speech delivered on this occasion by him who had recently thrown aside the scarlet uniform of a subaltern in the army, which he had substituted for the blue jacket of a midshipman, thrust upon him while a school-boy. Here I find not only great acuteness, powerful reasoning, enthusiastic zeal, and burning eloquence, but the most masterly view ever given of the English law of high treason, the foundation of all our liberties." Again, in speaking of Erskine's great speech on "The Rights of Juries," Lord Campbell says: "We supported his propositions with a depth of learning which would have done honor to Selden or Hale. So the roughly had he mastered the subject, and so clear did he make it, that he captivated alike old black-letter lawyers and statesmen of taste and refinement." What matter if Erskine had not given years to the study of the law?—that his head was not encumbered with tomes of black-letter and stores of erudition? These were his products. And they are the richest repositories of law on their respective topics. How did he do it? Answer who may. How does a magnet, that is run through sand and rubbish and litter, collect what are its affinities?

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD,
President Mississippi State Conference of Epworth Leagues.

Everything will be in readiness for the State Conference when this issue of the ADVOCATE reaches its readers.

Water Valley is making elaborate arrangements to receive and entertain the Leaguers who come from all parts of the State.

Preachers, both old and young, are coming from the stations, circuits, and missions. Several presiding elders will be present.

A country charge some distance from the railroad, and several counties south of Water Valley, will send twelve delegates. The pastor will accompany them. He writes us an enthusiastic letter. The League in the country can be made a great success.

South Mississippi will be well represented. Natchez and Jackson have sent quite a number of names. Meridian and McComb City will each send six or seven delegates.

The City Itemizer and the Water Valley Progress will each issue special Epworth League editions of their paper during the Conference.

We will endeavor to furnish the readers of the ADVOCATE with a synopsis of the proceedings in next week's issue.

The laying of the corner-stone of the Mississippi Orphans' Home on Friday afternoon of the Conference will be a very interesting occasion. The services will be conducted by the State Board of Directors, and short addresses will be delivered by Dr. Jno. W. Boswell, of Nashville, Tenn., and Dr. H. M. DuBose, of Jackson, Miss.

We have received the programme of the Durant District Epworth League Conference, to be held at McCool, Miss., week following the State Conference. We are glad to hear of this, and wait to see who will be the next presiding elder to hold a similar meeting in his district.

If this meets the eye of any Leaguer or pastor whose League has not sent the five-cent assessment for State expenses to Rev. J. A. Randolph, you will please insist that it be sent without delay to Water Valley. It is much needed.

The mayor of Water Valley is a ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church, and besides delivering the address of welcome for the city, will also represent the two local societies of Christian Endeavor. We thank God for Christian men in high places, and feel that our interests are safe in their hands.

Bishop Galloway writes us that he is sorry he can not be with us at Water Valley. Engagements of long-time standing prevent him. The Bishop is in full sympathy with the League movement, and is himself an up-to-date Leaguer. The whole church loves and honors him.

Several Mississippians are on the programme for the third International Epworth League Conference, to be held in Toronto, Canada, July 15-18. What an opportunity to witness for Christ and make an impress for good on thousands of young lives!

The railroads are now figuring on rates, etc., to Toronto. Very soon we hope to let our readers know the exact expense of the trip. At least fifty ought to go from Mississippi.

This League movement and all these gatherings mean—more efficient workers for God and the church. It means training for active service, and under the influence and power of the Holy Ghost this mighty army of young people is to become a mighty factor in winning souls to Christ and hastening the "coming kingdom."

Water Valley, Miss., April 24, 1897.

N. O. City Mission and Church Extension Society.

The Anniversary of the New Orleans City Mission and Church Extension Society will be held in Carondelet Street Church at 7:45 P. M., Sunday, May 2, 1897. Dr. Horace M. DuBose, of Jackson, Miss., is to make the annual address. This society has been organized under the provisions of our Discipline, and deserves the hearty support of all loyal Methodists in our city. It hasd one great good, and can be much more useful in this very needy field for mission work if our people will rally to its support as they should. Let us all be at Carondelet on the night of May 2.

Selections.

The Constitution of Faith.

BY BISHOP J. C. KEENER.

The Apostles said unto the Lord, "Increase our faith." The Savior replied, "If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye might say unto this sycamine tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea; and it should obey you." At another time he said, "If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say to this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible to you."

But Christ did neither of these miracles, though he did things equally as difficult. They were clearly impossibilities to the Apostles; and if they were to be taken as tests of faith, they assuredly had no faith; this was exactly what the Savior wished them to know. So far as any increase of such faith as they had was to be desired, he told them it would be futile. That which they imagined to be faith had no approach to the faith of God. Mere confidence in the word of a man, in a note of hand, in the affection of a parent, in the efficacy of a prescription, is often misconceived for an illustration of faith; but confidence, however implicit, or repose in another, has nothing of vital faith in it.

Faith exists only in the region of the impossible. Not until all natural power is exhausted, of ordinary intellectual, or of historic belief, can there be any demand for faith; only in the region of truth beyond man's reach can there be any prayer for it.

That "worlds were framed by the Word of God—that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear"—that Jesus of Nazareth made this world, and created all things visible and invisible—that he died for me (for my sins)—that my sins are forgiven for his sake—that he arose from the dead—that he ascended to heaven—that he is now there in his manhood—these are truths that can only be grasped by some now supernatural power of belief—our present natural power can not truly receive them: and that supernatural power is faith; which is a gift, conferred in answer to prayer—to very earnest prayer, such as a repenting sinner, seeking life and pardon, at the hands of God, can pray.

In the Old Testament the word "faith" occurs but twice—in Deuteronomy and Habbakuk. It is used in the Gospels and Epistles as the vehicle of supernatural power—as a wire may be the conductor of immense electrical energy: so the least faith having the expression of a divine power can move a mountain. The idea that faith is but a spiritual apprehension of truth, is surely corrected by the Savior's illustration. It is power in the region of the impossible.

When the Apostles saw that under the bare word the fig tree withered away, down to its roots, and expressed wonder, Christ said, "Have faith in God." "If you say to this mountain, Be thou removed, it shall obey you."

So that it is an immense power in the word, of one who believes, that Christ would emphasize: say that of an apostle, or minister of reconciliation.

Faith not only can do these great things, but must do them if they are done at all. "We are saved by grace through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God—not of works lest any man should boast." Faith that was such an instrument with the patriarchs, judges, and martyrs of the Old Testament, and has such a history in the development of the church, is still that gift of power which is available to the translation of a man into a son; of a man "from the power of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son."

It is specially for the use of man, not for the use of angels. Christ is its author and finisher. By the taking up man into the divine nature—that is, his incarnation—he laid the foundation for the union of divine power with human. By his manhood his life became a possession of the race; whether for an offering of merit, or a power of life. Abel's faith in Christ was recognized and accepted, and he obtained a witness of the Spirit that he was righteous.

This power of faith was perfected by Christ, in his revelation of the Trinity—the full glory of the Godhead presented to the eye of faith, which St. Paul desired to apprehend fully.

Though Christ had done so many mighty works, yet they believed not in him; though the glory of the Father was revealed in his person, yet they saw it not. He left earth to send the spirit, to accomplish that which his incarnate glory could not effect. The spirit came with a power that raised Christ from the dead; and that was adequate, through the operation of faith, to raise the dead soul from trespasses and sins into the life of Christ.

From all which we see man's part, and also God's part in the constitution of faith:

1. Faith is in answer to prayer—therefore a gift.

2. It is necessary to any spiritual blessing.

3. It is a power—through the spirit of power. It is an infinite power, adequate to the whole system of salvation—to the preacher, to the penitent, to the world.

4. It is for man—infinite as it is—because Christ answers to it; and the Spirit testifies to it.

5. It is confined to Christ; in that justifying faith has Christ crucified as its only object. It is confined to Christ, because, "he is our wisdom, our righteousness, sanctification, and redemption." It is confined to Christ, because in him there is infinite and eternal room; for the approbation of that faith which works by love; and which for every measure of faith yields a measure of love.

6. There is no merit in co operating with God in this work of faith: because it is only what we ought to do: but a great sin if we do it not.—Texas Advocate.

Embroidered Evils.

We wrote "embroidered veils." But the types, with that strange perverseness which occasionally characterizes them, had it "embroidered evils." And the transposition set us to thinking. Yes, it is the embroidery put upon evils that does most of the harm. Sin, in its naked plainness and native hideousness, would not often be embraced. It has to be adorned and made attractive by some external accessories before it gets much power to entice.

The arch deceiver understands this very well. He blinds and fascinates the unwary by tricking out wickedness in fine array so as to make it presentable in the best society; and when it thus appears in respectable guise, no longer repulsive, people imagine it is not at all like its plebeian brother in rags and dirt. So long as it does not shock their refined tastes nor wound their polite sensibilities, they consider it in no way dangerous. Hence one of the prime duties of the hour is to speak plainly, and avoid euphemisms, evasions, and circumlocutions. Much iniquity is covered up and excused by petty phrases. Strip off the fringes, the diversified decorations of wrong, and fewer will choose it.

Sin as a caterpillar is bad enough, but sin as a butterfly is a thousand times worse. Though the worm puts on wings gaily colored, it is a worm still, and the swallow makes its meal off it just the same. The snare of words is a very real one. To change the name of a thing is not to change its character, though it appears to do so in the minds of most. There is much less disgust awakened, as a rule, by "defalcation," or "financial irregularity," than by plain "theft;" but the people who have been the immediate victims of the swindler evince a preference for the shorter word. The good old Anglo-Saxon "lie" goes straight home, and ought to be used when there is clear occasion, instead of the polysyllabled paraphrases which are pleasanter to the feelings of the falsifier. One's "no" should be no in such matters—a "no" that has not the slightest suspicion of "yes" anywhere lingering about it. A single stitch of embroidery put upon evil, whether in word or deed, makes him or her who handles the needle a tool or ally of the wicked one.—Zion's Herald.

Brilliant, but Useless Sermons.

Sir Astley Cooper, on visiting Paris, was asked by the surgeon "en-chef" of the empire how many times he had performed a certain wonderful feat of surgery. He replied that he had performed the operation thirteen times.

"Ah! but, Monsieur, I have done him one hundred and sixty times. How many times did you save life?" continued the curious Frenchman, after he had looked into the blank amazement of Sir Astley's face. "I," said the Englishman, "saved eleven out of the thirteen. How many did you save out of one hundred and sixty?" "Ah, Monsieur, I lose dem all; but de operation was very brilliant." Of how many popular ministries might the same verdict be given! Souls are not saved, but the preaching is very brilliant.—Spurgeon.

The Rev. J. M. Buckley, D. D., of New York, is not only a first-class editor, but a capital preacher. He is at home on any subject of which he treats and writes, and speaks to the point, and with force and pungency. He has been recently giving a course of lectures on "Extemporaneous Preaching" before Gammon Theological Seminary, which have attracted ministers of all denominations, and which are spoken of in high terms. A man who defines his terms as clearly and comprehensively as he does in the following instance will command attention anywhere as an able and discriminating thinker and speaker. Extemporaneous speaking, he says, is "the delivery of thoughts previously conceived and adapted with more or less fullness and precision, together with such thoughts as may occur and such feelings as may arise, in an arrangement of words, sentences, and paragraphs wholly the birth of the occasion." He who prepares himself after this standard will be no ranting declaimer, or loose-jointed thinker, but will bring to the pulpit his best possible preparation in the study, and then seize the thoughts and illustrations that come with the delivery, or are begotten of personal contact with his audience, when mind is quickened and heart is stirred. No one will object to, but welcome, sermons constructed after this fashion.—Presbyterian.

THIS PATH IS BEST FOR THEE!

He chose this path for thee:
No feeble chance, or hard, relentless fate,
But love, His love hath placed thy footsteps here.
He knew the way was rough and desolate;
Knew how thy heart would often sink with fear
Yet tenderly He whispered, "Child, I see
This path is best for thee."

He chose this path for thee
Though well He knew sharp thorns would pierce thy feet,
Knew how the brambles would obstruct the way,
Knew all the hidden dangers thou wouldst meet,
Knew how thy faith would falter day by day;
And still the whisper echoed, "Yes, I see
This path is best for thee."

He chose this path for thee:
What needst thou more? This sweeter truth to know
That all along these strange, bewildering ways,
Our rocky steeps and where dark rivers flow,
His loving arms will bear thee "all the days."
A few steps more and thou thyself shalt see
This path is best for thee."

—Quoted in The Christian Guardian.

A Meditation.

Who am I? What is my business here? How am I meeting the obligations that are on me? And what will my poor answer be when I go to give account for my behavior here? I look back over the past. I think of the time when I was convicted and was a penitent. "How the pains of hell get hold upon me! I found trouble and sorrow." Indeed, I felt that I would be lost, but when I said: "I can't help it; Lord, save, or I perish!" oh, what a joy came to me! Then by and by I felt a call to preach that I tried to withstand. Thought I must be mistaken, or that the Lord had made a mistake; then was the struggle of my life. I felt it was preach or perish. I yielded, and was happy—yes, how happy! I asked for the church's indorsement, and received license. I was happy; the church had indorsed my call, and given me privilege to begin my life-work.

After a little while I was admitted on trial into the traveling connection of the North Mississippi Annual Conference. I was happier still. I had a place to preach all my own, but responsibilities and duties were often greater than I could bear; but the Lord kept his promise, and success attended my imperfect efforts, and after two years of experience that great and good man, Bishop McTyeire, laid his hand on me and ordained me deacon. The memory of that hour is fresh to-day; the voice of the Bishop seemed the voice of the Savior formally sending me into the world to preach his glorious gospel, and the hearty responses of the preachers seemed like a voice from heaven of all the hosts above indorsing what was being done: My soul was happy.

Two years more of happy experience, and I stood before the Conference for elder's orders, which was the gladdest day of all. This ordination was impressive and solemn. With the laying on of hands I seem to feel the weight of immortal souls and the responsibility of coming years as I would stand and plead with dying men to accept the world's Redeemer, as Bishop Hargrove repeated the solemn words of the ordination service. My soul was exceedingly happy. I was a preacher of the gospel by all the authority of heaven and earth—the most sacred, the most solemn, the most important calling in the universe. Whatever might be the duties of others in the church of God (and there are many that are helpful, important and sacred given by the same Holy Spirit), mine was without mistake to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ. What a glorious work! And after a ministry of fifteen years I am ready to exclaim: "Had I a thousand lives to live, I would spend them all (D. V.) as an humble preacher of righteousness, and that, too, in the Southern Methodist Church." How rich our heritage! What opportunities for work!

Besides preaching, I am to be a pastor, "to feed the flock of Christ;" and from time to time the church has added different duties and requirements of a pastor until he is the busiest man on earth. The fact is, he is overwhelmed with duties, all very much needed to be done, and he is obligated in some sort to do them. He has several hundred members to visit, to rebuke the wayward, stimulate the slothful, encourage the timid and faint-hearted, pray with the sick, talk with the children, console the troubled, and to superintend the Sunday-school, prayer meetings, Woman's Missionary Societies, Parsonage and Home Mission Societies, and Juvenile Societies, Epworth Leagues, to stimulate the building and repairing of churches and parsonages, and to have general control of all the collections ordered by the Conference, and to spend some time soliciting subscriptions for several church papers.

If any man on earth can do the impossible, a Methodist preacher can; but is it not about time for us to call a halt in this matter?

I find myself confronted with some, at least, mathematical impossibilities. I find the list of general assessments to have ten different claims. In addition, we are obligated to take collections for the Bible cause, and an Orphans' Home, and for Sunday-schools, making in all thirteen different claims, and we are expected to take these separately, that each one may stand on its own merit, and also to take these collections early in the year.

Now, I am on a circuit, and can get to my churches but twelve times, at most, during the year; so it can easily be seen what a dilemma I am in. Some will have to wait until the last of the year. And I am urged from several quarters to send in foreign missionary money. Again, I am reminded of my obligation to give a month to the Bible cause, and one to education, and one to the Orphans' Home enterprise, and one to Children's Day work; and the rain and cold weather has destroyed the possibilities of two months. I can't do what I am obligated to the way I am advised to do it. I am in trouble. Will some experienced, resourceful brother, who can manipulate affairs, help me out of this dilemma? I ask, too, have we not reached the place in our Zion where we ought to look out a number of men full of the Holy Ghost and of power, that we may set over these matters in some way? While we give ourselves continually to the Word of God and prayer, we are qualified to preach, but not to be financial agents; and the various financial interests of the church are of too much importance to be any longer bunglingly cared for, and preaching the gospel is enough to engage all the resources of any man on earth. And these are consecrated men of financial skill, who are anxious for a place to devote their lives.

Alabama State Sunday-School Convention.

Mr. Editor: I want to tell you something about the Alabama State Sunday-school Convention, which met at Tuscaloosa, Ala., April 8–11. The Sunday-school at this place elected me as their delegate, supplying me with such information as they thought would be needed. Well, I went, and had the best kind of a time. I had a young friend there who had me assigned to his home, where I remained till I left. They are nice, clever people, and delight in making their friends have a nice time while under their roof.

The streets of Tuscaloosa are about twice the width of most any city, and they are shaded by a row of oaks in the centre and on either side of them. Between the centre row of trees and the side row about five carriages may move along abreast, and then there will be room left. This makes the town a beautiful one, and I think that is one reason why the people are so good—they are not crowded to death in little narrow streets. I do not think there is a more beautiful town in Alabama than Tuscaloosa.

There are sixty-six counties in this State, and forty-four of them are organized—i. e., have county Sunday-school Conventions once a year, besides beat meetings. Each one of these forty-four counties had a representative at the State Convention except one. My county had eleven.

Bro. Meggs, of Indianapolis, of the International Committee, was present with us, and gave us a great deal of information about the Sunday-school work. Mrs. Crafts, of Washington, D. C., was also present, and added wonderfully to the convention. She is connected with the primary work, and understands it thoroughly. We want more such men and women like the two mentioned above.

There is great need of a field worker—a man or woman who will devote their whole time to the work of organizing Sunday-schools in every community where there is not already one. To support this field worker, the convention asked for $2,000 to employ one. One thousand five hundred and twenty dollars was raised in the convention, and the rest will be made up before the next convention, which meets in Birmingham.

The University of Alabama, located in Tuscaloosa, invited the convention to see the wonderful X-ray. The whole 351 delegates went out and saw it. I can not describe it; but if the others who saw it realize, as I do, that God's penetrating eye sees the heart of man just as easily as the X-ray reveals the bones of a human body, I think they were repaid for looking at it.

I had worked here 706 days without one day of rest, and to say that I enjoyed my trip would be inadequate to express it. Lyman.

Mormonism.

INFORMATION WANTED.

Mr. Editor: There have been from six to ten Mormon elders in St. Landry parish for the last four months. I hear that there are thirty of these elders engaged in missionary work in Louisiana; that the intention of the Mormon Church is to send a great host of elders throughout the South.

Now, this church, if it can be called a church, is so opposite to our teachings that we must post ourselves to warn the people.

True, I have read a good deal on the subject, including the pamphlet of Rev. Oswalt, but I desire a little additional information in reference to the depredations committed by the Mormons during the war and before. I knew their history is as black as midnight, but the details are lacking. I have but few books bearing on the subject, and no library near at hand to consult. Any information sent privately to me will be appreciated, particularly of the founding of this sect, their first military operations, when the idea of Joe Smith was to found a Western Empire, and, latterly, their robberies of emigrant trains, the most noted of which was the Mountain Meadow massacre in 1858.

So far they have made no converts, but seem to be getting considerable encouragement at Turkey Creek. They have, however, been all over the parish, including Opelousas. I have lost no opportunity of preaching against their infamous doctrines.

Probably an article gotten up in brief detail of the most important facts in connection with this sect may be good reading at this time, that the people be placed on their guard. But the information I seek above I should be glad to have at once from anyone.

Durant District Epworth League Conference.

A District Epworth League Conference has been called in connection with the Preachers' Meeting of the Durant district, which convenes at McCeel, May 5. Let every loyal Methodist in the district hear the call, and every community of Methodists send a delegate. Pastors and Leaguers, fill McCool with earnest Methodists, and make Evans feel that it means something to entertain the Methodists of our growing district.

The Epworth League meeting will embrace Wednesday afternoon and evening. A good program is ready.

For District Secretaries.

Kosciusko, Miss., April 19, 1897.

I do believe the common man's task is the hardest. The hero has the hero's aspiration that lifts him to his labor. All great duties are easier than the little ones, though they cost far more blood and agony. —Phillips Brooks.

Missionary Conference of Shreveport District.

This meeting was called by Mrs. Sligh, district secretary, to be held in Mansfield, April 14. We had a very harmonous meeting of one day and night. There were only ladies present in the day session, and we tried to have an informal meeting, heart-to-heart talks. We had some very encouraging talks. Mrs. LaPrade emphasized the necessity of more system in our work, more promptness in the auxiliaries reporting to their district secretaries, that they may report to the State officers, and thereby insure that correlation of work that is necessary to all well-regulated societies.

We urge promptness on the part of our treasurers. If we have but a few cents, it must be remitted at the stated times. March 1, June 1, Sept. 1, and Dec. 1 are the dates at which the quarterly reports should be forwarded to the State treasurers. If we have nothing to remit, we must send a postal stating that fact, that order may be preserved. While we stress the importance of promptly paying our dues, we must never fail to impress upon our members that the dimes are a secondary consideration; that our heartfelt sympathy and earnest prayers are necessary in order to make the dime most effective.

It is also urged that we put forth more effort to enlist the interest of the children. Where it is not practicable to organize juvenile societies, let them become members of the adult societies, paying 5 cent dues, and taking part in the exercises as far as the older heads deem proper. If they grow up in the work, they will not feel that embarrassment that now hampers the older members.

We must not forget to work for our "literature." Urge our members to take and read our church and missionary papers. If we discussed our "Missionary Advocate" and "Little Worker" as freely as we do the "Delineator" and floral catalogues, no doubt we could find more ready to subscribe.

Shreveport Auxiliary seems to be more alive than most of us. It has the entire support of one Bible woman in China, besides a great deal of other work. The importance of a free distribution of leaflets was discussed. It was advised not only to read them at the society meetings, but to send them to the absent members and keep them reminded. It was decided best to always use the printed blanks that are furnished us for making our quarterly reports. There is less work and more system than we can otherwise attain.

By special invitation the delegates took tea at the college, which we enjoyed. We were much gratified to see some long-needed improvements going on about the college, and more so at the flourishing condition of affairs within. We hope soon to see the school receiving its merited patronage.

The main features of the evening, after devotional exercises by Bro. Harper, were resolutions of sympathy for our beloved State president, Mrs. T. P. Fullilove, in the prolonged and extreme illness of her husband. Our hearts go out to her in this hour of sad affliction. Bro. Harper, in his prayer, touchingly bore her to the throne of divine grace.

Mrs. Ricks read an interesting paper on missions. It was comprehensive, and the best attention was given. Mrs. C. J. Foster read a paper on, "What Woman Has Done," It was very interesting, and full of encouraging facts. It showed deep research, was beautifully read; consequently, much enjoyed.

Every society must send a delegate, if possible, to our annual meeting next Summer. It will be held in Homer at a time not yet decided upon.

L. Paxon,
Dist. Rec. Sec. pro. tem.

Since the meeting we have heard of the death of our faithful friend and sympathizer, Mr. T. P. Fullilove. But for the sustaining grace of her unwavering faith, our beloved leader would be plunged in deepest despair. May our heavenly Father not forsake her!

Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

On April 12 the ladies of Lafayette, La., organized a Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, consisting of ten members. Although comparatively few in numbers at present, they feel confident of enlisting the interest of others in this work, not only on account of its importance, but also because they have the earnest co-operation of their pastor, Rev. I. T. Reams, and that of his estimable wife. The officers elected to serve during the year are as follows: Mrs. J. J. Davidson, president; Mrs. P. D. Bercaud, vice-president; Mrs. Robt. Greig, recording secretary; Mrs. Crow Girard, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Felix Demanade, treasurer.

Lafayette, situated on Vermilion Bayou, is the western terminus of Morgan's Louisiana and Texas and Texas and New Orleans railroads. It has a population of about 3,500, and is one of the growing towns of Southwestern Louisiana. A handsome new church erected last year speaks well for the liberality of its Methodist people, and the zeal and energy of its ladies, who realized by their own efforts in their Ladies' Aid Society during the year about three hundred dollars.

In the midst of this broad field of Catholicism these Christian women are working nobly and faithfully in the "Master's vineyard." Doing the work that is nearest, they are ready, in his service, to spend time, talents and money, and the Lord is blessing their labors of love and faith by encouraging results. Some one has said: "It is not what we intend, but what we do, that makes us useful. It is not a few faint wishes, but a life-long struggle, that makes us valiant." If this be true, the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society at Lafayette is destined to become a power for good, not only to themselves, but to others engaged in this great connectional work.

E. R. Kennedy.

Dear Sisters: When we read such glowing accounts of "what God hath wrought," through the instrumentality of this branch of woman's work in other Conferences, we take courage and press on, knowing that our Leader "is no respecter of persons," and will just as surely bless his work in our hands, if we undertake it "with an eye single to his service," relying on his guidance for success.

For years I did not understand that beautiful Scripture, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." I thought it was a promise only to that anointed band of ministers who proclaim the gospel message from the sacred desk; but, thank God, it has a deeper, sweeter meaning now, and through it I learn that whosoever will "follow" him shall be made fishers of men. There is no ground for discouragement while we are co-laborers with him!

How can we compute what is being accomplished as the result of our efforts? We are plainly told, that "the kingdom of God cometh not with observation." A fisherman might as well gaze on the surface of the sheet of water that is to be the scene of his angling and try and calculate the number of fish that will reward his toil! What can he know of the finny tribe that dip and swim in the crystal depths below? And Christian workers know less of the human tribe, that are to be rescued and saved from the seething depths of sin and worldliness by the "net" of God's "Word." There is an all-important lesson to be learned in the history of those first fishermen. We find when they were not fishing they were "mending their nets."

R. R. Parker.

Selections.

Unanswered Prayer.

It is quite common to mistake our own incapacity for God's unwillingness to give. We can not take more than our hearts and lives can hold, not even of the free and abundant grace of God. The limit of blessing for every man is the limit of capacity. Even God does not put more than a pint into a pint cup. Therefore God's richest blessing is the blessing of enlargement. When a soul submits to him, he causes it to grow, so making room for more light and larger power of use every blessing.

God's will to give may always be taken for granted. Our will to receive is not so sure. And when we are disposed to complain of our small share of spiritual blessing, may it not be best to ask ourselves whether it is not our will that fails, and our littleness which can not find room to receive? God's apparent grudging, we may be sure, is always a sign of our incapacity.

What we most need, therefore, is continual enlargement of soul, which comes to men only from the continual presence of God's Spirit. He does not offer gifts at random; much less does he enlarge a soul which has no desire for him. He who wishes that spiritual capacity may be put up anywhere along life's dusty way, and that one may set his heart upon the earth and then enjoy the full measure of a disciple's happiness besides, will surely be disappointed.—The Congregationalist.

You have been led to trust in Lord Jesus, to receive from him salvation by grace, to unite with his church, and now keep you ever in this doctrine and way of living. Let Jesus be your all in all. There is no life like that of one who lives in the favor of Christ. To receive him as a free gift preserves the soul from self-righteous pride and from self-accusing despair. It makes the heart grow warm with grateful love, and thus it creates a feeling in the soul which is infinitely more acceptable to God than anything that can possibly come from slavish fear.

And knew that your heart will not prosper unless it is filled with an intense desire to help others. He who does not pine to lead sinners to Christ has never been under the spell of Christ's love. At once go to the work of the Lord. Begin at home—visit your neighbors—enlighten the village or the city where you live—scatter the word for the Lord wherever your hand can reach.—Spurgeon.

Perhaps we too often forget that the difficulties of the gospel are not inherent difficulties of human experience. Christianity, as Wesley somewhere says, involves no difficulties, but it does not remove them. If it could be shown that Christianity introduces something into life wholly alien from its common tenor, or assumes principles which we do not act upon, or whose consequences at variance with the natural reason of men, we might pause before receiving its teachings. But if, on the contrary, its mysteries rest on the fundamental mysteries of our finite being; if it takes its stand on human nature as it is, and interprets its aspirations; if it carries the thoughts of which we feel the beginning within ourselves, and opens gleams of hope where we acknowledge that our prospect is clouded, then it can not be monstrous to reject it for reasons on which we should with equal justice declare life itself to be impossible.—Watchman.

One of the greatest of human attainments is the economical use of that which we already have, instead of go a-hunting for new resources because we waste so many of those already in our possession. This is true not only of our money, food, clothing, wood; it is true of our knowledge, thoughts, and words; it is true of our spiritual powers, even of our faith in God. Do we realize that we have spiritual forces lying dormant, powers of faith lying idle and unused?

We would get more answers to our prayers than we do if we would define our requests to those things which we really want. Many a man prays for a baptism from above who would run if he saw it coming; and not a few of those who pray most eloquently that their lips may be touched with a coal from off the altar would faint dead away if they felt an angel go for the tongs.—Rev. J. Lafferty.

If you do not wish for his kingdom don't pray for it. But if you do you must do more than pray for it. You must work for it.—Ruskin.

Never try to persuade others to accept theories you have not wrought into practice yourself.

God never gives a Christian more strength than he needs for the task he is willing to do.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,
Editor Christian Advocate.

MUL-EN-OL is the greatest of all antiseptic dressings. Is a sovereign remedy for healing flesh wounds on man or beast.

FROM THE WORK.

Laura L. Chevalier, Vidalia, April 19, 1897: "The water is falling slowly. Vidalia is like a flower garden in the midst of waters. Although we have been fighting the waters the last two weeks, the Sunday-school has met regularly. We missed our Easter service. The water prevented our pastor reaching his appointment. God has blessed our Sunday-school!"

Rev. C. H. Ellis, Lutcher, La., April 20, 1897: "One week ago I came to this place with Bro. E. A. Vail to hold a series of meetings. The hall had been secured and notice of meeting given out. The interest has steadily increased. The hall has been well filled the past two evenings and some are seeking. One found pardon last night. Please send me a few copies of ADVOCATE. I find some Methodists here who ought to take your paper."

Rev. W. J. Burt, Tyro circuit, North Mississippi Conference, April 19, 1897: "We have just returned from our second quarterly meeting. Dr. T C Wier was with us. He fed the flock of Christ richly and bountifully on Saturday and Sunday. We all went home stronger, better and happier. The stewards were present and made a good report as before. The preacher reported some improvement at the parsonage; such as a new garden fence and material for a new yard fence. Seven new subscribers for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, and 50 for the World for Christ. He also reported $27 for the Orphans' Home. We are now taking our collection for foreign missions. We returned home from the meeting just in time to weep with Dr. Harris and his family, who are door neighbors of ours. Lucy, his sweetest, best and fairest daughter of fourteen Summers, fell asleep in Jesus this morning after a few days' illness. May the Lord comfort the weeping family!"

P., Hickory, Miss., April 18, 1897: "Hickory is on the Newton and Hickory work—Bro. D. P. Bradford, pastor. We are well pleased with our pastor. The work is prospering in his hands. He is truly a man of God and in favor with the people. The Lord is graciously present in the services of the sanctuary. The Sunday-school is doing a gracious work for the Lord under the efficient management of our superintendent, Bro. G. B. Harper. Last year at our protracted meeting the Sunday-school scholars were the first to reap the benefits of the meeting, and it was a beautiful sight to see the children made happy in the love of Christ. We have an Epworth League which is doing good and increasing in interest. We are expecting to receive increased impetus through our delegates when they will have attended the State Conference at Water Valley. May the Lord take entire possession of the hearts of the young people and make the Epworth League a great blessing to the church! Delegates elected to the State Conference were: G. B. Harper, president; Dr. E. B Partin, first vice-president; Mrs. G. B Harper, Mrs. J. L. Wells, Mrs. J. McDonald and Miss Ephie Jones, organist. Our weekly prayer meeting is doing good and proves a blessing to those who attend. More anon."

Rev. John W. Ramsey, P. C., Waterford, Miss., April 13, 1897: "Please allow me space in the ADVOCATE to write of a revival that we have just closed at Waterford. This has been a hard place. Whisky was sold illegally, the people gambled and danced. The man who sold liquor was converted and joined the church. Gambling has been broken up, and dancing is a thing of the past. There have been twenty-five accessions to the different churches, with more to follow. Fifteen joined the Methodist Church. Almost the whole town has been taken for Christ, the Lord, and we magnify his great name, and unto the Lord of hosts we ascribe all the praise. Bro. W. D. Bass did all the preaching. He is earnest, a true man of God. God is in him and his work, and he reaches the hearts and consciences of the people. He employs no clap trap methods. Penitents are invited to the altar and converted in the old time way. To those who want help in revival work I would say you can not engage one whose work will be more satisfactory than Bro. Bass. He works in perfect harmony with the pastor. I, myself, and my people thank God he came among us and led our people to Christ. May God bless him in his work wherever he goes!"

Rev. Sam B. Cox, Jonesboro, Miss., April 19, 1897: "I have seen reports from many of the brethren, and they are all encouraging to me, especially, as Rev. G S. Morehead said, those of the North Mississippi Conference. We arrived here shortly after Conference and got in a full month's work in December. Our parsonage and post office are out in the country four miles from the narrow-guage, and nine miles from the standard-guaged railroad. We have five churches, two Sunday schools, one Epworth League of over thirty members, doing good work. Our people are spiritual and prove the feeling genuine by the fruits they show. They have paid the domestic mission assessment in full; half the education assessment in subscription, and foreign missions. Well, let me tell you We had a Good-Friday, all day meeting, with the inevitable 'dinner on the ground.' Rev. B. B. Thomas, of Middleton, Tenn., and Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of Ripley, Miss., were with us in the spirit of the Master. We made a collection of over forty-five dollars We have half the foreign mission money in hand and send it today, the other in good subscription, and will get it by and by. These brethren did my work inestimable service. Our very best of presiding elders, Rev. H. R. Tucker, is moving things all over the district, and especially do we feel him here. I am not a candidate for the waste-basket, so I will desist. Success to the ADVOCATE."

COLBERT—WILLIE EADS COLBERT.

"Gone to dwell with the pure and good
Where the beautiful dreams of life come true."

God gave her life in Carthage, Leake county, Miss., Aug. 9, 1873, and called her from the walks of men in San Antonio, Texas, Feb. 13, 1897. Here was a nature of inexpressible purity, brightness, sweetness and love. As a child, she was obedient, docile, and affectionate, exhibiting even then many of the characteristics of the beauty which marked her after life. At nine years of age she joined the Methodist Church. She was educated in Staunton, Va. She then came to the home of her parents in Utica, Miss., where, with her two elder sisters and younger brothers, the happiest days of her life were spent. The sudden and sad taking away of her father broke up the happy circle and brought in its train sorrow, sickness and death. The mother went into a decline which soon developed into consumption, and never did invalid have more faithful and tender nursing than that rendered her by her beautiful and affectionate daughter. Her physicians think that the disease which caused her death in less than three years was thus contracted. After this sorrowful time she moved with her sister and brothers to Jackson, Miss., where she was reunited with the church.

It is seldom that so many attractions are centered in an individual as those that marked the personal loveliness of Willie Colbert. She was tall, stately as a queen; fair, golden haired and beautiful, with a gentleness of disposition and a comprehending sympathy which made everybody her friend. A woman of high ideals and fixed principles, possessing an almost morbid sense of duty; kind and just in her estimate of her fellow-men; loyal and faithful to her friends, unselfish and devoted to those bound to her by nearer ties—counting it her chief pleasure to give them happiness. All who knew her were impressed with the unusual strength of her character and the sound judgment manifested by one so young in the administration of the financial interests committed to her. To the older sisters she was a wise counsellor, and to the younger brothers she supplied the place of the mother with forgetfulness of self and in the fear of God.

I count it as one of the privileges of my life to have known and loved her as a friend. In the early Spring, when confiding to me her conviction that the disease had taken hold upon her, she said: "I do not fear. If my Father wants to call me home, is not this as good way to go as any? I may have so long to prepare myself for what he has in store for me."

She went to Mt. Eagle in the Summer, but derived no benefit from the change. In company with her oldest brother she went to San Antonio, Texas. She said to her pastor on the day of her departure: "I used to think I trusted Jesus, but know now I never did before." Her entire sickness was borne with a spirit of patience and courage. As the hours which were bringing the end drew near, she talked to those about her of her trust and hope in the Savior. Even then her thoughts were for others, and a token and message were left for each of the loved ones. "Don't cry, Stella," she said to her sister; "it will excite you, and that might excite me, and I am not one bit afraid;" and as they watched the almost visible meeting with her King, they knew that truly there was no cause for fear. When after the long journey her friends in Jackson looked on the sweet face the smile which was altogether heavenly still lingered there—and it was as the countenance of an angel. May God be magnified by such a life and death!

"I thought to find some healing clime
For her I loved; she found that shore,
That city whose inhabitants
Are sick and sorrowful no more.

"Such sweet communion had been ours,
I prayed that it might never end;
My prayer is more than answered—now
I have an angel for my friend.

"I wished for perfect peace to soothe
The troubled anguish of her breast;
And, numbered with the loved and called,
She entered on untroubled rest.

"Life was so fair a thing to her,
I wept and pleaded for its stay
My wish was granted me, for lo!
She hath eternal life to-day."

Depression, despondency and despair come to a women when there is any irregularity in the performance of the functions of her womanhood. Even healthy women are nervous, irritable, cross and blue when there is any slight derangement of the organs distinctively feminine. The whole body seems to be influenced by it. The nerves are on edge. Temper and tears come without apparent cause. These things show the importance of womanly health. These things show that there is great, urgent, constant need of such a remedy as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This great medicine works directly on but one set of organs in a woman's body. It soothes any inflammation that may be present. It purifies and invigorates. It cures when doctors have failed, and it does away with any necessity of distasteful examinations and local treatment, which are so frequently insisted upon by physicians. The "Favorite Prescription" is the preparation of an eminent and successful practitioner. It has been used by Dr. Pierce in his daily practice in the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., one of the leading medical institutions in the world. It has cured thousands of women and relieved them of the pains and distress that many times lead directly to death or insanity. It can be obtained at any drug store.

Every woman in America ought to have Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, and ought to read the several chapters of the book devoted to the reproductive physiology of woman. It is of the most vital importance that every woman should know about these things, and they are told in plain, simple, straightforward language by a physician who has made a specialty of the diseases of women. The book contains over 1000 pages, and a copy, paper-covered, may be obtained absolutely free by sending 21 one-cent stamps, to cover the cost of mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. If French cloth binding is desired, send 10 cents extra (31 cents in all).

$150 —IN— GOLD GIVEN AWAY.

Who can form the greatest number of words from the letters in "HOLIDAY?" You can make ten or more words, we feel sure, and if you do you will be well repaid. Do not use any letter more times than it appears in "HOLIDAY." Use no language except English. Words spelled alike but with different meaning can be used but once. Use any standard Dictionary. Nouns, pronouns, verbs, adverbs, prefixes, suffixes and adjectives—anything that is legitimate will be allowed. Work it out in this manner: Holy, lay, day, had, etc. Use these words in your list. The publishers of THE SUNNY SOUTH will pay $50 in gold to the person who makes the largest list of words from the letters in the word Holiday; $25 for the second largest list; $10 EACH for the next five largest lists, and $5 EACH for the next five largest lists. For the next twenty five largest lists EACH will receive a Kodak, the regular price of which is $4.00 each. The above rewards are given free and without consideration for the purpose of attracting attention to the Sunny South, great illustrated family and literary weekly, which has 12 large pages, 72 columns each issue, all original matter, with the very best long and short stories, in addition to its numerous departments, such as "Woman's Page," "Children's Page," "Blue and Gray Page" and a page devoted to "Southern Industries," etc. To enter this contest it is necessary for you to send 50 cents for a three months' subscription with your list of words and every person sending 50 cents and a list of ten words or more, is guaranteed an extra present by return mail (in addition to THE SUNNY SOUTH) of a 100 page book, "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush," by the famous Ian Maclaren. This book has attracted more attention in the United States than any book of recent years. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case or money refunded. Lists should be sent in at once. This contest will close June 1st. The names and addresses of successful contestants will be printed in the June 5th issue of THE SUNNY SOUTH. Remember, every contestant gets a prize. Note: If you do not want "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush" we will send you "The Story of An African Farm," "The Other Man's Wife" or "The Master of Hellentrae." In writing mention the book you want us to send you. Address THE SUNNY SOUTH, Box 22, Atlanta, Georgia.

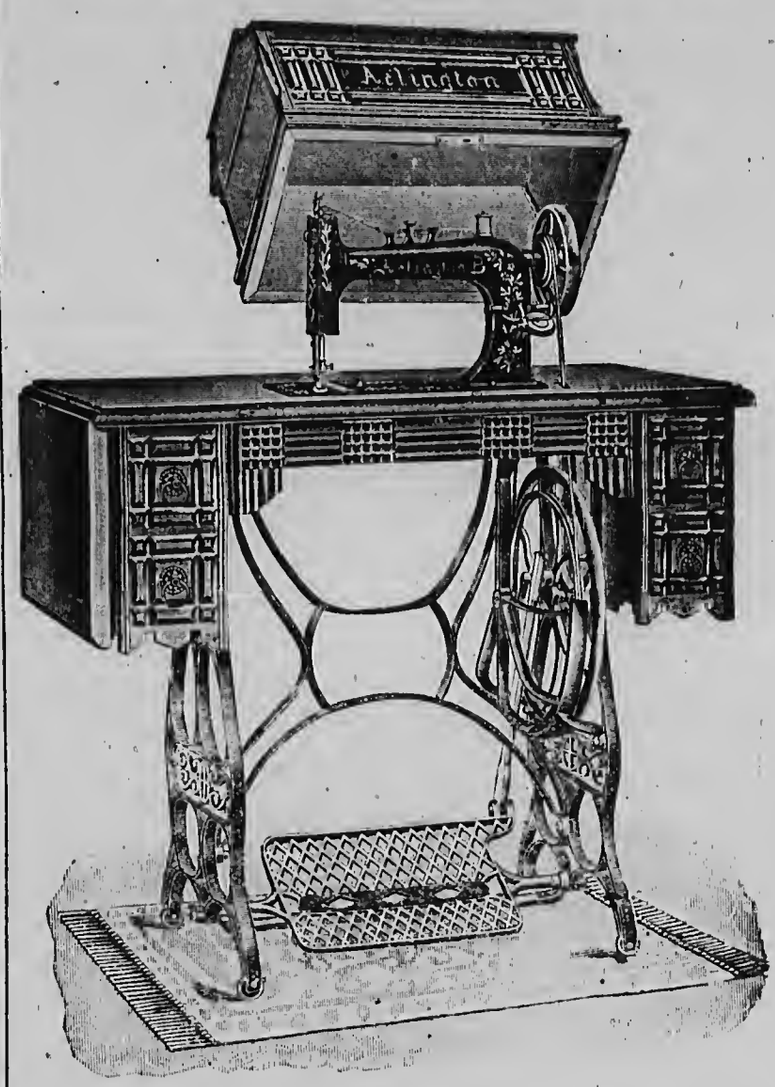
Our Machine Offer

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.



A rounded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as an automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot hemmer one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to May, '98, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

Life evermore is fed by death
In earth and sea and sky;
And, that a rose may breathe its breath,
Something must die.

—J. G. Holland.

A vision of heavenly things is helpful, even though it be quite momentary.

Men are not to make money, but money is to make men. — Lyman Abbott.

Every hour comes with some little fagot of God's will fastened upon its back.—Faber.

Did anybody ever see a captious critic that was willing to take his own medicine?

God pardons like a mother who kisses the offense into everlasting forgetfulness.—H. W. Beecher.

It requires no effort to float down stream, but when you would go up stream, steadily and vigorously must you ply the oars.

Fail! fail! In the bright lexicon of youth, which fate reserves for glorious manhood, there is no such word as fail."—Bulwer.

No biblical conception of heaven so commends it to the human heart as that of a home—"our Father's house of many mansions."

If I could do any good by worrying, I would worry away to my heart's content, but as it is useless, I find best to let it alone.

Cheerfulness is of priceless value in every calling and in every sphere of life, but nowhere does it yield larger results than in Christian work.

If anybody has ever made money or friends or accomplished any good by whining, he ought to proclaim it to the world. Our columns are open to him.

Says a great man, "I know not how many more Sabbaths God may give me, and it would be a poor preparation for my first Sabbath in heaven to have slighted my last Sabbath on earth." Selah.

The thing we have most to fear is not the liveliness of the sinners, but the deadness of the saints —that remoteness from God, that inexperience of the great realities that makes God a name and a report rather than a felt person, and the superb verities the possession of the few rather than the realization of the many.—Dr. Parkhurst.

"What room is there for Christianity in such a crowded life as mine?" said a business man one day to Phillips Brooks. Quoting this in the pulpit, the great divine replied as follows: "This is as if the engine had said there is no room for the steam. It is as if the tree had said it had no room for the sap. It is as if the ocean had said it had no room for the tides. It is as if the man had said he had no room for his soul."

Sober-Mindedness.

The importance of sobriety, by which is meant seriousness, self-control, evenness of temper, and moderateness of conduct, is much dwelt upon in the Scriptures. The Apostle Paul, writing to Titus, exhorts him to teach believers, young as well as aged, to be sober-minded, while Peter also enjoins upon Christians to "be sober and watch unto prayer." A large part of the human race, however, seem to despise everything that has the garb of gravity. Many, alas! consider life a huge joke, meant only for pleasure and frivolity, taking little thought of the morrow, or of destiny. Like the grasshopper in the fable, they fritter away the Summer of opportunity, and when the Winter of reckoning comes wretchedness and ruin stare them in the face.

The stolid indifference which not a few manifest to the warnings and claims of the gospel is but the result of long continued levity and aimlessness. Constant frivolity unfits for grave duties and employments, and prevents noble impulses and gracious influences from taking root, just as repeated raking of soil after the sowing of seed renders their germination impossible. People who lack serious aims and intentions, however pleasant they may be in company, rarely become anything more than ciphers in the world. "Fools make a mock at sin," and the giddy, as well as the unrighteous, "do not like to retain God in their knowledge."

The conviction that life is real and earnest has but slender hold upon multitudes who care for nothing save what they can enjoy through the medium of the senses. Those who are seldom serious after a while become so confirmed in the habit of treating all things lightly that the most important issues in life receive not so much consideration as the eating of a meal or the reading of society news.

Indifference and the spirit of levity keep far more out of the kingdom than does unbelief. A giddy, simpering youth or maiden is often more difficult to convert than an outbreaking sinner. In some sections the young people are so flippant and irreverent that nothing is too sacred to escape their fun-making propensities. They laugh and converse during public prayer, and even joke in the presence of death. Some respect neither age, nor piety, nor the house of God. Where such is the case it is time for mourning and fervent prayer for the spirit of conviction. We might as well expect figs of thistles as to look for worship and piety where solemnity and thoughtfulness are not.

Not all the unrighteous are irreverent, but every irreverent man is unrighteous — yea, even wicked. Would that all could keep in mind the Scripture exhortation, "Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God, and be more ready to hear than to give the sacrifice of fools: for they consider not that they do evil." It is stated that during the Revolutionary War Gen. Washington not unfrequently rode ten or twelve miles to attend service and was ever "so deeply reverent as to produce the happiest effect upon the congregation." Would that he had more imitators in this day!

No sensible person expects to see old heads on young shoulders, and we recognize that it is natural for youth to be gay and light-hearted. We must raise our voice, however, against habitual frivolousness so often met with. There ought to be seasons of meditation, moments of soberness, times of thoughtfulness in each life, old or young, in order that one's mind and conduct may not be wholly given up to evanescent things. We do not plead for that form of religious gravity which condemns all gayety, and seldom relaxes into fun-making and gladness.

Soberness does not mean gloom and the wearing of sad apparel, but signifies a realization of important things, a true understanding of the nature of life and the regulation of conduct in accordance therewith. The Bible teaches that we must avoid "foolish talking and jesting, which are not convenient" (that is, befitting), and that "denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world." People when in trouble do not go to the frivolous for comfort. We can be sober and yet not sad, serious and yet not gloomy, merry but not flippant, joyful and yet sedate. As some one has happily said, "Christ's doctrines are touched with the sunlight, and flavored with the flowers of the fields." True piety is as cheerful as the day.

Parents are largely responsible for the irreverence and lack of seriousness of their children. Who could expect concern and reverence of them when their fathers and mothers so often act as if there were nothing in religion?

Sober-mindedness also involves self-mastery, which is fundamental in the work of grace. To be sober in the scriptural sense means far more than to abstain from the use of intoxicants. It includes moderation in every department of conduct, evenness of temper and placidity of mind due to the indwelling of the Spirit. As the Expositor's Bible expresses it: "The sobermindedness of the New Testament is something more than the temperance and self control of Plato and Aristotle. Its sphere is not confined to the lowest sensual enjoyments. It is that power over ourselves which keeps under control not only bodily impulses, but spiritual impulses also." Sober-mindedness will keep us from trusting to transient emotion and spiritual exaltation to carry us through. Whether we be in light or in shadow, in the glow of love or in the chill of temptation, it leads us on in the path of duty, bringing to our realization that back of mere impulse and favoring circumstance there should be submission of will and a deep sense of obligation.

Most Christians find it easy to be sober in certain respects, but at other points their desires and inclinations get the better of them. They are imprudent in speech, or rash in action, violent in temper, stubborn as to their own plans, or, perhaps, over-dependent upon feeling. There is great need just now for sobriety in the church. Equanimity and calm dispassionate action will do much towards settling disputes and differences that otherwise will grow worse. While we ought to seek clear conviction as to duty and covet ardent feeling with reference to divine things, we must not estimate our spiritual condition entirely by our feelings. To quote again from the Expositor's Bible: "Impassioned feeling that leads on to conduct, strengthens character; impassioned feeling that ends with itself, weakens it. If religious excitement is not to do us more harm than good, by leaving us more insensible to spiritual influences than we were before, it must be accompanied by the sobriety which refuses to be exalted by such an experience, and which in making use of it controls it. One act of self-denial, one genuine sacrifice of pleasure to duty is worth hours of religious emotion and thousands of pious thoughts." We may not possess wealth or genius or personal magnetism, but if we cultivate sobriety in its various forms, we can not fail of doing good, neither of religious enjoyment.

Bishop Sessums' "Modern Beliefs."

[The following paper was read by Bishop Keener before the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting last Monday morning, and he was, by unanimous vote, requested to furnish it to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for publication.]

After reading over and over the Picayune's report, April 12, of the summary of Bishop Sessums' Lenten discourses, as made by himself, on "The Old Religion in the New Language," I find it difficult to determine what and how much of the orthodox faith he does accept. He evidently attempts to quadrate Christianity with some modern theories of science, such as Darwin's theory of "Organic Evolution," and "Natural Selection," which personifies an abstraction; theories which Sir Richard Owen, the greatest authority in physiological and biological science, rejects with a weight of anatomical demonstration that has not been answered, proving that there are centers of animated nature which determine its species, and boundaries which can not be passed, no more than those which separate the orbits of planets, or those of the sea, to which the Almighty has said, "This far shalt thou come, but no further;" theories which Lord Salisbury, in his address before the British Association, October, 1894, at Oxford, declares to be "not proven;" theories which Mr. George J. Romanes, the accepted apostle of Mr. Darwin, in all his intricate speculations, repudiated, a little while before death, as visionary and false, and refuted by his profession of faith in the Savior.

I say that this seems to be the general tenor of the Bishop's summary. He says: "The scientific movement in our generation is simply the evolution of a thinking process to seek to transform man's conception of the universe into the realization that it is an actual, vital organism, drawing its existence and perfect machinery from the great, loving, sentient God." And, still further, he identifies nature and God and man in one Pantheistic unity. He says: "Therefore the great mystery of the Trinity is understood now to mean, not that the mysterious triad exists alone in some desert abyss of space, but that God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, are part of the universe, and dwelt in it, and that the external world is but a manifestation of the living God; that man and God and the universe are fused in one." "This," he adds, "is the Christian conception of the Trinity." But I should rather say, this is Schleiermacher's Pantheism.

He throws a cloud upon the personality of God in the following sentence: "The old idea of the church being a select company of God's elect, who, after the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds, will be gathered to a personal God, has been replaced by the grand and inspiring conception of the sublime truth that the true church embraces all humanity, as a family under God, as one common Father, because God is God."

He repudiates as a sort of traditional myth the fall of man, and the gift of a Redeemer, as the basis and necessity of a sacrifice for sin—all which he virtually ignores. "The old idea lags on even to this day of man's having lapsed from his high estate, and of having become debased and corrupted, the image of God having been displaced by evil.... by the sin of some remote, forgotten and unknown progenitor."

His idea of the atonement is simply the power of example in the life of Jesus. Eternal punishment he scouts as an impossible conception: that the sinner will be ashamed of himself, until, after the lapse of ages, he is fit for being restored to the bosom of God. The Incarnation—that is, the unity of God and man—will work out everything, whether here or hereafter, according to the purpose of God, after an evolutionary law; and in "the lapse of ages" all will end in a quasi Nirvana.

If this is the faith of the Protestant Episcopal Church, it reminds one of the ice-pack of the Arctic seas, which moves a thousand miles in longitude without the intrepid mariner's suspicion of any motion; but if it is not, the scientific theories of the good Bishop ought to be corrected at the next General Assembly of its Lay and Episcopal Councils. It certainly differs widely from what we understand to be the true meaning of the Apostles' Creed and the general articles of faith that define Orthodox Protestant Christianity. And in so far as we represent that faith, we beg leave to enter our dissent from Bishop Sessums' most wonderful estimate of modern science and its relation to the Church of Christ.

The scientific world has just about given up the evolutionary theories of Darwin as the convicted and confessed nonsense of the nineteenth century at the very time the Bishop is preparing to constitute them a part of the impregnable foundations of the faith.

In conclusion, we would most respectfully refer the Bishop to the closing sentence of Lord Salisbury's address before the British Association: "I prefer to shelter myself in this matter behind the judgment of the greatest living master of natural science among us, Lord Kelvin, who, from this chair twenty years ago, said: 'The hypothesis of natural selection does not contain the true theory of evolution, if evolution there has been in biology.....I feel profoundly convinced that the argument of design has been greatly too much lost sight of in recent zoological speculations. Overpoweringly strong proofs of intelligent and benevolent design lie around us, and if ever perplexities, whether metaphysical or scientific, turn us away from them for a time, they come back upon us with irresistible force, showing to us through nature the influence of a free will, and teaching us that all living things depend on one everlasting Creator and Ruler.'"

The Magazines for May.

FRANK LESLIE'S POPULAR MONTHLY.

John P. Ritter, in the May number of Leslie's Popular Monthly, describes, in a liberally illustrated article, "Some American Castles." The "Fair Maids of Morocco" are pictured and described by Frederick A. Ober in the same number. Another important article is "Japan's Three Invasions of Corea," by Teiichi Yamagata, a relative of the great Japanese marquis. The attractive series of papers on "American Universities and Colleges" is continued with an article on the University of Minnesota, by John Cochrane Sweet. A well-known theosophist, Martin F. Gitt, tells in an interesting way "What Theosophy Means." There are many other articles of interest.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.

In the May number of the Cosmopolitan, President Gilman, of John Hopkins University, contributes an article entitled "Modern Education." "The New Congressional Library," by Nannie Belle Maury, is well described and beautifully illustrated in this number. Quite a number of illustrations are given with the article, describing "The Glories of War," by H. Collins Walsh. I. Zangwill writes of "The Turkish Messiah." A charming story, "The History of Lady Betty Stair," is told by Mellie Elliot Seawell.

CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE.

Cassell's, for May, has an unusual number of illustrations, which set off its unique contents. "The New Railway to London," written by B. Fletcher Robinson; "The Tale of Other Cities," by Grant Allen, are well worth the reading. "American Belles of London Season," by Mrs. Harcourt Williamson, is illustrated from photographs of notable women. "At Other Courts," by Spencer Warren, is also interesting. "The Gift of the Gods" is a splendid continued story.

THE QUIVER.

The Quiver opens with an interesting article entitled "Mementoes of Protestant Reformers," with illustrations. Two serial stories—"When the Morning Cometh," by Evelyn Everett Green and H. Louisa Bedford; "All Through Prejudice," by Scott Graham—add to its attractiveness. A complete story by David Lyall, entitled "Across the Seas," is a well-told story.

THE ST. NICHOLAS.

The St. Nicholas, always the young folks, favorite magazine, has an interesting story by George B. Smith, entitled "General Grant's Ride." Also a number of other stories of interest to the young people.

NOTES.

Rev. J. M. Alford reports five accessions and several conversions as the result of the meeting at Tchoupitoulas.

Dr. Sawyer occupied the pulpit of Carondelet Street Church last Sabbath, and preached a vigorous and edifying discourse from Psalms exix, 94.

The corner stone of the Mississippi Orphans' Home at Water Valley will be laid with appropriate ceremonies on the thirtieth. Dr. J. W. Boswell, of the Nashville Advocate, will deliver an address.

The meeting at Morean is still in progress. Bro. Scurlock has been assisted by Dr. Sawyer and several of the city pastors. Up to Sunday there had been two additions to the church and several conversions.

At the close of the present session Rev. C. C. Fisher, of the Holston Conference, will succeed Dr. C. Pope as president of Millersburg (Ky) Female College. Prof. Fisher is a graduate of Emory and Henry College, and has been engaged in educational work fifteen years in Sullins College and Martha Washington College.

Prof. John Siebe Johnston, of Homer, La., was married on Sunday, April 11, to Miss Rebecca Mary Ellison, of Jackson, Miss. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mary T. Ellison, near Millsaps College. The groom is a son of Rev. P. A. Johnston, of the Louisiana Conference. The bride is a daughter of the late Rev. J. W. Ellison, of the Mississippi Conference. May their pathway through life be strewn with flowers!

Rev. J. H. McCoy, is the youngest man that ever filled the pulpit of the Methodist Church in the classic city of Tuskaloosa, and he has the largest audiences of any minister in the city, and his congregation is growing with the time.—Alabama Advocate.

We invite attention to the notice of Dr. Sawyer on first page. Let the Methodists of the city turn out in full force. Dr. DuBose is a man of pre-eminent abilities both as a rhetorician and an orator. Those who attend have a rare treat in store for them. Then, too, the cause is one which should lie near the heart of every true Methodist.

We received about four days since an invitation to deliver an address at the laying of the corner-stone of the Mississippi Orphans' Home. We regret that we could not accept, as it would have afforded us very great pleasure to attend that notable gathering. We have from the first felt very great interest in the movement for a Methodist Orphans' Home.

It takes ten minutes on some Sabbath morning to annihilate Huxley; ten more to knock Farrar's "eternity hope" to pieces; ten more to do away with Ingersoll; and about five to close up on the second coming. What is going to become of the poor burdened soul who has drifted into the service, of his bereavements and broken future and penitent feelings? —President Hurst.

It is a mistake to suppose that the damage done to the ADVOCATE by the fire is very slight. We stated the fact correctly when we said in our last issue that the building was badly damaged, though not destroyed. The damage to the building (which belongs to the church) is about $2,000. One entire wall, four stories high (the one on the Canal street side), has to be rebuilt. It will be probably two months before we can use our press. This not only entails expense in getting out the ADVOCATE, but also cuts us out of job work.

When Noah Webster, the great lexicographer, accepted Jesus as his Savior, with characteristic promptitude he made known to his family his new purpose of life. And the next morning he called them together and told them, with deep emotion, that, while he had aimed at the faithful discharge of his duties as their parent and head, he had neglected one of the most important—that of family prayer. After reading the Scriptures he led them, with deep solemnity, to the throne of grace, and from that time continued the practice, with the liveliest interest, to the period of his death.—Chauncey A. Goodrich, D. D.

When the train bringing the McKinley party into Washington stopped at the station, the incoming President found himself, after the custom of like times, greeted by a great concourse of people and surrounded by masses of flowers. Selecting from among these flowers a bunch of the most beautiful, when his salutations were made he walked the length of the platform alone and handed them to the engineer who had brought the train in safety. It was an evidence of delicate courtesy possible, perhaps, only in a democracy, but it revealed, as no message to Congress and no proclamation to a country could reveal, the real nature of the man—the fundamental impulses of his character. Even those disagreeing with him as a statesman must do honor to him as a man.—Harper's Bazar.

No man is so great a preacher that he may not be a good pastor, and no man so successful a pastor that he may not be a creditable preacher. Indeed, it seems to us that in doing both the minister will do best in each. No man, to do his best and work the longest, should study the entire day. As a rule, four or five hours of close study is as much as a man can wisely do in a day. The other five or six hours of a ten hour day he should give to other kinds of employment which give fresh air, exercise and diversion. The minister who spends from eight o'clock in the morning until twelve or one in his study, puts in the full afternoon in rapid, systematic and faithful visiting among his people, and has the evenings for his family, social meetings, miscellaneous reading, etc., gives the largest promise of real and prolonged success.—Exchange.

To Preachers.

To the preacher who sends the largest number of new cash subscribers between now and the first of July we will present either an Arlington B Sewing Machine or a gold-filled watch guaranteed to be a perfect time keeper and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, whichever one may be preferred. To the preacher sending the next largest number and also to the one sending the third largest number we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, latest edition, with modern additions.

Should the successful contestant prefer it, we will pay him cash instead of the premium.

Under this offer no commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Those who wish to compete for those premiums should notify us at once.

The Advocate for $1.

From now until the first of June we will receive new cash subscriptions at the rate of $1 for nine months. Moreover, we will give those who subscribe under this offer the benefit of our premium Bible offer. Take notice that this offer is made only to new subscribers. We will make a liberal offer to our present subscribers after awhile. Meantime, let all who are in arrears pay up, as no one who is in arrears can get the benefit of any of our special offers. Let all our preachers make this offer known to our people at once. We will send a sample Bible for use in canvassing to those who desire it. We will also send sample copies of the ADVOCATE on request.

Nowhere else can you get the very best Bible on the market at so low a rate as from the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Read This.

From now until the first of June we will sell our Emerald Bible at $1, instead of $1.15, to subscribers who comply with conditions named in our offer. After June 1 the price will be $1.15.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-sixth annual camp meeting at Seashore will open (D. V.) on Wednesday evening, July 14, next, and continue for about eight days.

Arrangements have been made for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit this delightful spot. A handsome and commodious two-story lodging-house—Keller Lodge—has been erected and comfortably furnished for visitors, in addition to the other accommodations supplied by the trustees.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale a reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. It is probable tickets will be placed on sale July 1 to 31, and be good to return on until Sept. 30. Two daily mail trains will stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of 1,400 feet; fanned by the refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico. The sea-bathing afforded is unsurpassed by any resort on the coast. A fine artesian well supplies the grounds with excellent drinking water, which is now "piped" over the entire encampment. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure and exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued and overheated visitor from our smoke-envoloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the camp meeting should address W. B. Thomson, New Orleans, chairman Lodging Committee. Questions concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.; Dr. M. F. Tucker, Mobile, or J. H. Lakin, Montgomery, Ala.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge. Board will be furnished them at the restaurant at half rate.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences. Eminent ministers will assist in the meeting. Bishop C. B. Galloway, and Dr. E. E. Hoss, of Nashville, Tenn., will be specially invited to preach during the camp meeting.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

Rev. Frederic R. Marvin, long time pastor of the First Congregational Church, of Great Barrington, Mass., and at one time a practicing physician, a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, says of Ripans Tabules: "The formula has long been in favor with medical men, and the method of preparation in the present form is modern and a great convenience. I always keep a vial of the Tabules upon my dressing table, and use them with confidence whenever occasion arises. For a disturbed condition of the digestive organs I know of nothing so good, and for an 'all-round' family remedy I do not believe there is anything better to be had."

LITTLE THINGS.

A good-by kiss is a little thing,
With your hand on the door to go,
But it takes the venom out of the sting
Of a thoughtless word or a cruel fling
That you made an hour ago.

A kiss of greeting is sweet and rare
After the toil of day,
And it smoothes the furrows plowed by care,
The lines on the forehead you once called fair,
In the years that have flown away.

'Tis a little thing to say, "You are kind,
I love you, my dear," each night,
But it sends a thrill through the heart, I find,
For love is tender, as love is blind—
As we climb life's rugged height.

We starve each other for love's caress
We take, but we do not give,
It seems so easy some soul to bless,
But we dole the love grudging, less and less.
Till life is bitter and hard to live.

—Floating.

Know Your Own Work.

It is related that a man made "a thousand dollars clear money in one year by minding his own business;" and that he "made another thousand dollars by letting other people's business alone." It is a great thing for a man to attend to his own business; it is very important also that he should learn to let the business of others alone. Because the Lord has set one man at a certain work, it by no means follows that everybody else must do that work, or even help him while he is doing it. The same Master who has given him his work may have given another man an entirely different work, which may be equally important, and to the performance of which he is solemnly bound.

Each man, then, should know and love his own work. He may think it is the most important work in the world: it is, so far as he is concerned; for it is the work which the Lord has given him to do. But he must not disparage the work of others; they may have work just as important as his; work which God has given them to do. He may not see the necessity of their work, he may not know how to do it; but let him beware how he meddles with it.

The gospel track has room enough for all the trains which God sends out; and if they will follow the time table, they will keep out of each other's way. The great difficulty is, when trains undertake to pass each other on a single track, then come collisions, explosions, and troubles of all sorts; but if men keep strictly to their own work, the Lord, who knows his own business, and other people's business, too, will guide and protect and prosper and bless every man who fulfills his mission here on earth.

Your lot may be a lowly lot, your sphere may be very narrow; you may trundle a wheelbarrow while some one else is engineer for an express train. All right! your wheelbarrow will not explode, and if you manage it properly, will not get off the track. You may not go so fast as the express, but in case of emergency you can stop a good deal quicker. Be contented to do little things, provided they are right things, and remember that most of the work which makes a great show is done by many men, while one or two prominent figure-heads get the credit for it; and the little work which you may do single-handed for the Lord may be far greater than the amount actually done by those whose usefulness and success you perhaps may envy. When the Lord shall come to reward his people according to their works, he will not give his reward to organizations, or Boards of Directors, or secretaries, or to great societies; his reward shall be "to give every man according as his work shall be." In that day there will be a careful scrutiny into each individual case. King Ahasuerus, in the midst of royal pomp and luxury, had forgotten how Mordecai the Jew had saved his life; but there came a night when he could not sleep, and then when the Chronicles of his reign were read before him, he enquired what had been done as a return for this signal service, and then Mordecai's time of honor came.

So a day will come when the Lord will remember the cup of cold water given in a disciple's name, and many will be astonished and surprised to know how far-reaching has been the work which they have wrought for God. The word spoken in season, the kindness done to the sick, the sorrowing and the stranger; the gentle training of a little child; the song of praise sung from a devout and loving heart; the tract handed to a passer by; the word spoken by the wayside; the humble testimony to the power, and grace, and goodness of God; the warning word spoken to one who is going astray; the note of cheer uttered in the hour of darkness and despondency—all these, little as they may be thought of, may, in the great day, assume an importance of which we have never dreamed. If we know our own work and keep steadily at it, our toils will certainly tell for the glory of God and the good of our fellow-man, and the Lord will remember our work, and reward it in his own good time.—The Christian.

Little Things.

Young people in beginning life are apt to be impatient at the first few steps that apparently make no advance, forgetting that seeming "trifles make up the sum of life," just as in building the little bricks laid carefully, one at a time, side by side, and securely cemented together, make at last the great, strong structure. A young man, having exhausted his patrimony in obtaining a professional education, settled himself in a town already filled with successful lawyers to practice law. One day one of these old lawyers asked him how, under such circumstances, he expected to make a living.

"I hope I may get a little practice," was the modest reply.

"It will be very little," said the lawyer.

"Then I will do that little well," answered the young man decidedly.

He carried out his determination. The little things well done brought larger ones, and in time he had become one of the most distinguished jurists of his State.

Again, a certain old Bishop, who was fond of finding odd characters in out-of the way places, was visiting in a quiet neighborhood. One day, in a walk with a friend, he came across a cross-roads settlement of a few houses. Among them was a snug little shoe-shop, kept by an old negro man, which showed signs of prosperity.

Interested in that old cobbler, the Bishop stopped for a chat.

"My friend," he said, "I would not think so small a business as mending shoes would pay so well."

"Ah," said the gentleman with him, "old Cato has the monopoly of shoe-mending in this region. No one else gets a job."

"How is that, Cato?" asked the Bishop.

"Just so, master," replied Cato. "It is only little patches put on with little stitches or tiny pegs. But when I take a stitch it is a stitch, and when I drive a peg it holds."

Little things well done!

Politeness at Home.

How much does it cost to say, "I thank you?" Why not practice it at home—to your husband, to your wife, to your domestics? If a stranger does you some little act of courtesy, how sweet the smiling acknowledgment! If your husband or wife, ah, "it's a matter of course;" no need of thanks.

Should a visitor or acquaintance tread on your dress, your best, very best, and by accident tear it, how profuse you are with your "Never mind," "Don't think of it," "Accidents will happen;" if a husband does it, he gets a frown; if a child, it is punished.

"Ah, these are little things," say you. They tell mightily upon the heart, let me assure you, and, little as they are, they disturb peace or create pleasure in the family circle.

A gentleman stops at a friend's house and finds it in confusion. He does not see anything to apologize for; "Never think of such matters." Everything is right—cold supper, cold room, crying children. "Perfectly comfortable!" Goes home where his wife has been taking care of the children or attending the sick, and working her life almost out. Then he does not see why things can not be kept in order; "There never was such cross children before." No apologies accepted at home. Oh, why not look at the sunny side at home as well as abroad, and try pleasant words instead of surly ones?

Keep clear of personalities in general conversation. Talk of things, objects, thoughts. The smallest minds occupy themselves with personalities. Personalities must sometimes be talked because we have to learn and find out men's characteristics for legitimate objects; but it is to be with confidential persons. Do not heedlessly report ill of others. And as far as possible dwell on the good side of human beings. There are family boards where a constant process of deprecating, assigning motives, and cutting up character goes forward. They are not pleasant places. One who is healthy does not wish to die at a dissecting table. There is evil enough in man. God knows! But it is not the mission of every man and woman to detail and report it all. Keep the atmosphere as pure as possible and fragrant with gentleness and charity.—Indiana Baptist.

A Woman's Hour.

"Please state to the court exactly what you did between 8 and 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning," said a lawyer to a delicate looking little woman on the witness stand, according to the Detroit Free Press.

"Well," she said, after a moment's reflection, "I washed my two children and got them ready for school, and sewed a button on Johnny's coat and mended a rent in Nellie's dress. Then I tidied up my sitting-room and made two beds and watered my house plants and glanced over the morning paper. Then I dusted my parlor and set things to right in it and washed some lamp chimneys and combed my baby's hair and sewed a button on one of her little shoes, and then I swept out my front entry and brushed and put away the children's Sunday clothes and wrote a note to Johnny's teacher, asking her to excuse him for not being at school on Friday. Then I fed my canary bird and gave the grocery man an order and swept off the back porch, and then I sat down and rested for a few minutes before the clock struck 9. That's all."

"All!" said the dazed lawyer. "Excuse me, Judge; I must get my breath before I call the next witness."

"Thou God Seest Me."

I once read of a father who wanted his son to carry a parcel to a certain place on Sunday, and being told to carry it in his pocket where it could not be seen, the little fellow replied, "God can see in my pocket." "Johnny," said a man, winking slyly to a boy who was tending his father's store, "you must give me good measure; your master is not in." Johnny looked solemnly into the man's face, and replied: "My Master is always in." Johnny's Master was the all-seeing God. Let every one of my little friends, when tempted, adopt his motto. "My Master is always in." It will save you from falling into many sins. "Thou God seest me;" don't forget that. Do you know about Lafayette, that great man who was the friend of Washington? He tells us that he was once shut up in a little room in a gloomy prison for a great while. In the door of his cell was a very small hole cut, through which a soldier watched him day and night. All he could see was the soldier's eye; but that eye was always there. So, no matter where you are, God's eye sees you. If you sin, how dreadful is that eye; if you are good, how blessed!

There's nothing gained by fretting;
Gather your strength anew,
And step by step go onward,
Let the skies be gray or blue.

An Ancient Proverb.

He who knows, and knows that he knows, is master.

He who knows, and does not know that he knows, needs a teacher.

He who does not know, and knows that he does not know, needs love.

He who does not know, and does not know that he does not know, is lost.—Journal of Education.

For one thing, we must remember that cheerfulness has to be learned. It does not come naturally. The cheerfulness which comes naturally is not that which our Master bids us to have. We are to be of good cheer in tribulation, and this certainly is not a natural experience. Nor does Christian cheerfulness come as a direct gift from God when we become Christians. All the fine things in Christian nature and Christian culture have to be learned. Even Jesus himself "learned obedience by the things which he suffered." We all have to learn the lessons of beautiful living. Life is a school, and God is continually setting a new lesson for us. George McDonald says: "Till a man has learned to be happy without the sunshine, and therein becomes capable of enjoying it perfectly, it is well that the sunshine and the shadow should be mingled, as God only knows how to mingle them. When we find ourselves facing some unpleasant duty or in the presence of a new trial or sorrow, we should not forget that it is another lesson set for us."—From "The Blessing of Cheerfulness," by J. R. Miller, D. D.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine. Learn how to tell a story. A well-told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick-room. Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows. Learn to stop croaking. If you can't see any good in the world, keep the bad to yourself. Learn to hide your pains and aches under a pleasant smile. No one cares to hear whether you have the earache, headache, or rheumatism. Don't cry. Tears do well enough in novels, but they are out of place in real life. Learn to meet your friends with a smile. The good-humored man or woman is always welcome, but the dyspeptic or hypochondriac is not wanted anywhere, and is a nuisance as well.—Exchange.

HYGIENE

Water as a Medicine.

The human body is constantly undergoing tissue change. Worn-out particles are cast off and the dead eliminated from the system, while the new are ever being formed, from the inception of life to its close.

Water has the power of increasing these tissue changes, which multiply the waste products, but at the same time they are renewed by its agency, giving rise to increased appetite, which in turn provides fresh nutriment. Persons but little accustomed to drinking water are liable to have the waste products formed faster than they are removed. Any obstruction to the free working of the natural laws at once produces disease, which, if once firmly seated, requires both time and money to cure.

People accustomed to rise in the morning weak and languid will find the cause in the imperfect secretion of wastes, which many times may be remedied by drinking a full tumbler of water before retiring. This very materially assists in the process during the night, and leaves the tissues fresh and strong, ready for the active work of the day.

A hot bath on going to bed, even in the warm nights of Summer, is a better reliever of insomnia than many drugs.

Inflamed parts will subside under the continual poulticing of red hot water.

Very hot water, as we all know, is a prompt checker of blood; and besides if it is clean, as it should be, it aids in sterilizing our wound.

A delicate stomach will nearly always gratefully receive a glass or more of hot water.—National Educator.

MRS. ROSA BRILEY LINTON.

Twelve years ago, when I began work in Kavanaugh College, at Holmesville, Pike county, Miss., there came to the college from a farm in the hills a beautiful, black eyed, fair and rosy-cheeked little girl named Rose Briley. She was so beautiful, so gentle, so modest that we all learned to love her. In love of the shy, sweet child, I nicknamed her Rosebud, and she wore the name through all the years of her college life. She passed in course of time from the preparatory to the collegiate departments, and from class to class until, by the time the sweet little girl had grown to a fairer, more radiant young woman hood, she had passed our junior class. She loved the beautiful—she could not do otherwise—and she gave herself during her last year with us to the study of art, the making of beautiful things.

I remember well when she gave her young life to the Master's service and her hand to the church. Reared a Baptist, she very properly became a member of that church. When I saw her make this dedication of herself to this beautiful life, I thought her lovelier than ever.

I went from old Kavanaugh in 1890, but I would hear at times from my beautiful Rosebud. They told me that she taught her loved art for awhile. They tell me that she married Mr. Zeb Linton. That took place on the twenty-sixth of last April. What a honey bride my Rosebud must have made! Ere the honeymoon—prolonged as it must have been—had waned, the "Rosebud" dropped to the tomb. A letter from her sister tells me that she died at Fernwood on Feb. 13, only a month ago. She died in the first throes of beautiful, holy young motherhood. They laid my Rosebud and her own tiny babe away in the grave, and I shall see her no more until I find her as radiant as ever on the hills of God.

It is ever thus: the loveliest things of earth are wont to fade, and the fairest forms must crumble to the dust. Ah, no; "there is no death. That which is loveliest passes upward. God gathers these flowers to his own garden, where beauty never dies and loveliness fades not forever. My Rosebud has been transplanted to be a rosebud forever. Thank God for this lesson his Christ has given us! Farewell Rosebud; we shall meet again.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

Meridian, Miss., March 12, 1897.

THOMPSON—HENRY CLAY THOMPSON (familiarly known as Rube Thompson) was born in Benton county, Ala., March 7, 1844, and died, after a lingering illness, at his home in Monroe county, Miss., March 20, 1897. On Sept. 28, 1865, he was married to Miss Rhode Hughes, of Alabama. In the Autumn of the same year they emigrated to Mississippi, and settled in the neighborhood where he died. Three children—two in childhood, and another a young daughter just blooming into womanhood—preceded him to the better land. Of the family, the desolate widow alone remains. May a compassionate Father sustain her!

Bro. Thompson embraced religion and joined the Methodist Church at the age of about sixteen, and lived and died in its fellowship. There were periods of estrangement and backsliding, but these were always followed by deep penitence and a restoration to the joys of salvation. As a Christian, he was humble and unpretentious, and none knew his failings better, nor deplored them more, than he. A man of decided convictions, he was always on the right side of every moral question. He was progressive and up to date in his methods of farming, and made for his family an attractive home. Nearly two years ago he was in a low state of health, and his life was despaired of. Though he recovered, he was never strong again. At that time, with his usual forethought and sound judgment, he made his will and adjusted his business, preparatory to his departure. Notwithstanding all this, he had an aversion to dying which never quite forsook him until within a few days of the end. God heard his prayer and the prayers of his friends that this fearing might depart, and his end was not only peaceful, but grandly triumphant. A few hours before he asked an attending friend if he could pray, and on being answered in the negative, his wife insisted that his neighbor could and must pray. Yielding, he said to him, "I hope this will be a blessing to your soul." A few hours later he tried to sing, but was too weak. Calling for his little niece, he asked her to sing and play, "When we get home to that beautiful land," and during the singing was supremely happy. He left messages of affection to loved ones, gave last instructions concerning his funeral, left his parting blessing upon those who had attended him, asking that his neighbors, Dock Bradley and Port Mealar, be especially mentioned in his memoir for their kindnesses, and then calmly fell asleep. We buried him at Lebanon beside his aged mother, who went to heaven just two months before. We shall see him again. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

GATLIN—The subject of this sketch, Col. JAMES S. GATLIN, was born in Alabama, April 20, 1811, and died in Johnston Station, Miss., Feb. 21, 1897.

When about four years of age his parents moved to Mississippi and settled in Pike county, where he spent the remaining part of his long life. He was known and loved for his sterling Christian character, his fidelity to duty in all the relations of life.

Bro. Gatlin united with the Methodist Church when a young man, and was ever found true and faithful to his vows and to his church. He loved the church, and was always in his place in the sanctuary when able to do so. It was always interesting and instructive to hear him refer to those apostolic men of God, Drs. William Winans and Benjamin Drake. He was baptized by Dr. Winans, who, with a host of consecrated itinerant preachers, shared the hospitalities of his home.

Col. Gatlin was a safe and trusted counselor, was elected to represent his county in the Legislature, and was a member of the Board of Supervisors for years.

He will be missed, but he left to his family and friends an example worthy of emulation. His wife preceded him to the glory land in 1881. He raised a large family, only two of whom survive him—N. W. Gatlin, with whom he lived after he lost his wife, and John Gatlin, of Magnolia. These noble sons did all they could to contribute to his happiness and well-being in his declining years.

May all who loved him follow him as he followed Christ, and meet in the beautiful beyond! His end was peace, an eternity of bliss his reward.

W. G. BACKUS.

MURPH—ERWIN HOLTON MURPH was born Nov. 24, 1851, and died Dec. 27, 1896.

He was raised a Methodist, and in early life was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, and from that time was true to his church and his God. For several years he was a steward in the Grand Bayou Church of the Webster circuit, and was ever faithful to the trust reposed in him. His house was the home of Methodist preachers, and many preachers in the Louisiana Conference, as they read this, will recall his kindness and hospitality. His influence was always on the side of right on every question.

He was happily married seventeen years ago to Miss Alice Wimberly, who, with six children, mourn his loss.

As a husband, he was true, considerate, and affectionate; as a father, he was firm, gentle, and loving; and in the highest, noblest sense he was a perfect gentleman. Naturally kind-hearted, of cheerful disposition, of a patient, trustful nature, his generous, joyous nature endeared him to all who knew him at all times, and was true and exemplary without ostentation. He was tender, solicitous, judicious, and benevolent.

As a worker in the church, he was untiring but not noisy; and as a neighbor and citizen, his place will be hard to fill. The holy religion he professed in life sustained him in the dying hour. His faith was bright and strong while the waves of the river of death rolled over him, and in his last moments he waved the palm of victory over death, and then went home to God.

CONNELL—MARGUERITE POITEVENT, only child of Will and Louie F. Connell, was born Aug. 29, 1892, and died March 9, 1897.

This tells of the passing of a beautiful young life. Marguerite was a remarkable child, beautiful in person, endowed with rare gifts and graces of mind and heart, to which had been added the careful training of a fond Christian mother. She was loved by everyone. Never have I seen in one so young the cluster of the Christian graces so well developed. Not long before the angels came for her pure spirit she asked her uncle, Geo. B. Shelby, to sing, "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine." "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Marguerite has gone. A beautiful bud, loaned to earth for a while, has been plucked by the angel keeper that it may bloom in unsullied luster in the paradise of God. The joy and light and life of the home circle has been broken. Behind her she left an aroma of sweetness, a conception of purity, a vision of beauty, a holy influence that will ever linger in the sacred sanctuary of memory.

May the Father's everlasting arms sustain the bereaved parents in this their sore affliction! Though there is loss for you on earth, there is more in heaven, and after awhile you will clasp your dear one to your hearts, to part no more.

CHAS. A. SPRAGGINS.

MCCULLAR—CLARA MAY, aged about two years, daughter of Bro. Bob and Martha McCullar, died April 12, 1897.

Little Clara May, after an illness of about three weeks, heard Jesus say, "Suffer little children to come unto me," and obeyed the heavenly voice. She is now in heaven. The flower that promised to bloom for earthly parents, and shed its fragrance in their home, has been transplanted to happier regions.

Jesus says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Parents, if you are laden with grief, try Jesus, and see if he does not give you rest.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Chronology; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; A Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Customs, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever published heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscribers for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.00.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to May, '98. (A little later it will be June, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

The French ambassador, M. Camber, has notified the Porte that the French government intends to take under its protection the Greek Catholics in the Turkish Empire. As yet it has not been declared which power will protect the Orthodox Greeks.

Brussels has gone wild over the project of converting itself into a seaport. Not only the people, but the authorities as well, seem to take it for granted that the moment the ship canal connecting the city with the coast is open to navigation, all maritime traffic will at once abandon the port of Antwerp for the capital.

Notwithstanding the reports of Grecian successes which have been so frequent during the past few days, it now appears that these brilliant achievements were but the last desperate attempts to hold the frontier line and stem the tide of Turkish invasion. Apparently the limit of endurance was reached Friday, and the Greeks, worn out with constant fighting and unable to re-enforce their lines, were no longer able to drive back the steadily increasing force of the Turks. After several times defeating the Turkish troops at Mati, the Greeks were finally compelled to give way.

The attempt to serve God without love is like rowing against the tide. Love makes duty sweet. The angels are swift-winged in God's services because they love him. Love is never weary.—Watson.

It is usually the politician out of office who cries up "reform" most loudly and persistently. When once safely in, he gradually sings another tune. This does not speak very well for the ordinary candidate for official station, but it is hard to go against party interests and partisan environments, particularly where the spoils of office are concerned. The public is getting tired of the pre election reformer in municipal, State and national affairs, and would like to see more of the genuine article.—Presbyterian.

THREE LESSONS.

There are three lessons I would write,
Three words as with a golden pen,
In tracings of eternal light
Upon the hearts of men.

Have hope! Though clouds environ round
And gladness hides her face in scorn,
Put thou the shadow from thy brow,
No night but has its morn.

Have faith! Where'er thy bark is driven,
The calm's disport, the tempest's mirth,
Know this, God rules the hosts of heaven,
The inhabitants of earth.

Have love! Not love alone for one,
But man as man thy brother call;
And scatter like the circling sun,
Thy charities on all.

Thus grave these words upon thy soul,
Hope, faith, and love; and thou shalt find
Strength when life's surges maddest roll,
Light when thou else wert blind.

Some Glimpses of Munsey.

BY IMMANUEL PADRONOWSKI.

Now, let anyone read Munsey's sermons. One will delight a chemist, another an astronomer, another a mathematician, another an anatomist, another a musician, and so through the category. He had the genius of research, an inspiration of investigation and elucidation. His psychological side was a marvel. It deserves much comment. We may but glance at it, for one can not otherwise half interpret the man. "His nervous system, the most delicately impressible that was ever strung upon a human frame, responded to every breath and movement about him." So says Bishop Keener. This "hair-hung, breeze-shaken" nature; this frame, "tremblingly alive all over," was the result of the interaction of sensibility and imagination. He seems to me, as a youth, to have been like Shelley's "Alastor" in the poem of that name:

"By solemn vision and bright silver dream
His infancy was nurtured. Every sight
And sound from the vast earth and ambient air,
Sent to his heart its choicest impulses."

Everyone knows how glowing temperament, lively (and delicate, by way of distinction) sensibilities, and a vivid imagination, shape the character, and give vibrancy and impressionability to the nervous system, until a man becomes like a most delicate Æolian harp, responsive to the softest zephyrs. As Munsey grew, was solemnized, and finally led into conversion and his holy office, there arose the consciousness that these rare gifts of imagination and exquisite sensibility invested him with a mission. Hence there came, from a sense of duty as well as a play of faculty, the cultivation of imagination. It became a habit. The facility grew by use. His wing grew strong. The long flights, the wheelings and soarings, became "a property of easiness." He roamed through vast circuits in all realms. His kindled, vision-swept soul strung and unstrung his nerves until he became a phenomenon in nervous organization as well as in vividness and sustainedness of imaginative flights. And it was not only of green and sunny countries, and brooks, vales, fragrances, flowers, songs of birds, he mused, or

"Such thoughts as youthful poets dream
On Summer eves by haunted stream."

And while he had many visions "that brought all heaven before his eyes, that dissolved him into ecstacies," yet he knew "the secrets of that prison house" which dilated the eye with horror, racked the frame with shuddering, "froze the blood" and harrowed up the soul;" and night after night the active brain teemed with visions of howling furies and thousand horrors of hell—"All monstrous, all prodigious things." Incensed, for the nonce, and in the creative fury, like Satan, he might say, "Myself am hell." Like Dante, he had trodden the "valley of the dolorous abyss," and, like Bunyan, had gone through the valley of the shadow of death, with its thunders and lightnings, and greans of damned, and horrors of devils. Now, Macaulay says Dante had been in hell, and his visions had shaped his character, and deeply engraven their traceries on his features in furrows of sorrow and woe. And Taine says: "Is there a man living (now) who could withstand the storm of passions and visions which swept over Shakespeare, and end like him as a sensible citizen and landed proprietor in his small county?" Does anyone doubt that Munsey was terribly shaken by his visions? In his close of the first sermon on "Eternal Punishment" he says (after one of his tremendous flights), in speaking of eternity, "The thought has made me restless at night." That is a self-revelation which needs no comment.

How this fine-fibred, delicately constructed being was swept and unstrung by his moods is most forcibly narrated. Bishop Keener says of him on page 14, introduction, "When he came to New Orleans (on a certain occasion), his nervous system was a mere wreck." A writer in the Christian Advocate, of Richmond, Va., speaks of him on one occasion: "Such was his physical prostration after the two Sunday sermons that he tossed on his sleepless bed for two or three nights." On another occasion one speaks of him thus: "The Holy Spirit came down and so filled him that he could neither speak nor move, and was carried from the pulpit as one dead."

It ought to be superfluous, after all we have written and quoted, to say anything further on this phenomenal susceptibility, and its outcome on the man and his auditors. And yet the latter is one of the greatest monuments of the man.

Doubtless it was largely owing to this seizure by the celestial rapture, this divine possessedness, that he owed much of his sway. The reader will remember the very remarkable language of Bishop Keener: "It is questionable to my mind if there lived any greater master of an audience, either in this country or England." The phrase, "master of an audience," is felicitous, of peculiar potency of praise, the highest tribute possible, taken in connection with Munsey's holy aims and achievements. And this is not hyperbole, nor a tribute in the trite or conventional looseness of eulogism. The Bishop records such a triumph in these words (in describing Munsey's figure of the "Lost Soul," after a lecture at Centenary College chapel): "I had heard it before, but to me it was fully as great as ever, while the audience, at its conclusion, was so bewildered as to rise up in an unconscious way, facing each other, and not knowing for some moments whether to remain or leave the room." We doubt if this effect or triumph has its parallel in all the annals of pulpit eloquence. If so, only in a few instances that are worth recording and analyzing here. Unless our memory be at fault, the only effects that approach Munsey's on the occasion in question were those of Massillon upon his utterance of the words, "God only is great;" some incidents in Whitefield's preaching, and effects upon the occasion of Jonathan Edwards' great sermon, "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God." I leave out of the account St. Augustine and Savonarola, and one or two others, because of circumstances differentiated so widely from those of Munsey. Whitefield's spell was not so all-pervading, so fusing, so unifying, all-mastering. We remember Chesterfield's exclamation, "My God! he is lost," as Whitefield depicted the blind wanderer as he was about stepping over the precipice. But that was only one auditor. We remember how the sailors in the gallery exclaimed, "Take to the long boat!" as Whitefield, in describing a shipwreck, cried, "What shall we do?" But that was only a part of the audience. And Whitefield was one of the most consummate actors; had, in fact, a histrionic education, with a rare culture in elocution, a play of features remarkable, a most lively sensibility, and a voice of flexibility, sympathy, reach and richness beyond almost any ever recorded.

Jonathan Edwards' great sermon, "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God," caused great groaning and shrieking, and some of the audience seized fast hold of the pillars and braces of the meeting-house to save their sliding feet from the gulf of ruin he was picturing. His voice was feeble, and his manner was anything but oratorical. This action of exciting some of his hearers to seize the pillars might be called a feat, if using that word did not impair the dignity of the occurrence. It was power, mastery; you can not get deeper in the analysis. Still, it lacked breadth of enthrallment.

Massillon's triumph was more like Munsey's in its sweeping inclusiveness of spell, its all-embracing mastery. When he uttered the words, "God only is great," the whole congregation started to their foot, and interrupted the preacher by their murmurs and exclamations of terror and despair. Anyone who will read Abbe Maury's noble description—one of the handsomest descriptive pieces ever written—of this achievement of Massillon's will see that this grand coup was a most elaborate piece of oratorical finesse, and studied for effect with consummate art, and modulated, with a skill of accrescence, to the climax, almost beyond belief. It was such action, such reaching after and calculation of impressiveness, that made the great actor, Baron, say of him: "Here is an orator. We are actors." Then, too, Massillon had great accessories—above all, a most emotional, susceptible, effulve race—in his auditory.

Truth is, it is extremely difficult to adequately estimate just how truly great it is to produce such an effect as Munsey did on the occasion in question. We have sought to impress it by comparing him with others. How shall we better illustrate the rareness and greatness of the achievement? We will borrow an illustration from Macaulay: "One of the French philosophers, who accompanied Napoleon to Egypt, tells us that, when he first visited the great Pyramid, he was surprised to see it so diminutive. It stood alone in a boundless plain. There was nothing near it from which he could calculate its magnitude. But when the camp was pitched beside it, and the tents appeared like diminutive specks around its base, he then perceived the immensity of this mightiest work of man."

Reader, where did you ever see one effect an audience as did Munsey in the premises? Whom did you ever read of in sacred oratory as having done so? Because the man was frail, lank, unprepossessing in "action and utterance," are you, an intellectual creature, who profess "wit and worth and words, action and utterance and power of speech to stir mon's blood," to sneer at his analysis-defying spell? Do you not remember that the lamp Aladdin had was rusty and unshapely, but, at rubbing it, supernal potencies were at beck and call of its owner, beyond "charms, and spells, and conjuration, and mighty magic?"

Reply to an Open Letter to Rev. J. M. Beard,

WHICH APPEARED IN THE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, APRIL 22.

To the irrelevant portions of the document we have no time to make reply, but in the interest of truth we must be allowed to correct Bro. Powell when he misstates facts to make us appear in an unfavorable light to the public; as when he declares that we said to him in the presence of Bro. Peebles that my presence in his district was incidental and not designed, when he knew to the contrary. As well as we remember, the statement was made in answer to a question whose object did not seem very obvious, but which I gathered to mean that there was a suspicion on his mind that we had found our way to his territory in order to provoke him to a controversy. To set his mind right on that subject, we beg to say further that thirty-six hours before we broached the horizon of Bro. Powell we had not the faintest intention of ever crossing the aforesaid danger line. A brother who lives near the city, casually meeting us in our office, volunteered the information that he was going to McHenry to hold a meeting pre-arranged between himself and the people, and asked us to accompany him. At that time we did not know that there was a church organization at McHenry, and had embraced the belief that there was not. Our intention at first had been to start a day earlier, but Bro. Rawls consented to wait for us in view of the fact that we had changed our original program to accommodate him—a fact which would subtract at least twenty-four hours additional from the intentionalness and "malice aforethought" of our turning aside into the parts of Hattiesburg and McHenry. Under these circumstances, how could we know that Bro. Brown's Gulf Port Mission embraced the latter place, or that Bro. Powell would hold a Quarterly Conference there at the end of the week, as we never read his announcements in the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE? We call on Bro. Rawls and all others concerned to clear us from the unwarranted charge that we either knew of the coming of the august presiding elder, or fled terrified from the scene when made aware of it. On the contrary, we did not leave McHenry until near the middle of the day on Saturday, hoping to meet the presiding elder, which purpose was defeated by Bro. Powell's failure to appear until near the close of that day, though advertised to preach at 11 A. M. That we had ministerial sense as well as grace enough to yield up our advantage of being first on the ground, and of having been importuned by the people to stay and preach, the latter at the same time accepting the responsibility of accounting to Bro. Powell for the change of program, is a fact or favor which Bro. Powell is unable to appreciate, and which indeed he scorns. Again, Bro. Rawls did not appear on the scene longer than a few hours in advance of our coming, which was necessitated by the fact that it was financially and otherwise more convenient for us to come by different roads.

2. He asserts in this article—as habitually we understand in the course of his travels throughout his district—that "we are making a staggering attempt to supplant the Conference organ." But if this is true, it is strange that the public and preachers of New Orleans, and even the editor of the organ aforesaid, have never made the discovery or observation. The youth of the enterprise may also in a measure account for its staggering gait at this interesting period of its existence.

3. He says we had posters scattered over the town of Hattiesburg announcing a meeting. This is not according to the facts. We had nothing whatever to do with the printing, or the writing, or the scattering.

4. He assumes that we assume the right to enter any pastoral charge in any district, in any Annual Conference bounds, and hold protracted meetings without the knowledge or consent of the preacher in charge, presiding elder, or anyone else, which would not be indulged by any Bishop or connectional officer in the church. Now, if he had read the Pentecostal Age at about the time of our appearance before the walls of Hattiesburg, he would have discovered that both John Wesley and Francis Asbury, from whom our Bishops derive their authority to preach and govern, were found in precisely the category in which we were discovered at Hattiesburg. And if he had consulted his memory, he would have discovered in justification of our course in failing to interview the presiding elder in question, on the subject in question, that during a long rail-car ride, in which we occupied the same car traveling from McHenry to Hattiesburg, that he diligently avoided entering into conversation with the anarchist who was so hot on his trail.

Again—Bro. Powell's statement to the contrary notwithstanding—we had fully made up our mind to close the meeting at once; and if we are not mistaken, had freely expressed it to one, and, perhaps, more persons, before we saw Bro. Powell or heard his threat to arraign us before the Quarterly Conference, which we had all along taken for granted, as he had published it in the columns of the church organ several months in advance. Under the circumstances, how could we have been any more "in terrorem" after than before that august event?

5. He asserts that we "are responsible for our inferior and self-appointed place"—i. e., local preacher—when the fact is, that our location, like the greatness of some people we wot of, was thrust upon us.

6. He asks, "Who authorized me to publish a paper for the edification of the people called Methodists?" We answer, as He is our witness, the Lord Jesus Christ. That the cause of city missions, anti-saloonism, and the doctrine of doctrines, not only for Methodists, but for all Christians, entire sanctification, had no aggressive organ in this city and the neighboring States, should have been all the authority that any free man, or slave either, required for the performance of so urgent a duty.

7. He says that "there is not a bona-fide Methodist in his entire district who endorses my action in entering his district." The facts are, that we did not hear of a Methodist of any kind who did not, except the preacher in charge and presiding elder aforesaid.

8. "Instead of going on and doing something designedly, you incidentally, accidentally, turned up in another place on my district." In justification of our course, we trust that Bro. Powell has not forgotten that he said more than once in the delayed interview that he forced on us, that he would be glad to have me preach at any point in his district when invited by the preacher.

In conclusion, we beg to say that Bro. Powell ought not to indulge in outrageous charges with only inferences to support them, and that we utterly repudiate the view which is scarcely out of sight at any period of his labored indictment, that the Methodist Church is a feudal despotism, denying freedom of speech, and even of movement, to its ministers as well as laity.

As to his command forbidding us to enter even his territory in the future, we call his attention to the fact that he tramples on both ecclesiastical law and the greatest of the Christ commandments in publishing it, and that the State of Mississippi forbids the posting of even pine timber wastes when not fenced.

Trusting that Bro. Powell will not get angry at us again for performing what we regard a sacred duty to the great Head of the church, we beg to subscribe ourself,

Temperance at the White House.

Some very remarkable women have illustrated Neal Dow's principles in the last thirty years. It is not as well known among temperance people as it ought to be that Mrs. General Grant made the first move against intoxicating liquor at the White House, she having secured its banishment from the New Year reception of the President. Mrs. Grant was succeeded by Mrs. Hayes, who was an Ohio woman, and a warm sympathizer with the Woman's Crusade. A life long teetotaler, she never offered wine while at the White House. Next came Mrs. Garfield, Mrs. Harrison, and Mrs. Cleveland, all total abstainers, and none furnishing wine to their own guests, though, lacking the co-operation of their husbands, they could not prevent its use at State dinners, as could Mrs. Hayes, because the President's views and practice coincided with her own. Mrs. McKinley is well known to be a total abstainer, so that the six wives of Presidents (President Arthur was a widower) since 1868 have, perhaps, dealt more telling blows against the drinking habit—and, per consequence, the liquor traffic—than any other women who have lived. For "where McGregor sits is head of the table," and what is done at the White House sets the keynote of social observances for millions, and sends its helpful influence out into the great and thoughtless world.

"It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine," says the best of all books, and yet no king ever lived who was not a wine-bibber! But when the people become the king, they must hold themselves steady of head and hand, or abdicate.—Union Signal.

A Consecrated Personality

Mr. Moody himself offers a unique illustration of the power of a consecrated personality. Much that he says in the way of literalistic interpretation of the Bible carries no weight with many of his hearers, and yet he is a power among all classes of people. His power is in his personal nearness to God. That can not be concealed. Those who hear him are conscious that they are in the presence of a man of God, who knows by experience the great and vital truths of the Christian revelation. This is the secret of his power. The world cares little whether a man is liberal or conservative; whether he believes in literal interpretations of the Bible or is an extreme high critic; whether he is a new theologian or an old theologian; it asks, first, Is he a genuine man, full of the Spirit of God, and one who is devoted to the advancement of the kingdom of God? Mr. Moody's power lies in the fact that no one can doubt his genuineness or his consecration.—Christian Work.

But They All Drink.

It is well known that at certain central agencies a record is kept of the name, position, and standing of nearly every business man in the country. Careful men are employed to collect this information; and it not only includes the amount of property which the parties are worth, but also their standing as regards punctuality, promptness, integrity, temperance, morals, etc. A number of years ago, it is stated, a firm of four men in Boston were rated as "A 1." They were rich, prosperous, young, and prompt. One of them had the curiosity to see how they were rated, and found these facts on the book, and was satisfied; but at the end it was written, "but they all drink." He thought it was a good joke at the time, but a few years later two of them were dead, another was a drunkard, and the fourth was poor and living partly on charity. That one little note at the end of their rating was the most important and significant of all the facts collected and embodied in their rating.—Christian.

MY GUIDE

BY LUCY LARCOM.

O Thou who art my only light,
Thee do I follow through the night
Though home and hope are out of sight
Firm trust in Thee my spirit hath,
Thou knowest my path.

I know not what may yet unfold
[illegible] gates of gold
This is my heaven. Thy hand to hold,
Thy steps to follow through the night,
My life, my light.

A Leaf from the Diary of Rev. Thomas Nixon.

BY REV. J. M. WEEMS.

In the home of Bro. William Foster, on Pine Ridge, seven miles from Natchez, we organized the Mississippi Conference on the tenth of October, 1816. I now come to a part of the history of the Mississippi Conference that has not been correctly represented. The conflicts and inaccuracies of statement arises, as I think, from the fact that others have reported events from memory, or as they were reported to have occurred. But as I was present and kept a record of each day's proceedings, I feel that I can give them correctly; and that I may be correct, I now quote from my diary:

Tuesday, Oct. 8, 1816.—Early this morning I started for Conference, in company with Bros. Sellers, Winans, and Whitten. At Bro. Hodges, Bros. Booth and Cotton joined our company. Bro. Sellers and I spent the night with Col. Fleming.

Wednesday, 9th.—This morning we overtook Bros. Winans and Hewitt at Greenleaf, and we all traveled together to Natchez, where we made a few necessary purchases, and then went on seven miles to Bro. William Foster's, where the Conference was to convene the next day.

Thursday, 10th, has come, but there is no Bishop. I preached at 12 o'clock from Matt. i, 21, and the Conference convened at 3 P. M., with Bro. Sellers in the chair, and Bro. Mennifee as our secretary. At 5 P. M. we adjourned to 8 o'clock the next morning.

Friday, 11th.—Conference met at 8 this morning, with Bro. Sellers in the chair. Not a word from the Bishop, and we are feeling anxious about him. At 10 minutes to 10 o'clock Bro. Winans, who was not a member, and, therefore, was not allowed a seat in the Conference, came cautiously up stairs, and asking pardon for interrupting, announced the arrival of Bishop Roberts. The arrival of the Bishop gave us all great joy, for he had come alone through the Indian Nation, and, as he was very much fatigued, we adjourned to 2 P. M. At 12 o'clock Bro. Mennifee preached a strong sermon from Heb. iv, 9. Conference convened at 2 P. M., with the Bishop in the chair, and we worked with a will to 5 P. M., when we adjourned for the day.

Saturday, 12th.—Conference met at 8 o'clock this morning, with the Bishop in the chair. At 12 o'clock to-day the Bishop preached from Heb. xii, 1. His words were attended by the power of the Holy Spirit, and we all felt that he was truly a good man and a great preacher. We held our usual evening session, and adjourned to 8 o'clock Monday morning.

Sunday, 13th.—Bro. Sellers preached to-day at 10 o'clock from Col. i, 28, and after the sermon the Bishop ordained Bro. Thomas Owens a deacon. The Bishop then preached from Jer. ix, 23, 24, and I was ordained an elder. The Bishop told me to-day that I was the first elder he had ordained since his election to the office of a Bishop. At night Bro. Hewitt preached from Rom. vi, 21, 22.

Monday, 14th.—Conference convened this morning, and after attending to some business, the Bishop give us our appointments for the next year. Bro. Sellers located, and Bro. Dixon was transferred to the Tennessee Conference.

Appointments: Mississippi District—No presiding elder, and, by unanimous request of the Conference, Bro. Thomas Griffin was transferred from the Tennessee Conference to fill that office. Natchez and Claiborne, John Meanifee; Wilkinson, John Lane; Amite, Thomas Owens; Pearl River, Peter James; Tombigbee, no preacher; Chickasawha, Elijah Gentry.

Louisiana District—Ashly Hewitt, P. E. Rappedea, A. Fleming; Attakapas, Thomas Nixon; Washataw, Ashly Hewitt.

As there has been some dispute as to who composed this first Mississippi Conference, I will give their names: S. Sellers, J. Mennifee, J. Lane, A. Hewitt, Peter James, E. Gentry, T. Owens, J. Dixon, T. Nixon; total, nine.

In Memoriam.

A mother in Israel has fallen! Maria Barbara Cameron, daughter of John and Catherine Eads, was born Nov. 8, 1803, in Morgan county, Ga., and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sarah J. Powell, in Pickens county, Ala., March 5, 1897, being in her ninety-fourth year. She was married to John Cameron in Tuscaloosa county, Ala., Nov. 23, 1826, and was left a widow in January, 1856. She was converted under the ministry of Rev. E. V. LeVert, and received into the M. E. Church about 1822, thus spending seventy-five years in the Master's service. She was the mother of ten children—five sons and five daughters—all of whom lived to maturity. These all professed religion and joined the church of their mother and father in early life. Three of her sons became preachers: the late Rev. W. E. Cameron, of the North Alabama Conference; Rev. J. D. Cameron, D.D., and Rev. Thos. Cameron, of the North Mississippi Conference. The good old mother was justly proud of her gifted sons. The father and five children preceded her to the better land, and the other five are pressing forward. The writer is informed that not one of the family was ever known to swear an oath, take a drink of whisky, or dance; nor was a harsh word ever heard between father and mother.

Rev. J. P. Glass, nephew of Bishop Hargrove, who lived near the family, said to J. D. Cameron in 1871: "There is one thing no one can say of your mother: that they ever heard her speak an unkind word of anyone."

Her conversion was sound, her consecration complete, her faith unwavering, and her life the most consistent. Her soul seemed at all times full of the love of God and humanity. She was naturally modest and diffident, but when the fire of divine love would burn in her heart, she would tell of God's love in notes of victory. The writer will never forget the halo of glory that played over her almost angelic face at the Hargrove Camp Meeting, forty years ago, when she and her children were praising God together.

In old age, when from dimmed eyesight she could neither read or work, she did not complain. For one hundred and eighty-five days she was confined to her bed; yet, during all these days of suffering, not a murmur escaped her lips. When her mental state was as feeble as that of her body, so that she could not recognize her own children, her mind was clear on the subject of religion. She would sometimes say: "I am ready at any time to go; just waiting for the Master's call. I don't care how soon the good Father calls me home." We are not astonished that such should be the closing of a life given so willingly and lovingly to others. Her life was emphatically spent for others. Nothing seemed to give her more pleasure than to contribute to the happiness of children and friends. Mother Cameron! Yes, I call her mother. Why not? She, for forty years, never ceased to call me one of her boys as we went in and out before her. Our relations to the family were tender.

In the year 1856 Dr. J. D. Cameron and the writer joined the old Alabama Conference together. At one time I was his mother's pastor, and he was my mother's pastor.

Mother Cameron was in many respects a remarkable woman. Our deliberate judgment is that no one has served her day and generation with more unswerving fidelity than she, or succeeded better in bringing up her children religiously. Those who did not read her inner life had but little conception of her moral character. We, who reached the secret chambers of her loving, motherly heart, could better appreciate her consecration of soul. Though modest, she was not afraid for the world to know her life, because it was of God, and like him. Her spiritual perception was deep, and such as afforded her daily communion with her divine Lord.

And now, after a life of ninety-three years of joys and sorrows, triumphs and victories, Mother Cameron has passed to her heavenly home. J. B. STONE.

Correspondence.

Rev. R. S. Woodward.

MR. EDITOR: It was with profound sorrow that I read in the ADVOCATE to-day an account of Bro. Woodward's death. Ever since the news reached me my heart has been sad. I feel that I have been bereaved of a true friend. My mind reverts to our pleasant associations together in Meridian, for which I will always be thankful to our heavenly Father. I shall ever cherish, in sacred memory, his fatherly counsels and timely advice. His words of encouragement were of incalculable help to me, and I will ever be grateful to the Lord that in my early ministry I was thrown with one who had such broad and deep sympathy for a young and inexperienced pastor. I loved Bro. Woodward as a father, and the loss of such an esteemed friend has overwhelmed me with grief. With the Mississippi Conference, and all his host of friends, I mourn the loss of our departed brother. With the sorrowing and grief-stricken family I shed tears of sympathy. With all who loved him I rejoice in the glorious hope of meeting him after a while. D. SCARBOROUGH.

Ceffadoliah, Miss., April 17, 1897.

A Note of Encouragement.

Bro. L. S. Jones is rejoicing. The people of his charge have paid every cent of their assessments for foreign missions, domestic missions, and Conference claimants. One hundred conversions and sixty accessions! "Them that honor Me will I honor." (1. Sam. ii, 30.) May the richest blessings of our God be poured out continually on pastor and people!

Mission Work in Louisiana.

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," is the divine command. This applies not only to the heathen in foreign lands, the cannibal in his island home, but also to those, knowing not Christ and his gospel, who live at our very door.

It is easy to think that the heathen, the man who is ignorant of our heavenly Father's care, lives in some strange and distant land; but it is hard for us to realize that in our own country—aye, even in our own beloved State of Louisiana—there are souls just as benighted, living in spiritual darkness just as complete, and, as with the distant heathen, having no hand to turn on the light. How many who give or work for missions have a thought or offer a prayer for our home field? The only missionary idea of the careless giver is a dim, floating vision of slanting-eyed Japs, or long-haired Chinamen. Even the earnest giver places his offering in the missionary hat, breathing a sincere prayer that some foreign idol worshiper may be led into the true way. Others still labor constantly, praying, giving, influencing others to pray and give, but using all their energy for distant souls in darkness. In either case, of carelessness, or earnestness, or zeal, there seems a proneness to forget that in our very reach, at our own door, are those in just as great need of salvation, and in darkness as black as the inhabitants of the foreign land. While we must not forget the foreign brother (for we are all children of one Father), let us also work for the Christianization of our own State.

It is in the mission work as it is in the home. Have you never noticed that those of our own household are often denied needed love and sympathy, while strangers receive our tender attention? 'Tis not that we love the stranger more; 'tis not that we desire to neglect those nearest to us—those we love most; but for some strange, almost unaccountable reason, their very closeness to us hides them from our sight. Let us guard against such sad mistakes in our home, our city, our State, our missionary work.

In viewing the missionary field, let us sweep our eyes from our very feet outward, finally reaching the remotest horizon, but taking in the needs of those near as well as far.

On the other hand, we sometimes hear one who labors in no missionary field say: "I don't believe in foreign missions; I believe in home missions." To such I would say: "Put your belief to account. Use your energies in home mission work. If you are sincere, you will find a great field before you. I might also add, that you will not long be an earnest home worker before your sympathies will widen and widen until the heathen brother also has a place in your heart. By all means, live up to your present belief; engage heartily in domestic mission work; help to give the gospel to the heathen in your very midst."

It is our duty, sisters of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, to awaken to the needs of our own State; not only to awaken ourselves, but to arouse others. Let us study, inform ourselves, and then spread the information. Our people do not know, they do not consider, or else the moral condition in some of our parishes would be different. I am reminded of the drouth sufferers in our northern parishes.

For some time it was difficult for us to believe that within the bounds of our own fair commonwealth were hunger, starvation, famine. A famine in Ireland or India seemed easy to understand, but that our land had failed to yield her increase, that horrible famine was in our very midst, we scarce could understand. But once having understood, how quickly our people responded!—how willingly the corn and syrup and meat were hastened to the suffering!

Tribute of Respect.

The Parsonage and Home Mission Society of Booneville, Miss., at the regular monthly meeting April 19, 1897, passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, God, in his providence, has removed from our midst our sister, Mrs. Annie Bynum Thrasher; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the righteous will of our all-wise Father, being fully assured that our loss is her gain.

Resolved, That in the death of our sister we have sustained the loss of a wise leader, an earnest fellow-laborer, and a loving friend.

Resolved, That we emulate her example of holy living and loving, untiring service for the Master, and that we carry out with greatest faithfulness and diligence the plans so wisely projected by her for the promotion of this great cause.

Resolved, That we extend our deepest and tenderest sympathies to the dear ones so sadly bereaved, and pray that the consolations of Divine Grace may be theirs in this hour of sorrow.

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be spread upon our Minutes, published in the town papers, NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and Our Homes, and a copy thereof sent to the bereaved family.

Owing to the overflow, Greenville is unable to entertain the annual meeting of the W. F. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference, and Holly Springs has kindly invited us to meet there. While we regret the disaster which prevents Greenville from entertaining the meeting, and promise those earnest women we will accept their hospitality in the future, we thank Holly Springs, and accept her invitation with pleasure.

The round of district meetings of the W. F. M. S. has begun. It is desired that the secretary, or some one appointed by the district secretary, shall write an account of each of these meetings immediately after it closes and forward to the editor of the column for North Mississippi, that there may be no delay in publishing these reports. The pleasure and inspiration of each meeting should be felt as far as possible by all our auxiliaries, and this can only be done as they are made known to us through our column. Let there be no delay in sending the reports in that they may be published in the right order.

"GALLOWAY GLEANERS" OF CARROLLTON.

This noble band of little workers, under the leadership of their zealous lady manager, Miss Mamie Backley, have done great things during the year ending with March, '97. They have contributed for all purposes $105.70. This successful year's work is due to three things—an earnest, diligent lady manager, a feeling of interest among the older people of the church, and children eager to work. I would like to call attention especially to this lady manager. She is a young lady, who, seeing the urgent need of a leader for the children in their work, and without considering so minutely her own fitness or unfitness for the work (as we older ones so frequently do), took up the work with an earnest purpose and loving heart and has carried it on to this prosperous condition. She has left nothing undone that could be done for the pleasure and profit of these children. During six months of last year she was away in Texas, and during her absence each child invested a nickle given by her, so that when she returned the twenty-two nickles given out had grown into $18.50. The children then held a public meeting and each told in rhyme how the money was made. Among other things, these earnest little workers have furnished a bed in the Children's Ward at Soochow. Oh, that the spirit that has inspired this consecrated young woman in her noble work would rest upon many of the young women of our church, that children everywhere, so willing, even eager, to work for the Master, might be led and encouraged to do all that the Galloway Gleaners have done.

Selections.

The One Cherished Sin.

Often from my window on the seashore I have observed a little boat at anchor. Day after day, month after month, it is seen at the same spot. The tides ebb and flow, yet it scarcely moves. While many a gallant vessel spreads its sails, and, catching the favoring breeze, has reached the haven, this little bark moves not from its accustomed spot. True it is that when the tide rises it rises, and when it ebbs again it sinks, but advances not. Why is this? It is fastened to the earth by one slender rope. There is the secret. A cord, scarcely visible, enchains it, and will not let it go. Now, stationary Christians, see here your state—the state of thousands. Sabbaths come and go, but leave them as before. Ordinances come and go; ministers come and go; means, privileges and [illegible] mons move them not—yes, they move them; a slight elevation by a Sabbath tide, and again they sink, but not onward, heavenward movement. They are as remote as ever from the haven of rest; this Sabbath as the last, this year as the past. Some sin enslaves, enchains the soul, and will not let it go. If it be so, make one desperate effort in the strength of God. Take the Bible as your chart, and Christ as your pilot, steer you safely amid the dangerous rocks, and pray for the Spirit of God's grace to fill your every sail and waft you onward over the ocean of life to the haven of everlasting life.—Episcopal Recorder.

There is no key to affliction that key that can unlock eternity. This world has no compensation, but when we can take in another world then there may be compensation. We can fancy if a grain of wheat had intelligence and a soul, and found itself buried in the cold, damp earth of Spring, without light and heat, it might say: "Why am I thus? It is torrible to be underground, terrible to be in the dark. I am likely to decay." But in a few weeks the germ is evolved, the blade has spread, the stalk has expanded, the flower are clad in beauty, the ripe grain on the ear, and then there is the sower. Partial darkness and [illegible] if I might use the phrase, promotes growth, expansion, beauty, and fruit. So it may be with us. It seems to be God's order that night precedes day, sorrow the joy, darkness the light. You may be in the valley but God has a mountain-top for you, and I believe it is true in all life, the deeper the valley the higher the mountain-peak. I believe it is true in all experience also: the deeper the sorrow the richer the joy. Christ's sorrows were greater than his sorrows, and his glory is greater than human glory. And when the persecutor saw some bright spirits [illegible] the throne, and the question was asked, "Who are they up so high, who are just under the throne, and beside the fountain of glory?" the answer was, "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Afflictions, then, have a full of meaning, and to many a life is realized the truth, "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."—Bishop Simpson.

A discerning writer says: "What hinders us most from recognizing the good in others is that we do not see the evil in ourselves." There is a volume of meaning in these words. If we were deeply, humbly conscious day by day, of the evil which lurks and nestles in our own hearts, would be much more apt to put a charitable judgment on the faults of others and at the same time take note of their good qualities. If we are blind to our own defects, we scan the evil in other hearts, magnify it, and make small account of their virtues. This is not fair treatment of ourselves nor of others. A dealing of self-honesty would be helpful to us.—Zion's Herald.

Minding one's own business is one of the sure ways of helping one's neighbor. This is demonstrated by a mathematical nicety in the performance of concerted music. Each performer is conscious of his relation to the whole orchestra, but he is more conscious that if he does not attend to his own part with exactness the whole orchestra will suffer more or less by his laxity in his own particular duty. In the moral and spiritual world one's own business may consist in lending a direct hand to his neighbor, or it may consist in letting his neighbor alone. If anyone has an instrument placed in his hands let him attend to that rigorously.—Sunday-school Times.

The prayer which does not succeed in moderating our wills, in changing the passionate desire into still submission, the anxious, tremulous expectation into silent waiting, is no true prayer.—F. W. Robertson.

He is most spiritual who is master of most forces, who can rise superior to most obstacles, can vanquish the most enemies of the inner life, and has greatest dominion over himself.—J. L. Jones.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, Hattiesg, Miss.: "Since my last to the ADVOCATE we have a protracted meeting. Our siding elder, Bro. C. A. Powalternated with the preacher harge in the preaching, in the inning of the same. He ached like a presiding elder e enough. His sermons were ng and effectual. The rain rrupted our meeting ever and n, but still we continued. ally we secured the services Bro. A. T. Bell, of Daleville, English musician and Ameripreacher. We had never rd him preach but once beee, but we heard enough then to enable us to form a good judgment of his ability. During the first services after he came the weather was quite unfavorable, and, consequently, our audiences were not as good as we desired. Indeed, one or two services were rained out completely, but finally the Sabbath rolled up with more favorable prospects. At eleven the church was crowded, and Bro. Bell, under the power of the Holy Ghost, swayed the audience. At night the people crowded in more eagerly than before to listen to the man of God who had fed them so bountifully on the truths of the living God the previous service. From these services on until he left us there was no more trouble about securing good audiences. The brethren say much good resulted from our meeting. If any brother wants an earnest, honest, level-headed, cultured, Holy-Ghost preacher, let him get Bro. Bell. He will more than meet his expectations."

It is pleasant to be appreciated. Persons work better when they know that their efforts command approval. Nothing is lost by kindly words of interest and recognition. Flattery is offensive, but appreciation of another's kindness and service is always acceptable.—Presbyterian.

OBITUARIES.

MORRIS—LAURA ELIZABETH MORRIS (nee Taylor) was born at the home of her grandfather, Rev. T. A. Taylor, in Noxubee county, Miss., Aug. 3, 1854, and died at the home of her parents in Winston county, Miss., March 15, 1897; was baptized in infancy by Rev. J. W. Ellis. She was converted in her twelfth year and received into the M. E. Church, South, at Macedonia Church, Shuqualak charge, North Mississippi Conference, by Rev. J. F. Marshall.

She was first married to R. B. Cook, who died in a few months of meningitis, by whom was born one son who was killed in a railroad accident in his twenty-second year. In 1875 she was married to Rev. Benj. F. Morris, of the North Mississippi Conference, Revs. R. G. Porter and B. S. Rayner officiating. Bro. Morris fell at his post and was buried within his charge with masonic honors. Of this union there were born two girls who survive their parents. Elma and Pearl are now orphans indeed, and without means; but no doubt many warm hearts of the M. E. Church, South, and the masonic fraternity will be drawn to them, and substantial aid and comfortable homes provided for them. We extend to them and the parents, brothers and sisters of Sister Morris, all of whom survive her, our deepest sympathies in this bereavement, and pray divine grace may be given to sustain.

At the sight of the mangled and bleeding form of her only son as it lay in the casket Sister Morris received such a severe shock of grief as to become ever afterward an invalid, and her life since then has been one of pain and intense suffering. The writer was privileged to call on her twice during her severest illness, and to talk and pray with her. Her language was prayer and gratitude. She expressed gratification to be able to converse freely with one of God's servants. We also attended her funeral. Her parents—now bowed with the weight of years, cares, sorrows and bereavement—are and have long been very devout Christians. With them she conversed much of her approaching death, stating frequently that she had repented and received pardon for all her transgressions; that she was fully resigned to the holy will of her Lord; that she had peace with God, and that there were no fears for her. She said He would bring her out of all her troubles and pain and give her rest—sweet rest!

She sleeps in Jesus. The dying test and triumph of undying love has again been illustrated, and the Savior is welcoming the wanderers home from the conflicts of sin and temptation and sorrow into everlasting joys.

PATTERSON—On last Sabbath evening we laid to rest in the City Cemetery in Natchez the remains of our long-honored and beloved sister, Mrs. ELIZABETH PATTERSON. The great concourse that followed her to the grave was in striking evidence of the high esteem in which she was held.

In 1836 Sister Patterson, then a bride, moved to this city. Our church register shows that her connection with Methodism began with her entrance into the community. For sixty years she has gone in and out among this people, a faithful, consistent follower of the blessed Master and a true representative of the great church to which she belonged. She loved her church, and those whose good fortune it has been to occupy at Jefferson Street will remember her constancy to duty and interest in its greatest success.

She almost ceased to live and work at the same time. For one of her age she was remarkably active, having completed her eighty-fifth year only a few weeks.

Up to a few weeks since she insisted upon performing her accustomed duties about the house. Her last days were full of peace. She spoke of the approaching end as a philosopher; she awaited her departure with patience. For her the grave had no horrors, and death no fears. A quiet, peaceful life ending in a joyous, child-like trust.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

LOFLIN—Rev. DANIEL LOFLIN was born on Oct. 14, 1821, and died at his home in Rankin county, Miss., on March 10, 1897.

Bro. Loflin united with the M. E. Church, South, in early life, at the same time being impressed that he was called to preach, and was a faithful local preacher for fifty-five years. A friend has estimated that in those fifty-five years that he preached two thousand five hundred sermons. Had Bro. Loflin kept a diary of sermons preached, miles traveled, funeral and marriage ceremonies performed, it would have been of great interest. Yet he would never accept any pay either for preaching or performing marriage services. He continued to perform these duties and keep up his appointments until a few weeks of his death.

He was a man of stainless character, honest and upright in heart. The testimony of his neighbors to this day is, that his word was his bond, and his testimony in court would have been as good without an oath as with it. Having strong convictions, when satisfied anything was right, it would be difficult to change him.

He was twice happily married. He leaves a wife and a large family of children and grandchildren. His funeral sermon was preached by the writer at Wesleyana Church, and he was buried with masonic honors at the grave. R. BRADLEY.

At the second quarterly meeting of Steen's Creek circuit, Brandon district, Mississippi Conference, held at Harrisville, on April 10, 1897, R. Bradley, P. H. Hale and I. T. Bell were appointed a committee to draft resolutions, and reported as follows:

Whereas, It has pleased God to remove from our midst our beloved brother, the Rev. Daniel Loflin, from earth to enter the joys and rest of heaven; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of our brother one of the old landmarks has been removed, a father in Israel has fallen, one who had endeared himself to a multitude of people.

Resolved, That, considering his long services to the church, having been a local preacher for forty five years and his consistent Christian life.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the distressed family in their bereavement, and pray that God of all grace may comfort and bless them.

Knowledge will help to keep a family alive. The more they know about their own physiology the better they will be able to take care of themselves. The more a man and woman know about health and sickness, the less trouble they will have with the sickness of their children. Some standard medical book ought to be in every home library. The most complete book of this kind is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It contains more exact information about the human body in health and disease than any other book ever printed in the English language. More copies of it have been sold than of any other medical work. It is written in plain language, free from technicalities, and is the work of a regularly graduated, experienced physician. It contains hundreds of useful receipts, a knowledge of which will prevent much sickness, and save many doctor's bills. It is indexed, and contains over three hundred illustrations. 680,000 copies of this great, 1,008 page work have been sold at the regular price—$1.50 per copy—and now an edition of half a million in strong paper covers is being distributed absolutely free. The book bound in French cloth is 10 cents extra (31 cents in all).

Mrs. Bela-H. Howard, of Glen Ellen, Sonoma Co., Cal., writes: "Enclosed find stamps for the 'People's Common Sense Medical Adviser.' I have had two but cannot keep them. I cannot do without one in the house, they save a doctor's visits, and as I live about ten miles from any doctors, their visits come high—(ten dollars). I have been in this place sixteen years, and have only had a doctor for my family once in that time—thanks to your book and your medicines."

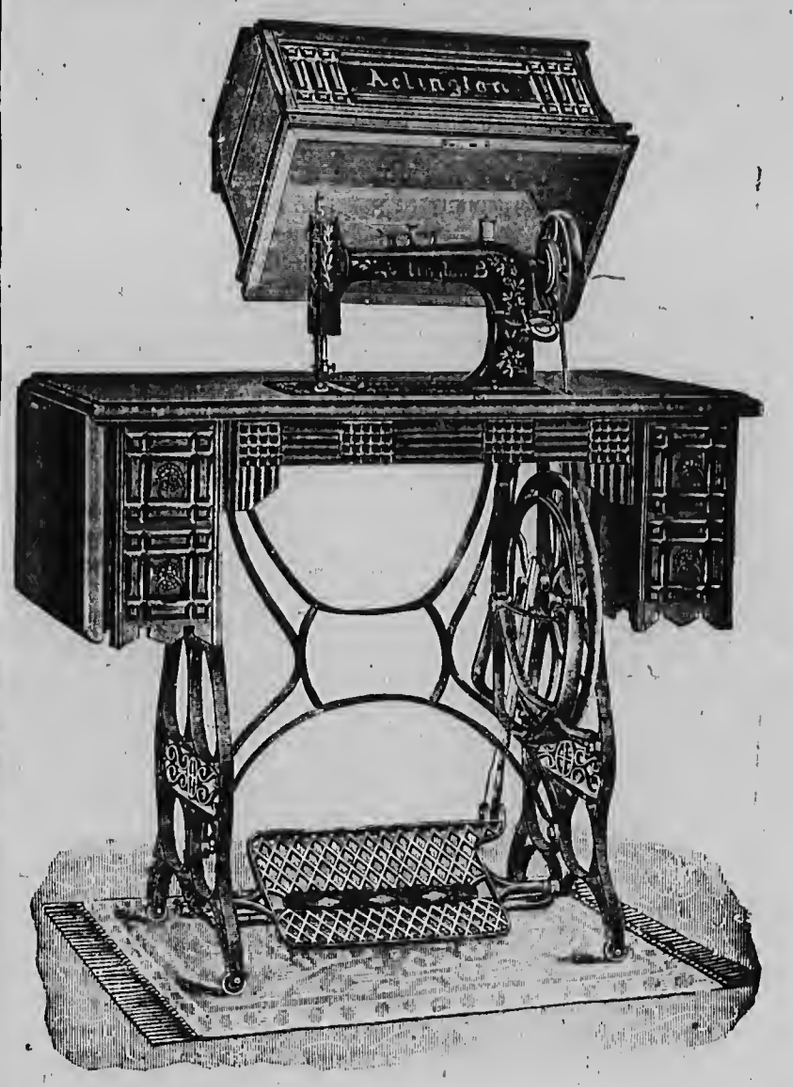
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.



A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc. Appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one hot roller one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, and gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to December, '98, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

"I know not where God's Islands lift
Their fronded palms in air
I only know I can not drift
Beyond his love and care."

An ounce of pulpit preparation is worth a ton of pulpit apologies.—Selected.

You may set it down as a fact that the holiest man is not the one who boasts of his holiness.

About the smallest business you can engage in is that of perpetually thinking about yourself.

A man who does not know how to learn from his mistakes turns the best school-master out of his life.—Beecher.

The pious parson who undertakes to court a crowd will suffer as many tribulations as the fresh youth who sets out to court a flirt.—Selected.

I don't like to listen to those everlasting negations that some ministers deal out from the pulpit. When I go to hear a preacher I want to hear one who believes more than I do.—O. W. Holmes.

There are some who think that to be solemn and dignified and severe is to be good. With them a smile is contaminating, a laugh is heresy, and a joke is richly deserving of excommunication. We feel sorry for them. —Holston Methodist.

The grand difficulty is to feel the reality of both worlds so as to give each its due place in our thoughts and feelings; to keep our mind's eye and our heart's eye ever fixed on the land of promise without looking away from the road we are to travel toward it.—Hare.

Some people pray eloquently for their preacher and for the prosperity of the church who never put anything into the contribution basket. If such prayers could be weighed, it would take several millions of them to weigh as much as the smallest fibre of down on a humming bird's wing.

When a preacher is perpetually making ill-natured flings in the pulpit and out of it at other preachers who are at least his equals in gifts, grace and usefulness, sensible people wonder (1) what good he expects to accomplish by such a course, (2) whether he really thinks he possesses the spirit of our Savior.

One of the best evidences of true discipleship is docility—teachableness. Tried by this standard, there are many these days who are found wanting. In less than a week from the time they first see the light of spiritual day they assume to know more of the mysteries of the kingdom than hoary-headed saints who have a long life of Bible study and earnest, prayerful striving after heart purity behind them. Oh, shame, where is thy blush?

Calls to Liberality.

Self-denial and liberality are duties utterly detestable to the unregenerate heart. None but they who love God practice them continually and find a blessing in them. The covetous and selfish can neither understand nor appreciate the truth that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." However upright a man may be, he can not be a true disciple unless he gives liberally and systematically of his substance to the support of the gospel and to the relief of the various forms of human distress. Many men, however, delude themselves into believing that they can be pious and at the same time shut their ears to the oft-repeated calls for the bestowment of charity. No sin is more persistent or deceitful than covetousness, nor is it confined to the ranks of the non-professors. Hundreds of church members who would scorn to get drunk, or swear, or desecrate the Sabbath, are guilty of stinginess and inordinate love of money. They are as pleasant as May and as devout as a Pharisee until asked for a contribution for some benevolent purpose. Then a cloud at once darkens their brows. Their words become icicles, and the gift, ofttimes lonesome for its smallness, seems to cause as much pain to the giver as the pulling of an eye-tooth.

As Dr. Joseph Parker strongly puts it: "Who would build a house and forget to put the roof on? How many roofless characters there are! How many persons there are who have seven points out of the ten! yea, some have nine out of the ten: the Apostle comes to them and says, As you have health and strength and reason and education and good circumstances, now add this also, i. e., liberality; put in the one thing that is needful." "As ye abound in faith and utterance and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also."

Not for many years have there been so numerous and urgent appeals to the liberality and sympathy of Christian people as during the last few months. In our own section the drouth of last year and the present flood have caused wide-spread and dire distress which will not soon pass away. Hundreds have been rendered homeless, having lost their all in the raging waters, and unless the flood subsides shortly, no crop can be made this year; and so, perhaps, for twelve months many of the overflow sufferers will need assistance. The government, it is true, is doing much to alleviate the general distress, but it can not be expected to do all that ought to be done. So then the generous-hearted and more fortunate must come to the rescue.

But a short while ago a fearful famine was ravaging in several densely populated provinces of India, and touching appeals went all over the world. In Asiatic Turkey thousands of poor Armenians are still on the verge of starvation, and the cry for help comes to us from across the sea. Then, too, on account of the long-continued financial depression multitudes of workingmen are out of employment, and must be tided over the period of forced inactivity.

In view of the general distress and pressing needs of the unfortunate, extravagance and stinginess are doubly sinful. While want exists, it is shameful that any man should be indifferent or self-indulgent. To disregard these appeals and deny ourselves no luxury or pleasure that we may have somewhat to bestow is to prove ourselves unworthy the name of Christian. These are special calls of God to the exercise of liberality and the throttling of selfishness. If unheeded, they will only serve to harden our hearts and dry up the springs of sympathy.

It is a lamentable fact that many are as self-indulgent and miserly as if there were no suffering or poverty in the world. Tens and hundreds of dollars are spent for luxuries, while a few dimes are doled out in the way of charity. How numerous the class who suppose that money saved by the practice of niggardly economy in giving to the church or to the needy is money made!

What sinful extravagance! What detestable close-fistedness many people are guilty of! They cut a big dash in the world, but never entertain the thought that the Lord has any claim upon their substance. The sight of want and woe, the picturing of distress, gives them pain, but does not provoke sympathy or a pecuniary response. Some are like a certain London alderman, who, being solicited by a starving woman for alms, said: "Go away, my good woman, you don't know how you distress me. I'd give ten pounds to have your appetite." The curse of God is pronounced upon those who, having it in their power to relieve want and suffering, turn a deaf ear to its appeals. "Whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself, but shall not be heard." "Whoso hath this world's goods and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?"

In addition to the special calls for charity mentioned, there are certain benevolent enterprises carried on by the church whose claims must never be lost sight of. There is great danger that during a time like this our people will think themselves excused from contributing to missions and the other regular collections on account of these extraordinary appeals. But if we live economically, and render to the Lord the things that are his, we shall have something with which to help every good cause. Let us not rob Peter to pay Paul, but do our utmost to meet every worthy claim.

We would like to see the man who has been hurt by giving too much to the Lord. What multitudes in the church are suffering from leanness of soul in consequence of extreme stinginess and selfishness! How few have learned that "the liberal soul shall be made fat." Men continually rob God of tithes and offerings, and then foolishly imagine that their prayers for prosperity will be answered. Not many act as if they believed the Scripture, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

If each would do his part, not long would the cry of want be heard. Soon our mission debt would be a thing of the past, and every benevolent enterprise take on new life. But, alas! the majority seem afraid of giving more than their share. Many are content to give nothing, unless pressed repeatedly, and only a faithful few give according to ability. All over the land there is great need of a revival of the grace of liberality and the spirit of self-denial.

The Blue Ribbon.

He is entitled to the blue ribbon. We mean the brother who has made the discovery that the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is not antagonistic, or is only slightly antagonistic, to the liquor traffic. If the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE has a record on any question, it is on the temperance question. Wherever he is known at all he is known as a relentless foe of liquor and the liquor traffic. When in the pastorate he always stressed the temperance question on all proper occasions. During the celebrated Mississippi local option contest of 1886, although he had charge of one of the most important stations in Mississippi (Central Church, Meridian), he made temperance speeches in thirteen counties in the State. His record in the General Conference is known to all who keep posted in church affairs. We are saying only what can be verified when we say that the present advanced position of the M. E. Church, South, on the temperance question would not have been what it is had the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE been willing to make a compromise. Whether in our editorial capacity we have been outspoken in opposition to the sale and the use of intoxicants the files of the paper for the last three and a half years will attest. No other evil has been so frequently and so vigorously handled as the liquor evil. Perhaps after a little some Methodist preacher will discover that the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is in favor of the lottery and other forms of gambling, or that it is the ally of Romanism. What next?

Our reason for penning this effusion will appear to all who will read all the communications in this issue.

The Greco-Turkish War seems likely to result very speedily in the defeat and humiliation of Greece.

A Solemn Protest against Bishop Sessums' Lenten Discourse.

In the Daily Picayune, of April 12, was published an abstract of the last Lenten Discourse of Bishop Sessums, of the Episcopal Church in this city, which has been read by the undersigned with profound astonishment and grief. A polite note was addressed to the Bishop, inquiring whether this published account could be accepted as an accurate statement of what was delivered by him from the pulpit of Trinity Church. Fifteen days have elapsed during which no reply has been received. This silence, in connection with the fact that through twenty-odd days no retraction or modification of that published report has been made, justifies the assumption that the Picayune's statement of the Bishop's view is substantially correct.

The undersigned, ministers of the gospel in different branches of the church of Jesus Christ, unite in this public protest against the exposition of Christianity given by Bishop Sessums as put forth in the Picayune under the sanction of his name. It is, in our judgment, a complete surrender of the whole system of grace revealed in the Holy Scriptures. So far from being "The Old Religion in New Language," it is another religion in language which does not contain a single new suggestion. The syllabus offered to us is only a compend of the old heresies which afflicted the church of God in ages past. The "Old Religion" is swept out of the Scriptures so completely that not a trace is left of that "grace of God which bringeth salvation." This will appear from the following specifications of its numerous errors:

1. Its undisguised Pantheism, in denying the personality of the Divine Being, reduces Him to a mere Fetich.

2. The explicit denial of the fall of man from a state of primitive holiness, with the derivation of a corrupt nature consequent thereupon.

3. In the express denial that Christ hath "redeemed us by his blood," being not a sacrificial offering for sin, but consisting merely in the influence of good example, reclaiming man from the error of his way.

4. In the open disavowal of belief in any judicial process against the sinner, and the absolute denial of the future punishment of the wicked in the world to come.

5. In the assertion of the final restoration of all men to the favor of God in a state of probation after death.

6. The sinking of religion into mere humanitarianism, bounded only by the Second Table of the Law, and in which God has no rights through the practical abolition of the First Table.

7. The significant omission, in a scheme professing to define the Gospel of Christ, of the necessity of faith in the Redeemer and of repentance for sin, of love to God, or any of the graces of the Holy Spirit.

We purposely omit the mention of others, clearly implied in the language of the Bishop, confining ourselves to those which are explicitly avowed, and which spring of necessity from the seed-plot of Pantheism. It is not our design to inflict upon this community a theological controversy which must range over the entire field of Christian doctrine—and that, too, before a tribunal which has no power to issue a formal verdict.

But set for the defense of the Faith, as ministers of the gospel, entire silence would implicate us in the guilt of betrayal of the truth. We can not, therefore, but deliver, once for all, this testimony against another gospel than that delivered us in the Word of God.

Bishop Sessums' Administration.

The following card from Rev. H. H. Waters, rector of St. Paul's Church (Protestant Episcopal) in this city, shows that the extremely radical utterances of Bishop Sessums do not find universal endorsement in his own church:

St. Paul's Rectory, May 1, 1897.

To the Editor of the Times-Democrat:

In your issue of this morning you give a report of the closing session held last night of the fifty-ninth annual council of the diocese of Louisiana. In your report you refer to a resolution which was passed congratulating Bishop Sessums on the success of his administration of the affairs of the diocese, and expressing appreciation of his efforts in the building up of the church of Christ, etc. I regret that you omitted any mention of the circumstances under which that resolution was passed, as such omission compels me to write a word of explanation. While quite willing to bear witness to the hard work and earnest service of the Bishop, I objected to the resolution on the ground that it might imply an acquiescence in his theological teaching, as it has been reported from time to time in the newspapers, and which in many respects is very different from what I have always considered to be the doctrines of our church and the teachings of the Holy Scriptures upon which those doctrines are founded. It was thereupon distinctly stated by the mover that the resolution was not intended in any way to indorse the teaching of the Bishop. This interpretation was accepted by the council, and upon that assumption the resolution was passed, many of those voting for it being strongly opposed to the views of the Bishop. I myself could not admit such a distinction. I believe that teaching constitutes one of the most important elements concerned in "the building up of the church of Christ," and in view of the fact that for several months there has been a great deal of painful discussion, both in and out of the church, as to what the church did teach; and in view of the further fact that there had appeared that very morning in The Times-Democrat an earnest protest against the doctrines promulgated by the Bishop; and considering still further that it was the first time in the history of the diocese, so far as I know, that such a resolution had ever been presented in our council, I felt that (without any statement to the contrary) the community at large would naturally regard it as an indirect indorsement of the teaching of the Bishop; and it is to prevent the possibility of such an impression, so far as I am personally concerned, that I have felt it my duty to supplement the report of the council by this explanation.

HENRY HARCOURT WATERS.

Some Facts in Regard to Mansfield College.

1. Previous to 1896 the president of the college owned and controlled all the instruments, furniture and fixtures necessary to operate the college. Now the church owns and controls the whole.

2. Since June, 1896, between $300 and $400 has been expended in repairs on the main building, dining hall, music rooms, etc.

3. We have recently torn down and are well advanced in rebuilding the session hall, a building 80 by 40 feet, worth when complete more than $1000; will take the place of the old dilapidated hall, which has been a reproach to us for years.

4. All the old dilapidated outbuildings on the campus will be torn down and others better adapted to our wants will be built.

5. The fencing will be rebuilt and repaired and a street will be opened on the south side of the college property, giving convenient access to the K. C. and G. depot.

6. Some of the good people of Mansfield and elsewhere have done nobly in rendering us financial aid in this good work; while others, as good and true as they, unconscious of our need, and the true status of Mansfield College affairs, have left a few of us to carry a burden, which should be shared by all.

It is hoped that this honest statement of the facts will induce every friend of the college to respond liberally and at once to aid us in carrying out our plans. Let all who have subscribed to this fund, send in the amount at once. A. F. Jackson, Mansfield, La., is the treasurer of the Board of Trustees, and will receipt for all amounts contributed.

One more good strong pull, and Mansfield College campus will be the most beautiful spot in the State. Oh! that some large-hearted man who has been blessed in basket and store would come to our relief in this crisis! Respectfully,

J. L. P. SHEPPARD,
Pres. Bd. Trustees.

Mr. Edward Bellamy's new book, Equality, the first which he had published since "Looking Backward," will be awaited with extraordinary interest. After years of preparation the author now puts forward a work which will command universal attention. The new book, which will be published in a few weeks by D. Appleton and Company, will be larger and more comprehensive than "Looking Backward." The scene is the same—that is to say, the world of the twentieth century—and the same characters reappear. But while the new book tells us much that is fresh about the institutions of the world of to-morrow, its especial purpose, as distinguished from that of "Looking Backward," is to account for those institutions by explaining not only their righteousness and reason, but likewise the course of historical evolution by which they were born out of the very different order of things existing to-day. In this part of his work the author has much to say of the meaning of the events of our own times, which he links with the future by predictions of changes now close upon us.

To Preachers.

To the preacher who sends the largest number of new cash subscribers between now and the first of July we will present either an Arlington B Sewing Machine or a gold-filled watch guaranteed to be a perfect time keepor and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, whichever one may be preferred. To the preacher sending the next largest number and also to the one sending the third largest number we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, latest edition, with modern additions.

Should the successful contestant prefer it, we will pay him cash instead of the premium.

Under this offer no commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Those who wish to compete for these premiums should notify us at once.

The Advocate for $1,

From now until the first of June we will receive new cash subscriptions at the rate of $1 for nine months. Moreover, we will give those who subscribe under this offer the benefit of our premium Biblo offer. Take notice that this offer is made only to new subscribers. We will make a liberal offer to our present subscribers after awhile. Meantime, let all who are in arrears pay up, as no one who is in arrears can get the benefit of any of our special offers. Let all our preachers make this offer known to our people at once. We will send a sample Bible for use in canvassing to those who desire it. We will also send sample copies of the ADVOCATE on request.

Read This.

From now until the first of June we will sell our Emerald Bible at $1, instead of $1.15, to subscribers who comply with conditions named in our offer. After June 1 the price will be $1.15.

Bitter Taste.

IT AIDS IN THE DETECTION OF UNWHOLESOME FOOD.

Daniel Webster, in the famous White trial in Salem, Mass., years ago, declared that "murder will out." This maxim has been found applicable to many other things besides murder. Housewives know it to be true when there is alum in baking powder. A bitterness in the bread at once betrays the alum's presence. It can't conceal its true nature. The alum bitterness "will out," and because it will, physicians, who understand the harmful effect of alum on the system, are at a loss to know why people continue to buy baking powders containing it. All baking powders sold for twenty-five cents a pound and less contain alum. There is surely no economy in using these cheap powders. For a pure cream of tartar powder, as Dr. Price's was shown to be at the World's Fair, goes so much farther and gives so much better results, there is no doubt of its being more economical in the long run.

Opelousas, La.

Rev. J. J. Smylie has just held a meeting here, which, owing to the run-down and demoralized state of the church, was a success. There were a few clear and bright conversions, a number were reclaimed, the best members were greatly blessed, and are now more united, and there were nine accessions by ritual and otherwise. Sixteen additions this year. One can get no better help than Rev. Jim J. Smylie. Praise the Lord.

H. ARMSTRONG.

Notice.

The district meeting of W. F. M. S. of Enterprise district will be held in Enterprise, Miss., May 28 to 30. Every auxiliary is urged to send a delegate, and all ministers are cordially invited to attend. Names should be sent to Mrs. L. Carley, Enterprise, Miss.

City Mission Anniversary.

On the occasion of the Annual Meeting of the New Orleans City Mission and Church Extension Society, the large auditorium of Carondelet Street Church was filled by the Methodists of this city. After singing, prayer was made by Rev. S. S. Keener, and Rev. R. H. Wynn read an appropriate selection from Scripture. The first address of the evening was by Rev. John F. Foster, who acquitted himself well. He was followed by Rev. H. M. DuBose, D. D., of Jackson, Miss., in a most eloquent and stirring address, securing the undivided attention of his vast audience to the end of his splendid effort. Dr. J. T. Sawyer, president of this live organization, made a short talk, and a good collection was taken. Prof. Harmon's solo was thoroughly enjoyed. The pastor of the church, Rev. J. L. Pierce, prononnced the benediction, and thus closed the third anniversary of the New Orleans City Mission, all feeling that the occasion was a signal success.

Seashore Camp Meeting.

The undersigned, presiding elders in charge of the services of the coming Seashore Camp Meeting, hereby announce that they have selected Mr. T. O. Adams, of New Orleans, La., as the leader of the singing during the meeting, and have left to him the selection of the organist and pianist. They have adopted for use during the meeting the standard Church Hymn Book and the new Hymnal of our church, lately issued by our Nashville Publishing House.

No preachers have been specially invited to assist in the services, but to all ministers of the gospel a hearty invitation is hereby given to attend and help in the salvation of souls.

Yazoo City, Miss.

Yazoo City charge is in fine condition. Congregations have been large, attentive and appreciative. We began in the beginning of the year to raise our assessments, and have succeeded in raising about five-sixths of our entire assessment. This leaves us only about $70 to raise—which is covered by $200 of good subscriptions. Bro. McIntosh has just closed a most glorious meeting for us. The meeting has been a great blessing to our church and town. About thirty have joined the different churches, and scores of people in the church, as well as out of it, were converted. Bro. McIntosh is wonderfully blessed in having Bro. W. A. Bell to lead his singing. He is one of the best leaders I have ever seen.

How to Choose Paint.

It is probable that people are cheated in the quality of paints they buy more often than in other things, because people in general know so little about them. It costs just as much time and labor to put on a paint that lasts six months as it does one that will last five years, so every person should get the information that will enable them to choose a good quality made of pure white lead instead of a cheap adulteration in which barytes is the chief ingredient. There are about twenty-seven brands of honest white lead, and there are numberless cheats. Everyone who buys or uses paints can learn all about these, free of any cost whatever, if they will mention this paper and send their address on a postal-card to the National Lead Company, 1 Broadway, New York City, for a free book on the subject. They will receive some beautiful cards showing samples of colors, and pictures of twelve houses painted in different tints and combinations, which will be very valuable in choosing colors to use on buildings, etc.—Farm and Fireside.

Overflowed.

Quite a large part of Greenville district is now under water. Our big-hearted presiding elder is still going the rounds, looking in upon us at unexpected times. He happened upon the Cleveland parson the other night at ten o'clock, and found him standing in the middle of the street, waving his hat and shouting at the top of his voice. He modestly explained to the elder that he was giving the train a welcome, it being the first train for two weeks.

So far as I have been able to learn, every preacher in the district, save one, is at his post. For three weeks the water has been four feet deep at the front door of our church at this place. Barring the first Sunday after the water came, we have had services regularly. On Easter Day the congregation was four-fifths its usual size, all the people coming in boats.

There has been very little actual suffering for the necessaries of life throughout this vicinity, but the loss of stock, fences, etc., has been considerable. The water is not receding as rapidly as was expected. The fall does not average one inch per day. At this rate it will require a long time for the country to be entirely relieved. But we still believe that a brighter day will dawn upon this country; it is too fair and fertile to be the heritage of wild beasts.

Of course, our material prosperity will be checked for a time; but if the people succeed in making an average crop, the church will not have suffered so much. We pray for guidance and strength in these dark days, believing that not far distant is a glorious morning.

Gilt-Edge Investment.

For the purpose of enlarging their plant and business, the Lafferty Complete Flour Company offer a limited amount of 7 per cent. bonds, secured by a first mortgage. Each bond is for $30, and the owner, in addition to the interest of 7 per cent., is entitled to share in the business of the mill to an amount that makes the bond the most remunerative security on the market. They will be sold at par.

The denomination of the bond was fixed at a minimum sum of $30, so as to furnish an investment for many persons, and gain the widest interest in this accredited Food-cure—the "Complete Flour." Address John J. Lafferty, President.

The Lafferty Flour is winning its way on its merits. W. R. Whitesides, Booneville, Miss., says he had not eaten a biscuit for eighteen months without hurt, until he received the Lafferty brand. He ate five the first morning and five the next with perfect satisfaction. A similar statement came by the same mail from an invalid, Mrs. Bagwell, of Chesapeake, Va. Theodore L. Cuyler, in Independent: During a revival of religion in one of our great universities two students were awakened who were intimate friends. One evening they agreed to go and call upon one of the professors and ask for his advice. They came to his door, when one of the two stopped and said: "I believe I won't go in." His companion replied, "You can do just as you please; but I need all the help that a man of experience can give; I am resolved to go in." There they parted—and for eternity! The one went in, opened his difficulties to the professor, received good counsel, and decided for Christ. He became an eminently useful minister of Christ. The other threw off all serious thought, drifted into "fast" associations, and ended his career as a sot. There are two gates, and the two opposite roads into eternity. You must take one or the other! Beside that strait gate stands the Infinite Love saying to you: "I set before you death and life; choose life!"

People impose on the stomach sometimes, giving it more than it can do. Horsford's helps to digest the food, and puts the stomach into a strong and healthy condition.

Charles Wesley was easily annoyed at times, and on one occasion at one of the Conferences he became so irritated at the prolix remarks of a good brother who was relating his religious experiences at great length, wasting precious time as Charles believed, that he said to his brother: "Stop that man from speaking; let us attend to business." But the preacher continued his remarks. Finally Charles could no longer restrain himself, and he declared to his brother John: "Unless he stops, I'll leave the Conference." Instead of directing the preacher to stop, John, who was enjoying the humble man's simple story, said to one sitting near: "Reach Charles his hat."—Northwestern Advocate.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-sixth annual camp meeting at Seashore will open (D. V.) on Wednesday evening, July 14, next, and continue for about eight days.

Arrangements have been made for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit this delightful spot. A handsome and commodious two-story lodging-house—Keller Lodge—has been erected and comfortably furnished for visitors, in addition to the other accommodations supplied by the trustees.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale a reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. It is probable tickets will be placed on sale July 1 to 31, and be good to return on until Sept. 30. Two daily mail trains will stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of 1,400 feet; fanned by the refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico. The sea-bathing afforded is unsurpassed by any resort on the coast. A fine artesian well supplies the grounds with excellent drinking water, which is now "piped" over the entire encampment. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure and exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued and overheated visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the camp meeting should address W. B. Thomson, New Orleans, chairman Lodging Committee. Questions concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.; Dr. M. F. Tucker, Mobile, or J. H. Lakin, Montgomery, Ala.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge. Board will be furnished them at the restaurant at half-rate.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences. Eminent ministers will assist in the meeting. Bishop C. B. Galloway, and Dr. E. E. Hoss, of Nashville, Tenn., will be specially invited to preach during the camp meeting.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. HOME CIRCLE.

TOO LATE.

What silence we keep year after year
With those who are most near to us and dear!
We live beside each other, day by day,
And speak of myriad things, but seldom say
The full, sweet word that lies just in our reach,
Beneath the commonplace of common speech.

Then out of sight and out of reach they go—
These close, familiar friends who loved us so;
And sitting in the shadows they have left,
Alone with loneliness, and sore bereft,
We think with vain regret of some kind word
That once we might have said, and they have heard.

For weak and poor the love that we expressed
Now seems beside the vast, sweet unexpressed.
And slight the deeds we did, to those undone,
And small the service spent, to treasure won,
And undeserved the praise for word or deed,
That should have overflowed the simple need.

This is the cruel fault of life—to be Full visioned only when the ministry
Of death has been fulfilled, and in the place
Of some dear presence, is but an empty space,
What recollected services can then Give consolation for the "might have been?"

—Christian Observer.

Every Man Should Sweep Before His Own Door.

He is a wise man who has wit enough for his own affairs. It is a common thing for people to mind Number One, but not so common to see people mend it. When it comes to spending money on labor or improvements, they think that repairs should begin at Number 2, and Number 3, and go on till all the houses up to Number 50 are touched up before any hint should be given to Number One. Now, this is very stupid, for if charity should begin at home, certainly reformation should begin there too. It is a waste of time to go far away to make a clearance; there's nothing like sweeping the snow from your own door. Mind your own business, and mend your own manners, and if every man does the same all will be minded and mended, as the old song says:

"Should every man defend his house,
Then all would be defended;
If every man would mend a man,
Then all mankind were mended."

A man who does not look well to his own concerns is not fit to be trusted with other people's. Lots of folks are so busy abroad that they have no time to look at home. They say the cobbler's wife goes barefoot, and the baker's child gets no buns, and the sweep's house has sooty chimneys. This comes of a man thinking he is everybody except himself. All the wit in the world is not in one head, and therefore the wisest man living is not bound to look after all his neighbors' matters. There are wonderful people about, whose wisdom would beat Solomon into fits; and yet they have not sense enough to keep their own kettle from boiling over.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Not Vicariously.

Parents can not discharge their obligations vicariously. The Sunday-school teacher does a good work when done in the fear and love of God. But the Sunday-school teacher can not undo the ruins that follow paternal neglect. The preacher may do much for a child neglected at home, but he can not give what has been denied the child by unfaithful parents. Parents only can do parents' duty. We need revival in home government; then we will grow a race of man and women capable of noble deeds. A boy neglected by father and mother, and growing up in all willful ways, may, through infinite grace, escape hell, but he will never be what he might have been had his father and mother been faithful to him. Even conversion does not make a boy what he would have been, if taught obedience and drilled into the elementary virtues of childhood. And this not a few will deny, but it is the truth, as both the Bible and experience make plain.—Sunday-School Magazine.

Charity of Speech.

Charity of speech is as divine a thing as charity of action. To judge no one harshly, to misconceive no man's motives, to believe things are as they seem to be until they are proved otherwise, to temper judgment with mercy—surely this is quite as good as to build up churches, establish asylums, and found colleges.

Unkind words do as much harm as unkind deeds. Many a heart has been wounded beyond cure, many a reputation has been stabbed to death by a few little words. There is a charity which consists in withholding words, in keeping back harsh judgments, in abstaining from speech, if to speak is to condemn. Such charity hears the tale of slander, but does not repeat it; listens in silence, but forbears comment; then locks the unpleasant secret up in the very depths of the heart. Silence can still rumor; it is speech that keeps a story alive, and lends it vigor.—Humane Journal.

Scoff and Cough.

The man who scoffs at the friendly advice, to "take something for that cough," will keep on coughing until he changes his mind or changes his earthly residence. A great many scoffers have been converted by the use of the standard cough remedy of the past half century,—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. But some are scoffing and coughing yet. They wheeze with asthma, bark with bronchitis or groan with the grippe. Singular, is n't it, the number of stubborn people, who persist in gambling, with health and perhaps life as the stake, when they might be effectually cured of cough, cold or lung trouble, by a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

An Object Lesson.

The intelligent reader will have no trouble in understanding and applying the lesson of the following paragraph:

"A great manufacturing company in Massachusetts recently paid their workmen on Saturday evening seven hundred ten-dollar bills, each bill being marked. By the following Tuesday four hundred and ten of these marked bills were deposited in the bank by the saloon keepers of the town. Four thousand and one hundred dollars had passed from the hands of workmen on Saturday night and Sunday, and left them nothing to show for this great sum of money but headaches and poverty in their homes. Well might these men cry out to the State: Save us from ourselves and their hapless wives and children: Save us from our husbands and fathers on the Lord's Day at least.—Father McSweeney, in Catholic World."

Have an Aim.

No mechanic who has an ounce of brains would go to work with saw or hammer, as the case might be, upon a lot of expensive material without first having a clearly-defined plan before him. The child who occupies the time by cutting paper, or the imbecile who takes delight in chopping up pieces of wood, do not excite our wonder. But what of those who play upon the mind of childhood without a definite purpose of any sort?

Miss Aimless takes a class, perchance to please the superintendent, or, worse yet, because some of the "best people" teach in Sunday-school. Of course, she does not study to teach the children, and of course the shrewd youngsters soon discover that she is a fraud. Not only are they not helped, but religion is cheapened in their eyes.—Selected.

Something for All.

The late Robert Louis Stevenson had a happy way of applying religion to life and showing how it should work out in practice. Talking one day to the children at a school in Samoa about the parable of the talents, he told them there were three they all possessed—tongues, that they must use to be cheerful and make those happy who were round them. Faces, that they must keep as bright as a new shilling, so that they might shine like lamps in their homes. Hands, that they must keep employed in useful work cheerfully done; and if they spent their lives in doing these things for the good of others, they might be told at last: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto Me."

Make home pleasant. Anyone who will carefully study the history of families in the vicinity, can see that the bickerings and impatience of parents have caused many children to look upon any place outside of home better than the so-called home. It is wrong to teach girls to look upon men as made to earn a living for women and girls. Labor is alike beneficial and honorable to all. With almost every avenue open to girls to earn an honest living, they can have that independency which despoils temptation of its power. Children should never be worked into servitude, but the child brought up without pursuing some kind of labor is brought up wrong. Not that children should do the work of adults, but there are little tasks, chores, odds and ends of industrious occupation which they should perform. The child that is trained to be waited on, to consider itself too good or too nice to work, is on the direct road to sin, crime and weakness. The child thus trained will prove a burden to others and be a failure to itself. The parents of all the great men and women of this or any other country, are those who train their children as helpers.

Did you ever cultivate the habit of talking aloud to God? Sit down this very day, and, with upturned face and open eyes, talk to him as to your father, as to the dearest friend you have, one to whom you can tell your most secret thoughts; tell them to him. The very room where you sit will seem to be filled with angels; but, best of all, God will be there, for one could not talk to him without feeling him to be near. After such an experience some one has written: "Suddenly there came upon my soul something I had never known before. It was as if someone infinite and almighty, knowing everything, full of the deepest, tenderest interest in myself, made known to me that he loved me. My eye saw no one, but I knew assuredly that the One whom I knew not and had never met had met me for the first time, and made known to me that we were together." God give us all such an experience.—From "—— and Peter," by I. Wilbur Chapman.

Cheerfulness is as truly a Christian duty as truthfulness, and worrying undermines both. Let us trust in God and fear not. Cultivate hopefulness, and the worries of life will take on a less formidable aspect or will vanish altogether.

An obstinate man does not hold opinions, but they hold him; for when he is once possessed with an error, it is, like a devil, only cast out with great difficulty. —Bishop Butler.

HYGIENE.

Mental Moods and Bodily Health.

An intimate, though mysterious, connection subsists between the mind and the body. They act and react upon each other. The mental state has much to do with the physical health. Sadness depresses, and to that extent induces disease. Joy uplifts, cheers, inspires and invigorates, and in that proportion acts as a tonic to the entire system. This fact specialists do not overlook, however much it may be ignored by the diseased and their friends. The observant and skilful physician takes account of it in diagnosing the condition of his patient. He not only feels the pulse and notes the various symptoms of the ailments, but ascertains, as far as possible, if there be any worry or trouble, causing irritation or depression. He does not neglect his physic, but assists its proper action by trying to expel sad and gloomy thoughts and feelings by substituting something pleasant and exhilarating. When he sees the smile returning to the lip, the eye brightening and hope dominating, he feels sure that his treatment is having the desired effect.

Health is the best of earthly blessings. Much depends upon the will and effort of the individual whether he shall enjoy it. If he prizes it aright, he will do all in his power to secure it and to preserve it. He will not regard a delicate and sickly frame as something meritorious or praiseworthy. A diseased constitution may be inherited, or may be due to circumstances beyond one's control; yet, as a rule, ill health is the outcome either of our own or another's sin. Sanitary conditions have been neglected. But, however produced, there is no merit in the delicate frame, even though some talk and act as if there were some special virtue in it. They air their complaints with considerable pride and eclat, and seem to take evident comfort in being so "poorly." But frequently their ailments are largely imaginary or fancied—the result of hysteria or of mental disorder. They are given to gloominess, and so conjure up a brood of maladies, with ever varying name, and in every varying degree, until health is really impaired.

The power of mental depression to seriously affect the body emphasizes the duty of parents and guardians to place those entrusted to their care under conditions favorable to the development of physical robustness. Everything about them should, as far as possible, be bright, cheerful and elevating. Home should be the happiest and cheeriest of places. Children should be sent to bed with a smile and a blessing. Night should prove a season of real rest. The day should be inspiring, joyous and helpful. The mind's powers should be developed without strain. No tasks that tax the nerves to their utmost and that induce terrible reaction, should be imposed. The school-room ought to be a place of delight, not of aversion; of moderate competition, not of forced exertion; of salutary stimulus, not of brain-wearying exaction; of sunshine, not of gloominess. All through the formative period the associations should be joy inspiring. Care should be taken not to break the youthful spirit, but to train and culture the entire nature so as to realize to the fullest extent the old Roman ideal—"A sound mind in a sound body."

But no agency equals Christianity as a sanitary regulator and promoter. It fills the mind with the happiest and most exalting of thoughts. It has a song for every occasion. Its keynote is joy, peace, good-will and help. It aims to do away with sin, the greatest mental and physical, as well as spiritual, enemy of mankind. It guards against the extremes which worldliness, sensuality, lust and selfishness beget. It pacifies the conscience, comforts the soul and sanctifies the life. It has "a promise for the life that now is, and of that which is to come." It lays down regulations for the well being of our entire nature. Wherever it dominates the inner being, it prevents many of the disturbances which seriously effect, first the mind, and then the body. Under its operations the wounded spirit is impossible. Its precepts, principles and examples are, from beginning to end, salutary. Philanthropy attains its highest realization in the dissemination and practice of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Humanity finds in it the cure of its ills. It carries healing in its wings wherever it goes.

TRAMMEL—AURELIA E. TRAMMEL was born in Richmond, Va., April 27, 1823, and died in Sardis, Miss., Dec. 17, 1896. She was the daughter of Thos. H. and Mary Cecil Abney, and was the third child in a family of eleven children, all of whom became members of the church. Her father moved to Alabama while she was yet a girl, and here, amid pleasant social surroundings and gracious religious influences, she grew up to young womanhood. Her father's house was a home for the preachers, where they were always accorded a warm welcome. At an early age she gave herself to God and united with the Methodist Church. In the year 1849 she was happily married to Mr. S. W. Trammel. In 1869 she moved with her husband to Mississippi. For nearly a half century she lived a faithful, devoted companion to her husband, who preceded her by only a few months to the heavenly home. Seven children blessed their marriage, four of whom remain to cherish affectionately the memory of a loving father and mother, and to imitate their amiable virtues.

For some months previous to her death she was the subject of increasing infirmities and bodily suffering. She anticipated the summons, and was ready when it came. Her steady faith in God triumphed of suffering and over death. Her children and friends are comforted by the hope that she has joined the husband and father in that better land where there is no more sickness, nor sorrow, nor pain, nor death.

Sister Trammel beautified and adorned the relations amid which she lived. She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother, a consistent and loyal member of the church, attending upon its meetings and ordinances as she had opportunity. Her spirit was genial, her manner was cheerful, and she enjoyed the society of her friends. The memory of the just is blessed. T. C. WIER.

MCCAFFERTY—J. BOYD MCCAFFERTY, son of Charlie and Nancy McCafferty, was born Oct. 3, 1871, five miles north of Chester, Choctaw county, Miss.; joined the M. E. Church, South, at Mt. Nebo, Sept. 15, 1887; was married Dec 23, 1894, by Rev. W. R. Raney, of the North Mississippi Conference, to Miss Lele Johnson, of Choctaw county, Miss.; and died March 31, 1897, at his father's home.

This brief sketch of our departed brother informs us that the young, as well as the old, must needs die. Bro. McCafferty was the soul of honor, trustworthy anywhere, and any man's business was safe in his hands. No man of his age in the county was more beloved than he. Oh, how we miss Boyd! But, thank God! he left a bright manifestation of the power of God to the salvation of the soul.

In the death of Bro. McCafferty the neighborhood has lost a good neighbor, the county a good citizen, his father and mother a loving son in whom they had a right to be proud, his brother and sisters a kind brother; but of all, his wife, with her sweet little girl and boy, sustained the greatest loss of all. O Lord, sustain them with all the rest in this sad hour! So, cheer up, loved ones, and let us all strive to meet our brother in heaven.

We laid our brother's body to rest at Mt. Nebo Cemetery, April 1, to wait the resurrection morn, in the midst of a great crowd of his sorrowing friends and relatives. So, farewell, Boyd, till we meet in heaven.

His pastor, R. P. GOAR.

Mrs. Owen was born in Madison county, Miss., on the twenty-seventh day of June, 1844; married in 1859; joined the M. E. Church, South, at Hillsboro, Miss., in 1860. She was the mother of several children, all of whom are members of the church except the youngest.

Sister Owen was a kind, affectionate, self-sacrificing mother, and a devoted, faithful companion; a modest, pure, humble Christian. She lived not for herself. Her life was spent for those she loved—her husband, her children, her neighbors, her Lord. I was her pastor three years. She was a true friend to her pastor and his family, always ready to do whatever she could for their comfort. The calamity is great, but Jesus knows how to heal a broken heart.

Husband, children, and friends, let us take courage in this dark hour of sorrow. Let us think of the beautiful mansions, the bright crowns of glory, the everlasting joys that shall come to those who die in the Lord. Then let us watch and wait, and feel that there are many at the beautiful gate waiting for us; and one day, if we are but faithful and true, we will meet our loved ones to part no more. C. C. EVANS, Ex-Pastor.

Satartia, Miss.

YARBOROUGH—EVA MAY, infant daughter of Mrs. Winnie Yarborough, was born Aug. 4, 1892, and after an illness of ten days passed into a sweet sleep Feb. 13, 1897.

Little Eva was a beautiful child, loved and admired by all who knew her; but now she is no more on this earth of sin and sorrow. How we would enjoy seeing her sweet, smiling face, and hearing her prattling voice once more in that lonely home! But, no! we would not bring her back from her haven of rest were it in our power.

Mama, weep not as those who have no hope, for remember your little Eva is now an angel, enjoying the presence of a loving Savior who, when upon this earth, said to the little ones, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

"Ere sin could blight or sorrow fade,
Death came with friendly care;
The opening bud to heaven conveyed,
And bade it blossom there."

GUASIE.

ROBINS—On Sunday morning, March 14, 1897, two homes were saddened by the death of JULIA VIRGINIA ROBINS. She was the daughter of J. D. and Julia Hoover May. On March 19, 1896, she was married to R. E. Robles, leaving her father's home for that of her husband on the east side of Pearl river. March 15, 1897, she was brought back to her home church and cemetery for interment. Said parents had scarcely ceased to miss her presence in their home when a sadder and greater separation is forced upon them. She is missed by all who knew her, being kind, gentle and loving to all. She was an obedient daughter, a devoted wife; gave herself to God when quite young; joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1888, under the pastorate of J. G. Sibley. To the comfort of a broken-hearted husband, father, mother, brother and sisters, she leaves a little babe. Her last words were, "Has papa come yet?" But father and mother, who were on their way to see her, were too late to minister to her last wants. She leaves five sisters and one brother, all who mourn the loss of a dear and devoted sister.

Weep no more, fond loved ones, but give yourselves over to the will of your Father in heaven, who doeth all things well; then in the sweet by-and-by there will be a meeting in which the sorrows of this life shall be swallowed up in the joy and pleasure of the next. B. W. LEWIS.

Fair River, Miss.

EASTERLING—Whereas, God, in his wise providence, has translated from earth to heaven our esteemed sister, Mrs. ELLA EASTERLING, who had, for many years, been a worthy member of our auxiliary; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we will cherish in our hearts the memory of her many virtues, of her unwavering faith, and of her constancy and zeal in the service of the Lord.

Resolved, That we will bow in humble submission to the will of our God, who doeth all things well, knowing that our loss is her eternal gain.

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved family our sympathies, and assure them of our prayers that God may comfort them with his love.

Resolved, That, imitating her noble example, we will press on to the mark for the prize of our high calling till we meet her again in the bright world above.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the Minutes of our auxiliary, and that a copy be sent the bereaved family.

MRS. S. H. HOWELL,

Crystal Springs, Miss.

COPELAND—Mrs. CAROLINE A. COPELAND died near Miller, Miss., April 11, 1897. She was born Feb. 6, 1833, being over sixty-four years of age.

Sister Copeland was a great sufferer for more than five months. On the first of last November, while walking home from church with friends, she was run over by a horse and buggy driven by a young man who was either thoughtless, careless, or malicious. Both of her lower limbs were broken, and she was caused to go in pain to her grave. She traveled this dreary way in patience and without murmuring. I saw her happy and rejoicing in a Savior's love between paroxysms of awful suffering. A large number of friends were present when we laid her body away to rest in the family graveyard.

A Correction.

MR. EDITOR: I was informed by a life-long friend of my brother, the late J. P. S. Thompson, that an error occurs in the obituary I wrote. He was converted and joined the church under the pastorate of Rev. D. P. Bradford, and not under the ministry of Dr. Andrews, who only preached two sermons during the meeting. Revs. Barnas Pipkin and Ballard, of precious memory, did most of the preaching at forty accessions.

Please correct my error, as we wish a true history, and wish to do justice to the labors of Bro. Bradford. M. L. HOOVER

Summit, Miss., April 24, 1897.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

about washing powders. If you feel like it, it's because you haven't got the right kind. Get Pearline, and see the difference. Pearline has been imitated—but never been equalled. There are all kinds of imitations; powders that save work, but ruin clothes; powders that don't hurt, and don't help you; powders that are cheap to begin with, but dear enough in the end. Try them all for yourself, if you won't take our word for it. But don't get them mixed up in your mind with Pearline.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC

Considerable snow fell in Cincinnati and throughout the state of Ohio on May 2.

A large fire in Pittsburg, Pa., on May 3, destroyed property to the amount of $3,000,000.

The president of the defunct Bank of Commerce of this city, who was tried on the charge of embezzling the funds of the bank, has been found guilty in the Criminal Court.

Every member of the Journeymen Plumbers' Association of Chicago, 1,600 strong, went out on a strike on May 1 The strike involves all shops in the city. By this action the union virtually declares war upon the Master Plumbers' Association as a body.

Three thousand persons marched in the May day parade of the socialists in New York City, on May 1 Conspicuous among them were 300 women and girls. The procession disbanded at Union Square, where speeches were delivered to a large crowd.

The Methodist Bishop, Thomas Bowman, has chosen a home in Evanston, Ill., for the remainder of his days. He is 80 years old, was chaplain of the United States Senate in war times, has presided over Conferences in four continents and dedicated 1,200 churches.

On May 1 the Tennessee Exposition, to celebrate the completion of a century of statehood for that commonwealth, was opened at Nashville. It is a national and international exhibition, and many of the States of the American Union, and particularly Southern States, are represented there.

The Dronth Relief Committee of this city, having received notice from the State Central Drouth Relief Committee that the business of supplying the demands of the people in the drouth-stricken parishes of North Louisiana had been closed out, has announced the winding up of its operations.

A remarkable lynching affair occurred in Texas last week, near Sunnyside, in Waller county. Negroes were the lynchers, and the victims were negroes also. The seven negroes who were made the subjects of popular justice had murdered an old negro man, his step-daughter, Marie, and her seven-year-old daughter. A mob of negroes took the prisoners from the custody of the officers, and after extorting confessions, hung them to death.

FOREIGN.

The Greek Cabinet has resigned, and a new one formed. An honorable peace through war is its policy.

It is said Greek valor is returning. The troops, smarting under the sneers of Europe, are determined to wipe out the stain of cowardice stamped upon them by the disgraceful retreat from Larissa.

The notorious Dr. Carl Peters, the German explorer of Africa, whose cruelty so shocked the world when it was revealed a year or two ago, has been tried on those charges and dismissed from the imperial service.

At the meeting of the Presbyterian Synod, held at Sunderland, England, the business committee decided to reject the petition containing charges of heresy which had been presented against Rev. John Watson, D.D. (Ian Maclaren).

Reports have been received from San Francisco to the effect that the latest advices from the Orient indicate that Japan is greatly stirred up over the refusal of the Hawaiian government to permit the landing of Japanese immigrants, and is preparing to send several warships to the islands.

The disorganization and semi-anarchy which have prevailed at Athens, as a result of the crushing defeat at Tyrnavo and Larissa, place the Greeks in a very unfavorable light. The disaster which has overtaken their army appears to have completely disorganized the Greeks, and they are now prepared to rush into revolution.

The events of the past week have served to further alienate sympathy from the Greeks. The story from Larissa of the fearful stampede to and from that city after the fighting of Tyrnavo is the sensation of the day. The fact that the Greek officers were equally affected with the privates by the panic is regarded as proof that the Greeks are utterly demoralized and incapable of withstanding the steady advance of the Turks. The Greeks will await a decisive encounter at Pharsalia, and they are then expected to appeal to the powers.

I have used the "Mul-en-ol" for several years and can testify to its efficacy in "Colds," "Sore Throat," and especially in applying it externally for Rheumatism. Several friends have found it an almost immediate relief in Rheumatism. I have personal experience as to its healing properties in "Colds" and the throat diseases.

As it is a well-established fact that catarrh is a blood-disease, medical men are quite generally prescribing Ayer's Sarsaparilla for this most loathsome and dangerous complaint. Where this treatment is perseveringly followed, a thorough cure is invariably the result.

IS IT WORTH WHILE?

BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

Is it worth while that we jostle a brother
Bearing his load on the rough road of life?
Is it worth while that we jeer at each other
In blackness of heart—that we war to the knife!
God pity us all in our pitiful strife!

God pity us all as we jostle each other!
God pardon us all for the triumphs we feel
When a fellow goes down 'neath his load on the heather,
Pierced to the heart. Words are keener than steel
And mightier far for woe or for weal.

Were it not well in this brief little journey
On over the isthmus, down into the tide,
We give him a fish instead of a serpent,
Ere folding the hands to be and abide
Forever and aye in dust at his side?

Look at the roses saluting each other,
Look at the herds all at peace on the plain;
Man, and man only, makes war on his brother
And laughs in his heart at his peril and pain,
Shamed by the beasts that go down on the plain.

Is it worth while that we battle to humble
Some poor fellow-soldier down into the dust?
God pity us all! Time aftsoon will tumble
All of us together, like leaves in a gust,
Humbled indeed down into the dust.

En Route in New Mexico.

BY MISS BELLE KEARNEY.

Never, until this trip, have I realized the immensity of the distances of this great country of ours. It seems an unending journey from Mississippi to New Mexico. After paying a visit to Mrs. J. N. Pharr, at her beautiful home on Berwick Bay in the lovely Teche region, and stopping at several other points in Louisiana, I traveled through Texas from Beaumont to San Antonio. The last place is full of interest. It has a decidedly foreign air. On Good Friday I attended service at the cathedral. As I watched the throngs of swarthy Mexicans pour in and noticed their devotional manner, it was difficult for me to persuade myself I was in the United States. At the close of the doleful ceremonies—the swinging of censers, the marchings up and down the aisles by the priests, and the boys officiating at the altar—a young priest came to the edge of the chancel and held a figure of the crucified Christ to the multitude that swarmed to the front and pressed their lips to its feet. We were sitting near enough to catch the faintest whisper. As the stream of humanity began to lessen the priest looked up, heaved a long sigh of relief and exhaustion, bent toward the last worshiper, whirled around, joined in the final chant and the services were ended. Suddenly the aisle was cleared and a little white coffin was brought in followed by a group of mourners, the priest preceding. The father stood at the head of the casket, muttered a few prayers, sprinkled some drops of water over the body, turned again from the "madding crowd" and the funeral procession marched from the church. I haven't seen such looking creatures since I was in Rome as I behold in that cathedral that day; nor such dirtiness, nor primitiveness, nor ignorance, nor superstition! It was a motley crew. There was the Mexican herdsman with his silver-trimmed sombrero, handsome young Spaniards, a la American; pensive, moon-eyed maidens, tottering little children taking their first lesson in public worship, and the most hideous old crones that were ever imagined or described. After a ride around the town admiring all that was to be admired, and there was much—the two handsome military posts, beautiful residences, picturesque plazas and public buildings, some unique, some imposing—we went to the Alamo, the famous old church where Travis, David Crockett and other heroes laid down their lives for the liberty of Texas. At Austin a monument has been erected in front of the splendid State House in honor of these brave defenders. On it is written: "Thermopolæ had its messengor of defeat—the Alamo had none."

On to Fort Worth I went. The ride from there to Pecos is a long and weary one; for the first few miles the country is undulating, then it becomes wild and rugged, then prairies, prairies, prairies! forever and forever, dotted with bunches of cattle and cowboys, and gay with innumerable flowers of every hue; the strong winds blowing across the wide stretches waft in the delicious perfume through the open windows of the car where we sat. The prairie dogs sit about in groups—grave as the judges of the Areopagus; others stand demurely on their hind legs with paws peacefully drooping over their chests and watch the train go by with an expression which says: "This is the most important event of the day, and it is my duty to do deference to it." I am told that prairie dogs, rabbits, owls and rattlesnakes all occupy the same sleeping apartments, which are dug deep down into the earth. A little circular, upper rim gives evidence of their abode. At the stations we see the unfailing Mexican or negro calling out in his sonorous voice with an interrogatory inflection, "Tamalles? tamalles?" (pronounced tarmarlies). On their arms are tin buckets of large proportions, in which are found the inviting (?) conglomeration of beef, corn meal and red pepper, cooked in shucks and tied with strips of the same. The article is sold at the rate of six for a nickel. The wonderful dish of chili concarne is also a mixture of meat with pepper, but partaking of the nature of a stew. Chili con huavo is pepper and egg.

With the dawn of the morning following my leave taking from Fort Worth, I found myself by the great American desert traveling up the Pecos Valley in New Mexico. This is a noted region. I expected to find smiling fields of luscious alfalfa and beautiful orchards laden with fruit, but, instead, nothing but a dreary waste of country—unbroken flatness covered with mesquite bushes about two feet high, and solb-bumps, a kind of ungetridable grass that grows in obstinate tufts to the despair of the enterprising farmer, who is often driven, beaten off the field by it. The wind, which seems never to sleep in this land, howls and shrieks until one feels uncanny, and imagines he hears the wail of unhappy spirits from Hades sweeping to and fro over the desert searching for their earthly tenements.

Roswell is the terminus of the Pecos Valley railroad. It is a little town built in the heart of the prairie—a typical New Mexican village, with its mixture of brick and frame and adobe houses. The surrounding country has been divided—rather a portion of it—into farms, each forty acres, and surrounded by cottonwood trees in the form of a square. They are planted as a break from the wind. These and the willows are the only trees that attain unto any size whatever. Really, they are the only ones I saw at all on the farms. On account of their rarity and the exquisite greenness of their foliage, they present a most pleasing sight to the aching eyes. Cherries and apples are the principal fruits raised, although pears and peaches do well. The chief product of the land is alfalfa, a luxuriant grass that grows as tall as a man's waist when cultivated. The cattle and boys, and even the Mexicans, live on it; indeed, almost every kind of animal. The land has to be constantly irrigated in order to produce anything. Two springs—the North and South—a short distance from Roswell furnishes the water supply. Ditches, which the Mexicans call aciquas, are dug for miles through the country to the different farms, and these let in the water through the furrows by sub ditches. The water costs $1.50 a month for irrigation. That used for drinking purposes is brought in barrels and sold for twenty cents each. It is said the water of the Pecos river is bitter; so the only hope of the people is that from the springs.

The social life of Roswell is very delightful. Scotland, England and Switzerland have given many of its good citizens, and the better classes of the North and South are there in large numbers.

On the afternoon of my arrival I addressed the Woman's Club, which holds its meetings in the elegant quarters of the Knights of Pythias. Twice after that I spoke in the interest of the W. C. T. U. to the public at large. Both of these organizations were formed by Mrs. H. B. Kells, formerly of Mississippi, who is so well known throughout the South for her brilliant intellect. She has been living on a fruit farm near Roswell ever since she resigned her position on the staff of the Union Signal, of Chicago. I was Mrs. Kells' guest for a week, and lived over many happy days in reminiscent talks of the blessed time when we were together in the W. C. T. U. work in our dear old native State.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

The State Epworth League Conference at Water Valley was an occasion of great interest and profit to the hundreds of people, old and young, who attended it. It was a happy commingling of people from all parts of the State, and from nearly every landable profession and pursuit of life. Preachers, lawyers, physicians, teachers, editors, merchants, railroad men, shopmen and farmers took sweet counsel together in blessed Christian fellowship. The people of Water Valley were at their best in cordial hospitality and all needful arrangements for the meeting and the comfort of their guests. A polite Reception Committee met every train with free conveyances, and immediately assigned delegates and visitors to their respective homes. Residences, business houses, shops, wagons, carriages, bicycles, etc., were all profusely decorated with League colors.

Meetings were held each day from 6 A. M. to 10 P. M., with only intermission for meals, and that with increasing interest from beginning to close.

Judge L. H. Estes, of Memphis, favored us with his genial presence and Holy Ghost addresses. He is like Barnabas—"a good man, and full of faith and the Holy Ghost;" and like John and James—"a son of thunder."

Joe Ramsey, of Viola, Tenn., the noted Epworth League organizer, was present, and rendered efficient service. Though physically blind, he has a clear spiritual vision that makes him a power for good.

Rev. T. B. Clifford magnified his office as president, and justly merited the public and private expressions of appreciation that were given him. We bespeak for his worthy successor, Rev. A. F. Watkins, a wise and successful administration during the ensuing year.

Time and space will not allow of further mention of the many persons that gave inspiration and interest to the occasion. A synopsis of the proceedings will be furnished the ADVOCATE for publication.

This scribe, of course, was there, fully equipped, and did well in his line of work. A great many Young People's Hymnals were sold, and much of other useful literature for Leaguers and others.

The colporter is gratified to be able to report good success in his work during the month of April, especially in the bounds of the Grenada district, with the cordial presiding elder and his noble co-laborers. God bless all who have labored with us in Christian work!

Law of Appeal.

It is cause for regret that a question so vital to the rights of the membership and the integrity of the whole church has to be discussed under the pressure of supposed partisanship in any particular case, as the less argumentative are given to personal detraction and abuse rather than to argument; and to others there is a fear lest the wish for the conditions stated may be father to the facts assumed. But is it not possible to divest our thoughts of any and all persons related to the facts, and then calmly arrive at the real facts of the law? What are these?

(1) That for certain offenses against the law the church has the right to arrest the character and to expel from membership the offender, and

(2) That the church shall not deny the party thus tried and expelled the right of an appeal to the next highest court of jurisdiction.

The church is not allowed an appeal, and for the good reason that in equity it is not proper for a court to appeal from its own decisions. The absolute right of appeal, therefore, clearly applies to the trial court, and not to the appellant court. The common-sense view, as well as the equity in the case, is, that the trial court shall not make its findings final and conclusive by a denial of the right of appeal to the next highest court.

Then the question arises, What is the attitude of the expelled toward the church pending the appeal? It is exactly that of the church toward the member—each holds relation to the other in abeyance. While the appeal necessarily works the effect as to the judgment of the trial court, it also works the same effect in the relation of the tried. The court may not proceed with a second trial for an offense committed while the case is in abeyance, but if the court's finding is reversed, then a trial for any unlawful conduct pending the appeal may proceed. Or if the case be remanded for a new trial, then a new bill of charges may be added to the original charge.

These propositions must lie, and for the reason that the authority of the church ends with the verdict, and must so remain closed until a decision from the higher court renders the action void. And the action as to the member must be correct, and for the reason that the action of reversal or remander does not give, but restores membership. The act is retroactive, and, therefore, carries with it responsibility for all conduct had during the period of the abeyance of membership.

And this brings us to another question: Does the absolute right of appeal from the finding of a lower court carry with it also the absolute right to be heard in the higher court? I would answer this question, Yes and no, and that, too, without the fear of a charge of contradiction. There is such a thing in common law as equity with law, and then there is such a thing as equity without law; but the law of the church, which is essentially moral in essence and in administration, knows no such distinctions as these. With her it is equity alone, and her laws and administration are all designed to give expression to that thought and fact. And let me say that woe betide the church and her administration when any other theory obtains among us. Then, if the offended party is even-handed in his dealings with the church; if he recognizes the authority of the church to deal with his evil conduct, and submits to her decrees with a firm reliance upon her sense of moral right and of justice, there can be no doubt but that the higher court is under as much obligation to receive the appeal as the lower court is to suffer it. But be it remembered that the highest court is under as great obligation to the court appealed from as it is to the party making the appeal. To protect one at the expense of the other is neither equity in morals nor equity in law; and to respect the assumed rights and grounds of the party appealing, without regard to the authority of the court from which he appeals, would be such a hopeless division of an house against itself as would not only endanger, but that would force its falling.

Then suppose the party presenting the appeal has refused to suffer the penalty, and thereby has ignored the authority of the court from which he appeals, from what does he appeal? Not from any harsh or unjust action had on the part of the court from which he appeals, because by his own disregard of authority, and the exercise of rights and functions attempted to be denied him by said action, he has not suffered in the cause or causes alleged. Then the appeal is not from any fact of state or experience brought about by the action of the lower court, but from an attempted fact in both. To admit an appeal under such circumstances is not to remedy any evil in the proceedings, but to very adroitly determine the question of original jurisdiction of the court appealed from.

Rev. R. S. Woodward.

Rev. Robert Sutherland Woodward was the youngest of eight children—four sons and four daughters. His father, Rev. R. S. Woodward, was a local preacher, and died before his son was born, on Dec. 19, 1833. His mother, Sarah Creighton Woodward, a woman of fervent piety, great strength of character, and firmness of principles, was married to Rev. R. S. Woodward in 1817, soon after which they removed to Marengo county, Ala., where the husband died at the age of thirty-nine years, leaving his widow to rear a large family without a father's counsel and help. She laid her burdens at the foot of the cross and sought guidance of the spirit of God. Few women possessed a clearer, calmer, or more deliberate judgment, combined with such inflexible integrity of character. God's Word was her daily companion, next which were such books as, "The Guide to Holiness," "Lives of Fletcher," "Hester Ann Rodgers," "Madam Guyon," etc. She was peculiarly gifted in prayer, and her prayers were powerful in their nearness to God. Surrounded by such influences, it is no wonder that her youngest son—upon whom the love of the family centered—should have devoted his life to the saving of souls.

According to our best information, he joined the old Alabama Conference, at Talladega, in December, 1850, and was appointed junior preacher on Cedar Bluff circuit, which now includes the present city of Gadsden. All his journals, records, minutes, etc., were destroyed in the fire that swept away the relics of a lifetime. A small pocket diary contains a record of 1858, when he was stationed at Hamburg, Perry county, Ala. From that diary we read that there he held Sabbath-school, preached twice a day to the white people, and in the afternoon to the negro slaves, in which work he was peculiarly gifted. He herein, too, records his complete consecration to God of all his ransomed powers, without any reserve, until death.

In 1861 he was united in marriage to Miss Sallie Mardis, daughter of Dr. Jno. Mardis, of Alabama, and a graduate of Centenary College, Summerfield, Ala. Her father was a prominent physician, of a prominent and talented family, and in his daughter possessed a jewel of rare culture and qualifications. Having united herself to the itinerancy, she adapted her unusual powers to its welfare, and has been, at all times, a true, earnest and efficient helpmeet to her noble husband in his ministerial labors, endearing herself to all wherever they pitched their tent; ever ready to respond to any call; ready to weep with those who weep and rejoice with those who do rejoice. Thus has she held up her husband's hands all along their wedded journey, not even failing when the death angel knocked at the portals of their home and bore away her heart's best treasure. With sweet, heroic resignation she bowed to the will of the God they had always served, and meekly said, "Thy will be done."

After serving various stations in Alabama and Florida, Bro. Woodward joined the Mississippi Conference in 1876. In this State he served one year at Brandon, four years at Natchez, one year at Canton, one year on Vicksburg district, four years at Vicksburg station, four years at Yazoo City, where this beautiful church stands as a monument of his devotion. He was next on Brookhaven district three years, where he labored under many discouragements. Here he built a beautiful district parsonage, which was entirely consumed by fire, February, 1892, in which he lost the accumulations of a lifetime—sermons, books, journals, everything destroyed by the merciless flames, barely escaping with their lives. The shock of the fire, the heavy work of travelling the district and other things told upon his health, and he never recovered his wonted strength and old-time power. His wife, in writing of the great strain upon him, says, "The tired look on his face, as he came in from long, wearisome trips on the district with his grip across his shoulders, is engraven upon my heart as with the point of a diamond." In this condition he was appointed to Central Church, Meridian. They both felt that his strength was inadequate to this heavy field; but he was always willing, if need be, to lay down his life for the church. A protracted spell of typhoid fever last Spring and Summer reduced his health, from which his enfeebled system could not rally, and in December, 1896, he was superannuated. He wanted to "die in the harness," but said he was only waiting to do God's will—if only to suffer.

The good people of Meridian fitted up a comfortable home for the old servant of God and smoothed his pathway to the grave. His last days were consecrated to the blessed Master, and with such an overwhelming influence of the divine presence that it approximated as nearly the transports of Peter and his comrades as is permitted to mortals in this life. He was taken worse on Friday night, and, seated in a rocker (he could not lie down), he said to his wife, "Darling, I will have to leave you!" And then followed a rapturous vision of the glories of heaven—shouting "Glory! glory!" and it seemed that, the gates of heaven were ajar, and together they could hear the shouts of the redeemed. A halo of supernal glory lingered in the balmy Spring air, and their spirits were yet joined as she watched him, so peaceful and natural, in the sleep of the just.

On Saturday afternoon, after brethren had prayed, he told them he was "trusting in the precious blood of Jesus." He pointed to heaven, and exclaimed triumphantly, "I'm going home!" He passed out through the gates into the city of God, Saturday night, about eleven o'clock.

Rev. F. M. Williams, in writing of him, said: "He was true to his wife, true to his children, true to his friends, to his church and his God. A finer specimen of Christian character and moral manhood I have never known; and with his manliness there was combined a womanly tenderness that won all hearts to him. His work is done and well done, and God has taken him to his everlasting rest."

"The pains of death are past,
Labor and sorrow cease;
And, life's long warfare closed at last,
His soul is found in peace.
Soldier of Christ, well done!
Praise be thy new employ;
And while eternal ages run,
Rest in thy Savior's joy."

A PETITION.

Speak to us Lord, at dawn of day
Chase the dark gloom of night away
Awaken thought and lift it rise
To thee, the Lord of earth and skies

Speak to us mid the toils of life
Above the din of noonday strife,
May thy voice reach our listening ear,
Allay each doubt and calm each fear

Speak to us as the shades of night
Gather around and dim our sight,
When work is o'er, and rest is sweet
And home is at our Savior's feet.

Thy servants may we ever be
In time and in eternity
Obedient to thy faintest call.
Faithful in all things great or small.

A Leaf from the Diary of Rev. Thomas Nixon.

BY REV. J. M. WEEMS.

I hsrs beg pardon for correcting a few mistakes made by Bro. Draks in his biographical sketch of Bro. Lane. Hs says that Bros. T. Griffin, E. Lott and A. Flsming wsrs msmbers of this Confsrsnce. As a matter of fact, Bros. Griffin and Lott were in Tennessee at this tims, and Bro. Fleming was a probationer. He also says Bro. Owens was received on trial at this Confsrsncc. But I know that Bro. Owsns was ordainod a deacon, and was received into full connsction at this Confsrsnce. Bro. Winans was thers, bnt was not even psrmitted in the room dnring the sessions of the Conference, becauso he was not a member. They conduct the Conferences differently now, and lst everybody in. Whsther this is for the better, or otherwise, is an opsn qnsstion.

Bro. Laue and I went with the Bishop to Natchez, where hs prsached at night to a large congregation from Heb. ii, 3. The next day ws went with him to Washington, where he preached from Luke xvi, 31. We then went to Bro. Winan's, where on Sunday, the twentieth, Bro. Lane preached first to a large congregation from I. Peter ii, 4. The Bishop then preached one of his best sermons from John i, 39. Bro. Lane was a stranger, and the people thought he was the Bishop. After the services an old gentleman was heard to say: "The Bishop preached a fine sermon, but I think the old man who proached last can beat him prsaching." The Bishop laughed heartily when wo told him he excelled the Bishop as a prsachsr.

I continued with the Bishop oight or ten days, and as I carsfully noted the events as they transpired, I will now quote from my diary.

Monday, 21, we went to Mr. M. H. Calley's, whore the Bishop preached from Prov. xxii, 11.

Tuesday, 22.—This day I am 23 ysars old, and how swiftly time seems to pass by. The Bishop preached to-day in Libsrty, Amite county, from I. Cor. v, 20, and aftsr preaching we traveled eleven miles to ths homs of Bro. Burts, whers ws spent the night.

Wsdnesday, 23.—The Bishop is very unwell to-day, though we traveled 28 miles to ths homs of Bro. Pickstt, whers ws spsnt the night.

Thursday, 24.—This morning, bofors day, ths Bishop had a hard chill, followed by high fevsr, and he kept his bed until late in ths svoning, when we travslsd 6 miles and spent ths night with Bro. King.

Friday, 25.—This morning, at 8 o'clock, ws started in the rain, and traveled 30 miles to ths home of Bro. R. Gibson. An appointmsnt had been made for the Bishop to preach to-day, but it was almost dark when we arrivsd. Hsre we met Bro. Dixon, who has bssn vsry ill, but is improving.

I spent Saturday and Sunday with Bros. Sellers and Mennifee in a quarterly meeting, and wo had a gracious time.

Ws returned Sunday evening, and fonnd ths Bishop quits sick and very restlss.

Monday, 28.—Dr. Goings arrived this morning, and thinks tho Bishop will soon be well. I havs now been with this great and good man for more than two weeks, and I feel sure no mistake was mads in calling him to the high office he now fills. While be is companionable, he is also dignified, and shows his contentment in every home hs enters, as well as his appreciation of every attention shown bim.

Tnesday, 29.—To-day I take leave of Bishop Roberts, who is still unwell, bnt is able to be np. This was our first, as it was also our last, meeting in this life; yet, as enfeebled strength and gray hairs admonish me that at this writing I am nearing the end, I expect to meet him in tho "saints' eternal home."

I traveled alone thirty mlles to Bro. William Foster's, where I expected to meet Bro. Fleming, and we would go together to onr work in tho Louisiana District.

Experience.

Experienco is made up of facts retained in memory, and certified to by consciousnsss at ths tims of their occnrrence. Hence thsrs can be no qnestion raised as to the facts that sntsr into the sxpsrience of anyons sxcspt it be a questlon of vsracity. Whsn ons relates his expsrisnce, if I know him to be truthful, I aocspt his statemsnt of facts as trns. I would not, however, bind myself to make ths sams nse of thsse facts that he does; for ons may bs truthful without being logical. Ths facts of his expsrience may not conduct me to the same conclnsion that he has reachsd.

I havs bssn requested by some of my brsthren to write for publication in ths ADVOCATE soms parts of my rsligious sxpsrisncs, whlch, in deference to their judgmsnt, I now procesd to do. I shall confine myself strictly to a statemsnt of facts, so that my roadsrs may form their own opinions as to what thsse facts prove. I really do not want to discuss any controvsrted point.

I was convsrted in May, 1851, in Wetumpka, Ala., undsr ths ministry of Rev. Josiah Barksr. For some time aftsr I was joyful in tho consciousness of tho divins favor. It was not long, howsver, until thsre came a chsngs in my condition, and I bsgan to doubt my convsrsion, and, of course, while in that state of donbt I had not the witness of the Spirit nor the joy of God's salvation. My cheerless condition drove me to my knees, and I was again restored to God's favor.

I was licensed to preach in 1855, and recsivsd on trial into tho Alabama Conference in December of that year. I havo preached ths doctrine of holiness the wholo of my ministerial life; but I nover claimed to have attained it until about first of February, last. I often felt my nsod of it, and in my way sought for it for a tims; but not persisting, I failed of snccess. During all thsse years there wero evil tendonciss in my natnre that nsedsd to bs watched, and that bronght my jndgmont and conscience into antagonism to these inclinations. And while such tendencies are not necessarily sinful, in a ssnss that involvss guilt and forfeits justification, the fact remains that they impede progress in the divine life, and hinder in the work tho Master has given ns to do.

Now I claim, as a matter of expsrience, that thsse evil tendencies of my natnre are subjugated, and that ths Holy Spirit gives his testimony to that fact. Ths inward storm and strife has ceased, the conflict is ended, and there is joy and peace within, and a consciousnsss of ths abiding prssonce of the Spirit. I cams into this sweet experience about the first of last February during Sister Hall's msoting at East End, Meridian. I know, too, that this experienco is different from, and snperior to, anything I evsr enjoyed before, and that I rsceived it by faith at a certain time and place. I call it, as authorized by the Scriptures, entire sanctification, perfect love, or Christian perfection. Whatever others may do, I did not grow into it, but received it by faith instantaneously. "Hsrs I stand; God help mo; I can do nothing more."

D. G. W. ELLIS.

The Epworth League in Our Small Towns and Thinly Populated Portions of the Country.

Attention has been called to the insfficiency of the Constitution and By-laws of the Epworth Loagne in thsir application to, at least, some portions of the rural districts over which onr preachsrs do now and have long extended tbeir pastoral labors. The objection has been replied to in public meetings by speakers and by others in print urging the need of Leagne work in tbese sections, with a flonrish of empbasis from the speaker and a gusto of sarcasm and pious wit by the writer, insisting tbat the work was needed in the country, and to go forward and do it. Like the boy who shot a rabbit, he know ho had shot it, because he felt the gun kick his shonldor. They knew they had said somsthing good, becanse they felt ths rocoil of tho idea.

Nevorthsless, tho failnro of the Epworth Leagne in these sections is patent to the oxpsriencs of some pastors and prsachers as wise and good as thsir cotemporarios, whom ws havo heard speak and road after on this lins of thought and ohnrch work. The blank reports from many charges of our connsction illnstrate the fallure of our want of snccess. I am not prepared to taks all the responsibility of tho failure, nor to charge it upon wise and good msn whose zeal prsparos thsm for any snterprise, holding a promiss of forwarding ths Master's kingdom.

In these sparssly sttled communities social life is at a disadvantage compared with large towns and villagss. In these popnlons communities ths boys and girls are in more freqnent intercourse with each otber, know and undsrstand ons another bstter. Social gatherings ars more freqnent and accssaible. Sooieties are mors frsqusnt, and ths young people learn to nndsrstand them better. Literary societies and olnbs are often well understood in the town, while ths country lad and lass are strangers to them. Any snch organization is rarely proposed and seldom fostered among snch country yonth. The mails in towns ars so mnch more rogular, and frsquently contributss a stimnlns to rsading and literary taste nnfslt by ths yonng peopls of the remote sections. To organize a Lsagus in some such place whsre it is evident ons ought to be, a difficulty is at once prssented in the fact that membsrs to be taksn in live from ons mils to sight miles distant from each other. These parsons, as a rule, obtain thsir mail at different postoffices. With tbis state of things one difficnlty is recognized in forming committess to act in concert; a second liss in distributing litoraturs—sometimes a loss laborions task to distribute it through Jackson, Miss. Committses in towns aro not prepared to sympathizo with snch a stato of things. The man in tho city, with long city associations, is not well preparod to meet practically this state of things. Wo nsed preachors in somo places not so spscially trained to ssrmonize and deliver sermons as prepared to get down to the wants and sympathlos, and maks himself fslt and undsrstood; and wo need some books written, not by hook-makers, bnt by one who feels himself in touch with the unlearnod and simple folk. If this seeming paradox can bs applied hsro, it may be understood that we nsod some constitution clanses not written by constitution makers, and some by-laws prspared hy one not a by-law makor.

The nscossity for Lsaguos to train the country-bred youth is certainly greater in the country than ths town. The country boy or girl drifts into or goss to town sssking fortune, hnt tho young men and womon of town never go to ths country huuting fortune.

I offer this snggestion: That ths conditions of membsrship bs so provided for that all of svery age bs ollgible until there are enongh of members under a certain age to form a jnnior Leagus, provided snough are left to maintain a senior Leagns in good working ordsr. The providing and distributing literature prssents a difficult and delicate work. The appropriation of money to this interest, and the smployment of missionariss to work up the destituto and difficnlt sections, might be thought of profitably.

Drouth Sufferers.

I have receivsd the following amounts for the benefit of the dronth snfferors of tho Fourth Ward, Bionville parish, La.: A good woman of Sallis, Miss., $5, through Bro. T. G. Freeman; from Rev. H. L. Norton and wife, of Bsnton, Miss., $2.

The above will be given to destitnte widows and orphans at once, and will gladdsn thsir hearts. We have some that have to be taken care of by the people that can hardly care for themselves.

In the name of tbe needy, and of the ward committee, I retnrn sincere thanks for the above sums.

Mission Work in Louisiana.

So will help bs sent to those whose sonls ars starving, if their famished condition be understood. Once we ars fully mads to realize the spiritual darkness in ths parishss of St. Bernard, Plaqnemins, Lafourche, Terrsbonne, St. Martin, Point Coupss, Wsst Baton Rouge, Jefferson, Ibervills, St. John, Assnmption, and Southern Ascension, not to speak of St. Mary, Iberia, St. Landry, Vermilion, Cameron, Calcasisu, Rapides and Avoyelles, onr zsal will bnrn for thsse, our nearest neigbbors, as it nevsr has for the far-away brother. Ones understanding their dire need, their darkness, their ignorance of the Scriptnres, their superstitions, thsir immorality, we would hasten to send Bibles, ministers, teachers armed with God's search-light of truth, to dissipate the darkness and to lift up our brothers into tbe pnrs air of Christian living.

Friends, do you know that in tbe first fonrtesn parishes namsd we havs but three ministers? Do you know that in tbese parishss live 250,000 immortal sonls? Do you know that in ths othsr parisbes mentioned tbe ministers aro stationed in small towns, and tbeir hearsrs are not so many as one-thirtieth of the population? What lack of spiritual teaching! Do we send missionaries to Brazil and Mexico? We do; and exactly the same conditions exist here as there. In morality and Christian intelligence our bome field is no more advanced than these foreign fields. The same religion, found in Brazil and Mexico, taught in the same way and propagated by the samo class of teachers, is dominant in the destitute parishss I havo named.

Friends, do you know that vsry fsw of these people ever see a Biblo? Ever oven hear, of the Holy Book? God's book, his messago, his letter to thsm is withhold. They are not allowed to study its pages. Do yon wondsr that reports of crimes unmentionablo and dreadful murders so frequently startle the State? Whose fault is it that lawlssnsss provails? It is a matter of history that in thoso parishes whsre our church has gained a foothold the laws are fairly well obsarved; bnt how is it whsre we havs no ministers? Ths laws are constantly broken, tho Sabbath desecrated, ths saloon rulss, unssctarian or Protestant education is bitterly opposed, and vice and crime hold high carnival. Ths newspapsrs ars filled with accounts of murder and mobs, and our sister States are lsd to bslievs that all Louisiana is one hot-bed of wickednsss. Evsn a sslfish motive would move us to do somsthing, did we fully realizs tho need for onr activity. How can we expsct a good, well-to-do class of people to maks their homos in a State noted for lawlessness.

Can it be that we do not believe that the Bibls, with its high and ennobling precopts, could work the desired change? How is it whsre the Holy Book is read? Comparo thsss places with those whore it is suppressed. The difference is markod. Even tho unboliover acknowlsdges that our Bibls purifies, elevates and npbnilds sooioty. Shall wo not hasten to sond these people the Holy Book printed in their own language? Shall we not send tsachers to oxplain in the vsrnaonlar of the people the precepts of this wonderful volume?

Last year a man in ons of these parishes hsard our missionary preach a singlo sermon. Hs trisd to find the book from which the preacher got his teachings. For a time hs falled, bnt, porsovoring, he finally obtainod a French Bible and road for himself. What was tho result? One sermon lsd him to search for a Bible; that fonnd, ho was led to sook ths salvation it taught. Not only he, but his family with bim, came into the fold.

A little consideration of the existing state of things will surely convince any Christian worker of the need for immediate action. Once being convinced of this need, the qnery arises, How best may these people be approached; what is the wisest course? God help us to find it.

Since nearly all of these people speak ono of the many patois of the French language, it is of prime importance that tbs missionary be thoroughly conversant with their vsrnacnlar. If no snch parson can bs fonnd, iet one willing to study and acquaint himself with this dialect be set apart to fit himself for the field. To do effectivs work the missionary must speak the Frenoh language. A teacher who has aocess to the homss can accomplish far moro than one who simply sxpounds the Word from tbe pnlpit. Many are so prsjudiced against a Protsstant ohnrch that tbey ars unwilling to snter its doors. To these the message must be carried.

The field is not an easy one. Only God's grace can fit any man or woman for mission work in Lonisiana. Let us pray, sisters of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, and all friends of missions, that God will raise up teachers, properly eqnipped, filled with the Holy Spirit, ready to devote their lives to tbis great work.

No State has greater need of a Home Mission Society than Lonisiana What a grand work is spread before the women of Lonisiana Methodism; what a rich reward they may reap if they will but labor sarnestly, zealonsly, persistently!

The fifth Annual District Mesting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Holly Springs district convened in the Methodist Church at Byhalia, Miss., April 17, 1897; Sister M. L. Hargrove presiding. After the dovotional sxercisss she gave ns a thrilling address based on John xvii, 11, 15 and 18, setting forth our obligations as co-laborors with Christ. May her words of admouition and encouragement sink deep into the hearts of all her hearsrs and awakon a greatsr zeal and a moro earnsst dosire to do our Savior's bidding! The address was followed by reports from tho district secretary, Miss SallieHinton, and from the auxiliaries.

We ars glad that the interest in foreign missions is increasing in onr district. Wo now havo eighteen societies, with a membership of two hundred and seventy-sight, two honorary life msmbers, two life members, two day schools in China (the James T. Fant Day School for boys and the Lucy Fant Day School for girls), and one scholarship namsd in honor of our beloved sister, Nannie Fant.

We are sorry to report only fifty-ons subscribsrs to the Woman's Missionary Advocate and thirty-two to the Little Worker. We hope to double this nnmbsr at least bsfore the closs of another year.

Dnring the past year there was forwardsd to onr Conference treasuror $630.74, which is an advance of $172.37 ovor the precoding ysar. Our incrsass in membsrship was ninoty-three.

Our district secretary reported our greatest need to bs live, ensrgetic lady managers and a widor circulation of our missionary literature.

The rsports from the diffsrent sociatles wsre encouraging. We rsgrstted that some failed to send dolsgates.

Saturday night we wsre sntertainsd by instructive papers and addresses on ths various dspartments of missionary work, which were interspersed with songs and rscitations.

Sunday morning the annual sermon was ably deliversd by Rev. L. D. Worsham, whoss text was Isaiah lii, 7.

Sunday aftsrnoon ths children's ssrvico, conducted by Sister Hargrove, was very impressive. May the good seed sown bring forth an abundant harvest! At the close of the ssrvice the jnvonlles wore reorganizsd with about forty membors, they having disbandsd for want of a lady managsr. We also reorganized our Epworth League. The soul-stirring address of Sister Hargrove on Snnday night will be remembered by the large audience assembled. She is a woman of remarkable magnetism, and her soul is thoroughly in her work, and while she will be sadly missed from our North Mississippi Conference, it would be hard to find one to better supply the place she is to occupy in the Scarritt Bible and Training-school.

(MISS) DORA INGRAM,
Secretary.

Selections.

Nothing can be of greater practical importance to evory Christian than ths constant realization of the divine presence. It is worth evsry effort. It is, as much as any one thing can be, the key to the position, tbe guarantee of a sacred life. An increasing appreciation of this truth is shown in ths largs emphasis which, for a few years past, bas been pnt upon the doctrine of ths Holy Spirit. Is not this simply another form of the same fact? The Holy Spirit is the present God, the God who opsrates most immediately and directly upon the hnman hsart, the God of the present dispensation or age. Faith also—what is that but the sense of God's presence, the realization of unseen things, the olose tonch with the sternal, the apprehension of Deity? Hsnce to say of a person he is "full of faith and the Holy Ghost," is only another way of saying that he keeps God ever before bis eyes; God is at his right hand, so that hs is not moved by mundane things. In that presence is fullness of joy, completenoss of liberty, abnndance of rest.—Zion's Herald.

Hsrs is a stone in a qnarry. Men come along and rndely blast and tear it from its place. Then it is carried away, and other msn come and cut and chip and chisel it rudely. The stone might say: "Why am I trsated thns? How hard it is to undergo such rongh and hsartless treatmont." But by and by there comss ont from ths rough stone a bsautlfnl angel fignre which all mnst admire and love. Thsn the stons begins to undsrstand what the chipping and chiseling and hard trsatment all meant. So with us: "No cbastening for the prosent seemeth to be joyous, but grisvons, but afterward it yields the peaceful frnit of righteousness to thsm who are oxercised thersby."—Sslected.

Let us take short viswa. Let us not climb tho high wall till wo get to it, or fight the battlo till it opens, or shed tears over sorrows that may never come, or lose the joys and blossings that wo have by the sinful fear that God will take them away from us. We need all our strength and all the grace God can give us for to-day's burdens and to-day's battle. To-morrow belongs to our heavenly Father.—Theodore Cuyler, D. D.

When we lament the fact that only one-third of the communicants in our churches aro men, let us consider how we should feel if tho figures wsre revorsed, and only one-third wsre women. It is greatly to be desirsd that the nnmbsr of mon were doubled; but, if thore is to be an inequality, it is botter that tho women should be in preponderant numbers. —Indopendent.

Show mo a woman liko Florence Nightingale, ministering in the hospitals of Scutari; show me a man liks David Livingstone, dying for heathen folk; show me a man like Father Damien, giving his life for the loathssome leper, and I will show you the hand, the heart, and the voice for Josus Christ.—Bishop Whipple.

The law of the world is progress along the line of a spiritual evolution. The life of the world is better to-day than it ever has been in the past. The love of God is our surety that it will grow better and better undor the divine tuition and discipline.—Phillip Moxom.

Horace Mann truly said: "In vain do they talk of happiness who never subdued an impulse in obsdience to a principle. He who nevor sacrificed a present to a future good, or a personal to a gensral one, can spoak of happinoss only as the blind do of colors."

We often live under a clond, and it is woll for us that we should do so. Uninterrupted sunshine would parch our hearts; we want shade and rain to cool and refrosh them.—Hare.

A dead fish will swim with the stream, whatever be its direction; but a living one will not only resist tho stream, but, if it chooses, it can swim against it.—Cecil.

To Whom it May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

MUL-EN-OL is the greatest of all antiseptic dressings. Is a sovereign remedy for healing flesh wounds on man or beast.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. M. Williams: "We had a very interesting and spiritual meeting during our second Quarterly Conference, which was held at Old Crystal Springs, continuing Saturday and Sunday. Reports showed decided increase on all lines. This work has paid during this quarter more than a quarter of its assessment for preacher in charge and presiding elder, and this is the hardest part of the year, financially. We are greatly encouraged."

FRANKLINTON, LA.

Things are moving along nicely with us. We have finished up our parsonage work, which was begun at the first of the year. We now have a first-class parsonage on the Franklinton work. The Board of Stewards made a very liberal assessment for the preacher. This charge has the ability to become one of the strongest in the Louisiana Conference. There is not a kinder people anywhere.

N. J. ROBERTS, P. C.

GALLMAN CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: We were disappointed in not having you with us at Bethesda, the fourth Sunday in April. A large congregation gathered to hear you preach; more than could get in the church. But your absence was explained and the cause regretted. However, our pastor, Rev. W. M. Williams, proved himself equal to the occasion by preaching a most excellent sermon to the joy of all who heard it.

Bishop Hendrix did an excellent thing when he sent us Bro. Williams. He is growing in power with his people generally. Always prompt, energetic and watchful, he is doing a good work in this part of the Master's vineyard. It is not our aim to flatter him—rather we would encourage him; but in our estimation he is a model pastor. If by his diligent labor he is not enabled to make a good report at the Annual Conference, then surely some one else will be to blame.

Our second Quarterly Conference convened at old Crystal Springs, Saturday and Sunday last, May 1 and 2, with our presiding elder, Rev. E. H. Mounger, in the chair. The session was both pleasant and profitable. One hundred and thirty-seven dollars and fifty cents was reported as having been collected during the quarter for the support of the ministry. One hundred and thirty-five dollars added to this amount would be just one-fourth of the amount assessed our pastor in charge and presiding elder for this year. Is not this a good financial showing? This is the result of the faithful service of our pastor. But this is not all. Our Sunday-schools are growing and prospering. The people are being awakened from a spirit of lethargy and carelessness under the ministry of Bro. Williams.

Under the pervading influence of God's Holy Spirit, we trust that many souls will be brought to Christ. WYMELLER.

CORINTH, MISS.

The Lord has blessed us in Corinth, Miss., with a gracious season of revival. Beginning on the eighteenth of March, the Presbyterians, Cumberland Presbyterians and Methodists in turn have held a series of protracted meetings, ending April 20. The pastors and people of those denominations, together with the Baptists, united and stood in solid ranks for the Master's cause. The one object was to win souls to Christ. The preaching was plain, earnest, clear, strong, sound. The people were fed with the marrow and fatness of the gospel, and both saint and sinner had his portion in due season.

Dr. Mathews, of Jackson, Tenn.; the Rev. Mr. Wiggenton, of Oxford, Miss., and our Bro. J. A. Bowen, of Water Valley, Miss., came in this order to do the preaching. These men of God, differing greatly in style and method, yet each preaching the glorious gospel of the blessed God, seemed to come in the most fitting succession for complete results. The Lord owned his Word. Christians were built up in faith and zeal, and put on new life in Christ, while sinners turned from their ways to walk in the light of God. About fifty have confessed Christ and have joined the churches. A strong impulse is given to all departments of church work. These denominations, though already living together in harmony, have been drawn still closer, and present a solid front for morality and spiritual life. Corinth is becoming marked for the absence of crime and dissipation, and for the moral and religious tone of her people.

Bro. Bowen's ministry here during the ten days of our meeting was a blessing to the community, and especially to our church. He is eminently the pastor's helper and fellow-servant. His preaching is a direct enforcement of gospel teaching, clear of slang and joke and sensational strokes. A straightforward gospel and a straightforward Methodism is the creed and preaching of this brother beloved. May he be long spared to his work!

There were some special seasons of spiritual power during this meeting, which can not now be mentioned. Sunday, April 18, was a high day with us, glorious in the presence of the Lord. Last Sunday, the twenty-fifth, was a joyful day to us. Fifteen joined the church on profession, mostly from the Sunday-school, and four by letter, making over thirty this year. I must wait for another note to give you other items.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

BROOKSVILLE CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

This will to some be but a name, while to others it may bring pleasant recollections of a "local habitation." Be that as it may, it will, perhaps, be interesting to both classes to give to the outside world—i. e., Conference—some account of this, we flatter ourselves, pleasant field of labor. Brooksville, which, as the only town in the circuit, gives name to the whole charge of four appointments, is a pleasant, enterprising, busy little town, or village, as dwellers in cities may call it, situated on the M. & O. railroad, 10 miles by rail from Macon, county site of Noxubee. It is in a rich prairie belt, and a pleasant, social, busy town of about 300 inhabitants. On entering the town from the Louisville road, we arrive first at the Brooksville parsonage, equal, we have heard, to any in the Conference, in pleasant situation and inviting appearance. I may say, in passing, that if we find the exterior attractive, the interior is, perhaps, more so. Entering, we meet at the door the pastor, with a kindly greeting and cordial welcome, and further in the neat rooms and pretty parlor we enjoy the society of the equally cordial and graceful hostess—and oh! such pretty little folks! No one comes into this home but feels himself an honored and welcome guest.

Brooksville has the advantage over the other churches of the association with the pastor's family, always an agreeable acquisition to society. Next door is the church, a good building, comfortably seating its congregation. Here is the first appointment in the charge. It has a good Sunday-school, P. and H. M. Society and Missionary Society. In connection with this charge, I would say, to encourage aspiring circuit riders, that our honored Bishop Hargrove was once preacher on Brooksville circuit.

The second Sunday in each month is given to Soule Chapel, about six miles from Brooksville. This is a truly rural spot. "Beautiful for situation," the church stands in a lovely grove, with shade trees all around, and presents a lively scene on Sundays, as the carriages, wagons, buggies, and horses are seen in all directions, and the church goers, in eager joy at the pleasure of their monthly service, prized specially in the country, as a rare opportunity of worship. The cemetery lies adjacent to the church, with the sacred dust of past generations, worshipers here, now gone to the church above. The congregations at Soule Chapel are very good, especially in Summer; but the services are kept up regularly all the year, in spite of bad roads, and unpleasant weather in Winter. Commend us to Soule Chapel for friendly greeting and cordial hospitality, kindly invitations to all church attendants to go home to dinner, and their houses must be spacious indeed to be conformable to the size of their hearts. The Soule Chapel Sunday-school is somewhat interrupted in Winter, but opens with Spring flowers, nor is sweeter than the dear little scholars. We "love God and little children." We might linger long here, but time forbids.

The third appointment is Exprairie Church, and here is a charming community and excellent congregations. In the neighborhood are some distinguished and prominent citizens of the county, relatives and descendants of the lamented Capt. Koger, the soldier of the cross, and of his country, who poured out his heart-blood for its cause and whose dust reposes in a distant land, his spirit long since translated from the church militant to the church triumphant. We can not do justice to the various attractions of these charges in a rapid survey. Here, as in all the churches, is a Sunday-school, P. and H. M. Society and many faithful and devoted Christians.

The fourth Sunday is the appointment at the New Bethel Church. A remarkable feature here is that this is a Union Church, belonging to three denominations, working in entire harmony and contributing to all the church enterprises. Certainly this is a beautiful sight, proving to the world that these Christians "are neither of a Paul, Apollos, or Cephas, but all of Christ." The causes are supported here with energy and liberality. There is a Sunday-school (Union), but in working operation and unanimity. Assessments are always paid, and full collections in Brooksville circuit. We have quarterly meetings on Saturdays in our country churches, a dinner after service, a pleasant social gathering, and any amount of enjoyment and good cheer.

It may not be inappropriate to mention that the next district meeting of the Epworth League will be in Brooksville. We hope to have many visitors, and an interesting and inspiring occasion. The season of protracted meetings is here. We hope for good results and the blessing of God in these occasions. Pray for us.

Respectfully,

A MEMBER OF BROOKSVILLE CIRCUIT.

A woman takes a step upward when she becomes a mother. She achieves the thing for which she was created. No other work that she can do in the world is so great or so good as the bearing of bright, healthy, useful children. The mothers of such children make the world better. Nobody in all life and history has ever done anything half so good as this. It is something to which a woman may well devote herself, and may well make every preparation to perform successfully. It is an exploded theory that baby must come with great pain and suffering. A woman who will properly prepare herself for the time of parturition by using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription during the entire period of gestation will find all of the danger and much of the suffering eliminated. She will find also that her baby will be healthy, and that she herself will be strong and well in a remarkably short time. This is the only medicine the world that will do this thing, and it will do it certainly and infallibly. "The Favorite Prescription" is a positive specific for all forms of female weakness and disease. It is designed to benefit just one set of organs, and that it does do this to a wonderful degree is attested by thousands of letters similar to that of Mrs. L. H. Huff, of Mountairy, Surry Co., N. C., who writes:

"About 18 months ago I began taking Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription and was greatly benefited by it. I have been for seven or eight years a great sufferer from 'female weakness,' gastralgia, etc. I tried the best doctors but obtained no relief. I was taking medicine all the time. Could not be up unless I was under the influence of medicine. Since taking your medicine I have not taken any from any other doctor. Before I began taking your medicine my weight was from 125 to 130 pounds, now I weigh from 175 to 183. Everybody says they never saw such a change in any one."

For biliousness, constipation, palpitation of the heart, sick and bilious headaches, sour stomach, foul breath, heart-burn and flatulence, there is no certain and positive cure except Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules, forty of which are contained in a little two-inch vial. Druggists sell them—twenty-five cents. It is dangerous to accept a substitute.

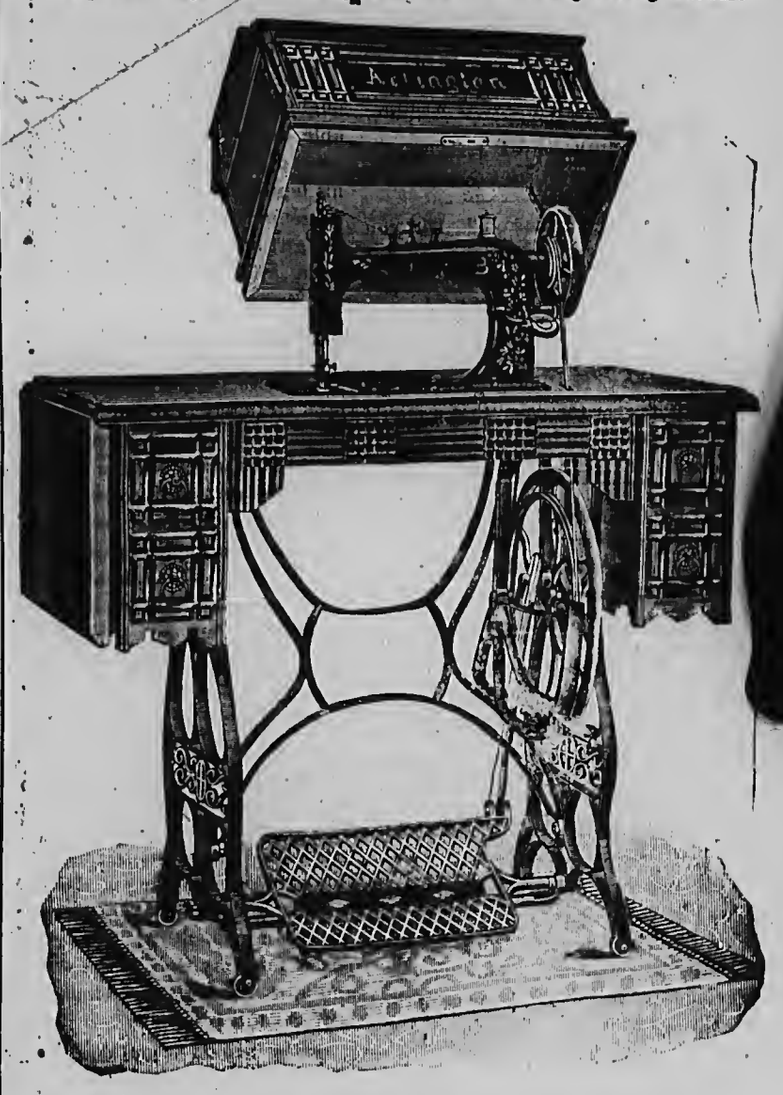
Our Machine Offer.
New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.



A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as an omatin bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change of adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to December, '98, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty new subscribers with the cash—$40.

O weary ones, ye may not see
Your helpers in their downward flight,
Nor hear the sound of silver wings
Slow beating through the hush of night!

There are those who, like the seer of old,
Can see the helpers God has sent,
And how life's rugged mountain side
Is white with many an angel tent.

—Whittier.

Perfect faith never frets, never murmurs, never worries. Selah.

"It is better further on." Did you hear that? That is gospel truth, for "all things shall work together for good to them that love God."

One essential condition of a sublime destiny is a lofty ideal. It is rarely if ever the case that a man's achievements go beyond his aspirations.

If the fault-finder should spend the time he usually takes in criticising others in faithful study of himself, he would soon find himself too busy to resume his old occupation.—Exchange.

This world is God's workshop, not his show-room. Here he is at work with us, making us what we ought to be. Only eternity will show the full result of his handiwork upon us.—Recorder.

It is a little queer that the man who finds it so hard to believe in the infallibility of the Scriptures is, as a rule, the man who finds it easy enough to believe in his own infallibility.—Richmond Advocate.

He best stands popularity, either as a preacher or a worker, who abides longest and oftenest in retirement with his Lord. Secret prayer gives him increased spiritual power, and at the same time prevents him from becoming spoiled.—Presbyterian.

The truths of the Bible are like gold in the soil. Whole generations walk over it and know not what treasures are hidden beneath. So centuries of men pass over the Scripture and know not what truths lie under the feet of their interpretation.—H. W. Beecher.

If you are cold, you will realize it; but if you are freezing, you will feel comfortable enough to go to sleep. It is so in the Christian life. When we begin to get cold, we are painfully conscious of it; but when we get so far from the Sun of Righteousness that our hearts are nearly frozen, we are conscious only of a comfortable drowsiness.—Selected.

We have no patience with that sort of piety which thinks that to speak kindly to the minister of his sermon is of the devil. Such appreciative words are very helpful to the diffident and discouraged minister. He who would be puffed up and spoiled by it, will soon reveal the fact, and then deserves cuffs rather than caresses.—Pittsburg Advocate.

The Joys of Religion.

There is no little truth in the saying that a joyless religion is like a landscape without sun. Religion is not all joy, but true joy has its source in religion. While joy is not to be sought for its own sake, our hearts will be made to overflow with it if we honor God in all things, and make his service the supreme purpose of our lives. He who travels the strait and narrow road to eternal life will find by the wayside many a fragrant flower of promise, many a flowing fountain, many a cup of blessing, and hear many a sweet strain of heavenly music. No man ever experiences joy in the Lord when he is not in the path of duty, or when he is not submissive to God in all things.

To many people following Christ does not signify peace and gladness of heart, but gloom and hardship and the loss of every pleasure. The world looks at the commands and exactions of Christianity and pronounces them grievous, but will not regard the peace and happiness which are inseparably connected with a godly life. Men look at the yoke, and not at the crown; at duty, and not at the ever-ready Helper.

As joy is one of the fruits of the Spirit, it is spontaneous, and will exist in the heart of everyone who is born of God. Like love, it has various manifestations. First, there is the joy of forgiveness. None but they who have been under deep conviction and anguish of spirit at the realization of guilt are permitted to taste the exceeding joy of conscious pardon. To him who has experienced this new-born peace the most enrapturing pleasures of sense appear mean and unworthy in comparison with his happiness of soul.

"Tongue can not express
The sweet comfort and peace
Of a soul in its earliest love."

Every newly pardoned sinner ought to rejoice with joy unspeakable, and feel as Naaman felt, when, after dipping in Jordan seven times, his leprosy was healed. If penitence is genuine, after we have received the gift of pardon, the sky ought to seem brighter, nature more lovely, the bird-songs sweeter, and life infinitely more beautiful and sacred. Not all experience the same degree of rapture; yet, if our hearts have been strangely warmed, and the sins of the past no more trouble us, the Lord hath surely spoken peace. It is deplorable that so many are content to live without seeking and obtaining the knowledge of justification, without which knowledge we can not be sure that we have saving faith.

No one denies that the world has pleasures and joys of a certain sort; but who does not learn by bitter experience that at best they are but momentary and disappointing? Abiding joy the sinner has never tasted. He comes in time to doubt its very existence. How wonderfully true it is that "the triumphing of the wicked is short, and the joy of the hypocrite but for a moment"? "There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked;" and how strikingly does human life bear out this testimony!

While thousands and tens of thousands every year are justified by faith, and for the first time rejoice in the consciousness of the divine favor, a large per cent. of the new converts soon lose the inward witness. Not only at the beginning of the Christian course, but all along the way, the believer should enjoy the blessed assurance of acceptance with God. How foolish — yea, dangerous—to live without this assurance a single hour!

Another kind of joy, one that is closely connected with the first mentioned, is that of service. However great may be the joy that attends finding Christ, it will not long abide unless we render faithful service. No man can find enjoyment in doing the Master's will unless he does it heartily and persistently. The yoke is always heavy to those who try to shirk duty. Who ever saw a dawdler or a trifler that enjoyed his work? The busiest men, as a rule, are the happiest, and especially is this true in the service of Christ. Our enjoyment of religion is largely dependent upon the amount of labor and sacrifice involved. No wonder many church members have so little joy in their hearts! No wonder religion seems such a profitless thing! God has ordained it as one of the laws of the spiritual kingdom that peace and joy shall attend the faithful discharge of duty, whatever difficulties or discouragements may oppose. Dr. John Talmage, who died recently after more than forty-five years of service as a missionary to China—that most difficult of fields—is quoted as having said, "The missionary of Christ knows no sacrifice. His work is all joy, nothing but joy." Ofttimes, when our hearts are cold and our prayers seem weighted, the joys of salvation will not be restored unto us until we go out and do something for the Lord.

Strange as it may seem, the Christian's joy is independent of circumstances. If he walks with God, he can be joyful anywhere and always. Does he not know that his all-wise and loving heavenly Father constantly leads him and will do what is best? A religion that affords us no comfort in affliction or adversity is worthless. If Christianity can make us joyful only when the skies are clear, then it is no better than Buddhism or any other Pagan religion. But is its song of cheer hushed when wealth and friends are gone? Nay; through the loss of all these the gift of God's love abides, so that we are able to "rejoice even amid tribulation." Why should we not be joyful in the Lord at all times if we believe that nothing can befall us save through God's permission? The assurance is, that no trial shall be greater than his grace will enable us to bear, and that every affliction and event shall be made to contribute to our growth in grace. If, when in perplexity and affliction, we say in our hearts, "The Lord's will be done," every thorn in our pathway, every wind of temptation, every cup of sorrow, every hour of woe, shall but minister to our purification and joy in the Lord. If, however, we have not the spirit of submissiveness, we shall look in vain for the grace that triumphs over sorrow and misfortune. Every trustful soul can say with the poet:—

"Labor is rest and pain is sweet,
If thou, my God, art here."

When we are in heaviness through manifold temptations, let us remember that these shall endure but for a season. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." The Christian life, in its joyfulness and steadfastness, ought to be like the course of a mighty river whose calm depths and majestic sweep are undisturbed by the winds and waves that play upon its bosom.

"These surface troubles come and go,
Like ruffles on the sea;
The deeper depth is out of reach
To all, my God, but thee."

Best of all is the joy of hope. However dark the hour or hard the lot, hope whispers to every believer the sweet words, "It is better further on." If the present seems barren of good, and our environment brings no suggestion of better things, hope points us to the realms of endless day, to the promises that never fail, to the imperishable crown reserved for us, and bids us rejoice in anticipation of the inexpressible joys that await us. Christianity is the only religion that speaks clearly and fully of heaven and the future state. This world is full of misery, pain and disappointment; but the gospel gives assurance of a home where sorrows never come; where disappointment, suffering and death are unknown. Infidelity writes over the doorway of the tomb the inscription, "All hope abandon ye who enter here." Christianity shouts in triumphant tones that Christ hath "abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light in the gospel." Death, she proclaims, is but the gateway to a life that is endless and transcendently glorious. To mourning captives, to men benighted and sin-burdened, the Lord commands his servants to go and say in his name, "Behold, I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." The religion of Jesus has a balm for every wound, comfort for every sorrow, relief for every distress, a blessing for every woe, a promise for every doubt. "Christianity," says Dr. Joseph Parker, "has given to the world more poems, hymns, melodies, and manifold utterances of joy, than any other influence that has touched the nature of man." Let us heed the injunction, "Rejoice evermore."

We had supposed that either the secretary or some one else would furnish the ADVOCATE with a report of the proceedings of the Epworth League Conference at Shreveport, but up to this writing no report has been received.

The Magazines for May.

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

The May Ladies' Home Journal uniquely reflects the sentiment and spirit of Spring. "In An Old-Fashioned Garden" fairly emits the season's fragrant flavor, as do other contributions in prose and verse. Hon. John Russell Young recalls the notable incidents—fetes, receptions, and pageants, etc.—of Gen. Grant's memorable tour of the world, and ex-President Harrison gives highly interesting glimpses of the President's home and home life in an article on "The Domestic Side of the White House"—the concluding one of his admirable series. Edward W. Bok editorially presents the really practical side of the crusade against the slaughter of birds for their plumage, and forcibly protests against the pernicious habit of spitting in public places.

THE CENTURY.

In The Century, for May, Mr. J. B. Millet writes on "Scientific Kite-Flying" with special reference to the experiments at the Blue Hill Observatory near Milton, Massachusetts. Lieutenant H. D. Wise, U. S. A., makes a record of his own experiments on Governor's Island, including an account of his ascent—the first in America, and the most notable yet made. Mr. William A. Eddy writes of "Photographing from Kites," giving an account also of his experiments in telephoning and telegraphing through lines suspended from kites—the first known experiments of the sort. Lieutenant-General Schofield contributes the first of his records of unwritten history, his article dealing this month with "The Withdrawal of the French from Mexico."

REVIEW OF REVIEWS.

The May number of the Review of Reviews gives an account of "The Real Condition of Cuba To-Day," by Stephen Bonsal; a character sketch of M. Hanotaux, Chancellor of the French Republic, by Baron Pierre de Coubertin; a forecast of the "Great Summer Gatherings of 1897" (illustrated), and "The New Editor-in-Chief of the 'Constitution,'" by Joel Chandler Harris (with portraits). The editorials in the department entitled "The Progress of the World," the department of "Current History in Caricature," and the "Leading Articles of the Month" deal particularly with the war between Greece and Turkey and the whole Eastern question.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

In the May number of Harper's Magazine, "Geological Progress of the Century" is one of the series of richly illustrated articles on Modern Science by Henry Smith Williams, M. D. "English Country-House Life" is a familiar social study by George W. Smalley. The eighth part of "The Martian," by George du Maurier, illustrated by the author, deals with bohemian artist life in London. The leading short story of the number is "A Captured Dream," an idyl of domestic felicity, by Octave Thanet, illustrated by W. T. Smedley. There are several short stories. In The Editor's Study Charles Dudley Warner discusses the future of the American newspaper.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

The May number of Scribner's Magazine launches a new kind of college article—not a history of the institution, but a reminiscent and discursive account of "Undergraduate Life," old and new, which is always The College in the minds of its graduates. Edward S. Martin, one of the founders of the Lampoon and a graduate of '77, opens the series with Harvard. He traces the evolution of Harvard social life from the old days of "class feeling" to the present day.

THE NATIONAL MAGAZINE.

The National Magazine, for May, contains: "Christ and His Time," by Dallas Lore Sharp; "Some Recollections of the Century," by Dr. Edward Everett Hale; "A Knight of the Wheel," by Winslow Bates; "Armenia and Its People," by a Refugee. Excellent illustrations are given on almost every page of this magazine, which contains quite a number of short stories, besides a few poems.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

Popular Science News, for May, contains many items of interest. "The Habit of Observation" and "Bridge Foundations" in this number are worthy of note.

Can It Be So?

A press dispatch from Athens, Georgia, in the Constitution, of May 3, says that the Vanderbilt baseball team, after the game in Athens last Saturday, took the train for Nashville, Tenn., Sunday morning. We do not take this statement as absolutely true to the facts, and yet it looks like one of the natural consequences of these inter-collegiate dissipations. At any rate, it does seem that the trustees of our great Methodist Institution would have some duty to perform in this matter at their next session. It is too much to have boys leaving their studies and traveling over the country in such dissipations at any time; it is more than too much to have a Methodist University made a leader in Sabbath desecrations. Can it be so, and remain so?—Wesleyan Advocate.

NOTES.

Rev. J. A. Duncan will preach the commencement sermon of Randolph-Macon College.

Bishop Key will preach the commencement sermon of Galloway College, Searcy, Ark.

Dr. J. D. Barbee will preach the commencement sermon at Tuskaloosa Female College, May 23.

The commencement sermon of Martha Washington College will be preached by Bishop Duncan.

The commencement sermon of Trinity College, North Carolina, will be preached by Rev. James Atkins, D. D.

Dr. Gross Alexander, of Vanderbilt University, will preach the commencement sermon at Potter College, June 30.

The commencement sermon of Vanderbilt University will be preached, June 13, by Dr. R. McIntyre, of Chicago.

Colorado College has raised $200,000, to be used as an endowment fund, $50,000 having been given by Dr. D. Pearsons, of Chicago.

A Southern Lyceum has been organized. Bishop Galloway is on the Advisory Board. Henry Watterson is president.—Southern Advocate.

Four honored laymen of Lumberton charge each support a scholarship in Mrs. Lambuth's Training-school at Kobe, Japan. Truly this is a great work.

Dr. R. J. Bigham, Secretary of Education of the M. E. Church, South, will preach the commencement sermon at Polytechnic College, Forth Worth, June 6.

Rev. H. R. Singleton is taking a needed rest of several weeks in the hill country of Tennessee. We suppose he will call at the village of Nashville before he returns.

During May the address of Miss Belle Kearney will be 132 McAlister street, San Francisco, Cal., care Mrs. D. J. Spencer, corresponding secretary California W. C. T. U.

J. B. and B. N. Duke, of North Carolina, have given one hundred thousand dollars to Guilford College, a Quaker institution in that State. The money will be used in the erection of buildings.

Rev. L. M. Broyle's appointment to Bland Street Church, Bluefield, W. Va., has given general satisfaction. He is a fine man, a fine preacher and worker, and his people are enthusiastic in their praises of him.—Houston Methodist.

With such laymen as Dr. Brumfield, Bros. Camp, Hinton, Williams, the Summer brothers, Clarke, Barnes, Minor, Brooks, Yawn, Folk, Lumberton bids fair to become in the near future one of the leading appointments in the Mississippi Conference. The elect ladies are alive to every interest of the church.

Dr. W. H. Milburn, chaplain of the United States Senate, will spend the Summer in England.

During his stay in the city Dr. DuBose delivered his famous lecture, "A Glimpse at the Twentieth Century," at Carondelet Street Church for the benefit of the building fund of Gouldsboro Church. It is highly spoken of by those who heard it. We were denied the privilege of hearing it, being absent from the city at the time.

Mrs. S. E. Breland, wife of Rev. R. A. Breland, of the Mississippi Conference, died on the fifth at Roxie, Miss., and was buried on the sixth at the same place. She was a woman of fine Christian character, and will be sadly missed in the community. She leaves four small children. We deeply sympathize with our brother in his sore bereavement.

From a private letter from Dr. I. W. Cooper we quote as follows: "We have at Moss Point one of the most active Sunday-schools in the State. Bro. C. W. Jackson is an admirable superintendent. Our excellent Board of Stewards take good care of the pastor. We have just completed two commodious rooms which greatly add to appearance and comfort of the parsonage."

The senior Bishop, Rev. John C. Keener, D. D., reached Nashville on Saturday last, and is the guest of Bro. J. D. Hamilton. We are glad to say that he is looking very well. His sermon at West End Church on Sunday morning is said to have been a rarely interesting and edifying discourse. We trust that he may abide for many years to bless the church with his presence—Nashville Advocate.

The protracted meeting at Lumberton continued nine days; services most of the time three times a day. The church was wonderfully revived, a number of conversions, and twenty-one accessions. Rev. I. W. Cooper, of Moss Point, assisted the pastor. The meeting is regarded as the most gracious ever held in the place. The pastor, Rev. W. H. Huntley, is greatly encouraged and is in great favor with his people.

Rev. Edgar C. McVoy, formerly of Dallas, Texas, and now of Albany, Mo., is at present in the Scarritt Hospital, Kansas City, Mo., where he was compelled to endure a painful and perilous surgical operation. He is now resting quietly, and hopes to be able to preach some time in June. He had a very narrow escape, and is deeply thankful to God for preservation. Bro. McVoy's many friends will give him their sympathy and prayers.—Texas Advocate.

The Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, at its recent session adopted a resolution for the appointment of a committee of five to revise the constitution and by-laws of the society and report to the next annual meeting. Bishops Galloway and Duncan, Drs. R. K. Brown and Lambuth and J. D. Hamilton form the committee. A resolution asking Bishop Keener to write a book on the missions was adopted. A committee was appointed to arrange a programme for the celebration of the semi-centennial in 1898 of the opening of the China missions in 1848.

We need in our churches and in our individual lives a good old-fashioned outpouring of the Holy Ghost. We need such revivals in this country as swept over Scotland in the eighteenth century and over our own land in the first part of this century. In those days men and women fell down before the preached word as if cut down in battle. The Presbyterian Church was born in a revival under the preachings of Calvin and Knox in Edinburgh; the Methodist Church grew out of a revival under the preaching of the Wesleys; the Cumberland Presbyterian Church grew out of a revival in the early part of this century in the South; the Lutheran Church grew out of a revival under the preaching of Luther; and so the world has been blessed by the state of religious fervor known as revival. We need a higher grade of spiritual life in order that we may have more power with God and man. We need it that we may do better work in the line of missions; we need it that we may live in the spiritual life, for without it we shall surely die.—Central Advocate.

MUL-EN-OL is the most modern remedy for pain, and is free from all objectionable features of the old-time remedies. MUL-EN-OL tastes good, smells good, and does good. It soothes and cools, instead of irritating. It instantly quiets the pain, and effects a permanent cure.

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

Mississippi moves forward.

Much enthusiasm was kindled at the great Conference just held in Water Valley.

More than four hundred delegates and visitors were present from all parts of the State.

Everybody seemed to enjoy the occasion, and we are confident that the meeting means much for the future of Methodism in Mississippi.

The papers read and addresses delivered were excellent. The young ladies acquitted themselves admirably—in fact, everyone assigned a place on the programme seemed to be at their best.

Joe Ramsey, the blind boy from Tennessee, made a profound impression upon everybody who heard him. What a marvel he is! May he long be spared to prosecute the work which God has called him to perform!

Did you ever hear Judge Estes? If so, I need not tell you here of this wonderful man. Suffice to say, that no one who heard him will ever forget him. He is a power for God. We wish the church had more laymen of his type.

The Children's Hour, on Saturday afternoon of the Conference, was much enjoyed by all present. Right well did these Junior Leaguers perform their part.

The services at the Orphans' Home, on Friday afternoon, marked an epoch in the history of Water Valley. All the stores were closed, the Illinois Central railroad shops suspended work, and the whole town formed in procession to march to the Home, led by the Silver Cornet Band.

How impressive the scene! Leaguers from all parts of the State looking for the first time upon the Home for the homeless children of Mississippi, while the band played the stirring strains of "Home, Sweet Home."

Never have we seen a finer body of young people than that which constituted the third State Conference of Epworth Leagues in Mississippi. It seemed that each town and village had selected the handsomest and most competent and spiritual young people to send as delegates to Water Valley.

In the testimony meeting, Sunday night, one young lady, who attended the great Conference of Epworth Leagues at Houston, Texas, said that she enjoyed the Water Valley Conference more, and considered it a bigger affair. Immediately another arose and said she had gotten more out of this Conference than the International Conference at Chattanooga.

The Leaguers pledged to raise one thousand dollars during the next twelve months for the Mississippi Orphans' Home, located at Water Valley.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt, representing the State Board of Directors of the Orphans' Home, with a few well-chosen words, presented the president of the Epworth League Conference a handsome gavel, made from wood used in erection of the orphanage building. The gavel was finished with gold and silver tinting, representing the League colors. It will be used from time to time in conducting the sessions of the Mississippi State Conference of Epworth Leagues.

The next State Conference goes to Meridian. The delegates from this thriving city assured us that we might expect great things at their hands next year. They hope that at least a thousand Leaguers will roll into Meridian to attend the fourth Conference of Epworth League in Mississippi.

The secretary was instructed to furnish for publication in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE the full proceedings of the Water Valley Conference. We hope, ere this, it has reached the office, and will appear in due form for the benefit of those Leaguers who did not attend.

By resolution, the Conference requested that "Epworth League Echoes" be continued in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. We are much obliged for the kindly expressions received from many quarters, and rejoice to know that in an humble way we may do something for God and for the church.

Now that the State Conference is over, we should begin to think and plan for the trip to Toronto. Don't forget the date—July 15-18. One fare for the round trip, which means not more than $27 from any central point in Mississippi. Write to either of the following for information as to transportation: Rev. A. F. Watkins, Vicksburg, Miss.; Rev. J. A. Randolph, Macon, Miss., or Rev. T. W. Lewis, Grenada, Miss.

Water Valley, Miss., May 8, 1897.

To Preachers.

To the preacher who sends the largest number of new cash subscribers between now and the first of July we will present either an Arlington B Sewing Machine or a gold-filled watch guaranteed to be a perfect time keeper and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, whichever one may be preferred. To the preacher sending the next largest number and also to the one sending the third largest number we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, latest edition, with modern additions.

Should the successful contestant prefer it, we will pay him cash instead of the premium.

Under this offer no commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Those who wish to compete for these premiums should notify us at once.

The Advocate for $1.

From now until the first of June we will receive new cash subscriptions at the rate of $1 for nine months. Moreover, we will give those who subscribe under this offer the benefit of our premium Bible offer. Take notice that this offer is made only to new subscribers. We will make a liberal offer to our present subscribers after awhile. Meantime, let all who are in arrears pay up, as no one who is in arrears can get the benefit of any of our special offers. Let all our preachers make this offer known to our people at once. We will send a sample Bible for use in canvassing to those who desire it. We will also send sample copies of the ADVOCATE on request.

A Cook Book Free.

"Table and Kitchen" is the title of a new cook book published by the Price Baking Powder Company, Chicago. Just at this time it will be sent free if you write a postal mentioning the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. This book has been tried by ourselves and is one of the very best of its kind. Besides containing over 400 receipts for all kinds of pastry and home cookery, there are many hints for the table and kitchen, showing how to set a table, how to enter the dining-room, etc.; a hundred and one hints in every branch of the culinary art. Cookery of the very finest and richest, as well as of the most economical and home like, is provided for. Remember "Table and Kitchen" will be sent, postage prepaid, to any lady sending her address (name, town and State) plainly given. A copy in German or Scandinavian will be sent if desired. Postal card is as good as letter. Address Price Baking Powder Co., Chicago, Ill.

Nowhere else can you get the very best Bible on the market at so low a rate as from the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Jefferson Street, Natchez.

An acquaintance of four months justifies us in reporting more fully concerning our new field. Our congregations have increased from the beginning; Sunday-school well attended; an active Epworth League which has done some excellent work already, and are planning for other. Our League evidently believes in something more than talk. The attendance upon prayer-meeting deserves especial notice, averaging from 75 to 100. Jefferson Street has suffered greatly in loss of members during the last few years. Our own city has received some valuable additions from her fold. Notwithstanding these losses, our people are courageous and hopeful, cheerfully assessing themselves as in former years. I have never known a place where there were as many calls on the charities of the church, and yet I have never known a people to respond more cheerfully. The many delicate expressions of thoughtfulness which find themselves at the parsonage are gratifying to the pastor's family. The high water has caused our city some anxiety, as much of the trade comes from Louisiana. We are hoping for the best, although the waters are still threatening. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

IF YOU WISH to purify your blood, you should take a medicine which cures blood diseases. No other medicine has such a record of cures as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Water Valley, Miss.

Let me say that the Conference was a glorious success. I suppose Water Valley entertained over 400 delegates and visitors. The Conference captured us, and our people captured the delegates. "All for Christ." We are protracting the meeting in Wood Street Church. Rev. E. B. Ramsey, of Memphis, is preaching for us. The meeting is wonderful in power. J. A. BOWEN.

Gilt-Edge Investment.

For the purpose of enlarging their plant and business, the Lafferty Complete Flour Company offer a limited amount of 7 per cent. bonds, secured by a first mortgage. Each bond is for $30, and the owner, in addition to the interest of 7 per cent., is entitled to share in the business of the mill to an amount that makes the bond the most remunerative security on the market. They will be sold at par.

The denomination of the bond was fixed at a minimum sum of $30, so as to furnish an investment for many persons, and gain the widest interest in this accredited Food-cure—the "Complete Flour." Address John J. Lafferty, President.

Now Is the Best Time

To cure Catarrh quickly, surely and permanently. The cold air of Winter retards the cure—the warm air of Summer favors it. Rev. J. W. Blosser, M. SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-sixth annual camp meeting at Seashore will open (D. V.) on Wednesday evening, July 14, next, and continue for about eight days.

Arrangements have been made for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit this delightful spot. A handsome and commodious two-story lodging-house—Keller Lodge—has been erected and comfortably furnished for visitors, in addition to the other accommodations supplied by the trustees.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale a reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. It is probable tickets will be placed on sale July 1 to 31, and be good to return on until Sept. 30. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of 1,400 feet; fanned by the refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico. The sea-bathing afforded is unsurpassed by any resort on the coast. A fine artesian well supplies the grounds with excellent drinking water, which is now "piped" over the entire encampment. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure and exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued and overheated visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the camp meeting should address W. B. Thomson, New Orleans, chairman Lodging Committee. Questions concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.; Dr. M. F. Tucker, Mobile, or J. H. Lakin, Montgomery, Ala.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge. Board will be furnished them at the restaurant at half rate.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

A POEM.

BY HORACE M. DUBOSE, D. D.

16mo, pp. 53. Heavy Paper Covor. 25 cts

This tiny volume, dedicated to Bishop Galloway, contains a poem of musical lines amounting to XXXII considerable divisions, arranged somewhat after the form of those in Tennyson's "In Memoriam." Mr. DuBose has fine imaginative feeling, a full sense of word color and of melodious phrasing, and a high regard for poetical seriousness.—The Independent, New York.

IN THE ORGAN LINE
No competition with us is possible, as we have the BEST to be had.

PHILIP WERLEIN, Lim, 614-616 Canal, New Orleans, La

"Everything in the Music Line at Werlein's," is an adage.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

College Songs

EDITED BY

THOMAS G. SHEPARD,

Instructor of Glee Clubs for Twenty-five Years.

TWO EDITIONS:

Mixed Voices. Male Voices.

PRICE OF EITHER EDITION 50 CENTS.

While all books of this class before have included, beside the songs supposed to be found in them, many not at all to be classed as college songs, this contains only those that have been adopted for use in some college or university, either by its students as campus songs, or by its Glee Club as concert pieces, or both.

It includes the present songs of a larger number of different colleges than any book yet offered. Among them are several very popular glees that have never before appeared in print.

Both editions contain a complete and easy piano accompaniment to every song, so that a player not accustomed to reading from vocal parts, may be in a position to accompany the voices without difficulty.

SINS OF OMISSION.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

It isn't the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone,
That gives you a bit of heartache
At the setting of the sun.

The tender word forgotten,
The letter you did not write,
The flower you did not send, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts at night.

The stone you might have lifted
Out of a brother's way;
The bit of heartsome counsel
You were hurried too much to say;
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
The gentle, winning tone,
Which you had no time nor thought for,
With troubles enough of your own.

Those little acts of kindness,
So easily cut of mind,
Those chances to be angels
Which we poor mortals find;
They come in night and silence,
Each sad, reproachful wraith,
When hope is faint and flagging,
And a chill has fallen on faith.

For life is all too short, dear,
And sorrow is all too great,
To suffer our slow compassion,
That tarries until too late;
And it isn't the thing you do, dear,
It's the thing you leave undone,
Which gives you a bit of heartache
At the setting of the sun.

Members One of Another.

Independence is a very popular word in America; but independence is of no value. God has not made us to be independent of one another. The employer is dependent on the employee, and the employee on the employer; the mistress on the servant, and the servant on the mistress; the husband on the wife, and the wife on the husband. And the more highly life is organized the more intricate and elaborate is the system of interdependence. The Robinson Crusoe state of society is the lowest and least desirable. We should not train our children to independence, but to interdependence; to bear one another's burdens; to exchange one another's services; to share one another's lives. We do so train them in everything except as regards the home. The wise man never attempts to mix his own homemade drugs, but calls a doctor. The layman who attempts to act on the motto, "Every man his own lawyer," has a fool for a client. The congregation does not trust for religious instruction to any pious mechanic who thinks he has a message, but employs an educated preacher. God, who has set men in society thus to exchange their services, has set them in families also. That man is best prepared for home life who is trained to be dependent on his wife for wifely counsel, cheer and services; and that woman is best prepared for home life who is trained to be dependent on her husband for support and protection. It may be very well for the boy to learn how to sew on a button or cook a steak in case of need; but this is not his work; he is appointed to be the bread-winner of the family. It is important that the girl should have practical knowledge of affairs in general, and also some specific qualifications which she can put to useful service in bread-winning, in case of need. But, under ordinary circumstances, to be the bread-winner of the family, is not her appointed task, and if she sacrifices training for the other, and, in most cases, really higher service, that she may acquire a money-making profession, she has made one of those unfair exchanges which is a robbery. The history of heredity makes it tolerably clear that great fathers have not often had great sons, while great sons have almost always had great mothers. "Women," says Dr. Wither Moore, "are made and meant to be not men, but mothers of men." If this be true, their education should keep probable maternity always in view. If that education is so conducted as to destroy a good mother and produce a distinguished collegian, it has been a very sorry education.—Lyman Abbott, D. D.

The Gift of Tact.

If there is any gift or virtue comparable with common sense, it is tact. The man or woman who is welcome in every place, and whose company is always desirable, is the one who is gifted with tact. This virtue may be acquired to a certain extent like courtesy; yet those to the manner born have a great advantage. Women naturally possess this talent in larger proportion than men, not because, as some insinuate, they are more deceitful, but because, being of more sensitive natures, they are more cautious about wounding the feelings of other people. This virtue being very near akin to common sense, women instinctively realize that there is nothing to be gained by "treading on the toes" of everyone they meet, when it is just as easy to step one side, and there is no purpose to serve; and the man or woman who recklessly does this, invariably gets his own toes trodden upon pretty often, and then whines because the world does not use him well.

It is not always necessary to tell people unpleasant truths, introduce unpleasant subjects, or remind them of their afflictions or infirmities; and the persons who do this are not always pleasant persons to visit with, as it is often difficult to distinguish whether they are really friends or enemies. Such people neither add to our happiness nor the good of the world, and gain nothing for themselves. I once heard a lady denounced as a policy woman, because she made an effort to be agreeable to everyone; but at the time I wondered why that would not be a good plan to adopt universally; the world would doubtless be much pleasanter to live in. I do not mean that we should all turn flatterers; but we might have tact enough to avoid unpleasant subjects, avoid talking of disagreeable subjects at inopportune moments, and try at all times to lead conversation into pleasant channels. Such an endeavor would doubtless add to the happiness of the world, and make our lives, which might otherwise be useless, worth living.—Alice E. Pinney.

Books and Reading.

The great secret of right reading, as of all other right work, is that it be conscientious and thorough; that of one who does not forget that life is brief and work sacred. An earnest man may be left in the company of any books. There was a world of significance in Johnson's putting the motto on his watch, "The night cometh." The little islet of our life—with deep calling to deep round it for ever, and the tide covering it moment by moment—is too small for any neglect. Eternity comes up like the night, hiding all things, and blotting out the sun. There is no time for trifling. The true Pactolus, with every sand golden, is life. Stupidity or commonplace is tolerable only when no better can be had; like bread of moss or sawdust, that needs a famine to get it down, except with simpletons, who will eat anything. Men gave up acorns when they grew wheat; and black bread has no chance against white where there is either taste or sense. Some men read too much and think too little, that is, they read too much for their thinking. By rail, you can remember no details of a journey; the speed confuses recollections, and leaves only general impressions. To gallop through book after book is to turn intellectual Gilpins. You might as well be carried blindfold from one point to another, you would know as much of the road you came. Let the whole bench of your faculties sit in full court on whatever you read, and rather read five good books well than a hundred with light inattention.—Dr. Cunningham Geikie.

A Startling Announcement.

We find the following in the New York "Christian Advocate":

"A clergyman was very anxious to introduce some hymn books into the church, and arranged with his clerk that the latter was to give out the notice immediately after the sermon. The clerk, however, had a notice of his own to give out with reference to the baptism of infants; accordingly, at the close of the sermon he arose, and announced that 'All those who have children whom they wish to have baptized, please send in their names at once to the clerk.' The clergyman, who was stone deaf, assumed that the clerk was giving out the hymn-book notice, and immediately arose and said, 'And I should say for the benefit of those who haven't any, that they may be obtained at the vestry any day from three to four o'clock; the ordinary little ones at one shilling each, and special ones with red backs at one shilling and fourpence.'"

Acting a Lie.

Dolly had been told never to meddle with a beautiful vase that stood on a bracket over the piano. "It will break very easily," her mother said. Now Dolly had an intense desire to take the vase down and examine it—probably because she had been told not to do so. One day when she was alone she made up her mind to gratify her curiosity. She took the vase down without breaking it, but on trying to put it back the bracket slipped off its nail, and the vase fell to the floor and was broken into a dozen pieces. Dolly was frightened. As she stood there trying to think her way out of the dilemma, her kitten came into the room.

"I'll shut Spotty into the room, and mamma 'll think she did it," decided Dolly, "and Spotty can't tell."

So the kitten was shut up in the parlor, and when Dolly's mother came home she found Spotty there, and the vase broken.

"Do you s'pose Spotty did it?" asked Dolly.

"I think she must have done so," answered her mother. "You don't know anything about it, do you?"

Dolly pretended that she didn't hear the question, and got out of the room as soon as possible. That night she couldn't sleep.

"You lied," something said to her. "No, I didn't," she said. "I didn't say I didn't break it." "But you might as well have said so," the voice of conscience told her. "If you didn't tell a lie, you acted one, and that's just as bad as telling one."

Dolly stood it as long as she could. She got up and went to her mother's bed.

"Mama, I broke the vase," she sobbed out. "I thought if I acted a lie you wouldn't find out about it, but I can't sleep for thinking that God knows, if no one else. We can not deceive him."—New York Observer.

Doing and Not Doing.

"Sir," said a lad coming down to one of the wharves in Boston, and addressing a well-known merchant, "have you any berth on your ship? I want to earn something."

"What can you do?" asked the gentleman.

"I can try my best to do whatever I am put to do," answered the boy.

"What have you done?"

"I have sawed and split all mother's wood for nigh on two years."

"What have you not done!" asked the gentleman, who was a queer sort of a questioner.

"Well, sir," answered the boy, after a moment's pause, "I have not whispered in school once for a whole year."

"That's enough," said the gentleman; "you may ship aboard this vessel, and I hope to see you the master of her some day. A boy who can master a woodpile and bridle his tongue must be made out of good stuff."—Our Sunday Afternoon.

The Rise of a Boy.

This boy goes to business, and at his business begins by simply doing the things he is told to do, and doing them in a common and ordinary way. If he stops here he remains, all his life long, a drudge. But if he begins to see that business has a significance: that his life is not merely sweeping the store, not merely writing letters, not merely selling goods; if he begins to see the higher life involved in business; if he begins to see that business is a greater instrument of beneficence than what we call beneficence; that trade is clothing thousands of men where charity clothes ten; that agricultural and milling industries are feeding thousands of men where charity feeds ten; if he begins to see how the whole history of the world is linked together, and is God's way of building up humanity and serving humanity—as he gets this large view and enters into it, life is enriched and becomes itself the minister whereby love is enlarged and conscience is strengthened, the school wherein he is educated out of the lower into the higher. He has now risen, or is rising, from that which is mortal into that which is immortal and eternal.—Dr. Lyman Abbott.

The following excellent advice was given by a consecrated, wise worker to an impatient youth who was fretting to do something great: "Be always calm, my child, keep yourself quiet and in restraint. Reserve your energies, doing those little things that lie in your way, each one as well as you can. Save your strength, so that when God does call you to do something good and great you will not have wasted your force and strength with useless strivings, but will be ready to do the work quickly and well. Go slowly, my child, and keep ready."

HYGIENE.

The Nutritive Value and Digestibility of Food.

A mixed diet, therefore, seems to be the only sensible one for man. The three classes of nutrients—protein, fats and carbohydrates—must each furnish a part of our food, and while it is true that the vegetables can supply these, it is difficult to obtain from wholesome, easily digested vegetables these nutrients in the proper proportions required for the bodily health.

A fair proportion of meats, or flesh-forming food, in a mixed diet is one-fourth, the fats and carbohydrates being three-fourths. The food stuffs which most nearly supply these nutrients in the proper proportions are those which pall on us less readily. When any food does not supply these in the proper amounts, instinct, appetite, and experience guide us in the selection of the food which ought to be added to it. Thus meats deficient in fat are combined with some substance in which the fat is relatively larger. For example, liver, veal, or chicken is cooked with bacon. Pork supplies the needed fat to make beans more nearly a perfect food. Fish is cooked in butter or oil. Butter, eggs, and cream are mixed with starchy foods—rice, sago, tapioca, potatoes, etc. Cheese, containing fat, is added to macaroni, crackers and cheese are a favorite combination, and bread and milk make a very complete food for children. Whenever one kind of food is wanting in any particular constituent we invariably associate it with another that contains an excess of that constituent.—The Chautauquan.

Never keep food in the sick room, and cover up water when it is necessary to keep it in the room for ever so short a time. Both absorb disease germs readily, and may re-infect the patient. A nurse should never eat in the sick-room.

Do not expose a patient who is perspiring freely to cold draughts. Care in this respect is especially necessary when the fever has subsided, and the patient is convalescing. Always remember, however, that a patient is in more danger of taking cold in an overheated, close room, than in one that is cool and well ventilated.

When a child complains of languor and chilliness, and is inclined to hover near the heater stove, always take its temperature. It may be the beginning of some serious acute disorder.

Science says that the coming man (also the "coming woman") will depend for food supply more on the chemist and the laboratory than on the products of the field and farm. However that may be, it is sure that intelligent people everywhere now depend upon

Heart Failure

Of course the heart fails to act when a man dies, but "Heart Failure," so called, nine times out of ten is caused by Uric Acid in the blood which the Kidneys fail to remove, and which corrodes the heart until it becomes unable to perform its functions.

Health Officers in many cities very properly refuse to accept "Heart Failure," as a cause of death. It is frequently a sign of ignorance in the physician, or may be given to cover up the real cause.

In Memoriam.

Laura Pauline Ellis, wife of Rev. Chas. F. Evans, was born Oct. 6, 1842, in New Orleans, La., and died Nov. 30, 1896, at Chattanooga, Tenn. Her father and mother were natives of Kentucky. Her father, R. M. Ellis, was descended from English and Virginia families, who came with, or soon after, Daniel Boone to Kentucky, and whose offspring occupy positions of great wealth and social influence in that State. Her parents married near Grand Gulf, Miss., in 1838, and shortly afterwards moved to New Orleans, where her father entered into a commission business, and accumulated a handsome fortune. They were converted under the ministry of Rev. C. K. Marshall, and immediately joined the M. E. Church, South, and in New Orleans were among the original members of the Flat Boat Church, which finally was merged into Felicity Street Church. Their daughter, Laura, was reared in the Felicity Street Sunday-school, and in 1854, under the ministry of Rev. Linus Parker, she and her husband were converted at the same meeting, and together joined the church. The seed so early sown brought abundant harvest. She never doubted her conversion, and daily lived and taught her religion to the end of her life.

She was married Aug. 30, 1864, to Rev. C. F. Evans, who, in December following, was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference, and stationed at Canton, Miss. Thus early assuming the vicissitudes and trials of an itinerant's wife, she never faltered in any of its duties, never wearied of its toils, never complained of its hardships. She was always loyal to the itinerancy and the episcopal authorities, accepting all appointments as directly from the Lord. Held in universal esteem wherever they sojourned, her modest and retiring manner sheltered from observation the many fine traits of character which only an intimate acquaintance revealed to her friends. She was a woman of remarkable mind and of extensive reading, with cultivated taste in many literary lines. Her judgment was well poised. Her amiability, cheerfulness, patience, gentleness, consistency of life, and humility; her fortitude under disappointment and reverses, her courage under difficulties won for her the affection and admiration of the churches which she and her husband served. She was an early and faithful workor in the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and one of the first Chineso girls rescued for an American patron was rescued for her. No good cause within her reach was left untouched by her prayers and her love. She always found time for the numerous calls upon a pastor's wife, serving gladly and without stint. Amid all her exigencies she shone fairest in her sphere, as a woman should. The little mother among her children was a living sermon, whose text was love. She ruled orderly, carefully, faithfully she loved them; and with the sure response of childhood they followed her teachings. They were known in their many homes among their mother's people "as such good children," growing into fair and promising manhood and maidenhood, with the sweet impress of the mother upon their characters. As a wife, she was truly companionable, sympathetic, self-forgetful, helpful at every point to her husband; his loving, candid critic of pulpit and literary labors; his aid in pastoral work. He always found her his anchor amid the waves of care, his sunshine when clouds veiled the horizon. Her cheery words and ways were as wine to the weary spirit, not of himself alone, but of those who came within her influence. She relieved him of much domestic responsibility through the wise supervision and good judgment at her command. The heart of her husband did safely trust in her. His constant companion in public worship, he could read in her loving eyes the warm appreciation of his words, finding inspiration from every look. Her Christian life, as may be inferred, was one even current of sustained and steady faith, unmarred by doubts or fears. The fruits of the Spirit were everywhere evident: "Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith."

The close of such a life must needs be full of the joyful hope of resurrection glory. She died as she had lived, peacefully, and doubtless in glad assurance, though giving no spoken testimony, since none was needed. Her husband is smitten to earth, bereft and desolate, yet trusting the hand which smites. Her children, looking out at the almost empty world since mother is not here, are more strongly set to reach the heavenly heights. This faithful life will live again in them, for she, "being dead, yet speaketh."

OBITUARIES.

SLOCUM—Sister BELLE C. SLOCUM was born on Aug. 5, 1855, and died Jan. 19, 1897. At the age of seventeen she joined the Baptist Church under the ministry of the Rev. Sam Hyden. On the twenty-seventh day of May, 1883, she was happily married to Randolph Slocum, who found in her all the virtues of a true wife and noble Christian woman. On the sixteenth of August, 1896, she, in company with her husband and oldest daughter, was united to the Methodist Church under the pastorate of Bro. John F. Foster.

During the last years of her life Sister Slocum was a very great sufferer, but through it all held firmly to her faith in her Savior, and to everyone that came in touch with her she was constantly teaching the lesson of a true Christian fortitude. I do not know that it was ever my privilege to see such a spirit of sweet resignation as that evinced by her during her last sickness. When she was gone we all were ready to believe that she had entered into an everlasting rest, and we could but say, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." Surely she rests from her labors, and her works do follow her, in the fact that she has left to her husband and children the priceless treasure of a Christian mother's love.

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Draughon's Practical Business Colleges, Nashville, Tenn., AND Texarkana, Tex.

Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, Telegraphy, etc. The most thorough, practical and progressive schools of the kind in the world, and the best patronized ones in the South. Indorsed by bankers, merchants, ministers and others. Four weeks in bookkeeping with us are equal to twelve weeks by the old plan. Their President is author of "Draughon's New System of Bookkeeping," which cannot be taught in any other school.

$600.00 given to any college if we cannot show more written applications for bookkeepers and stenographers, received in the past twelve months, than any other five Business Colleges in the South, all "combined," can show to have received in the past five years. We expend more money in the interest of our Employment Department than any other Bus. College in Tenn. takes in as tuition. $500.00—Amount we have deposited in bank as a guarantee that we have in the past fulfilled, and will in the future fulfill, our guarantee contracts. HOME STUDY.—We have prepared, especially for home study, books on Bookkeeping, Shorthand and Penmanship. Write for price list.

PROF. DRAUGHON—I now have a position as bookkeeper and stenographer for the Southern Grocery Company, of this place; salary, $75.00 per month. I owe it all to your books on bookkeeping and shorthand prepared for home study.—Art Armstrong, Pine Bluff, Ark.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

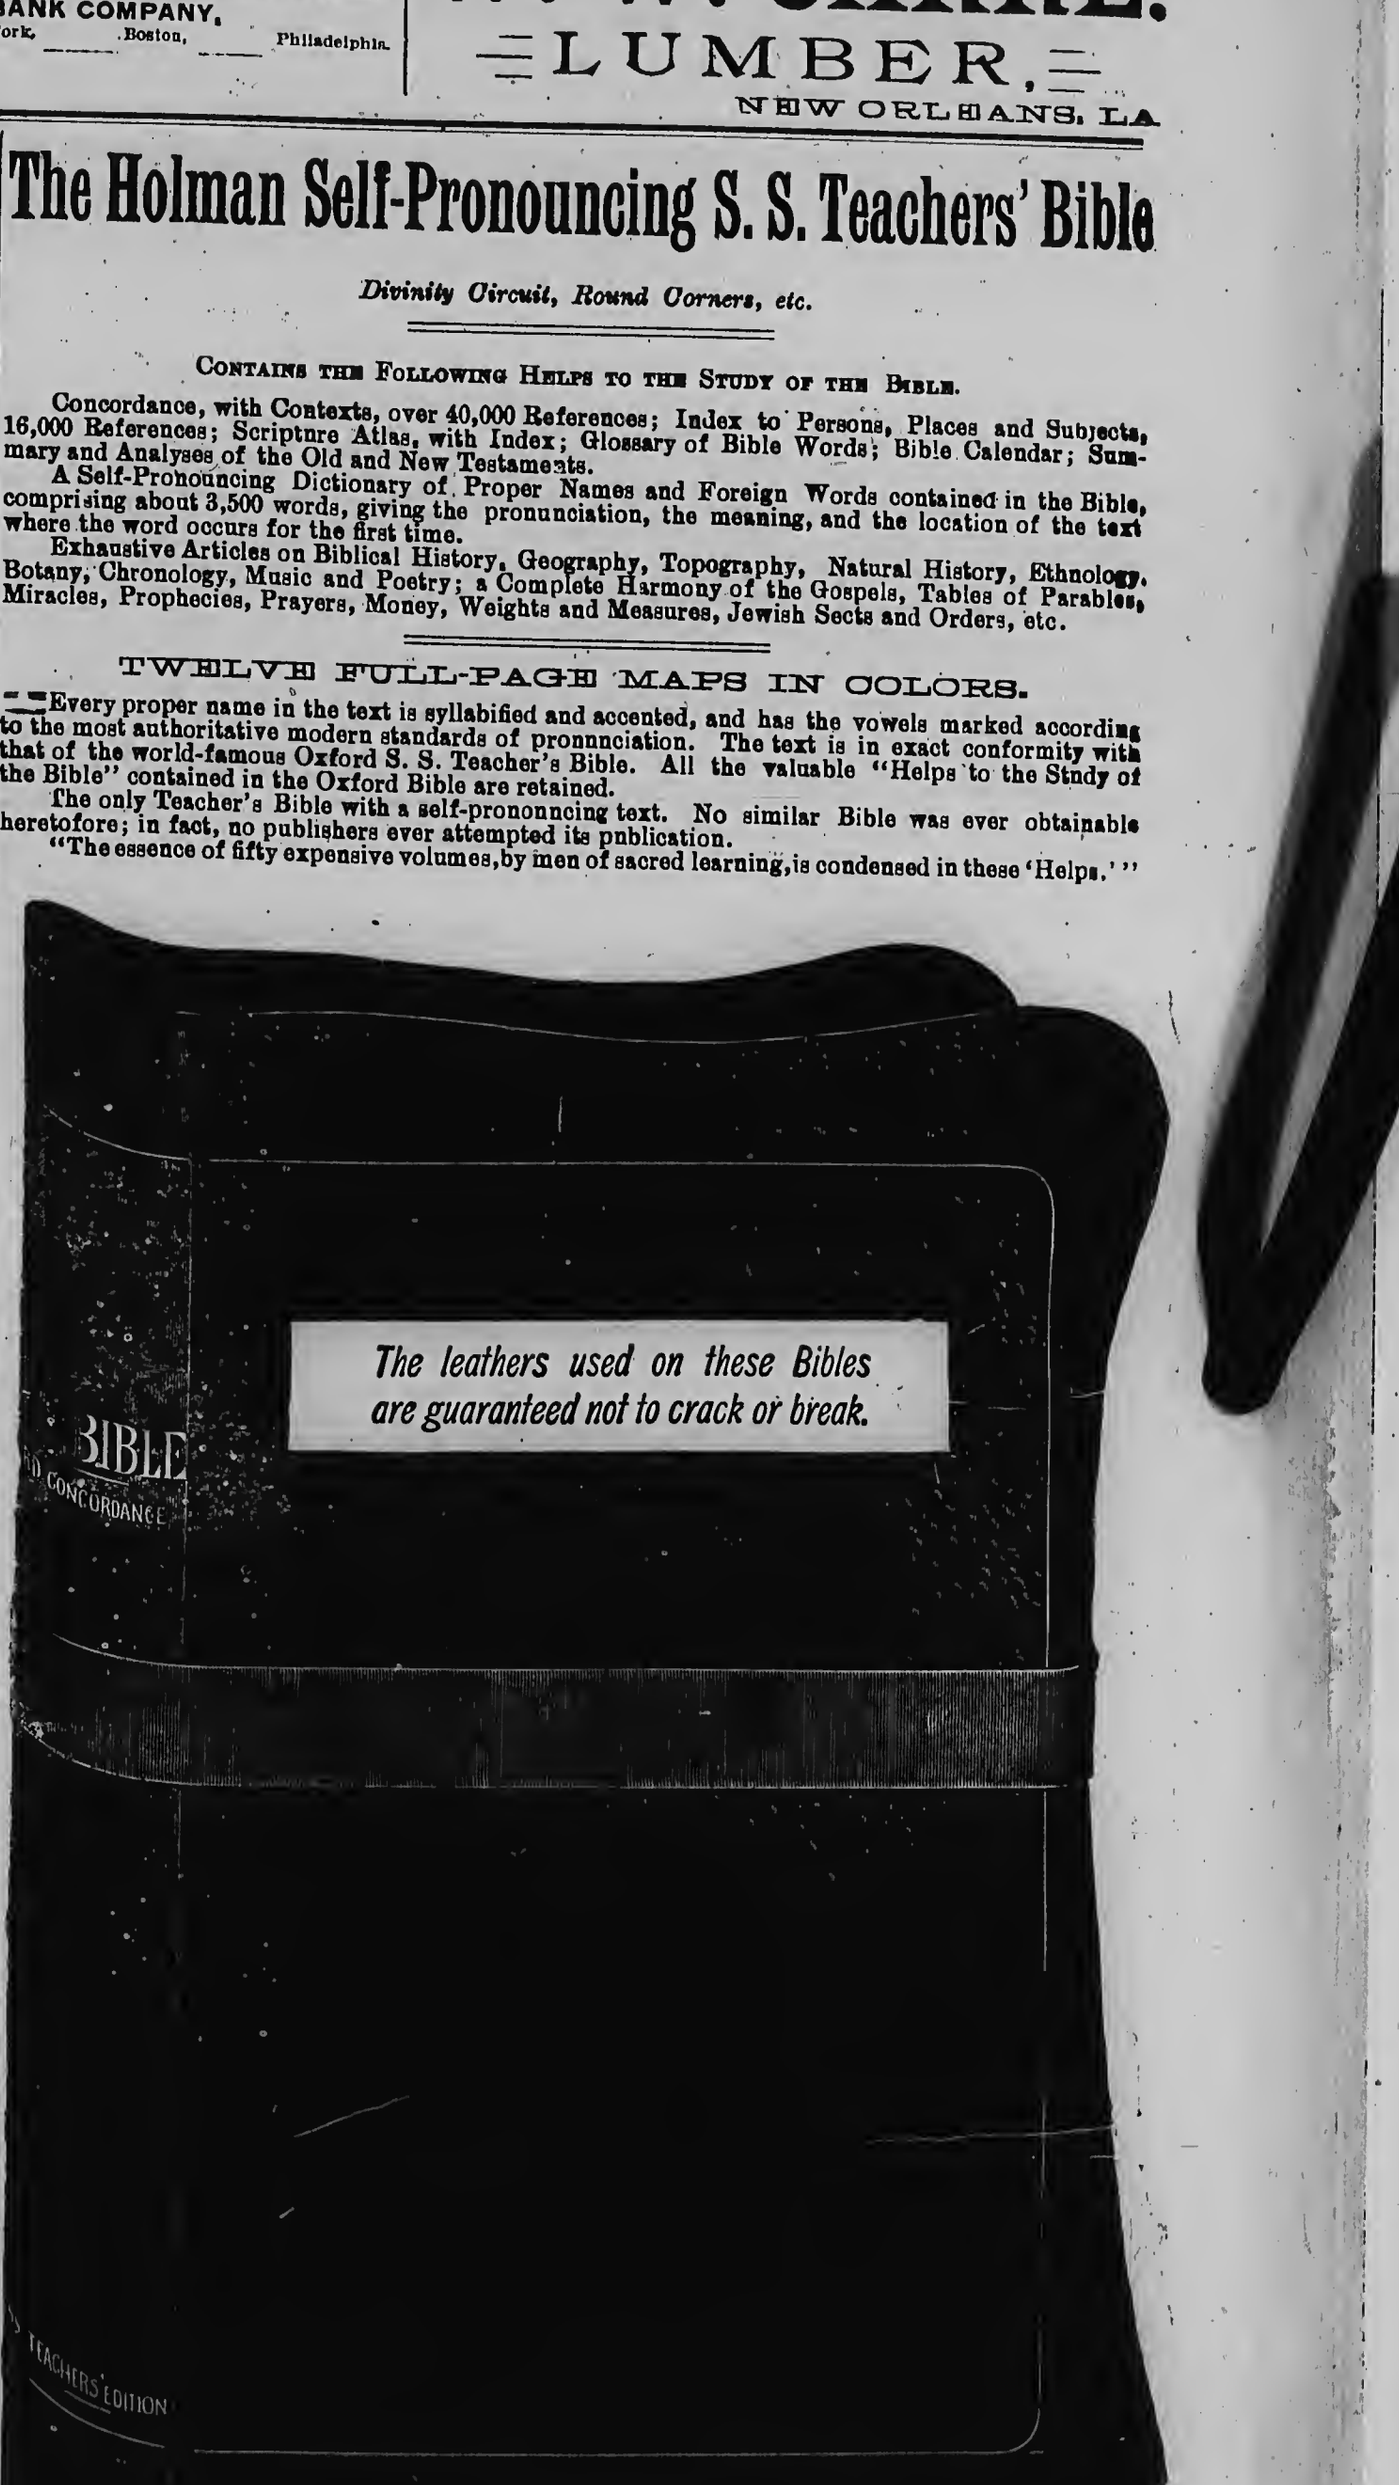
Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"



The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscriber or $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.00.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to May, '98. (A little later it will be June, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Cambridge, Mass., celebrated, the other day, its ten-year record without a licensed saloon.

Colorado College has received an anonymous gift of $10,000 to apply in the erection of a building for young women.

The Lutheran Churches of this city celebrated on May 9 the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the synod to which they belong.

Negroes in the District of Columbia have themselves drawn the color line, the cleavage being between the pronounced blacks and the mulattoes.

The American Cane Growers' Association, at a meeting held Saturday, passed resolutions to the effect that the Senate sugar schedule proposing an ad valorem system of duties was unsatisfactory.

The great fight in the Legislature is over, and the State of Mississippi will have a new capitol, a magnificent, modern structure, in every way worthy of the great State whose chief building it is to be for the next century.

The third annual meeting of the National Municipal League, which is being held in conjunction with the fifth session of the Louisville Good City Government Club, began its first session at the Exchange Hall, Board of Trade, on May 5

The first seven days of the Centennial Exposition in Nashville showed an attendance of 47,500 While this was gratifying to the management and citizens, Saturday, the eighth day, more than surpassed all expectations. Twenty-six thousand admissions were registered during the day and night.

The wave-crest of the flood of 1897 has passed Natchez, Miss., and has now reached Baton Rouge, where the levee gave way on Saturday. From the mouth of the Red down the swell in the tide has been rapid, and the fight to save the country from inundation has been heroic and so far successful.

The heritage left by Mr. Cleveland known as the arbitration treaty was defeated in the Senate, having failed to receive the necessary two-thirds vote required under the Constitution for its ratification. Senator Davis, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, attributes the defeat of the treaty to a feeling of dissatisfaction at England's course in the struggle of the Greeks to liberate the island of Crete.

While the planters in Mississippi are still discouraged over the slow decline of the river, the situation in Louisiana is greatly improved and a far more hopeful view of the situation is taken. The higher lands in the submerged section of Mississippi are coming out of the water very slowly. On the other hand, the crisis is believed to have been passed in the overflowed section of Louisiana, and the damage done and the amount of land submerged has been less than expected.

The bill providing for the consolidation of New York, Brooklyn and several other neighboring communities into a single municipality, known as Greater New York, has been finally signed, and the consolidation is now fully accomplished, although the actual inauguration of the new regime will not take place until Jan. 1, next. Greater New York will have a population of near four million people, or more than half the population of the State of New York. She will then rank next to London among the big cities of the world.

FOREIGN.

Twenty victims of the fire of Tuesday last at the charity bazaar, on rue Jean Goujon, in Paris, were buried on Saturday.

It has been reported from Athens that the Greek government had finally decided to ask the powers to meditate with a view to bringing about peace. It was further reported that notes had been addressed to all the foreign ministers, requesting their governments to interpose, to which favorable replies were received from all but the German minister, who merely acknowledged the receipt of the communication.

What We Inherit

We are not to blame for. We can not be held responsible for the dispositions and tendencies which we derive from our ancestors, nor are we responsible for the germs of disease which may manifest themselves in our blood as a heritage from former generations. But we are responsible if we allow these germs to develop into serious diseases which will impair our usefulness and destroy our happiness. We are responsible if we transmit to our descendants the disease germs which it is possible for us to eradicate by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, the one true blood purifier. This medicine has power to make rich, red blood and establish perfect health in place of disease.

Notice.

The district meeting of the Woman's Foreign and Parsonage and Home Mission Societies of the Columbus district will be held in Mayhew, Miss., May 18 and 19. All ministers who are interested in missionary work are cordially invited to be present, especially those of the Columbus district. Don't be afraid to come. Mayhew could entertain the Annual Conference, I believe, if she only wanted to.

For Seasickness

Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

DR. J. FOURNESS-BRICE, of S. S. "Tentonic," says: "I have prescribed it in my practice among the passengers traveling to and from Europe in this steamer, and the result has satisfied me that if taken in time, it will, in a great many cases, prevent seasickness."

I would not give much for your religion unless it can be seen. Lamps do not talk, but they do shine. A lighthouse sounds no drum, it beats no gong; and yet far over the waters its friendly spark is seen by the mariner. So let your actions shine out your religion. Let the main sermon of your life be illustrated by all your conduct, and it shall not fail to be illustrious.—Spurgeon.

Don't wear false hair while it is possible to retain your own. Ayer's Hair Vigor, the best dressing, nourishes and invigorates the hair roots, cures scalp diseases, prevents the hair from coming out or turning gray, and promotes a new and luxuriant growth.

RINGING OUT AND RINGING IN.

Ring out the slowly dying cause
Of ancient forms and party strife;
Ring in the nobler modes of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws.

Ring out all want and care and sin,
The faithless coldness of the times;
Ring out all bitter thoughts from mind,
And ring the Christian singer in.

Ring out false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good.

Ring out old shapes of foul disease;
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace.

Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be.

City Missions.

The following is an abridgement of an address delivered recently in Carondelet Street Church by Dr. H. M. DuBose. It was stenographically reported in full by Miss Alma M. Sawtelle, but for want of space we found it necessary to abridge.

When Pericles, the brilliant leader and eloquent orator of Athens, would address himself to the Athenians and the Greeks at large, he retired to the innermost shrine of the temple of the gods, and there prayed that he might be inspired to speak words in their hearing that would shape the destinies of his people, that would make their courage, that would direct their heroisms, and bring to them victory and greatness and repose and peace. I have earnestly prayed that in delivering to you my message to-night—a service which gives me great gladness—I might be enabled to shape destiny in your lives, and inspire your minds with a large vision of your work, and thrill you with consecration and service to our Master in this work.

The moral grandeur of Christian missions has come to me as one of the appropriate suggestions for this evening's study. The sublimity, the greatness and grandeur of this occupation, are suggested, first of all, by the fact that the missionary movement was one which inspired the heart, and moved and engaged the life of Jesus, the Son of God, the Son of Mary.

Imagine to yourself a prince who enjoys the homage and love of his subjects, whose throne is fixed in the stability of the loyalty of his loving people, and that has behind it a tradition lost in the uncertainties of the past. From the royal city stretch beautiful fields, tearful with the dew of every morning; vineyards and orchards and gardens and daisy-tufted woods and ripening wheat-fields, and, above it, the still, clear heavens, marked here and there by the blue, curling smoke that ascends from cottage and from the habitations of the rich and the great. Imagine that there comes to the heart of that prince—so serenely happy, so strongly settled in the love of the people—one day a sorrowful story. One of his subjects, the feeblest and least of all those that bear fealty to his throne and sceptre, has been carried away in an alien land, there chained to suffer thraldom. The heart of the prince is broken, and his heart goes out to the one unhappy subject. He sends an embassy to the alien land, and offers a ransom for the delivery of the enthralled, but the cruel-hearted king sends to him an insulting reply. Only one thing will suffice. The prince himself must tear the purple from his shoulders, snatch the crown from his head, and must journey all the way barefoot and alone, and in the dark dwelling of the king must endure scourging upon his back. Three days and three nights of darkness in the dungeon, deep and vile, he must there in durance sleep until the dawning of the third day, and that alone will make the ransom. I imagine such a prince as he plucks the crown from his head and sandals from his feet, and, barefoot, begins his lonely journey. Through the dark, barefoot, leaving bloody prints along the way, his tender palms cut by the piercing stones, until at last, weary, exhausted, heart-sick and faint, he falls prostrate on the dewy bank of a turbulent stream that rolls along the mountain-path, and then, with one agonizing cry, he awaits the awful issue of his journey. In that moment the cry of his unhappy one comes to him, enduring the unutterable ignominy there in the house of the king. With one prayer to heaven, he plunges into the dark night and pays the ransom, and then, with the liberated subject, returns to his throne. That was never true of an earthly prince. No earthly man ever loved so divinely as that. It is only true of Jesus, the Son of God, who, amid the silence of heaven and the weeping hosts—cherubic, seraphic, and angelic—put aside the glory that was his with the Father, and came among earth's lowliest poor, and thus became the world's first missionary, and thus wrote out the marvelous tale of the love story of the universe. So, then, the source of the emphasis of this grandeur begins in the palaces of the skies, and runs through all the reaches of human passion, all the goings of human love. Not only was the heart of Jesus engaged with this thought and his mind filled with the details of this great scheme, but he committed it, undiminished and untarnished, to the hearts and minds and the love of his people, and so its grandeur increases and its sublimity ennobles.

The glory of the church in the pageantry of missions is the dynamic force of the gospel. The energy and power of the gospel are in this Book, but the church must move as the cavalcade of the skies move in the storm, before the light of the gospel becomes dynamic, and that movement is in the path of Christian missions. The soul which is not thrilled with the thought of great victories, great undertakings, has lost the substance out of which it was created, and has lost the divine element which was put into it at the beginning of its days. We all love to be engaged in a great work, and such a life becomes a perennial inspiration.

I am also led to consider the ground of the obligation of Christian missions. All great things of life shape themselves into duties, and the great things of life are marshalled under the reign of necessity and law. Love itself is the highest law of the universe. Love is the supremest thing in the universe. So the ground of missions is the command of our Master, "Go ye," etc. The law of our Lord is the foundation on which is builded the superstructure of our own rearing and of our own service. The planets in the heavens, with their suns, and all the marvelous mysteries of the universe, are not only the products of law, but the servants of law. Suppose the cavalcade of planets would say, "We know no law, we know no regulating force," then what sudden chaos would come to pass. But the planets and the suns and all the moving, pulsing forces of the universe recognize law as they whirl through their ceaseless orbits. So the law on this point is the first ground that challenges our attention. The Master has spoken, and the reason of the heart is to obey.

But there are other grounds. One is the subjective necessity for the missionary movement in the church. It is impossible that the church should love, that it should fill the first and last of its functions, if it fails to recognize this spirit and put this recognition of its duty into ceaseless operation. One of the faithful leaders of our church, now gone to his reward, was asked this question: "Can the heathen be saved if we refuse to send them the gospel? Will not God save the heathen?" The question is not, "Can the heathen be saved without our help?" but the question is, "Can we be saved if we withhold from them the gospel?" We must, or we die. The mind must get knowledge, or it will shrivel and perish. The physical life will shrivel and die unless it is fed through all the currents of its blood. The soul will shrivel and die unless it walks in the broad sunshine. Save it drinks the water of life, save it feeds itself upon the food of sacrifice and consecration, that immortal essence of life we call the spirit of man will die. There is no food so rich to the soul and so sweet to the spirit as that which is served in the house of sacrifice, which is spread by the hand of service ministered by self forgetfulness, in the losing of one's life in service for God. We must give the gospel to the lost, to the villagers, in the shires, or we must perish by the opulence and selfishness of our prosperity.

We now come to the objective application. Men are lost. We are saved, but men over there are lost in the darkness. There are little children here who appeal to us, and the cry is, "Give us to eat; give us bread." But we can only understand what the loss of the human life is by understanding what it would have been had it been saved; what passion, what capacities for happiness, usefulness, grandeur, in the times that now are and in eternity!

What is it to be lost? It is to have the mind darkened—so precious a thing as the mind. There is no thraldom like ignorance; there is no poverty like that which comes to the mind shorn of its power, dormant with the ignorance of superstition. Those that are lost have darkened minds; they have not the vision of God. Men and women are lost, are wandering in the darkness, and they call to us to save them. Thank God they may be saved! He that made the golden urn of man's heart has power to make it again. Men are lost! Let us go out and save them.

There is properly no differentiation between domestic and foreign missions. You are wont to hear it said, and said wisely, that the appeal to us for home missions rests on the same foundation, and is equal to foreign missions, and has been emphasized too much—not that foreign missions have had too much emphasis, but that the emphasis has not been properly laid upon domestic missions, since they are one and the same thing; but there is a sense in which the appeal of domestic and city missions has a peculiar application to you, and is affirmed with peculiar stress in the book of obligation. It is thus you distinctively recognize a social duty to your next-door neighbor, to the one that abides in the village or dwells in the city with you, that you do not recognize as applied to your neighbor in the distant city or the lands beyond the city. So we rightfully make appeal to this social necessity. I will not stress that, however; I will briefly consider the peculiar and particular phase of missions before you to-night. The cities are the seats of human life, as the blood and the heart and the lungs and the digestive organs are the seats of physical life, and when disease lays hold upon them all the body is diseased. The capillaries of the skin may be affected, or some minor organ and life be prolonged; but let any foreign substances find their habitat in brain, lung, heart, or digestive organs, and all the body is sick; and so vice and ignorance and lawlessness and Christlessness in the cities will poison the whole life. Cities are the centers of power and life and influence; they are the centers of culture. All our culture emanates from the cities; our literature is produced in the cities. To be sure, our singers are born in country places, and our wise men, but they at last find expression in the cities. When we evangelize the cities we evangelize the world. All the population of the world pours through the cities as the corpuscles of the blood. Purify the cities, and we save the land. The way out of darkest London, New York and Berlin is the way out of the darkness of the world. When you find the way to bring light to these, you find the way to bring light to all the world.

Last of all, and as part and parcel of this, is the appeal I make to you for a ministry of prayer and sacrifice. Pray for missions. Pray in faith, believing that God will cause the sun to rise over these cities, over this beautiful city, this fair metropolis of the Southland, this city of gardens, this city of sweet memories and fragrant traditions. Pray to God, but go into the coffers. As I look at the American dollar, I see it bears the image of an eagle, and that means it can fly. Put into its mouth the olive branch of love, and say: "Fly away, sweet bird, with your message! Go to the dark homes, go to the lowly places, go to the benighted, and carry your message, and God bless you and multiply unto you his mercies a thousandfold!"

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS H. CLIFFORD.

"All for Christ."

"Always and everywhere"—let us keep the motto in mind.

"If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

The Epworth League proposes to train our young people that they may do more and better work for Jesus.

Nearly every mail brings tidings of the great good done by the State Conference recently held in Water Valley.

A young preacher who attended the Conference writes: "I have organized a League with 30 members, and will organize another on the fourth Sunday."

Another brother says: "We had a great time; I gave my impression of the third State Epworth League Conference to my congregation last night. They seemed to enjoy it. One young man said he was coming back to the League."

We are glad to note that the presiding elders in Mississippi are interested in the League work. Presiding Elder Norsworthy, of the Jackson district, blows his Epworth bugle, calling the young people to meet at Flora, Miss., July 8-11.

Bro. T. B. Holloman speaks encouragingly of his League at Jefferson Street, Natchez. We missed you at the Conference, Brother Tom; but the young ladies you sent to represent your League made a fine impression. Miss Durbin's paper was excellent and was well received.

The commencement season is almost upon us. Very soon hundreds of Methodist young men and young women will turn their faces homeward for the Summer vacation. Let the pastors everywhere endeavor to retain their services and utilize their efforts in the League and for the church.

We are sending out literature today to a preacher of large experience who is desirous of organizing several Leagues in the bounds of his country charge. The young people in the country are beginning to take great interest in the work of the Epworth League.

Toronto, the Queen City of Canada, is the objective point to which many Epworthians are now working. We hope that many Mississippians will be present "when the roll is called up there."

We are informed that Missouri and Alabama are making preparations to be there in full force. What about Mississippi? Let us begin to plan right now to answer to our names in that beautiful city beyond the lakes. Led by Charles Betts Galloway, the Beaconsfield of American Methodism, let us march into Toronto one hundred strong as representatives of Christ from this grand old Southern State.

The League can greatly aid the pastor during the special revival services. Do not forget that "he that winneth souls is wise," and that, after all, this is the main object of the League—to save souls.

The Bishops have received their new appointments. As Leaguers in Mississippi, we propose to recognize and reverence those in authority, and herewith extend a hearty welcome to Bishop Alpheus Waters Wilson, who, for the next twelve months, will have episcopal supervision of the church in Mississippi.

Water Valley, Miss.

Will the Epworth League, through Its Various Departments, Assist Our Young People in Building Character After the Divine Plan?

BY C. H. JAMES.

The following paper was read before the Epworth League Conference at Water Valley, and is published by resolution of the Conference:

Character is condition, not conduct; being, not doing. Conduct is an evidence of character, but only evidence. Character after the divine plan consists in being like God. "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," and God's perfection includes a perfect body, a perfect mind, and a perfect soul. In direct ratio to a man's God-likeness does his character approach perfection, and God is not only all merciful, but he is omniscient. The idea that the highest character may exist without knowledge is almost as pernicious as the idea that knowledge makes character. Man was made in the image of his maker, in the image of God was he created. He was ushered upon the scene of his achievements in a form fashioned in the divine mold. He was endowed with a mind and soul of even higher dignity, and it is clearly his duty to fashion them also in the divine mold. With a body in the image of God's, with a mind in the image of God's, with a soul in the image of God's—man, then, has character after the divine plan.

The problem for each person is this: Given a body in the image of God's, and an undeveloped mind and soul endowed with infinite possibilities, how can these naked possibilities be transformed into the resplendent glory or realized fruition?

The purpose of the Epworth League is to assist the young people of the church in the solution of this problem, and it will succeed just in proportion as it teaches correct ideas and assists in their practical application. A soul like God's is one that includes the universe in the compass of its love. A mind like God's is one that includes the universe in the compass of its knowledge. The League, in its various departments, recognizes these truths. They may very easily be called the departments of knowledge, of mercy, and of worship. The ideas involved in this division, thoroughly developed and grafted into the life of the young, will produce such a generation as the world has not yet seen. Knowledge, a mind like God's; mercy, a soul like God's; worship, reverence for and humility toward God.

The League is a sermon incarnate on the text, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," with the emphasis on beginning. Not being a substitute for, but a supplement to, the church, its foundation teaching is that the fear of the Lord is the only sound basis on which to build real character. Its devotional department is, therefore, placed first in rank. The worship of God, the fear of the Lord, in the commonly accepted meaning of the terms, is the subject of two of the three departments of the League. The devotional department, and that of charity and help, have for their sole object the promotion of piety, and their method is the result and outgrowth of the best thought on the subject. It goes to the root of the whole matter at once, and recognizes the natural law in the spiritual world—that piety is developed by the same process which develops muscle by exercise. The exercise of piety by participation in the public worship, and by private acts of benevolence and charity, is, therefore, the special purpose of these departments; and I may add, in passing, that wherever this exercise is important or needful, there is a place for the League, or, at any rate, and certainly for the methods of the League.

In its department of knowledge is found the peculiar emphasis of the League on beginning in that proverb, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." No knowledge, no culture is of much worth when opposed to the fear of the Lord, but the two must combine in order to make the well-rounded character. The literary department is as much devoted to the cultivation of the fear of the Lord as are the others, but this is not so commonly accepted. The fear of the Lord is not wisdom; it is but the beginning. To this beginning must be added knowledge, culture. I am glad the League has a literary department. It is a distinct recognition by the church that learning is a part of serving. Our colleges also proclaim the same truth, but their voice only extends to a portion of the community, the favored portion, while the voice of the League is heard in the homes of the people, carries the idea to every hamlet, and lights the torch of knowledge in every corner. Knowledge of the Bible, knowledge of the church and its doctrines, knowledge of history—his story, as Dr. Pierson puts it; knowledge of the world of thought, of science, of literature. God made the world and all that dwell therein, and all knowledge is divine.

Given two people of equal piety and judgment, and their value to the world is in direct ratio to their knowledge. Some of the most pious people who have ever adorned the surface of the globe have eked out a narrow existence circumscribed by the mountains surrounding their little valley, or their log hut and its scant clearing—all for the lack of knowledge—while others, with no greater piety, but by reason of knowledge, have towered aloft—great mountain-peaks of usefulness—proclaiming light and life to thousands.

The League stands for intelligent piety, and also for pious intelligence; for culture, broad Christian culture; not the spurious, dilettante, namby-pamby article frequently called culture by its owners; not familiarity with the latest little novel, the senseless spawn of silly scandal-mongers, who, like Dryden, write bad enough to please; not that culture which consists simply in easy gentility while ignoring the gentleman; but, on the other hand, the genuine polish of a real gentleman; "a man of high erected thoughts seated in a heart of courtesy," alive to the great literature of the world, to the great movements of civilization, to the great questions straining the bands of modern society and perplexing the students of events.

True goodness is like the glow-worm in this, that it shines most when no eyes, except those of heaven, are upon it.—Hare.

"HE CARETH."

BY MARIANNE FARNINGHAM.

What can it mean? Is it aught to him
That the nights are long and the days are dim?
Can he be touched by the griefs I bear
That sadden the heart and whiten the hair?
About his throne are eternal calms,
And strong glad music of happy psalms,
And bliss unruffled by any strife—
How can he care for my little life?

And yet I want him to care for me
While I live in this world where the sorrows be
When the light dies down from the path I take,
And strength and friends forsake
When love and music that once did bless
Have left me to silence and loneliness,
And my life song changes to silent prayer—
Then my heart cries out for a God who cares.

When shadows hang over the whole day long,
And my spirit is bowed with shame and wrong,
When I am not good and the deeper shade
Of conscious sin makes my heart afraid,
And the busy world, busy, has much to do,
To stay in its course and help me through,
And I long for a Savior—can it be
That the God of the universe cares for me?

Oh wonderful story of deathless love;
Each child is dear to that heart above.
He fights for me when I can not fight,
He comforts me in the gloom of night,
He lifts the burden, for he is strong,
He stills the sigh and awakes the song:
The sorrow that bows me down he bears,
And loves and pardons because he cares.

Let all who are sad take heart again,
We are not alone in our hours of pain:
Our Father stoops from his throne above
To soothe and quiet us with his love;
He leaves us not when the storm is high,
And we have safety, for he is nigh.
Can it be trouble which he doth share?
Oh, rest in peace, for the Lord will care.

A Leaf from the Diary of Rev. Thomas Nixon.

BY REV. J. M. WEEMS.

Thursday, Oct. 31, 1816.—Bro. Fleming did not meet me at Bro. Foster's as I had expected; so I started alone and crossed the Mississippi river at 11 o'clock. I had a long and lonesome journey over a low, flat, but a very fertile country, and spent the night with Bro. John Shrock.

Friday, Nov. 1.—Bro. Shrock went with me this morning to show me the way, and I spent the night with Mrs. Owens. Late this evening I passed the place where Bro. Nelly died. This place, so dear to the people called Methodists in the great Southwest, was especially so to me this evening. I felt that I stood where angels had been on errands of mercy.

As but two years had passed since the brave, consecrated man of God, whose place I felt I was trying to fill, gave up his life for the Master's cause in these dark and lonely woods, I could not resist the impulse to linger about the spot in meditation and prayer. I saw the witch-hazel bush by which he pulled himself from his horse. The horse then returned to some Indians, who took care of him until the following morning. I then went to the log by which he kneeled and communed with his Lord. I could not doubt but in this moment he realized the fullness of the promise, "I am with you." I then went to the pine tree by which he died, and where he was found the next morning.

I here take the liberty of correcting two mistakes in Bishop McTyeire's account of this event. Of the date he says, "It was Nov. 24, 1815." It was Nov. 24, 1814. Again he says, "A traveler next day, about four o'clock, found the corpse." It was the Indian who had taken care of his horse during the night, and was taking him to Mr. Carter's house the next morning, who found him.

I had a hard year on my new work, but hope some good to souls and the future of the church was accomplished. During this year I met Valentine King, a son of General King, with whom I became acquainted on my first circuit in Kentucky in 1813. He was a licensed preacher, but failing to get into Conference, had became a lawyer. I also met Mr. L. Wails, who was very kind to me, and was one of my best friends. Though brought up in the Episcopal Church, he afterwards joined the Methodist Church, and one of his daughters married the Rev. W. M. Curtis, of the Mississippi Conference.

On Friday, Oct. 31, I crossed the Mississippi river on my way to Conference, and spent the night with Bro. Simms.

Sunday, Nov. 2, I preached at Pinkneyville to a small, but very attentive audience, from Ps. i, 3.

On Tuesday, the fourth, I went to the home of Bro. Winans, where I met Bishop McKendree and Bros. Norton and Griffin. We were glad to see each other, and united in thanksgiving to God for his preserving grace.

On Thursday, the sixth, we all went to the Midway Camp Ground, in Wilkinson county, where the Conference was to meet next day.

Friday, Nov. 7, 1817.—The Conference met this morning and organized, with the Bishop in the chair. There are but few of the preachers present, and we did but little to-day. The almost incessant rain makes our stay here most disagreeable. At 11 A. M. I preached from the first Psalm. At 3 P. M. Bro. Norton preached from Luke ix, 23, and we had a gracious meeting. At night Bro. Owens preached with great power and effect.

Saturday, at 11 A. M., the Bishop preached a great sermon from I. Sam. xii, 23, 24. Bro. Lott preached at 3 P. M, and Bro. Griffin at night.

Sunday, the ninth.—Bro. Norton preached at 9 o'clock this morning, and the Bishop preached at 11 from II Tim. ii, 15, and then ordained one deacon and three elders. After a short intermission Bro. Sellers preached from John xi, 40, and at night Bro. Peter James preached from Ps. lxxxiv, 11.

Monday morning we concluded the business of the Conference, and at 10 A. M. the Bishop preached from Cor. vii, 1, after which we had the Lord's Supper, and then the appointments, as follows:

The Mississippi District—Thomas Griffin, P. E. Natchez and Claiborne, John Mennefee; Wilkinson, John Lane and S. Sellers; Amite, to be supplied; Pearl River, W. Ledbetter; Tombigby, T. Owens and C. Rawls; Chickesawha, J. Booth.

Bro. Hewitt and I were returned to the Louisiana district.

A Question.

The question continues to rise with some here and there, "Who has charge of our churches?" We answer, The pastors. The deeds to the property show that the trustees are to hold, keep and protect said property "for the use of the ministry and membership of the M. E. Church, South." The trustees have nothing whatever to say or do about who shall or shall not preach, or what kind of service shall be held. These services are entirely under the control of the pastor. To throw open our churches and pulpits to every wind of doctrine and religious ism for the gratification of "itching ears" or curiosity hunters, or some one who has not spiritual intelligence enough to distinguish between free love-ism and Christianity, is an exceedingly dangerous thing. Whenever this is done the pastor will find himself sooner or later without a flock, and the community without a pastor, or that which, if possible, is worse—a divided flock; and the Master has said, "A house divided against itself can not stand." If the pastor is not capable of guarding and instructing the flock, he ought not to be a shepherd. If the flock have not confidence in him, and refuse to be led by him, he had as well quit them. We would not serve a people that did not have confidence in us to lead them. If we who are divinely called to preach the gospel and to spread scriptural holiness among our people allow everyone who rides a hobby to air his dogmas in our pulpits, or ridicule our doctrines and usage and ministry, we are unworthy of the confidence and leadership of the people. Because a man claims to be specially called of God to anything does not require us to throw open our pulpits and give him right of way among our people. The man who professes to be a minister, and goes into the pulpit of another without the invitation or consent of the pastor, is not only lacking in Christian courtesy, but is lacking in the first principles of a gentleman. No Methodist preacher has the right to go into the pulpit of another without his invitation or consent. We would be unwilling to become extreme "high church," as our Catholic, Episcopal and Baptist brethren have done—ostracize everybody—but we would prefer this by far to extreme liberalism. Let the pastor exercise prudence and judgment in this, but he ought to know something of the character and reputation of the man who goes before his people to instruct them in spiritual things. If he has a message from God to the people, let them hear it; but if he has a message of his denomination or from his head, or is on a hobby, let him go somewhere else to empty it. We have known this goody-goody friendly to all spirits to let in an ecclesiastical sheep stealer or a demoralizer of the flock, and in a short time that community was without the gospel.

Let our people show respect and appreciation enough to confer with the pastor if they want preaching by another, and especially one who is not of us. Some one says, "Are you afraid of the truth?" No, no; but we are afraid of error and cranks. Some modern apostles, who go around ostracizing from the kingdom of grace and glory all those who do not follow after them, would do well to read and study our Lord's reply to John in Luke ix, 49, 50. If these were the only teachers of morals and Christianity, the world would soon go to the bad.

Correspondence.

En Route in New Mexico.

BY MISS BELLE KEARNEY.

The atmosphere of this country is dry and pure in the extreme; consequently, eminently health-giving. The altitude is great. The mountain ranges stretch beyond the prairies, their tops covered with snow. El Capitan stands out toward the West like a sentinel, suggesting heights and limitless wastes far away.

On my return from Roswell I stopped at Eddy, the largest town on this line, to address a meeting which had been arranged for me by Rev. T. F. Sessions, a cultured and consecrated young Methodist minister, whom I met several years ago, when I had the pleasure of speaking to the students and faculty of the Southern University, at Greensboro, Ala. He has done a fine work in this, his first charge, in lifting up the people to higher standards of living, and bringing them to a personal knowledge of God. Eddy, like Roswell, is cosmopolitan. The country around the former is more broken, and is not in the same state of cultivation. The beet-sugar manufactory is the leading business enterprise.

I boarded the train at Eddy in the afternoon about four o'clock. Five hours were spent waiting for the west-bound passenger at Pecos. Next morning I opened my eyes within a hundred miles of Sierra Blanca, where we took breakfast. From there to El Paso it is an unchangeable, sandy valley, with mountain ranges on either side, bare and dusty looking. Not a human habitation in sight, except wigwams huddled on the glowing desert at frightful distances from each settlement. These were occupied by Indians. Here, as elsewhere in this region, nothing is seen growing except the mesquite bushes, Spanish daggers, and numerous varieties of cactus.

As soon as I got to El Paso, I boarded a street car to pay a visit to the old Mexican town, Juarez, which is just across the Rio Grande. The car driver could not speak a word of English, but by desperate gesticulations, smiles and groans, I finally impressed him with the idea that I wanted to visit the old church, Guadaloupe. After rattling over the track, which was along various streets lined with adobes—both residences and business houses—the driver pointed to a quaint building perched on top of an eminence, grinned, and gurgled, "Guadalonpe." This is the one centre of interest in Juarez. It is built in the style of architecture peculiar to the ancient Mexicans; the material used was sun-dried bricks. It dates from 1549. The inner roof is made of matted canes; beneath these are heavy beams of wood most elaborately, but rudely carved. The effect is pleasing in the extreme. I found nothing else of especial interest, as the interior was like that of all other Catholic Churches, except the human feature. As I entered, I found a dried up old Mexican woman kneeling at the altar counting her beads, while her little dog slept at her feet. As soon as she saw me, she held out her hands imploringly for a coin, which I could not refuse. On receiving it, she pressed it to her forehead, then made the sign of the cross, and recommenced her prayers. I wanted some one to tell me the history of the church, and as the old woman was the only soul in sight, I interrupted her devotions and asked her if she spoke English. She shook her head. I thought surely the priest did, so I said, "Father, English?" She sprang to her feet, and with beaming face exclaimed, "Padre! Eengleesh!" and hurried away to find him. While she was gone, a troop of Mexican boys came in and motioned to me to follow them to a little anti-chamber. Walking solemnly to a covered box like a coffin, they lifted the folds of the drapery and disclosed to view a hideous figure representing the body of Christ as it was taken from the cross—wrapped in grave clothes, face stained with blood, and ghastly lips apart. With awe-stricken faces the little boys pointed to the hideous image, and whispered, "Christi!" The old woman hobbled back with a woebegone expression, held her hands up in the direction of a ladder leading to the top of the roof, and muttered, "Padre! padre!" From this I gleaned that the father was aloft, and not to be seen that day. Then I tried to persuade the boys, by urge of a "neckle," to go up and bring him down. There was running to and fro, pointing and repointing to the roof, and a murmur of "Padre!" but that was all. I left utterly baffled. All that I learned of the old church was gained by reading three lines in an illustrated guide to El Paso, courteously loaned by a young American clerk in Juarez while I was in a curiosity shop looking at the beautiful feather-work for which the Mexicans are so famous—the ancient Aztec pottery; the wonderful creations in straw; from a sombrero to a card-receiver; the opals with fire in their hearts, and the milky ones; the onyx souvenirs of every variety, and the hundred and one other objects spread out in alluring array to catch the eye of a stranger possessing a weakness for collecting curios.

On my return to the Rio Grande a government official entered the car and asked the passengers if they had bought anything dutiable. When he had satisfied himself that we had not, we were allowed to cross the river in peace again. Rio Grande sounds so fine that I thought it was a great stream that knew no bottom, but, lo! I beheld a shallow little river, and was told that it often runs dry at this point.

Before I returned to my hotel I visited some of the adobe residences—dozens huddled together. They usually consist of two diminutive rooms. Of course, everybody knows that an adobe is a mud-house. The interiors were surprisingly clean. Some of the walls were decorated with chromes, and I discovered sewing machines and other evidences of civilization. I was welcomed joyously to each hut, and led to the doorway most hospitably, and offered a chair. In one I sat down, and after vainly trying to understand and be understood by a handsome young Mexican woman, I pointed to a guitar which was hanging on the wall near, and motioned to her to play. She laughed, struck a few chords, then laid down the instrument, shaking her head, and saying, "My ole mon." When I left each hut the entire family followed me to the door, and chattered and smiled and called out, "Adios!"

This letter was begun in New Mexico, but ended in Arizona. We are still in the heart of the desert, with its blinding glories, mammoth cacti with its crimson blossoms, a few lonely birds beating their wings in the air, and the inevitable line of mountains on either side of us.

At a little station just passed we saw a number of Indians sitting stolidly around with wares to sell, and further away we catch glimpses of braves scampering away on their scraggy ponies to their desert homes.

Do not yield to over-anxiety. Fevered work, flurried work, anxious work, restless work, is always bad work.....Do your best loyally and cheerfully, and suffer yourself to feel no anxiety or fear. Your times are in God's hands. He has assigned you your place.....He will accept your efforts if they be faithful. He will bless your aims if they be for your soul's good.....Do your best, then, in quietness, not in feverish impulse; do your best with confidence—not confidence in your poor, ignorant, feeble self, but in a merciful and tender God; and be quite sure that whatever else may happen to you, or not happen, this at least will happen—which is greater than all earthly blessing—that his loving Spirit will lead you into the land of righteousness.—Canon Farrar.

FISHERS OF MEN.

"The livelong night we've toiled in vain,
But at thy gracious word
I will let down the net again—
Do thou thy will, O Lord."

So spake the weary fisher, spent,
With bootless, darkling toil;
Yet on his Master's bidding bent,
For love, and not for spoil.

So day by day, and week by week,
In sad and weary thought
They muse, whom God hath sent to seek,
The souls his Christ has bought.

For not upon a tranquil lake
Our pleasant task we ply,
Where all along our glistening wake
The softest moonbeams lie;

Where rippling wave and dashing oar
Our midnight chant attend,
Or whispering palm-leaves from the shore
With midnight silence blend.

Sweet thought of peace, ye may not last;
Too soon some ruder sound
Calls us from where ye soar so fast
Back to our earthly round:

For wildest storms our ocean sweeps,
No anchor but the cross
Might hold; and oft the thankless deep
Turns all our toil to loss.

Full many a dreary, anxious hour
We watch our nets alone,
In drenching spray and driving shower,
And hear the night-bird's moan.

At morn we look, and naught is there:
Sad dawn of cheerless day!
Who then from pining and despair
The sickening heart can stay?

There is a stay, and we are strong:
Our Master is at hand
To cheer our solitary song,
And guide us to the strand.

In his own time, but yet awhile,
Our barques at sea must ride;
Cast after cast, by force or guile,
All waters must be tried

By blameless guile or gentle force,
As when he deigned to teach
(The lode-star of our Christian course)
Upon this sacred beach.

Should e'er thy wonder-working grace
Triumph by our weak arm,
Let not our sinful fancy trace
Aught human in the charm.

To our own nets no'er bow we down,
Lest on the eternal shore
The angels, while our draught they own,
Rejoice as overmore;

Or if our unworthiness,
Toil, prayer, and watching fail,
In disappointment thou canst bless:
So love at heart prevail.

Selections.

Stillness.

Persons overworked and half worn out easily drop below a happy mental level, and in such a condition, anxiety and doubt are quite sure to get the ascendency over faith and hope. Then there begins a chewing of a cud of bitter thoughts. The constant tendency is to look back and say, "If I had not done so and so! If I had acted differently in such a crisis! If I had not done too much at this time, and too little at that period!" So the poison works. The corners of the mouth droop, wrinkles form in a short time, the household at first pities, and then dreads and avoids the victim, who, in his turn, is grieved at their unkindness.

Now, if in such a morbid state one could or would stop thinking, and simply be still, the morbidity would be cured much more rapidly than with constant inward irritation. A sore upon the flesh is treated with soothing appliances and left to heal. A spiritual sore is fretted day and night. Stillness is as necessary for the one as for the other. A text speaking of God's care for us, repeated with determination, will keep out irritating thoughts, and will quiet and cool the fever of the soul. An uplifting sentiment kept persistently in the mind will wonderfully help, and better than all, at some stages of the trouble, is a determined absence of all thought, that in the silence the Comforter's message may reach us. For always the voice is ready to speak to us, but often the inward preoccupation of joy or sorrow, of earthly music or of earthly discord, will not let it be heard.—Mary F. Butts, in Golden Rule.

Patience.

How unworthy of my immortality do I bear myself, and how like a serf of time, when my impatience can not wait a year for a result, a month for a reward, or a week for a promised blessing! Then dost not blame my ardent desires, dear Father. Then dost rejoice in earnest seekers, in eager claimants of good. The energy of thy zeal outruns my heartiest pursuits. But with thee is no fretfulness. Thy mightiest desires are knit to perfect peace. To thy clear eyes a thousand years are as a day, and a thousand failures as an instant of repulse. Then dost live in the successful eternity. Draw me there with thee, O thou Prince of Peace and patience! By daily proofs of thy loving kindness, by the unfolding of thy wise designs, by matchless surprises of joy, shame me from my distrust. Remind me that my folly knows not how to plan nor wisely to desire, but finds its only safety in being led. Remind me that to-morrow holds thee even as to-day, and holds, therefore, all of to-day's beauty and strength and joy. Teach me that thy postponement of happiness always enlarges it, if I will be enlarged by the delay. Convince thine impatient child that a thousand years of waiting for a blessing do not impair the blessing, because thou art not impaired. Grant me the faith that exults to be tested, and the peace that is not in bondage to any event. Lord of all fulfillment, lead me to rest in thee.—Golden Rule.

Let us remember that greatness of action depends on two other kinds of greatness; on our appreciation of the greatness of the occasion when it can be done. It has been well said, by an eminent French writer, that the true calling of a Christian is not to do extraordinary things, but to do ordinary things in an extraordinary way. The most trival tasks can be accomplished in a noble, gentle, regal spirit, which overrides and puts aside all petty paltry feelings, and which elevates all little things.—Dean Stanley.

Everything that raises our personal standard of thought and purpose, everything that brings us nearer to the nature of the completed one in Christ, increases our power for good, and makes us more and more a power in the world about us. When we crave the privilege of doing for others, it is well for us to realize the privilege of being for others.

"Can't I live a Christian out of the church?" Yes, my young friend, just as easily as you can make fire with one stick. Look at that wood fire. There must be three or four sticks to make a good fire. Now, take those blazing sticks out of the stove and put them singly on the ground and see how quickly they are black and dead.—The Outlook.

We all talk of angels and saints; did you ever think that there is not a home, however homely, that has not in it the germ of angels and saints!—yea, real saints and angels, as you shall believe them if God takes from you the outward form that oftentimes annoys and distresses, and separates.—N. A. Staples.

This makes the sacredness and awfulness of life when we come to know it, that we are never so near our highest as when we are most sensible of the danger of our lowest, and the danger of the lowest is never so real to us as when the splendor of the highest stands wide open.—Phillips Brooks.

Remember the power of indirect influences; those which distil from a life, not from a sudden, brilliant effort. The former never fail; the latter often. There is good done of which we can never predicate the when or where. It lies in the invisible influence on character.

He who walks through life with an even temper and a gentle patience—patient with himself, patient with others, patient with difficulties and crosses—he has an every-day greatness beyond that which is won in battle or chanted in cathedrals.—Dr. Dewey.

Above all things, be kindly. Kindliness is a grace very near to the likeness of God, and one which disarms men above all else. Gentle, charitable thoughts of others gradually stamp the countenance and help to win hearts.

Humility is a beautiful grace. Never put yourself before other people. Let them put you forward. Never, never boast of what you have done or could do. Self-praise goes but a little way.

God asks for the heart; his gospel appeals to the heart; and the true preachers of the gospel will aim to reach the heart rather than the head.

Some people are never at home when a good opportunity knocks.

To Whom it May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,
Editor Christian Advocate.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev E S. Lewis, Shaw, Miss: "Lee Crowe, brother of Rev. H. P. Crowe, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Willie Pearman had the misfortune to be drowned at Cleveland, Thursday, May 6 Both young men were members of the Methodist Church. Their untimely death has cast a shadow over the entire community. Bros. J. W. Dorman, Chas. Spragins and the writer were notified by telegram, and we hastened thither to mingle our tears with the bereaved."

Rev. M. H. Moore: "Last Sunday night we closed a meeting at Centerville. It lasted just a week. Congregations were good. A good part of the church members stood by us; encouraging and helping us by their presence, songs, prayers and such other aid as they could render. We have some of the salt of the earth here; ready and willing to work anywhere for the Master and the salvation of souls. And just here let me ask why should not our laymen take a more active part than they often do in our protracted meetings. The Lord was with us. Quite a number were blessed and formed resolutions to live closer to God in the future. I feel confident the church is in much better shape. There is a better feeling among the members and in the community. There were nine accessions to the church in different ways. On Sunday we took subscriptions for the collections as ordered by the Conference. While we did not get the entire amount, still we hope to make up the balance by a private and personal canvass. These people are intelligent and kind. They are thoughtful of their pastor. While we have had no storms at the parsonage, there has been a good breeze all the while. They are able to do and seem to take a pleasure in doing. They are amply able to meet all the claims asked of them by the Conference. We are visiting, working, preaching, praying, and depending upon the Lord to be with us as he has promised, and hope to go up to Conference with every dollar paid in full."

WALTHALL CIRCUIT, DURANT DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I want to say through the columns of the ADVOCATE that our work is making some advancement. Our second Quarterly Conference has come and gone; had a good time. Our beloved presiding elder was on hand looking after the interest of the church. We said when he first came on this district, nearly four years ago, that he was proficient, efficient and sufficient, and we are of the same opinion still. Bro. H. P. Gibbs was with us on Sunday, and Bro. Mitchell, not feeling very well, asked Bro. Gibbs to preach for him, and he did so, preaching a very able sermon on the new birth. The Holy Ghost came down on both preacher and people. I have seven appointments, and all were represented except one. The stewards, I think, made the best report they have ever made since I have been on this work, and this is my third year. We have five Sunday-schools all doing well. We want to observe Children's Day at all of our churches. The programme is very fine. Pray for us. Success to the ADVOCATE.
JOHN H. ROGERS, P. C.

LANESVILLE WORK.

I am glad to state that Bro. C. F. Staples, senior preacher on this charge, is in favor with his people. He preaches well, his congregations are large and interest increasing. He has good live Sabbath-schools and prayer meetings at all of his appointments. The children are interested and are learning to sing. Prospects are very good for a successful year. Finances are short, owing to last year's severe dronth.

At Bro. Ledbetter's request, Bro. Staples conducted a meeting at Ringgold of eleven days' duration. It was a decided success. Some bright conversions that will relate their experience, and some prayed in public. Four entered the experience of perfect love. All Christians were drawn closer to their Savior and made stronger. The citizens claim that it was the best meeting that they have had for quite a number of years. Almost every member of each denomination, and especially the godly women of Ringgold, will lead in public prayer.

Our second Quarterly Conference for this charge was held the seventeenth and eighteenth of April at Grand Bayou Church. Bro. B. T. Crews, our beloved presiding elder, was on hand looking after all the interests of the church. He is a live man and presides with dignity and ability, yet with brotherly love and to the entire satisfaction of all. His preaching was able and spiritual, and was a feast of good things to our people. We were instructed and edified and, therefore, profited by his coming among us. At the close of the eleven o'clock service on Sunday a large number partook of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and two joined the church on profession of faith. He preached four strong sermons for Bro. Staples at Ringgold during his meeting there. We will be glad to have him come among us again. May the Lord multiply such useful men among us! The church needs them. THOS. J. MARTIN.

PORTER—JACOB M. PORTER was born in Winston county, Miss., April 9, 1838 His mother (Susannah Morrison) died in his infancy. His father—Rev. Archie Porter—died when he was only seven years of age, leaving him to the care of his eldest son, Rev. Baxter S. Porter, with whom he moved to Houston county, Texas, in 1852, and to Natchitoches parish, La., in 1859, and settled twelve miles east of Pleasant Hill. In 1861 he joined the Confederate Army, and never returned home until 1865

On Jan. 23, 1877 he married Mrs. Permelia C. O Beirne, of Athlone, on Red River, La. In 1884 they moved to Jackson La., to educate their children. They remained in Jackson eight years, graduating their three older children. They returned to their home on Red River in 1892, where he died Oct. 26 1896

He was converted and joined the church in early life, which he served as trustee, class leader, Sunday-school teacher, and steward for many years He loved his Bible, which not only taught him the way of salvation, but preserved his life during the battle of Peachtree Creek, by warding off a deadly missile.

He won the esteem of all who knew him by leading an exemplary life. He was a kind husband, affectionate father, true friend, and a devoted Christian. His last exhortation was, "Tell all is well; meet me in heaven." While grasping the affectionate hand of his loved companion, he said, "The angels have come for me, and I wanted to be with Jesus," and life ebbed gently, to tide at the last trumpet's sound.

He leaves a wife, four children and three step-children to mourn his loss. May the balm of Gilead soothe the wounds of their broken hearts!

By a devoted nephew,
W. J PORTER

FARR—REBECCA S. FARR, wife of B. R. Farr (deceased), and daughter of J. C. and A. T. Welton, was born in Holmes county, Miss., Dec. 17, 1844, and died near the home of her birth, Dec. 5, 1896. She was married to B. R Farr, June 29, 1865, when two devoted hearts were blended, so that the one was happy in the happiness of the other. Six children were born to bless the home of these devoted ones. Only three are left to mourn their loss; the others had gone before and are now with them in the kingdom above.

Sister Farr survived her husband only fifteen months. Her already delicate health gave way under the effect of constant watching at the bedside of her dying companion, and when he must go she bowed her head under the weight of her great sorrow, and looked through the grave for that union which had been broken here. She suffered on, when at last death came to her relief, and in holy triumph she passed from this to that good world to be with those she loved.

Sister Farr was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, while quite young, and it was her delight to contribute to the interest of the church of her choice. She gave liberally to its support, and with earnest zeal and willing hands she entered joyfully into all its enterprises for the salvation of the world. She was a model wife and mother; to make home happy was her chief delight. She was tender and considerate in all she said and did. Her children loved and reverenced her. She ruled by reigning in the hearts of those she loved, and moved about in their midst with a sweetness of disposition and composure of mind which turned all hearts in the way of goodness and love. Her home was indeed a happy place. It was a place where impressions were made upon the minds of those whose training in infancy and youth had been committed to her, which will never be forgotten. Such a mother, though she may cease to live, ceases not to affect the lives of those who were blessed by her presence and to whom her memory is so dear. But in the midst of busy scenes and perplexities incident to life the weary mind in seeking rest will often return to youthful scenes and the memory of her who watched over us in our helplessness; and we will gather strength for the performance of duty until the battle of life is over. And while her voice will be heard no more in the home and the family circle, broken by her absence, yet she is enthroned in the hearts of her children who will cherish her memory and tenderly regard the pious impressions of her devoted life No doubt it was of great comfort and consolation to her in her dying moments to know that they all were members of the church she loved so well, and to which her sainted husband was so much devoted, and for which he never ceased to work and pray until he ceased to live.

Sister Farr had many friends among those who knew her and had been objects of her tender regard. She was kind to all with whom the associations of life brought her in contact. At her home she dispensed bounteous hospitality and never grew weary in making her friends happy. In her long, painful and protracted illness she never murmured, but endured as seeing him who is invisible. She had no fear of death, but welcomed the message when it came. Her body rests in the grave by those she loved so well, while her spirit is praising God in the home of the blest. May those who loved her meet her there, where parting will be no more.
R. M. DAVIS.

Nervous

People wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headaches, indigestion and Nervous Dyspepsia. The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood feeding the nerves on refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. Hood's Sarsaparilla feeds the nerves pure, rich blood; gives natural sleep, good digestion, is the true remedy for all nervous troubles.

"I guess I've been victimized." That's the guess of many a hard-working man, who, worn-out, nervous and sleepless, has been for months paying exhorbitant bills to a high-priced doctor without a dollar's worth of benefit. Frequently the guess is entirely correct. There are too many doctors who are only lifted out of obscurity by the size of their bills.

The business man or working man who gets run-down and in ill-health from overwork, needs the advice and treatment of a physician who is famous for the thousands of cases he has cured, and not for the thousands of dollars he has charged. In Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., he will find that kind of a physician. For thirty years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo.

He is the discoverer of a wonderful medicine known as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a marvelous medicine for broken down men and women. It whets the appetite, purifies the blood, makes the digestion perfect and the liver active. Through the blood it acts directly on every organ of the body, driving out impurities and disease germs. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and nerve-tonic. It cures nervous prostration and exhaustion, malaria, liver troubles, rheumatism, blood and skin diseases and 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption, weak lungs, spitting of blood, lingering coughs and kindred ailments. When you ask a dealer for the "Golden Medical Discovery" insist upon having it. A dealer is not a physician and has no right to advise some substitute.

When the trouble is of long standing write to Dr. Pierce, who will answer letters from sufferers without charge. Very serious or complicated cases, or those needing surgical treatment, sometimes find it necessary to come to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, for personal treatment and care. Dr. Pierce can be addressed there.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-sixth annual camp meeting at Seashore will open (D. V.) on Wednesday evening, July 14, next, and continue for about eight days.

Arrangements have been made for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit this delightful spot. A handsome and commodious two-story lodging-house—Keller Lodge—has been erected and comfortably furnished for visitors, in addition to the other accommodations supplied by the trustees.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale a reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. It is probable tickets will be placed on sale July 1 to 31, and be good to return on until Sept. 30. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of 1,400 feet; fanned by the refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico. The sea-bathing afforded is unsurpassed by any resort on the coast. A fine artesian well supplies the grounds with excellent drinking water, which is now "piped" over the entire encampment. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure and exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued and overheated visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the camp meeting should address W. B. Thomson, New Orleans, chairman Lodging Committee. Questions concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.; Dr. M. F. Tucker, Mobile, or J. H. Lakin, Montgomery, Ala.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge. Board will be furnished them at the restaurant at half rate.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Work is our business; its success is God's.—Ruskin.

Some people never pray except when they get into trouble.

If a man has no friends, it is often because he does not deserve any.

Beware of the man who is very inquisitive about your private affairs.

The best way to be happy is to strive continually to make others happy.

"Gray hairs are honorable." That depends. We have seen some that were pre-eminently dishonorable.

The people who are in most danger of going to hell are those who expect to start to heaven to-morrow.—Ram's Horn.

What a world this would be if all men would, in accordance with Cowper's suggestion, so live as to "leave no stain upon the wings of time."

Children get their first ideas of God and religion not from the Bible or the catechism, but from the lives of their parents.

Life is too short to nurse one's misery. Hurry across the lowlands, that you may spend more time on the mountain tops.—Phillips Brooks.

If I can only place a little brick in the pavement of the Lord's pathway, I will place it there that coming generations may walk thereon to the heavenly city.—Phillips Brooks.

Small kindnesses, small courtesies, small considerations, habitually practiced in our social intercourse, give a greater charm to the character than the display of great talents and accomplishments.

When a man is in the habit of disparaging others, he gives room for the suspicion that he is impressed with a sense of the importance of pulling his brethren down to his own level.—Baltimore Advocate.

Life is a building. It rises slowly, day by day, through the years. Every new lesson we learn lays a block on the edifice which is silently rising within us. Every experience, every touch of another life on ours, every influence that impresses us, every book we read, every conversation we have, every act of our commonest days, adds something to the invisible building.—J. R. Miller.

We are unable to give the authorship of the following, but it is as good a bit of the kind as we have seen:

Once upon a time a hog drank from a trough into which a barrel of beer had been emptied. He became very much intoxicated. When he came to himself he said to his friends, "I have always been a beast until this unlucky slip, and I promise you I'll never make a man of myself again."

Evangelizing the Nations.

Bishop Haygood uttered a great truth when he said that "he who does not understand that the gospel is necessary to the heathen, does not understand that he is necessary to himself." No Bible-reading Christian can deny that the gospel was designed for all men, nor can he help admitting that it is adapted to all men, and that it is needed by all men. To say that the truth in Christ ought not to be preached everywhere, or that it will not finally overspread the whole earth, is to contradict God and his Word.

Many people have no objection to the cause of missions so long as they are not asked to help it on; but when solicited for an offering for the benefit of the heathen, they either become suddenly poverty-stricken, or intensely concerned about the destitute at home. Others, again, profess to believe as did a certain Baptist minister at Northampton about a hundred years ago. A Conference was being held, during which William Carey, who afterwards immortalized himself as a missionary to India, proposed as a topic for discussion, "Our Duty to Send the Gospel to the Heathen." The brother arose, and said, "Young man, sit down; when the Lord chooses to convert the heathen, he will do so without your aid or mine." How utterly contradictory to the teachings of the New Testament is such reasoning! And yet what multitudes of church members act as if they expected God to evangelize the world without the employment of human agency. It is not a question of what God can do, but of how he works, of what means he has ordained for the spread of his truth, and of what he requires of his followers. The Lord could plant and harvest our crops and provide us houses ready built, if he saw fit; but he leaves all this and much more for man to do. It is just as reasonable to expect the Lord to furnish us bread ready baked, or to give us a finished education in a moment of time, as to expect him to spread the gospel without asking and requiring our co-operation.

The church is barely beginning to appreciate the duty and importance of missionary work. A congregation that is ablaze with missionary zeal is sure to be the one where God is present in the awakening and conversion of sinners and the quickening of believers. Many people who profess to be striving after holiness will never obtain what they seek until they trample stinginess under foot and make liberal offerings for the dissemination of the gospel. The eminent and consecrated Dr. Andrew Fuller relates that one period of his ministry was marked by an earnest, pointed, systematic effort to comfort his serious people; but the more he tried to comfort them the more they complained of doubt and darkness. After much vain effort to comfort the mourners in Zion, his attention was providentially directed to the claims of the perishing heathen in India. He says: "I felt that we had been living for ourselves and not caring for their souls. I spoke as I felt." The people met and prayed over the matter, and then did what they could for the heathen, when, lo! it was observed that despondency had given place to cheerfulness, and the lamentations had ceased.

The apathy of no small per cent. of professing Christians respecting missions is both sinful and alarming. No man who really loves the Lord, unless he be grossly ignorant of the condition and needs of the heathen, can be indifferent or be a non-contributor thereto. If the subject seems dry and unimportant, it is because people know little or nothing of what has been and is being achieved in foreign lands and in destitute places at home. It is because they have received a one-sided gospel which makes the salvation of self all important and the salvation of others a thing of no moment. We can never convince the world that we love the Lord with all our hearts until we show by our words and deeds that we love our neighbors as ourselves. In the parable of the Good Samaritan our Savior teaches that every man who needs our help is our neighbor, whether he be friend or foe, fellow-citizen or foreigner, an unbeliever next door or a Christless Hindoo across the seas.

The history of missionary conquests reads like a romance. No works of fiction can be more thrilling than the biographies of many of the consecrated men and women who have devoted themselves to missionary work in benighted lands. It is a shame that our people are so little informed with the history and literature of missions.

As regards missionary progress the pessimists are almost without exception at home. Bishop Galloway, having recently made a circuit of the globe, and personally investigated the condition of the most important mission stations of the world, testifies that "in all the East he did not hear a doleful tone or a discouraging word." "Those who had been longest in the field," he says, "seemed the most enthusiastic."

To talk about the failure of missions is not only to display dense ignorance, but it is setting up our feeble judgment against that of the all wise God, who declares that his kingdom shall overturn all other kingdoms, and the knowledge of his glory "shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea." If but a single convert had been gained in all the years of missionary effort, it would still be our duty to propagate the gospel.

From every land come notes of progress and shouts of victory. The prayer no longer is that barriers may be broken down, and the way opened, but that workers may be sent. The present attitude of China is but a sample of what is true all over the heathen world. Let us remember what the great Chinese Viceroy, Li Hung Chang, said not long since to Bishop Hendrix: "Tell the American people to send over more missionaries and teachers, and I hope to be in position to aid them." Neither let us forget that in the Celestial Empire every statutory restriction against the propagation of the Christian religion has been removed.

"A hundred years ago," says Rev. Henry VanDyke, of New York City, "China, Japan, Corea, and Siam were shut within walls of native bigotry and hatred; India was barred by the opposition of the East India Company; Africa hidden behind a barrier of unexplored darkness. Now the walls are down and the way is clear. Where is the throng of Christian warriors rushing into these new openings to claim the lands for Christ? See them passing through the gates; for every 250,000 souls in Africa, one missionary; for every 300,000 souls in Siam, one missionary; for every 700,000 souls in China, one missionary. Hear them begging at home—these lonely soldiers—for the money to sustain and equip them for the fight. Hear them calling from across the sea for men to help them hold the fort. And then see the church in Christian lands, rich and increased in goods, and in need of nothing, cutting down its contributions, and reducing the number of missionaries, and sitting down to consider the failure of foreign missions. Failure! Of course, it is a failure when we look at it this way. It has failed to rise to the level of its opportunities. It has failed to keep pace with the growth of the Christian Church in power and wealth. It has failed to hear the message of encouragement which comes back from every land."

It is stated on reliable authority that during 1895 there were seventy converts to each missionary in Asia, while in the United States the ratio of progress was about seven to each preacher. Does not this fact in itself speak volumes? During the last ten years the number of Christians in China has doubled itself every five years; and if the same rate of progress is maintained, the whole of China will be Christianized in less than a hundred years. In most cases the tourists and others who depreciate the work done by missionaries either take no pains to ascertain the facts in the case, or live in a way that the gospel condemns. Mr. Denby, United States Minister at Peking, is quoted as having said: "Believe nobody who sneers at the missionaries. They are heroes and heroines as truly as Grant or Sheridan, Nelson or Farragut."

It is well nigh impossible to overemphasize the duty of the church to send the gospel abroad. There is little danger that professing Christians will be too keenly alive to the needs of those who sit in heathen darkness, or that any will hurt themselves by excessive liberality. The people who give the most to home missions are not the ones to decry foreign missions. Well has it been said: "The gospel is a strange commodity; the more you export the more you have for home consumption."

Nothing can save the church from formalism, stagnation and decay except a burning zeal and mighty effort to evangelize the world. Let us leave doctrinal disputes and contentions about matters of trivial importance and all unite in the God-given work of leavening the human race with the leaven of gospel light and love. Let the subject be frequently emphasized from the pulpit. Let missionary literature be widely disseminated, that there may no longer be ignorance concerning "the miracles of modern missions." Let the children be taught the importance and blessedness of aiding the missionary cause. "Let every man give as the Lord hath prospered him." And, above all, let unceasing prayer be made in behalf of this God-ordained movement.

Equal Representation.

In the M. E. Church two thirds of the members of the General Conference are preachers and one-third laymen. This inequality of representation has for some time past been a live topic in our sister church. Interest in the subject is growing. A call has been issued for a national convention to be held at Indianapolis on the fifteenth of September, for the purpose of bringing about a change in the present regime. What a pity that the great M. E. Church did not have in its ministry a few years since, when lay representation was introduced, a few statesmen of the type of McTyeire who could look far enough into the future to see coming events casting their shadows before. When the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, introduced lay representation, it gave the laity equal representation with the clergy. The ministry of our sister church may as well make up, run up the white flag. Two and a half millions of laymen are not going to allow themselves to be outvoted by a few thousand preachers.

A Distinguished Visitor from the Old Land.

Rev. Simpson Johnson, of Manchester, England, has been chosen to represent the Wesley Guild of England at the International Epworth League Convention. Although the name of the Young People Society of the English Wesleyan Church is different from ours, its organization is very similar, and it was thought wise to have a Wesley Guild representative at the Toronto gathering.

Mr. Johnson is one of the general secretaries of the Guild, and is thoroughly familiar with its work. He was converted in early youth, began to preach at seventeen, and was appointed by the Conference to his first circuit before he was twenty-one years of age; so that he is himself an illustration of the value of bringing the young people to Christ as early as possible. Rev. T. H. Wright, of Ulverton, Que., who knows him well, writes as follows:

"The Rev. Simpson Johnson, one of the secretaries of the Wesley Guild in London, England, is a noted man in British Methodism. His rise has been very rapid, and his services in connection with Sunday-school anniversaries have been in great demand. He is a man of slender build, about six feet high, fair complexion, blue eyes, and kindly look. His style of speaking is very rapid, clear, eloquent, and convincing. He has nothing of dryness about him, and is not long in imparting inspiration to dull audiences. Though only forty-four years of age, he has filled some of the most important pulpits, being stationed at Bishop Auckland, Hull, Liverpool, London, and Manchester. He spent his early days in the town of Barnard Castle, an historic place in the annals of Methodism, and noted for its beautiful scenery. The Rev. Mr. Johnson has always had a great love for young people, and has been the means of taking by the hand many a friendless young man and putting him on the pathway to success. He is financial secretary of his district, and is secretary of the Examining Board for candidates for the ministry. He is a splendid speaker, and his fame is in every home in the north-west of England, and his annual visits are looked forward to with increasing interest from year to year. He is also a soul winner."

At Poplarville.

On Sunday, the sixteenth, we had the privilege of preaching the commencement sermon of Poplarville High School. Under the administration of the wide awake president, Prof. S. I. Thames, this institution has grown from a very small beginning, five years ago, to mammoth proportions. Its enrollment for the session just closed is very nearly three hundred. The boarding department has been full during most of the session, and there are many pupils boarding in the city. The number of boarders is about one hundred. It has an efficient faculty and is doing good work. The sermon was preached in the Baptist Church, its seating capacity being considerably greater than that of the chapel. The house was filled to overflowing, notwithstanding the fact that the aisles had been well filled with chairs. The college choir furnished good music for the occasion.

We were entertained with genuine, home like hospitality by Bro. and Sister David Acher. We made many pleasant acquaintances, among them the members of the faculty. We also administered the ordinance of baptism during our stay in Poplarville to Master Shelby Howell Batson, a juvenile of the household of Bro. and Sister Nathaniel Batson, prominent citizens of the place.

We were sorry to miss the popular pastor, Rev. W. H. Huntley, he having an engagement elsewhere. We were pleased to meet Rev. N. B. Young and wife, of the Mississippi Conference, who now resides at Poplarville. En route to Poplarville we were much delighted to meet a friend whom we had not seen in some years—Miss Hardinia Norvell, a member of the faculty of Laredo Seminary, the famous institution operated in Laredo by our Woman's Board of Missions. Miss Norvell has been engaged in mission work seven years and seems thoroughly absorbed in it. She will spend her vacation partly at her home in Livingston, Ala., and partly, perhaps, at Lake Chautauqua, N. Y. We were much interested in her account of the work which is being done by the Woman's Board in that part of the Lord's vineyard. The Laredo Seminary has an enrollment of about two hundred pupils, all Mexicans. The aim is to give them intellectual culture and at the same time turn their hearts to Christ.

At Laurel.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. F. M. Keen, we gave a lecture to what seemed to be a highly appreciative audience at Laurel, Miss., on Thursday night, the thirteenth. This was our first visit to this place. Laurel has had a rapid growth within the last few years. It now claims a population of twelve hundred. Our church here is a very handsome structure built according to one of Uncle David Morton's plans. It is quite an ornament to the town. Bro. Keen lives at Laurel, and preaches there and also at Ellisville. Our church at this point seems to be flourishing. Bro. Keen is in high favor with his flock and with the community in general. We were domiciled during our stay in the hospitable home of Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Jackson, to whom we are indebted for appreciated courtesies.

NOTES.

Dr. H. M. DuBose delivered an address last week at the Alabama State Epworth League Conference.

Bishop Keener will deliver the Children's Day address at Dryades Street Church next Sabbath.

Rev. S. S. Keener will preach the commencement sermon of Johnston Collegiate Institute on Sunday, May 23.

Prof. G. W. Burton will remain in charge of Braudon District High School, Montrose, Miss., another session.

We are in receipt of a note from J. F. Fowell; but as he gives neither postoffice nor State, it is impossible for us to reply.

On Monday, the seventeenth, the work of tearing down the damaged wall of the ADVOCATE office, preparatory to rebuilding, was commenced. On account of the work of this sort now going on the publication of the ADVOCATE will be slightly delayed both this week and next.

Rev. Mr. Littlepage, of the Northwest Texas Conference, made a brief sojourn in the city recently. He occupied the pulpit of Carondelet Street Church on Sunday night.

We beg leave to suggest that it is almost time the faculty of Vanderbilt University were showing some sign of official respect for the clergy of the church to which the institution is supposed to belong. If any Southern Methodist minister has been in a prominent place on its programmes for four years, we are not aware of the fact.—Nashville Advocate.

There is nothing, perhaps, in which Christians standing high in the esteem of the church more shamefully fail to judge themselves than in their relation to their fellow-Christians. They are cross, censorious, snappish, fault finding, suspicious, ready to take up any insinuation or lie against a brother, and are a thousand times more guilty of heinous sin than the people they judge for their worldliness.—Truth.

We are in receipt of an invitation to attend the marriage of Miss Margaret Galloway, the accomplished daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Charles B. Galloway, June 1, 1897, to Dr. Anthony Moultrie Muckenfuss, of the faculty of Millsaps College. The ceremony will take place in the First Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss. We extend heartiest congratulations in advance. We sincerely regret that we can not be present.

Why do we not always smile whenever we meet the eye of a fellow-being? That is the true recognition which ought to pass from soul to soul constantly. Little children in simple communities do this involuntarily, unconsciously. The honest-hearted German peasant does it. It is like magical sunlight all through that simple land, the perpetual greeting on the right hand and the left between strangers as they pass by each other, never without a smile.—Helen Hunt.

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard writes under date of May 15:

Our prospects on the Shreveport district are brightening. Some of the pastors report good meetings, and a growing interest in spiritual things is quite manifest throughout the district. A new parsonage at Mooringsport has taken the place of the old one swept away by a cyclone in February, last. Another comfortable one will soon be built at Benton. The work of improvement on our college property at Mansfield goes bravely on in spite of the hard times. We are planning for the building of two new churches in the near future.

Mr. Mooly never scolds his hearers. This is his personal testimony: "When I began preaching I thought the church was all wrong, and I scolded the people. I've found a better way. I feed them with the Word of God, and they can not help going to work. Scolding, beating, and mauling the sheep doesn't feed them; we've got to put the fodder down low, so that they can get at it and feed themselves. If you want to get plenty of good milk you feed your cows. If you want good, healthy Christians, feed them on the Word of God—give them plenty of Scripture."

Words are cheap, and for a time do very well as an easy substitute for fruitful deeds. But after a time the trick gets found out, and then it will not work. It is better in the long run to say just what one means and do just what one says. A temporary popularity comes to him who is voluble and plausible, gracious in his ways and ready with his promises, but the lack of performance will pretty soon come to be noticed and severe remarks will be made. After all, there is no short cut to permanent success. One has to pay for what he gets.—Zion's Herald.

The Rev. F. B. Meyer, the well-known writer and evangelist, recently explained how he is able to accomplish so much work. "It is only by keeping at it," he said, "by using what time I have, and because of a faculty of concentration. I write on the cars, on the trains, wherever I have a few moments of leisure, and I find that I can always take up the train of thought where it was broken off. My mind seems to work right on in the same line, and can finish out a sentence that I began yesterday, and carry out the thought without a break."—Literary Digest.

To Preachers.

To the preacher who sends the largest number of new cash subscribers between now and the first of July we will present either an Arlington B Sewing Machine or a gold-filled watch guaranteed to be a perfect time keeper and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, whichever one may be preferred. To the preacher sending the next largest number and also to the one sending the third largest number we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, latest edition, with modern additions.

Should the successful contestant prefer it, we will pay him cash instead of the premium.

Under this offer no commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Those who wish to compete for these premiums should notify us at once.

Gilt-Edge Investment.

For the purpose of enlarging their plant and business, the Lafferty Complete Flour Company offer a limited amount of 7 per cent. bonds, secured by a first mortgage. Each bond is for $30, and the owner, in addition to the interest of 7 per cent., is entitled to share in the business of the mill to an amount that makes the bond the most remunerative security on the market. They will be sold at par.

The denomination of the bond was fixed at a minimum sum of $30, so as to furnish an investment for many persons, and gain the widest interest in this accredited Food cure—the "Complete Flour." Address John J. Lafferty, President.

Napoleon's Value of Victory.

IT FINDS A STRIKING COUNTERPART IN RECENT WORLD TRIUMPHS.

Napoleon knew well the value of a victory. After Austerlitz the world seemed his. Fame invited, fortune favored, everything stimulated his aspiring ambition. With growing power he gathered the fruits of victory. And so has it ever been. Success succeeds. A notable illustration of this truth is furnished by the great victories won at the World's Fair in '93 and the California Midwinter Fair in '94 by Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder. Ever increasing sales and popularity have been the result. The people have promptly ratified the official verdicts that declared Dr. Price's, for leavening power, keeping qualities, purity and general excellence, the "foremost baking powder in all the world." Quite as quickly as the great Emperor do they know the value of a victory that means world-wide supremacy.

Conference of the Epworth Leagues of Louisiana.

The recent Conference of the Epworth Leagues of Louisiana, held at Shreveport, elected the following officers: President—H. H. White, of Alexandria; first vice-president—A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles; second vice president—Rev. F. S. Parker, of Lake Providence; third vice president—Rev. Tom Carter, of Jackson, La.; general secretary—W. M. Sloan, of Shreveport; treasurer—E. H. Prescott, of New Orleans. The following were named as members of the Executive Committee: H. H. White, W. M. Sloan, E. H. Prescott, Rev. R. H. Wynn, of New Orleans; Rev. P. H. Fontaine, of New Orleans; Jno. A. Barr, of Berwick, and Joe Daniels, of Algiers.

The following resolutions were passed.

1. That Rev. A. S. J. Neill, Rev. R. Harp and A. M. Mayo be appointed a committee to prepare and present a memorial, with specifications, to the Executive Committee of the Epworth League Board, requesting the preparation and publication of a suitable minute book and register for the use of the Epworth League, also rules of order for the use of the League.

2. That a sufficient amount of money be raised this year and added to the amount already in hand to support a missionary.

3. That such changes be made in the Constitution as may be required to conform it to the resolution passed at the last Annual Conference, and that the president of the Conference Board (Rev. J. M. Henry); Rev. R. H. Wynn and Rev. J. F. Foster be appointed a committee to make these changes.

4. That we are heartily in sympathy with the American Anti-Saloon League. We acknowledge the receipt of its constitution and address to the people, and would recommend the appointment of delegates by the State President to the next Anti-Saloon Convention, which is to be held in Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 11-13, 1898.

5. That we tender our thanks to the good people of Shreveport for the abundant hospitality shown us during the session of the Epworth League Conference, and also to the Hemphill Quartette for most excellent services rendered during the session.

H. L. McLain,
J. M. Henry,
H. W. May.

The sessions of the Conference were most delightful and profitable to those who attended. It is to be regretted that many were hindered from attending by the threatening high water. The program was practical and was well carried out. Some of the speakers were unable to get to the Conference, and were greatly missed. "How to Help the Needy," a symposium by four young ladies—Misses Marguerite Crain, Lizzie May Sligh, Lena Hughes, and Mary L. Rankin—deserves special mention. The young women presented such thoughts as evidently came to them as they were engaged in the work of which they spoke. The place of the next Conference was referred to the Executive Committee.

Some Notes of Encouragement.

In answer to my request of several weeks ago for the names and post-offices of the physicians and druggists in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, the Revs. W. T. Griffin, of Mayersville, and M. M. Black, of Gloster, have responded. Thanks to these brethren. Some others will answer later. God bless them!

Bro. W. G. Forsythe reports Pearlington's assessments for foreign and home missions paid in full, and other assessments paid in part and balance secured by good subscriptions. God bless him and his people!

Bro. W. T. Griffin had secured his assessments in subscriptions, but the overflow interfered. He hopes to come out all right—however, the Lord has only been collecting back rents.

A young preacher full of zeal and talent and consecration, having neither gold nor silver to give, presents his body a living sacrifice to God for China and is willing to go now. But the Board of Missions reports a decrease of $8,000 from the collections of the year before, and their hands are tied by the indifference and opposition of many preachers and the stinginess of many church members. "For the day of the Lord is near upon all the heathen: as thou hast done it shall be done unto thee: thy reward shall return upon thine own head." (Ob. 15).

MUL-EN-OL is the greatest of all antiseptic dressings. Is a sovereign remedy for healing flesh wounds on man or beast.

The Gospel by Dugout.

That has been about the only way a circuit preacher in the Delta has had to carry the gospel since the overflow came. This writer has had some experience, and can testify to the fact that pulling a dugout through thickety bayous and wilderness swamps is not altogether as pleasant as driving a good horse over a graded highway—especially when snakes grow friendly and insist on joining the preacher in his frail craft. I assure you I took none in my boat, however helplessly they wriggled around by its side.

Methodism was brought to Mississippi by Tobias Gibson in a canoe, and can still travel in that primitive way if necessity compels. So I am in the "succession," a succession more noble than some more widely heralded.

My Baptist colleague in this field was so unfortunate as to upset his dugout on an evangelizing tour. He and his deacon found 20 feet of water too deep for a "liquid grave," and made unceremonious haste to terra firma.

I trust that the overflow will cause many to realize that God still has control of the universe, and awake to a sense of their dependence on him. If it helps the spread of the gospel, the pecuniary loss can easily be endured.

Epworth League.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Orleans Union Epworth League was held at Morean Street Church last night at 8 o'clock. There was not much representation except from Moreau and Craps Street Churches.

After singing Hymn No. 851, and reading Psalm xxxiii by this scribe, and heartfelt prayer by Moreau's genial pastor, Bro. J. F. Scurlock, the meeting was opened for business. The reports read were very encouraging. There being no literary program, the session was brief, and was dismissed by benediction by Rev. Dr. Sawyer, own beloved presiding elder.

After adjournment, we were conducted to the Sunday-school room and delightfully refreshed by charming young ladies serving us iced lemonade and delicious cake. Surrounded by so much cordiality and partaking of such hospitality, time passed swiftly away, and it was with regret that we parted from such a happy throng and boarded the trolley, praying success and happiness to Moreau's charming people.

Beauty Is Wealth.

Beauty is as essential to a woman as any other quality; with beauty of form and feature comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty, losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "Massage Face Cup," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "Massage Face Cup," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

MY CHILD.

I can not make him dead!
His fair, sunshiny head
Is ever bonoding round my study chair;
Yet, when my eyes, now dim
With tears, I turn to him,
The vision vanishes—he is not there!

I walk my parlor floor,
And, through the open door,
I hear a foot-fall on the chamber stair;
I'm stepping toward the hall
To give the boy a call;
And then bethink me that—he is not there!

I tread the crowded street;
A satchelled lad I meet,
With the same beaming eyes and colored hair;
And, as he's running by,
Follow him with my eye,
Scarcely believing that—he is not there!

I know his face is hid
Under the coffin lid;
Closed are his eyes; cold is his forehead fair;
My hand that marble felt;
O'er it in prayer I knelt;
Yet, my heart whispers that—he is not there!

I can not make him dead!
When passing by the bed,
So long watched over with parental care,
My spirit and my eye
Seek him inquiringly,
Before the thought comes that—he is not there!

When at the cool, gray break
Of day, from sleep I wake,
With my first breathing of the morning air,
My soul goes up with joy
To Him who gave my boy;
Then comes the sad thought that—he is not there.

When at the day's calm close,
Before we seek repose,
I'm with his mother, offering up our prayer;
Whate'er I may be saying,
I am in spirit praying
For our boy's spirit, though—he is not there!

Not there! Where, then, is he?
The form I used to see
Was but the raiment that he used to wear.
The grave, that now doth press
Upon that cast-off dress,
Is but his wardrobe locked—he is not there!

He lives! In all the past
He lives; nor, to the last,
Of seeing him again, will I despair;
In dreams I see him now!
And, on his angel brow,
I see it written, "Thou shalt see me there!"

Yes, we all live to God!
Father, thy chastening rod,
So help us, thine afflicted ones, to bear,
That, in the spirit land,
Meeting at thy right hand,
'Twill be our heaven to find that—he is there.

Family Worship.

There is probably no mistress of a household who has not felt an uncertain hospitality about asking her guests to join in her family worship. Everyone has acquaintances she would not hesitate to ask to the table, and would hesitate to ask to the home altar. Perhaps the reluctance arises from a dissimilarity of creed, and a fear of offense in consequence. More likely it arises from that sin of restraining spiritual confidence, which is a peculiarly besetting one in this materialistic age; for the diversity of the creed is no bar. Prayer has nothing to do with creeds. Prayer is the universal religion, and men of every creed and men of no creed may meet together at the feet of one heavenly Father. The reluctance more likely arises from that weak shamefacedness that too often prevents sympathy between friends on spiritual subjects. They are afraid to be misunderstood, smiled at, criticised. This latter idea is one that even good and great men have not always met bravely, for when Dr. Fuller once had some guests of great quality and fashion, God-fearing as he was, he omitted his family worship on their account. This act, which he bitterly repented, he designated as "a bold bashfulness, which durst offend God, while it did fear man." But we should remember with the grand old preacher that our guests though they be ever so high or rich, are yet by all the laws of hospitality below us while they sojourn under our roof. Therefore, whoever comes within our door should also come within our household customs and discipline. If they sit at our table for meat, it is but kind and right that they should also bow at it in prayer.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Prof. Draughon on Cigarettes.

We have your communication of late date asking us to write an article giving some of our views on some subject of interest to young people, based upon our observation during several years in business college work. We could, perhaps, select for a subject one that would be more interesting to young men than the one selected; but we do not feel that we could select one that is more important than the one upon which we shall briefly remark—namely, cigarette smoking. We earnestly ask the readers of the Youth's Advocate, especially young men, to refrain from the habit of smoking cigarettes. From our experience with about six hundred boys each year, we find a large per cent. of them to be what we would term "cigarette fiends;" and we can not call to mind a single case where one of these students has completed the course with credit to himself and to the college. Those who smoke cigarettes to an excess seem to drag through the course in a half-asleep way; and ninety per cent. of such students, as a rule, drop out before they complete the course unless they check the habit. The progress of even a mild cigarette smoker is retarded to some extent, the extent varying according to the extent of their use of cigarettes.

In addition, the student who smokes cigarettes to such an extent as to render him unable to employ his time profitably suffers damage to his health; and the pernicious results of the cigarette habit should be kept before the minds of boys all the time. Another great disadvantage to the boy is that many business firms will, under no consideration, employ a young man who smokes cigarettes to any extent.

It seems that, with these plain facts placed before the student and others, they should, for their own good, as well as for the good of others, refrain from smoking cigarettes. From observation we know that it is as dangerous for a young man to undertake to smoke cigarettes in a mild form as it is to undertake to be a mild drinker. We do not, of course, allow cigarette smoking in our college halls; but moral suasion while in college is all we can do for them for the outside.

We trust that this article will be read by the readers of the Youth's Advocate in the spirit in which it is contributed.

President of Draughon's Practical Business Colleges, Nashville, Tenn., and Texarkana, Texas.

Rattlesnakes, Butterflies, and . . . ?

Washington Irving said, he supposed a certain hill was called "Rattlesnake Hill" because it abounded in—butterflies. The "rule of contrary" governs other names. Some bottles are, supposedly, labeled "Sarsaparilla" because they are full of . . . well, we don't know what they are full of, but we know it's not sarsaparilla; except, perhaps, enough for a flavor. There's only one make of sarsaparilla that can be relied on to be all it claims. It's Ayer's. It has no secret to keep. Its formula is open to all physicians. This formula was examined by the Medical Committee at the World's Fair with the result that while every other make of sarsaparilla was excluded from the Fair, Ayer's Sarsaparilla was admitted and honored by awards. It was admitted because it was the best sarsaparilla. It received the medal as the best. No other sarsaparilla has been so tested or so honored. Good motto for the family as well as the Fair: Admit the best, exclude the rest.

Speaking Good Words.

An illustration of the pleasant impression that may be made by a prudent, kindly-disposed woman, is furnished by the experience of a family who had moved into a village, and needed some one to assist in their dressmaking, but shrank from bringing into their family one who might relate to their neighbors all the details of their housekeeping, etc. In due course of time the seamstress came. She belonged to one of the oldest families in the place, and knew every man, woman and child in the village, and the antecedents of most of them. The larger part of the robes that lay under the sod in the new grave-yard had been fashioned by her fingers. Not many bridal dresses had been worn during her time, but she had had a hand in their making. This was how she talked:

"Has Mrs Bangs called on you yet? You'll find her a very nice woman. She doesn't look half as good as she is. She is the kindest person in sickness you ever saw, and she gives a great deal to the poor.

"Your neighbors over the way, I guess you'll like them." She told how little Tommy Stevens got run over, and how the village doctor took him to his own house, and treated him till his broken leg was all sound again. She told her employer that if she ever wanted nice laundry work done, Tommy's mother would do it for her and give satisfaction. She indicated in a delicate way the families where worn garments would be acceptable. When she got through her labors and went to the next place, the family could not recall one word that reflected unfavorably on her fellow-townsmen, she carried with her an atmosphere of grace mercy and peace.—J. W. Leeds,

The Decay of the Home.

It is a question whether the home is not going gradually out of existence—whether the old song will not be revised to suit the times: "Club, club, sweet, sweet club. Be it ever so clubby, there's no place like the club." The blessed people who live in the country and in country towns will continue to have homes. The young women there can not be shop-girls and stenographers, and quasi literary folk. They learn the art of home-making as their mothers did before them. But in the cities few young women know anything about it, excepting the servant girl, and their habit is to take their revenge on the nearest victims, because they, too, can not be saleswomen or clerks, nor make their living by writing poems on snow and spring—take their revenge by nicking or smashing the china, and pitching good food, or food which would be good if they did not spoil it, into the slop pail. There is no mistaking the serious fact that the home is declining in the cities. But with its decline everything that is socially wholesome declines. The only remedy we can think of is for the young men to go to the country for their wives. That would insure them good helpmeets, and it would start the fashion for city girls to learn housekeeping.—The Interior.

Looking over a paper from Madras, India, the following arrested attention: "A few years ago, four newsboys in Atlanta, Georgia, resolved to save a little every day. The next Winter they went barefoot, through the frost and sleet, on their morning rounds; but at the Winter's close they had a little in the savings bank. They patiently kept on working, denying self, increased their little hoard, until to-day they have $5,000 invested in real estate, and 'steady rills of income' flowing in. The eldest of these thrifty brothers is eighteen years of age, the youngest twelve. In the meantime they have supported an invalid mother, and have taken turns going to school. What these have done others can do." The experience of these boys will give them qualities seldom acquired by the sons of families in comfortable circumstances. If accompanied with good moral principles, derived from a sincere regard for the Bible, they will become probably very useful citizens. The fact that they have supported an invalid mother indicates that they are young fellows of good character, and sympathy for and care of such a mother will tend to make them philanthropic throughout their lives. These are the advantages of comparative poverty.—Intelligence.

There are two kinds of people—some that live on the past, and some that live on the future. You never saw a person living upon the past that did not have a great many wrinkles on his brow. Instead of casting all their care upon Him that careth for them, they are all the time thinking about their troubles. They go to a meeting, and when it is over they say, "Wasn't it splendid! I enjoyed it so much; I forgot all my cares as I all my troubles." They laid their bundle down under the seat, but the moment the benediction was over they picked it up again. Remember that everything before the believer is glory.—D. L. Moody.

Perhaps nothing is more profoundly enjoyed than a good sermon. A sermon full of fresh, weighty thought and informed with spiritual life and power invariably gives pleasure and profit. A good sermon is never wasted. It is a positive benediction to the waiting soul. A truly noble discourse always evokes an intelligent and hearty response. This ought to be a great stimulus to the preachers. It ought to spring them to their mightiest efforts. A thoughtful, prayerful discourse is as refreshing as the elixir of life. It is a message from God.—Texas Advocate.

HYGIENE.

The Deadly Turned-Down Lamp.

Who would suppose that a turned-down kerosene lamp would breed diphtheria? We are all accustomed to the disagreeable fumes arising from this cause; and when New York was suffering from an epidemic of diphtheria, the Board of Health decided that its presence was to be attributed to the fumes of a kerosene lamp turned down low more than to any other single cause. Whether or not this be so, it certainly is a mistaken kindness on the part of an indulgent mother to allow a lamp to remain in a child's bedroom with the flame turned down. A turned-down kerosene lamp is a magazine of deadly gas, to which the strongest lungs can not be safely exposed.—Everywhere.

The victims of insomnia should also avail themselves of the circumstance that repletion causes somnolence, and postpone the principal meal—call it dinner or supper—to the end of the day. From eighty to one hundred million of men in an age far surpassing the present era for health-worship and sanitary insight, followed that plan for more than a thousand years. From 800 B. C. to the third century of our chronological era the one meal system prevailed all over northern Europe and the Hellenized portions of Western Asia, and that one meal was eaten at the end of the working day, and after the baths and outdoor sports that assembled pleasure seekers in the cool of the evening. Like the dinners of Frederick the Great, these symposia were something more than mass-meeting lunches; the guests took their time, spiced their food with anecdotes and masticated at leisure, sometimes—too often in the luxurious era of the Roman empire—yielded to the temptation of dietetic excesses, but on rising from the banquet went straight to their dormitories, and could sleep as only men sleep who have dismissed the cares of the day.

Instinct-guided animals, almost without an exception, follow the same plan, or like the ruminants, divide their periods of rest and eke out the deficiencies of the short summer night by a protracted siesta.

The latter plan naturally recommends itself in a warm climate, but in cities is a privilege of the rich and of those who can afford to copy the pajirnans, or cool fountain-halls, of the Persian aristocrats. Cat-naps snatched in a sweltering counting room miss their purpose, and invalids had better concentrate their capacity for refreshing sleep upon a single attempt, at a time when the heat of the day and its noises have subsided together.—Health Culture.

A THOUGHT THAT KILLED A MAN!

He thought that he could trifle with disease. He was run down in health, felt tired and worn out, complained of dizziness, billousness, backaches and headaches. His liver and kidneys were out of order. He thought to get well by dosing himself with cheap remedies. And then came the ending. He fell a victim to Bright's disease! The money he ought to have invested in a safe, reliable remedy went for a tombstone.

CONNELL—Died at her parents' home in Mayhew, Miss., ELLA, daughter of Mr and Mrs. W. V. Connell. She was born Oct. 8, 1875, and was with us on earth till the evening of March 15, 1897.

Thus in the fullness of love and beauty she passed from our sight, and hearts never ached nor loved ones mourned for a lovelier life departed, and none have had greater causes for heavenly comfort in their sorrow.

In the fair dawn of girlhood she gave her heart to God. In health and strength she walked with the Master, and while the slight months of suffering gradually stole the bloom from the fair cheek, it could have been no other than the indwelling presence of the Comforter that gave her fortitude to bear the pain of the weary days and nights, and yet greet the friends and loved ones with smiles and tender tones.

Possessed of a strong personality, she yielded ever her will and wishes to those of her parents. They embodied to her all of love and wisdom. She was to them the sunshine of life. To the younger children she was a fair exemplar, and to her friends a joy and delight. To one she was the centre of all life's hopes. We had prayed that she might live. God answered our prayers, and gave her eternal life. Fair with promise, the future beckoned, and she would gladly have stayed; but the path through the dark valley had no fear for her. She had often told them her way was bright and clear, and it shone brighter and brighter even unto her "perfect day."

As her feet came to the mystic river of death she seemed to catch a glimpse of "the things which the Lord hath prepared for them that love him."

In spite of the home where she had been so tenderly reared we laid her to sleep, and precious memories will fill the place of the loved presence.

In the social circle her place will ever be vacant; in the church we shall listen in vain for the music of her voice; but, thanks be unto the name of our God, those whom she loved so tenderly can see by faith through tear-dimmed eyes that day when "His servants shall see His face." We sorrow with them, as I with them we share the Christian's hope.

If earth another grave must bear,
Yet heaven hath won a sweeter strain,
And something whispers our despair,
That from an Orient chamber there
Floats down, "We meet again."

E. O. B.

SMITH—"Death loves a shining mark." I have never known this adage to be more fully demonstrated than in the death of our young brother, CLAUDE SMITH. He was the son of Prof R. A. Smith, of Arcadia, La. He was born Nov. 7, 1871. He professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in Arcadia, February, 1886, under the pastorate of the writer. He died in Jackson, Tenn., of pneumonia, April 12, 1897, aged twenty-five years five months and five days.

Claude was a cultured, refined, noble Christian example of young manhood. Everyone respected and loved him. His father gave a noble tribute to his Christian life in this, "I never knew Claude to do an act of which any man might be ashamed." He was obedient to parental authority, loving and kind to everyone, true to his church vows, consistent and devoted as a Christian.

His mother and brother, who were with him in Jackson when he died, brought his remains home, and he was buried in the graveyard at Arcadia on the fourteenth instant. A very large congregation assembled in the Methodist Church at two o'clock P. M. to mingle their tears with, and manifest their sympathy for, the afflicted family. The Preachers' Meeting of the Arcadia district was in session. The funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Bro. W. F. Henderson, assisted by several of the preachers present. May this dispensation of Providence be sanctified to the good of the family and all the friends!

Easton, La. JNO. A. MILLER.

MORGAN—Sister LATHAM MORGAN was born in the State of Alabama on Oct. 19, 1830, and died in Red River parish, La., April 23, 1897. She was happily married to S. M. Morgan, Nov. 20, 1857, whom she survived about twenty years. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, soon after her marriage. From my first acquaintance I was impressed with the depth of her piety, which impression was strengthened and confirmed on further acquaintance and association with her.

Sister Morgan was in bad health for twelve months, during which time she suffered intensely, but a murmur never escaped her lips. She bore it all with that resignation which demonstrated an unwavering faith in Him on whom she could lean, with positive assurance would it all.

A few nights before her death she sang, "Savior, more than life to me." Like the apostle, she realized, "to depart and be with Christ was far better."

When the weary wheels of life at last stood still, her immortal spirit was carried by the angels to paradise, where she is now basking in the sweet sunshine of God's love, infinitely removed from suffering or sorrow, the former things having passed away.

She leaves five children and several grandchildren to mourn her death. May the God of grace and consolation comfort them amid their bereavement, and may they emulate her Christian virtues, that they may meet beyond the river, in that land of cloudless day, where the surges cease to roll!

Her pastor, WILSON MOORE.

PURCELL—Died in Jackson, Tenn., March 21, 1897, GEORGE HOWANN PURCELL, son of Geo. W. and Mary Purcell, of Black Hawk, Miss., in his twenty-second year.

He was ten years a member of the Methodist Church. He had been working in the United States mail service on the northern section of the I. C. railroad, making his home in Jackson, Tenn.

He expected soon to study law, and to fit himself for this profession he practiced self-denial, and was bending all his energies in order to highest success.

This writer never knew a truer, nobler boy than Howard Purcell. Four years his pastor, I obtained very thorough knowledge of him, and I can say with safety that in him were all the elements of a lofty character. He was too conscientious to indulge in the frivolous and dissipating pleasures of common social life. He had given himself to God, and his fine intellect and noble heart were devoted to preparation for a useful life. I dare say he never caused pain or sorrow by act or word in that Christian home where he was reared.

He passed away sweetly and peacefully. Earth is sadder by his going, but heaven is brighter. His body was buried in Black Hawk, Miss.

Farewell, my loved young friend. In the bright beyond, with your now sorrowing home circle, I hope to meet and greet you after awhile. T. CAMERON.

Crawford, Miss.

DERRICK—Dr. W. B. DERRICK was born in Georgia, Aug. 13, 1864, and died in Kosciusko, Miss., Aug. 31, 1896. These dates show that he died in early life. He was married to Miss Hattie Turner, Oct. 21, 1885. To this union were born four children, and it was a happy family. He joined the Methodist Church in early life. He was a faithful, loyal member until his death, and a steward that delighted to look after the interest of his pastor. I was his pastor for two years; spent many happy hours in his home, for it was a home for the preacher. This writer visited him during his last illness. He was perfectly resigned to the will of his Master; said all his preparations were made; nothing in his way.

Dr. Derrick was a good man, a kind father, and a true husband. The church sustained a great loss in his death. He leaves a heart-broken wife, an aged mother, a host of relatives and friends to mourn his death. Our loss is his eternal gain. God bless his loved ones, and help them to live so there will be a reunion in heaven! His pastor,

W. M. SULLIVAN.

BROADWATER—ROBERT ROY, aged fifteen months, and BAULAH MAY, aged two years and six months, children of William and Nettie Broadwater, of Bethesda Church, Copiah county, Miss.

These children were taken sick on Wednesday, March 10, 1897, and little Robert died Friday morning, and five o'clock Sunday morning Beulah's spirit joined his around the throne of God.

These were bright, sweet children, and to lose two almost at the same time was indeed hard for those loving parents. But they have this consolation: that they are in their Savior's arms, and infinitely happier than when here with them.

BARRINGTON—On last Sunday morning, April 11, the Sunday-school of the M. E. Church, South, Canton, Miss., appointed the undersigned committee to draft resolutions of sorrow at the death of Miss MINNIE BARRINGTON, and their heartfelt sympathy with her afflicted family in this, their hour of sorrow and bereavement. The committee present the following:

Whereas, We have heard with profound sorrow of the death of our friend, co-laborer and teacher, Miss Minnie Barrington, who had been so long associated with us in our labors of love; And, whereas, We are desirous of doing honor to the memory of one whose kindness of heart, cheerful disposition and Christian character, whose rich store of biblical knowledge, whose devotion to her class, whose willingness to tell the glad story of Jesus and his love, whose loyalty to her church and faithfulness to God had endeared her to us all; And, whereas, Our hearts are oppressed with the reflection that we are no more to have her with us; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Miss Minnie, April 9, 1897, our Sunday-school has lost one of the most devoted and consecrated teachers, the church a faithful and zealous member, and society a refined, cultivated Christian woman.

Resolved, That we condole with the bereaved relatives in the loss which they have been called on by Divine Providence to endure, and trust that his all-sufficient grace may abound unto them until they meet before the great white throne.

MISS KATE HILL,
MRS. BLANCHE HOWELL,
MRS. KATE FORD,
Committee.

The report of the committee was unanimously adopted, and ordered published in the Canton papers and in the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans, and a copy sent to the family of the deceased. T. L. MELLEN,

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HEISKELL'S Medicinal Soap does double work; while cleansing the skin it also heals and whitens it. It's the soap your skin needs.

If you have eruptions on the face, hands or body due to impure blood, use HEISKELL'S Pills. They do not gripe or nauseate. At druggists or by mail, 25 cents.

"I like the small package of Pearline," a lady says; "it lasts two weeks and does two washings." Then she admits that she has been using soap with her Pearline. Now this is all unnecessary. If you don't put in enough Pearline to do the work easily and alone, you bring Pearline down to the level of soap, which means hard work and rubbing. If you use enough Pearline, the soap is a needless expense, to say the least. Use Pearline alone, just as directed, and you'll have the most thoroughly economical washing.

2½ cts. a Wash

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 505 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

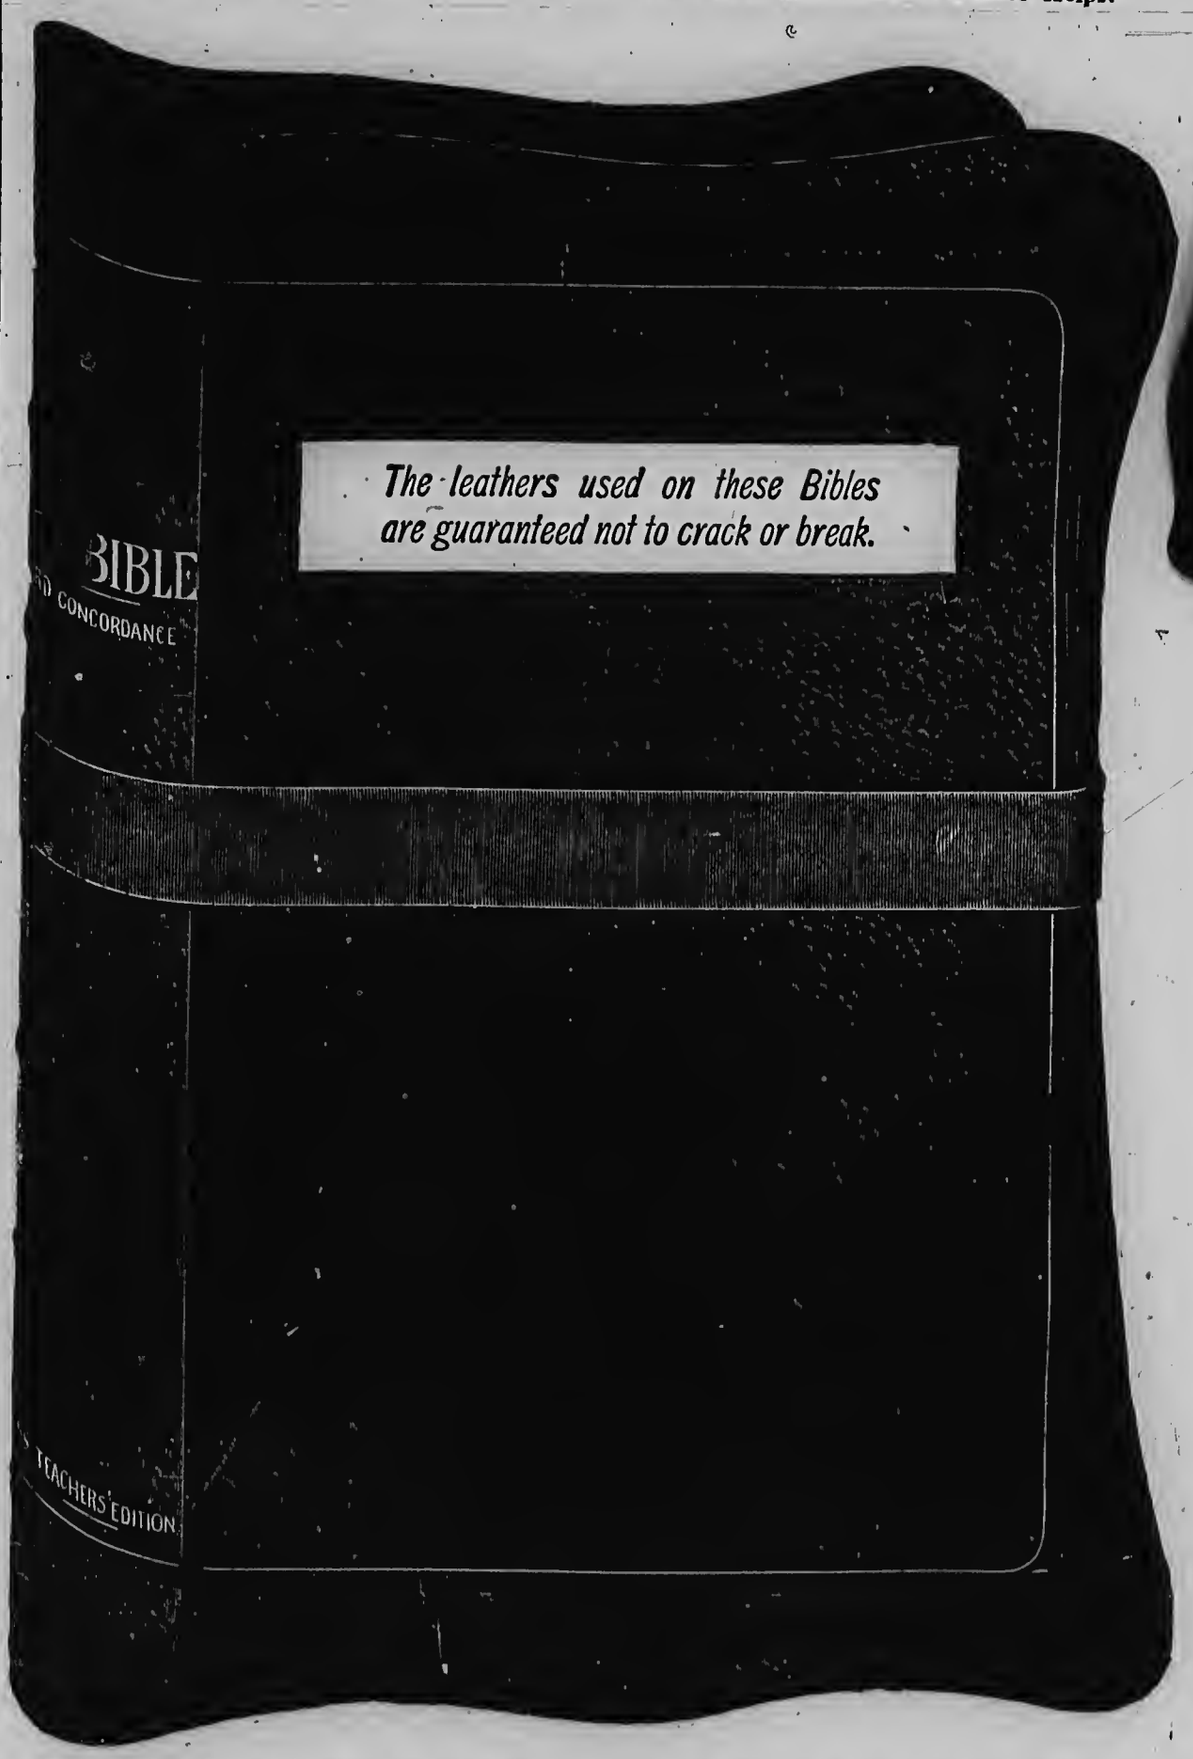
Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"



The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscribers for $2.35. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.00.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to May, '98. (A little later it will be June, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Eight thousand Illinois Sunday schools, with a membership of nearly a million, were represented in a recent State Convention.

An Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe passenger train went through a trestle south of Ardmore, on May 16, and tumbled down a twenty-foot embankment. Fifteen people were injured.

The Michigan Legislature has enacted a law to allow all people who own assessed property to vote at school elections, thus admitting some of the women to a limited franchise.

Three-fourths of the $50,000 bequeathed to the Hiatt Library fund in Nashua, N. H., has been temporarily made unavailable by the successive closing of three banks in that city.

The attendance at the Nashville Exposition is gradually increasing. The governor of Tennessee has issued an invitation to the governors of the States to attend on Governor's Day, June 1.

An enthusiastic audience of men and women, many of them well known in Washington, packed the Columbia Theatre to its doors last week at a monster mass meeting held in behalf of the cause of the Cuban insurgents.

A monument in memory of Washington was unveiled in Philadelphia on May 15. The movement, started by a handful of revolutionary heroes, was continued by their sons and grandsons, until after eighty-five years the purpose has been consummated.

It is now apparent that the people in the Senate of the United States who unsuccessfully endeavored to precipitate a war with Spain during President Cleveland's administration are now preparing to make another such attempt, with the hope of better success under the McKinley regime.

The sixtieth anniversary of the accession of Queen Victoria to the throne, on June 22, will be celebrated in this city by a salute, an elaborate church service, a cricket match, a celebration at West End, with accompanying fireworks, and a banquet. It has been suggested that it would be appropriate that the address of the day be delivered by Right Rev. Bishop Sessums.

The energetic efforts of the commissioners of the Pontchartrain Levee District, the planters of the neighboring parishes, and the officials and people of Baton Rouge to close the breaks in the Burton levee, and hold that rotten embankment long enough to erect a mud box levee behind it that will prevent the overflow of the country below, are now likely to be crowned with success.

A national convention of the maimed and halt, legless, armless and otherwise mutilated unfortunates from every State in the Union is to be one of the features of St. Louis' Annual Exposition next Fall. Leading surgeons and manufacturers of artificial limbs are the promoters. It is estimated that fully 75,000 cripples will be in attendance during the week the convention is to last, and the railroads will transport them free.

FOREIGN.

At the International Arts Exposition at Dresden the American painters, by universal consent, lead all other countries.

It is said that during the past week a definite understanding was perfected by which the cabinets of Germany, France and Russia will soon reach the solution of the Egypt and Transvaal questions.

Apparently reliable news of the most important insurgent success in months has just reached Havana. It appears that Gen. Calixto Garcia and Gen. Rabi fell on a Spanish force, which was carrying food and supplies from Manzanillo to Bayamo early last week, capturing the convoy, routing Gen. Lono's columns and pursuing him so vigorously that he fled to the coast with the remnant of his brigade.

The Porte has replied officially to the note of the powers and declines to agree to an armistice until the following conditions are accepted: The annexation of Thessaly, an indemnity of £10,000,000 (Turkish), and the abolition of the capitulations. The Porte proposes that plenipotentiaries of the powers should meet at Pharsalia to discuss the terms of peace, and declares that if the conditions are declined the Turkish army will continue to advance.

The course of events in Southern Europe has moved rapidly during the past week, and it must be admitted that the prospects for a settlement of the war between Turkey and Greece in a way to save Grecian territory from annexation to Turkey as the penalty of defeat do not seem bright. The week has witnessed the utter break-down of the Grecian defence in Thessaly, and the retreat of the Grecian forces from point to point to prevent the Turks from surrounding them and compelling their surrender.

Notice.

Will all the members and pastors and visitors of the Winona district who expect to attend the District Conference at Acona, May 27-30, please send me their names immediately and the way they will come. All who come by railroad will be met at Lexington. There will be ample provision made for all who will come. W. C. LESTER, P. C.

Notice.

To the Preachers and Delegates Attending the District Conference at Lumberton, June 3-7:

The Louisville and Nashville and New Orleans and Northeastern railroads will sell tickets on the certificate plan at one and one-third fare. Pay full fare going and secure certificate from agent at starting point.

Mr. Bullis, of the Gulf and Ship Island, writes me: "We have no certificate plan of selling tickets yet, but if the gentlemen will make themselves known to our agents, as preachers and delegates to the Conference at Lumberton, I will instruct our agents to sell them tickets at one fare for the round trip."

A resolution was passed by the last District Conference that the non-attendance of unordained local preachers would be prejudicial to the renewal of their licenses.

To cure Catarrh quickly, surely and permanently. The cold air of Winter retards the cure—the warm air of Summer favors it. Rev. J. W. Blosser, M. D., who has devoted twenty-one years to the study of this disease, has discovered a pleasant and sure way of curing it, by a remedy which is smoked in a pipe. It contains no tobacco, gives speedy relief, and makes a lasting cure. For free trial sample by mail, address Dr. J. W. Blosser & Son, 11, 12 and 13 Grant Building, Atlanta, Ga.

J. H. MITCHELL, P. E.

It is said that a young preacher once desiring to get the opinion of Prof. Jewett as to a sermon he had preached, asked him what he thought of it. The professor looked at him a moment, and then slowly added: "Edward, if you would pluck a few of the feathers from the wings of your imagination, and stick them in the tail of your judgment, you would make better sermons." That is a criticism not likely to be easily forgotten.—Exchange.

CROSSING THE BAR.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark;

For though from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar.

The Evidential Value of Experience.

It has been said, "There is no evidential value in experience." I feel quite sure this position would not be taken by any intelligent man, except in an emergency, to try to destroy the force of the testimony of experience.

Against this view I put a quotation from the May number of our Sunday school Magazine, which, I think, effectually explodes the fallacy: "A philosopher has said, 'The experience of one rational being is of interest to all who become cognizant of it.' This is because we are constituted so as to be similarly affected by like causes, and there is nothing that has so much weight with us as the testimony of a competent witness. Justice, in her walk through the earth, leans upon this staff, and reliable testimony in any court is worth all the eloquent pleading or logical reasoning that the greatest orator in the world could produce. All jurists tell us that one word of authentic evidence outweighs ten thousand words of professional pleading. The testimony can go to the jury without the argument, but it would be folly to send the argument without the testimony. This same principle holds good in spiritual life, and experience is one of the chief elements of evangelical power. The strength of Christianity lies in the testimony of its living witnesses, who can say, 'I know that my Redeemer liveth.'"

But it may be said: "A man's experience in matters of religion must quadrate with the Scriptures in order to be of value in the settlement of any doctrinal question." True; but who is to decide when experience quadrates with the Scriptures? "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." The gospel is addressed not so much to the head as to the heart, and it can best be interpreted in the light of experience. Without this light to guide them, men are "ever learning and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth." The pride of the human intellect is a formidable hindrance to a right understanding of the spiritual significance of the Word of God. "At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." Jesus said to his disciples when about to leave them: "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot hear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth." And one of these disciples afterwards wrote to the church: "But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things. . . . The anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, . . . the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth."

Now, let us see how this may apply in the settlement of doctrinal questions. There are those who deny the doctrine of regeneration as we understand it and teach it. They claim that men are brought into a state of grace, not by a sudden conversion, but by a gradual process. And they may quote in support of this view a passage which has done service at another point, viz: "First the blade, then the ear; after that the full corn in the ear." The natural bearing of this passage is against the doctrine of an epochal experience at any stage of Christian life. It seems to teach that Christian life begins, develops and culminates by a process as silent and gradual as the process of life in the natural world. Is our experience of no value against this interpretation and application of our Lord's words?

There are those who deny the doctrine of the witness of the Spirit as we understand it and teach it. They endeavor to maintain that we can have only the indirect testimony of the Spirit. They reject the idea that by any "sudden illumination" or "inward impression on the soul" the Spirit may witness directly to our spirits that we are born of God. Is the experience of those who enjoy this direct witness of the Spirit of no evidential value because, forsooth, it does not quadrate with the interpretation of Scripture by those who professedly have no such experience?

I have a friend, a lawyer by profession, a man of intelligence and piety, who does not believe in a divine call to preach the gospel as we do. To my mind his view on this subject simply proves that he has not been called to preach; or, if he has, by resisting a conviction of duty he has forgotten that conviction; like a man may "forget that he was purged from his old sins." It does not prove that others have not been "moved by the Holy Ghost to preach the gospel," so as to be constrained to say with Paul, "Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel."

I will here introduce a quotation from an eminent Presbyterian minister, whose usefulness, perhaps, excels that of any other man of God on this continent; and his great power for good is owing to his "closer walk with God": "The Apostle Paul tells us that there is a secret, a great secret, which was hidden from ages and from generations (Col. i, 26), which the world was seeking after in vain, which wise men came from the East hoping they might find, which sages died vainly seeking for themselves, and God says it 'is now made manifest to his saints,' and that simple secret is just this, 'Christ in you the hope of glory.' And I tell it to you—nay, I can give you, if you will take it from him, not from me—I can give you a secret which has been to me, oh, so wonderful! Years ago I came to him burdened with guilt and fear. I tried that simple secret, and it took away all my fear and sin. Years passed on, and I found sin overcoming me, and my temptations too strong for me. I came to him the second time, and he whispered to me, 'Christ in you,' and I had victory, rest, and blessing."

I will only add, in the language of the Psalmist, "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will shew them his covenant."

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

Who is my neighbor?

The Charity and Help Department of the League proposes to answer this question.

"Charity suffereth long and is kind"...."is not puffed up"...."charity never faileth."

When you find a brother in distress, don't ask what he believes, but ascertain what he suffers, and then do your best to render the necessary assistance.

We are glad that the Epworth Leagues of Mississippi have pledged themselves to raise one thousand dollars during the next twelve months for the Methodist Orphans' Home, located at Water Valley.

Those who were present at the State Conference remember the impressive scene at the laying of the corner-stone, etc. All remember that the photographer was present and took a picture of the Home, together with the vast concourse of people congregated there.

Send your name and one dollar to J. E. France, Water Valley, Miss., and get the picture above described. He will donate twenty-five cents out of every dollar received to the Orphans' Home. The picture is 14x17 inches, and is a fine piece of work.

Of course, every League in the State will want this picture, representing as it does the occasion of the third State Conference and laying of corner-stone of the Orphans' Home.

As the Leagues have pledged themselves to help the Home, how fitting that this picture should hang in every Epworth League Hall, reminding them continually of their obligation and duty toward the orphan!

The artist, though a strict Baptist, is nevertheless interested in our Methodist Orphanage, and hence offers to donate twenty-five cents for every picture sold at a dollar. In buying this picture you are helping the Home.

The picnic season is here, and many Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues are planning for these Summer outings. Of course, no Epworth Leaguer would indulge in any questionable amusement either at a picnic or upon any other occasion.

The mission of the church is to go out and send out to save the world.

Let us be very careful to see to it that the (unsanctified) world does not get into the church.

The Epworth League proposes to take hold of young Christians and train them, that they may become strong men and women in the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Devotional Department would teach them their duty toward God, while the other two departments, which teach sociological questions, would instruct as to their duty toward humanity and toward themselves.

What wonderful possibilities present themselves through the Epworth League movement of our church! Oh, that all alike might see them, and then co-operate in pushing forward this mighty movement which promises so much to the church!

What about the reading course? Have all the Leaguers studied it? If not, why not? Send at once for the four books, only $2.30. The reading of these books will stimulate you; they will do you good.

Epworth Leagues are being organized in many of our church schools and colleges. This is right—the League does well in the college. We notice in some of the commencement notices that preachers have been selected to preach the "Epworth League sermon."

The League stands for Christian education, and is closely allied to the Christian college. We appreciate the honor conferred upon the writer of "Epworth League Echoes" by the principals and faculty of the Port Gibson Female College in selecting him to preach their commencement sermon Sunday morning, June 6.

Rev. Simpson Johnson, of Manchester, England, one of the general secretaries of the Wesley Guild, has been selected to represent this young people's society of the Wesleyan Church at the coming International Conference at Toronto.

The types last week made us say, "He that 'warneth' souls is wise." Of course, it should have been, "He that 'winneth' souls is wise." The error was with the printer, and not with the writer.

"This world is but the rugged road
Which leads us to the bright abode
Of peace above;
So let us choose the narrow way
Which leads no traveler's foot astray
From realms of love."

Rev. R. S. Woodward.

Rev. Robert Sutherland Woodward was born in Marengo county, Ala., Dec. 19, 1833, and died in Meridian, Miss., April 10, 1897.

These dates mark the limits of a great human life full of activity, full of thrilling experiences, full of earnest devotion to God, and full of blessing to humanity. He was the son of Rev. Robt. S. and Mrs. Sarah Creighton Woodward; was the youngest of eight children, and was born after the death of his father. Though reared without an father's guiding hand and restraining counsel, he grew to a stalwart Christian manhood, evidencing that his mother was a woman of strong religious character, good judgment, and inflexible devotion to duty. Three of her four sons became Methodist preachers.

Bro. Woodward was admitted on trial into the Alabama Conference at Talladega, December, 1854. His first appointment was as junior preacher under Rev. B. F. Blow, on the Cedar Bluff circuit, which included what is now the town of Gadsden. In 1856 he traveled as preacher in charge the Tallapoosa circuit, and in 1857 the White Plains circuit. In 1858 he was stationed at Hamburg, and 1859 at Marianna, Fla. He traveled the Socapatoy circuit in 1860. This was his last circuit. He served stations as follows: 1861, Montevallo; 1862 and '3, Cahaba; 1864 and '5, Dayton; 1866, '7 and '8, Montevalle; 1869, '70, '71 and '72, Prattville; 1873, Milton, Fla.; 1874 and '5, Summerfield. His family tell us that one of these years—I can not learn which—was shared by Pensacola Navy Yard, the Bishop evidently appointing him there to fill out an unexpired year.

In December, 1875, he was transferred to the Mississippi Conference, and stationed at Brandon. During the years 1877, '8, '9 and '80 he served Natchez station. In 1881 he served Canton, and in 1882 was presiding elder of the Vicksburg district. He was stationed at Vicksburg during 1883, '4, '5 and '6, and at Yazoo City during 1887, '8, '9 and '90. He was presiding elder of the Brookhaven district during 1891, '2 and '3, and was stationed at Central Church, Meridian, during 1894, '5 and '6. At our last Conference he was superannuated, and sustained this relation just four months and four days. His sixty-three years were divided in three distinct periods of twenty-one years each. On his twenty-first birthday he received his first appointment. He spent twenty-one years as a traveling preacher in the Alabama Conference, and twenty-one years in the Mississippi Conference. He served four circuits, two districts and fifteen stations. He served pastorates to the full limit at Montevallo and Prattville, Ala., and at Natchez, Vicksburg and Yazoo City, Miss.—five in all. He always considered himself physically incapacitated for district work, and his brethren sharing with him this view, he spent but four out of his forty-two working years as presiding elder.

He was married Aug. 8, 1861, to Miss Sallie A. Mardis, who, with two sons and three daughters, survive him.

He was ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce, Dec. 14, 1856, and elder by Bishop Paine, Nov. 27, 1858.

Bro. Woodward was never robust in health, yet he lived and labored long and well. While presiding elder of the Brookhaven district his health failed completely. Sister Woodward thus tells of it: "The tired look on his face, as he came in from long, wearisome trips on the district, is engraven on my heart and memory as with the point of a diamond." The burning of the district parsonage, by which he lost his library, the accumulations of a lifetime, added to the burdens of this period. Thus enfeebled, he was appointed to Central Church, Meridian. Although he felt that his strength was inadequate to the demands of this heavy pastorate, yet he unmurmuringly obeyed, ready, if need be, to lay down his life for the Master's cause. Two years of toil in this peculiarly toilsome field left him more enfeebled yet, and early in his third year here he was prostrated with a prolonged attack of typhoid fever. Partially recovering, he tried to work on, but his work was done. He was unable to attend Conference last December, and for the first time in his life he was declared ineffective, and was placed upon the supernnuated list—our honor roll. He had desired to die on the field of service, but he accepted gracefully the inevitable setting aside. He was able to attend church a few times during the Winter, and in the early Spring helped me in a blessed revival, making short and earnest talks and prayers that were specially spiritual. While thus laid aside and relieved of the toil and responsibility he had borne so bravely and so long, his communings with God were specially sweet and glorious. He ripened for the skies. His conversation had about it the melody of heaven, and his face wore the glow of Hermon like experiences.

His last and fatal stroke came on Friday night, April 9, twenty or more hours before his translation. Seated in his rocking-chair—he could not lie down—he said to his wife, "Darling, I will have to go and leave you." Then, as if catching a view through the gates of heaven ajar, he shouted, "Glory! glory!" and his face caught a richer radiance. Late on Saturday, having gotten a little relief from the constant struggle for breath, Bros. Galloway and Harmon, who were present, prayed with him, and he said, "I am trusting in the precious blood of Christ." In the midst of one of his paroxysms he exclaimed, "I am going home." A very few hours later he went home.

A large company attended his funeral at Central Church on Monday. Ten preachers, including the Episcopal rector and the Jewish rabbi, the pastors of the Baptist, Presbyterian and Cumberland Presbyterian Churches, and five of his own brethren, took part in the services. He was beloved by all.

In the very best sense Bro. Woodward was a manly man. A brother preacher, who knew him well, says: "He was true to his friends, to his church, and to his God. A finer specimen of Christian character and moral manhood I have never known, and with his manliness a womanly tenderness that won all hearts to him." It has been the fortune of this writer to serve two pastorates which he had served. I never knew a man more generally popular, more largely beloved and respected. He was one of the best pastors I have ever known. Tenderly sympathetic, he knew how to get to the hearts of his people, and help them in trouble, and win them back if wandering; and then he was painstaking and laborious. He was a good preacher. Clear, forcible, peculiarly persuasive in his manner, with a strong, flexible voice, singularly free from mannerisms; simple, but elegant, in diction, he was a successful preacher of Christ's gospel.

There stands in Yazoo City, as a monument to his consecrated skill and energy, one of the handsomest and best-arranged churches in the State; and in thousands of lives in Alabama and Mississippi there remain impressions that make for uplifting of destiny, made by his holy and beautiful ministry. Thank God that we have ever had Robt S. Woodward among us!

Will the Epworth League, through Its Various Departments, Assist Our Young People in Building Character After the Divine Plan?

BY C. B. AMES.

This is a day when great strength of character is demanded. It is a day of great enterprises in the business, social, political and religious world. Immense fortunes are made in a few years, and swept away as soon. Immense display is a feature of social life. It sometimes almost equals in its shallow splendor the society of heathen Rome during the reign of Nero, as depicted by the author of "Quo Vadis." The church has taken seriously in hand the magnificent enterprise of sending the gospel to every neighborhood. It is a day of great undertakings. The lightning that flashes out of the east and shineth unto the west has been harnessed and forced to obey the touch of man's hand. Man sits as the supreme chief of the material world. Wonderful authority has been committed unto him. His increased power and authority bring increased responsibilities, which, in turn, redouble the rewards of perfidy and dishonor. The enlightened civilization and wonderful achievements of the century demand the very highest development of man's character in order that he may direct the mad rush of progress and keep himself pure and unspotted from the world.

If Christianity would control the impetuous march of civilization, clothed with the superb splendor of its regal power, it is self-evident that it must bring to the task of mastery—knowledge—a mind like God's. That force in society which knows the most, which brings to the burden of progress the widest information, the strongest scholarship, the most concentrated solidity, the most intelligent activity, is going to direct and pervade civilization. Under the surroundings of the age it is not sufficient for the church to be pious. Piety, however, is a magnificent virtue. It is the foundation-and corner-stone, the transcendent virtue of every great character; but it is not sufficient. To it must be added knowledge. Would piety without knowledge ever have discovered the law of gravitation? Would piety without knowledge ever have discovered the utility of steam, or the value of electricity, or the telescope, or the steam engine? Would piety without knowledge ever have built the magnificent structure of Christian civilization? Let the League more and more emphasize the importance of knowledge not as an incident to character, but as a part of character—an essential ingredient of Christianity. Let this idea permeate every League in every hamlet of this commonwealth; let the Literary Department of the League be a University Extension movement in every church where it exists; let every boy and girl in the State of Mississippi learn the overwhelming importance of intelligent piety and pious intelligence; that ignorance is a sin, that knowledge is a virtue. But let the chief purpose of the League be to produce action, not simply to teach ideas, for, as Thomas Carlyle has well said, "The end of man is an action, and not a thought, though it were the noblest." Correct action, however, must be the result of correct thinking, because an act is simply obedience to a thought, and if the thought be wrong, "it must follow as the night the day" that the act can not be right. Let the League proclaim the truth everywhere, that character after the divine plan consists in having a body like God's, a mind like God's, a soul like God's—in action. Then the church need have no fear; then the state need have no fear. Then, indeed, will the young people of the church grow up into a generation of kings and priests unto God.

IN PATIENT TRUST

BY REV. J. T. SCOTT, D. D.

I wonder when the time will be
That I shall hear one say to me
This night thy soul I ask of thee;
I wonder when

I wonder what awaits my sight
When upward I shall take my flight,
Thro' endless day or starless night
I wonder what!

I wonder too how I shall know
That I am I, if it be so
That aught remains of things below
I wonder, too!

Thus blindly on I grope in fear
My journey thro', from year to year
And dread to think the last is near.
Thus blindly on!

And so I wait in path of trust
That when it comes as come it must
A song perhaps, perhaps the dust;
And so I wait!

A Leaf from the Diary of Rev. Thomas Nixon.

BY REV. J. M. WEEMS.

Our Conference is to meet next year at Bro. John Ford's, on Pearl river. A majority of the preachers are returned to the same works they were on last year, and they all seem very well pleased. After Conference, I went to the home of my uncle on Pearl river, where I remained until Nov. 15, when I went to Bro. John Ford's, and met the Bishop and several of the brethren.

Sunday, Nov. 16, 1817.—To-day the Bishop preached from Prov. i, 23, to the close of the chapter, and after the sermon ordained two deacons.

Tuesday, 18.—We have all had a most delightful time in the home of Bro. Ford; but this morning the Bishop and Bros. Norton and Griffin start for St. Stevens, and I return to my uncle's. We may all never meet again in this life: but may our God bring us together in the eternal home!

Nov. 20.—My time is now up, and I start this morning for my circuit in Louisiana.

Sunday, 23.—I heard Bro. Smylie, a Presbyterian preacher, preach to-day from Jer. xvii, 9. In the evening I went on to Bro. Winans, and spent the night.

Monday, 24.—I went to day to Bro. Richardson's and got seventeen volumes of Clark's Commentaries, which I purchased from Bro. Winans, and, packing them in my saddle-bags, went on to Bro. McGeehee's, where I spent the night.

Tuesday, 25.—Bro. McGeehee and I went to Woodville to-day, and saw a young man by the name of Kemp hung for the murder of two men in a boat at Ft. Adams. A Baptist preacher by the name of Hardy held a very appropriate service, and prayed for the young man; but I do not wish to witness such a scene again. I went from Woodville to Ft. Adams, where I expected to meet some parties, who would go with me through the swamp; but as they disappointed me, I went to Pinkneyville, where Bro. Lane and I preached on Sunday.

Dec. 1.—I spent the night at Judge Johnson's, where I met John Erwin from Tennessee, who gave me the charge of a drove of horses and two negro boys, to take across the Mississippi river.

Dec. 3.—I crossed the river at Capt. Erwin's plantation, below Baton Rouge, where I left the horses and negroes. On the morning of the fifth I arrived at Berwick's Bay, thankful to God that I was again on my circuit. My circuit now extends to Alexandria, and I travel five hundred and eighty miles every five weeks to get round. Bro. Hewitt is on the district, and in charge of the Washataw circuit, and we are the only Methodist preachers of any kind west of the Mississippi river. If we only had some local preachers, they could be of great service, but there is not one.

Dec. 31, 1817.—This is a perfect day, and the light of the sun is going out in a clear sky. It is sweet to reflect on the labors of a year faithfully spent in the service of God. But how painful to look over time wasted, when so much depends to self and to others on filling each day with consecrated work for the Lord. I feel to-day that I have not used the time of the past year as a good steward over my Master's goods, and that God may not give me another year. Lord Jesus, thou great Head of the church, deal with me in this matter as seemeth good in thine eyes! But if it may be thy will to grant me another year of life and toil in thy church, grant me grace also that I may be useful, for without thee I can do nothing but sin.

Jan. 1, 1818.—The first day of the new year is [illegible] and beautiful as was the last day of the old year.

"Hail, blushing morn; no clouds appear
To shade the earth, or stain the skies.
All nature hails the bless'd new year,
And smiles to see the sun arise.
How many souls last year have fled
To realms of bliss, or endless woe!
Their names are numbered with the dead—
This year, perhaps, I, too, may go.
Prepare me, Lord, for death or life;
With zeal and courage arm my breast,
And when I'm done with pain and strife,
Receive my soul to endless rest."

T. N.

Jan. 3.—I visited Col. Lyons to day, and found him in a dying condition. He is hopeful, and may the grace of God save his soul!

Jan. 15.—To-day I am in the home of Bro. Dunwoody. He is the brother of Samuel Dunwoody, of the South Carolina Conference, and is one of the finest Christian characters I ever met. From here I go to Opelousas, where I hope to get my mail. A letter from Bro. Hewitt informs me he was married, Dec. 22, 1817, to Miss Lucretia Barlow. I also had a letter from Bro. Lane, saying he was still single, and expected to continue in that state for some time, as he wished to continue in the Conference. I had a letter telling me of the conversion of the daughter of Judge Lewis, in Natchez, Miss. She afterward married the Rev. John Menefee.

Feb. 21.—To-day I preached the funeral of Col. Lyons from Heb. ix, 27.

Feb. 22.—To day I preached from Prov. xxviii, 4, and after preaching married Andrew Dunks to Miss Jane Clark. We then expelled three from the church: one for drinking, swearing, and keeping bad company; one for going to balls, dressing in the fashion of the world, and neglect of class meeting; and a colored man for drinking, Sabbath breaking, and falsehood.

March 8.—I preached to-day from Mat. v, 12, and Judge Lewis and his wife joined the church.

[This is the end of the record as given by Bro. Nixon.]

How to Make the League Prayer Meeting Interesting and Instructive.

As the need of our spiritual nature differs from that of our intellectual and temporal, so the office of the League prayer meeting differs from the other features of the League work. Its object is to look after the spiritual interest; the Literary Department, the social and intellectual; and the Charity Department, the temporal. These departments are but avenues through which we may bring the young people into the department of worship, and closer in touch with the Master's work, thereby being made useful means to a glorious end. A spiritual prayer meeting is unmistakable evidence of spiritual life in the League. A League may be seemingly full of life and enthusiasm, but "have a zeal not according to knowledge." I have one such League in mind. I had heard quite a good deal about the success of a League in a certain town in Texas, or rather the success of the social and literary department of that League. I visited the town last Summer. An evening or two after my arrival I was invited to attend their customary weekly entertainment. There was a great crowd in attendance, and the evening passed away pleasantly. Musical and literary selections were the main features interspersed with social games and chat. The entertainment was pronounced a success by those in attendance. I remarked to my friend: "You seem to have a live League. It knows well how to entertain. How about the spiritual interest? Have you a spiritual prayer meeting?" "No," she replied, "that does not amount to much. Very few attend. The social feature is in the ascendancy here." I found there was a zeal, but not according to knowledge. Many were following for the loaves and fishes. Now, do not think I mean to disparage the social and literary feature. Far from it, for it is a means when used wisely in bringing the young under Christian influence. There is a far greater benefit to be derived from the League organization than mere pleasure and entertainment. "Let the soul delight itself in fatness."

Two great objects of a League prayer meeting are Christian growth and Christian association. Naturally a prayer meeting is not very interesting to one who is not spiritual, for "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth," but "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned." Now, the question is, how to make the service interesting to these two classes, the spiritual and the non-spiritual, for we have both in our League. The one must be fed, the other drawn and tempted to taste and see that the Lord is good.

It is of first importance that the Committee on Worship be composed of consecrated Christians, whose daily walk and conversation are in sweet accord with the teachings of the Great Book, walking worthy of the vocation wherewith they are called. Never put a lukewarm, inconsistent church member at the head of this department. This will be sure to dampen the zeal of the enthusiastic, and cause the indifferent to criticise and scoff. Let the chairman be one who "in all things sheweth himself a pattern of good works; in doctrine showing incorruptness, gravity, sound speech that can not be condemned, that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of him." As the League should exercise wisdom and judgment in the selection of this committee, so should the committee be very careful whom it appoints to lead these services. It is hardly probable that a prayer service will be more spiritual than its leader. Some have taken issue with me right here. They say, "Let other than the spiritual lead, and in that way we may possibly influence them and bring them into the work." Leaguers, that will not do. There are other means of influence. Of course, encourage them to take part in the service, but otherwise than as a leader. It is lowering the standard of a Christian prayer service, and while it may have a good influence upon the one leading, which I am inclined to doubt, it will tend to keep others away, cause still others to scoff, and make our League prayer meeting a thing of reproach to the church.

Now, as to how to conduct the service so as to make it interesting and instructive. I think Paul must have had such an occasion in mind when in writing to the Colossians he said, "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in our hearts to the Lord, and whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." Of course, beforehand the Devotional Committee has appointed the leader and helpers, if expedient, and aided or advised them in the preparation of the lesson, when necessary. The first essential to an interesting and instructive prayer meeting is the presence of the Holy Spirit. It is well to open with a short prayer for Divine guidance during the hour, for "we are not sufficient of ourselves to think anything as of ourselves, but our sufficiency is of God," and without this divine assistance our service can not be acceptable in his sight. Let the first song be bright and full of religious fervor. Leaguers, let us look well to our singing. So much depends upon that. It is the part of our service that especially attracts the young and those who attend only to be entertained. How can a League keep from singing? It represents the youthful life of the church, and it should be a happy, joyous life, and we should praise our Redeemer with joyous lips. "It is good to sing praises unto our God, for it is pleasant and praise is comely. Praise him with the sound of the trumpet; praise him with the psaltery and harp. Praise him with the timbrel and pipe; praise him with stringed instruments and organs." Dedicate those instruments to the service of the sanctuary instead of the ball-room.

Another essential to a successful prayer meeting is a supply of Bibles. Leaguers, how many of you carry your Bibles to the prayer service? Leaguers going to prayer meeting without their Bibles remind one of the foolish virgins going to meet the bridegroom without oil in their lamps. Leaguers, bring your Bibles, and use them.

In taking up the lesson topic I have found it interesting in addition to the reading of the Scripture given on the topic card we read alternately its complement. I mean by that, if the lesson is in the Old Testament, we read a chapter or part of a chapter in the New Testament bearing on the same subject, this chapter to be selected by the chairman of the committee, and commented upon by the League. For instance, our topic for February was, "The Christ in Isaiah." Each Sabbath we would read the fulfillment of the prophesy as recorded in the gospels. In connection with the lesson for May 2, which is Prov. xvi, 1, "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger," we would read James iii. In this way we connect the Old and New Testament, and we can hardly find a lesson in one that we do not find its parallel in the other. The leader should have a number of references to distribute among those who are not accustomed to selecting their own references, the timid ones who need encouragement and sympathy. Short talks right to the point are interesting, but avoid lengthy speeches. They are not appropriate in a prayer service. "Prayer wings to heaven with swifter flight than loudest oratory." Opportunity should always be given for voluntary prayers, sentence prayers and special request for prayer. If it is a spiritual League, having power with God in prayer, burdened hearts will find relief and hungry souls be fed. There is no thought so beautiful, no experience so ennobling as that of the redeemed soul in conversation with Christ through his Spirit that dwelleth in us, "which things the angels desire to look into." Make this service a season of prayer in the truest sense of the term. It is no place for recitations and shows. We want heart-to-heart talks with each other and with our Father, a service of prayer, praise and thanksgiving. "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name."

I find it beneficial occasionally to lay aside the topic card and select a subject specially needed by the League at that time. For instance: Suppose some of our members are becoming worldly, attending theaters, dances, and other places of worldly amusement, it would be well to have a lesson on "Worldliness," "The Church and the World," "Fruits of Repentance," or some kindred subject. If the League be in a state of lethargy, a lesson on "Christian Warfare" might serve to arouse them and produce more earnestness and diligence. It is necessary that the Committee on Worship make the spiritual condition of the League a prayerful study, and under the guidance of the Holy Spirit provide for its various needs and wants.

Some have said the Department of Charity and Help is the greatest and most important department of the League organization. Not so. It is in the Devotional Department that we are endued with power and grace sufficient to make our work in the other department effectual and acceptable in the sight of God. Without this power our service is but as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not love (the love of Christ dwelling in us), it profiteth me nothing." It is in our devotional services that our young people learn to do battle for the Lord. It is where they learn to take the shield of faith and the helmet of salvation, and to buckle on the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. It is there where they learn the message of salvation to bear to the sin-sick soul, and there where they learn of the rest for the burdened heart. It is the Leaguer's store of supplies from which he draws spiritual help.

Again, I say the prayer meeting must be essentially a prayer service, and not an occasion of entertainment and display. Nothing should enter into it but that which will tend to spiritual growth. "Till we all come into the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. Speaking the truth in love may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ."

Let us follow the teachings of that beautiful poem of Holmes, "The Chambered Nautilus," in the last stanza of which he makes this application:

"Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length art free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!"

Correspondence.

Letter from Japan.

To Rev. W. H. Huntley, Lauderdale, Miss., U. S. A.—

DEAR BROTHER: Your two kind letters to the Mission Rooms at Nashville, Tenn., concerning scholarships in our female training school at this place have been forwarded me, together with the sum of $50 from Mr. John A. McLeod, of Purvis, Miss., for a scholarship in the same work. Very gladly have these letters and the gift so kindly made been welcomed. Trained Christian teachers are a great need here in our Methodist Church, South, and it seems as if a glorious day was now close at hand, for, with the encouragement we now have from you and others, we are free to select and invite beneficiaries, and to gather them in for regular and timely instruction. One young woman has sent in a letter saying that she "is anxious to begin such a course of preparation, but her father is now ill, so she will come in as soon as she can be spared from waiting upon her father." One of our missionary sisters at an out station has written me that she "is on the lookout for such a woman to enter the Bible school;" and if the parents of one of our industrial department pupils will consent, there is a third candidate in sight; a fourth will not be long following. Thus we will go on preparing women to go from house to house reading the Word of God to, and praying with, some of the many who have never heard it. I am sure that the Lord is leading hearts in America to become interested in this Bible work. I pray that the Holy Spirit will guide you all at home, as well as us here, and help us all to honor and glorify God by doing whatever he will lead us to do for him. Kindly bear us workers in your prayers before God, and also the Christless women and girls of Japan. There is much, very much, need of Christian light and influence in the hearts and homes of Japan's mothers, wives, and daughters. God has made everything here in nature very beautiful, but the evil one tempts and ruins many souls. Thousands of women are sacrificed on the altars of vileness because their fathers must have gain wickedly received by sinful lives of daughters they hire and barter off for money. Pray for them, pray for all.

I will write a letter to the various gentlemen mentioned in your letter of Feb. 9, 1897, and try to be faithful in sending them notes of our work. May this be but the beginning of a great and good work among women here, and all the more so for being organized by true-hearted and Christian men of our home church, who are better men for having had Christian mothers and sisters and life companions! The men here seem slow to appreciate the greatest need of their country's women. They seem, as it were, unwilling for women to be lifted out of old-time customs, lest they become unfitted for Japanese home life. We need to move carefully and prayerfully in all we undertake for God in Japan. May you often ask the divine blessing upon this land and people, and may your soul be filled with great joy for what you will do in helping to make Japanese women a blessing to their family, their friends, their neighbors, as they seek to bring them to Christ, and to live the lives he would have them live! May God's Holy Spirit rest upon and abide with you always! prays your friend and co-worker,

M. I. LAMBUTH.

The second annual meeting for the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Grenada district was held in Duck Hill, May 9 and 10, 1897. The largest number of delegates ever known from the district were present. Mrs. McIntosh, district secretary of the W. F. M. Society, called the meeting to order at 2 o'clock, Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Binford, of Water Valley, conducted the religious exercises. The following auxiliaries were represented: Oxford; Wood Street and Main Street Churches, Water Valley; Coffeeville, Grenada, Spring Hill, Gore's Chapel, Duck Hill, and the G. C. I., Grenada. These auxiliaries were in a very good condition. Wood Street Church, Water Valley, was the banner auxiliary of the district, having raised this last year $75.

Reports from the juveniles were called for. Oxford "Armor Bearers" were represented by Miss Ona Collier; Wood Street, Water Valley, "Lilies" by Master Walter Taylor; Main Street "Clifford Reapers" by Master Ben Tindall, and Grenada "Willing Workers" by Miss Janie McIntosh. These reports were very encouraging, and these little folks were an inspiration to the older members.

Mrs. McIntosh read an interesting and encouraging letter from Miss Haygood, superintendent of the work in China.

Ways and means for making the meetings more interesting and advancing the work were discussed.

Mrs. McIntosh reported ten new societies organized and 228 new members added this year.

Having finished the business of the foreign work, Mrs. McIntosh gave way to Mrs. Collier, district secretary of the P. and H. M. Society of Grenada district.

Mrs. Taylor led the devotional exercises, after Mrs. Collier called for reports from auxiliaries. Oxford; Wood Street and Main Street Churches, Water Valley; Coffeeville, Grenada and Charleston reported. Oxford was the banner auxiliary, having raised for all purposes nearly $300. Pledge money was discussed, and auxiliaries urged to make their pledges as large as possible.

Mrs. Collier then gave a brief report of the work done in the district. This work is young, but is growing, and may soon rival her older sister.

Saturday night the meeting was opened by Mrs. McIntosh. The address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. Stephens, of Duck Hill, and responded to by Miss Hargrove, of Oxford, after which a sweet consecration service was led by Mrs. Neblette, of the G. C. I., Grenada. The delegates and Christians of Duck Hill gathered around the altar, and renewed their covenants with God.

Sunday morning we listened to an earnest sermon by Bro. Langsley.

Sunday afternoon a children's mass meeting was held. Miss Janie McIntosh, Master Walter Taylor, Master Walter Duhard and Miss Lula Tyler recited; talks were made by Miss Hargrove and Mrs. Neblette, encouraging the children, and urging them to more earnest efforts in this work.

Sunday night the meeting was opened by Mrs. McIntosh. Papers were read by Mrs. Collier, Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Duhard upon different subjects on the P. and H. M. work. Papers were read on the foreign work that had been written by Mrs. Falkner, of Oxford, and Mrs. Binford, of Water Valley. Two recitations on giving and a collection ended the programme.

The people of Duck Hill exhibited their hospitality in every way, and entertained us royally. We do hope and pray that the delegates present went home enthused, full of missionary zeal, and ready to work—yea, labor—to make the Grenada district one of the leading districts on missionary and parsonage and home mission work in the North Mississippi Conference.

TALLULAH HARGROVE, Sec.

Tenderness does not mean weakness, softness, effeminateness. It is consistent with strength, manliness, truth and bravery. It does not show itself alone in the touch, but in unselfishness, thoughtfulness, considerateness, forbearance, patience, long-suffering. But however it shows itself, it is as the bloom on the peach, as Spring showers on the earth, as the music of the angels stealing down on the plains of Bethlehem. You may not have much of this world's wealth to distribute, but you may give something better and spend a useful and beneficent life, if you will practice this lesson of shedding around you the grace of human tenderness, in word and act and in the spirit of your life.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

FROM THE WORK.

CORRECTION.

In my note to the ADVOCATE, of recent date, I stated that one hundred and thirty seven dollars and forty cents (not fifty) was reported, and that one dollar and thirty-five cents—not dollars, as your printer stated. Please make the above correction, and greatly oblige, WYMELLEN.

Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, Morgan City, La., May 15, 1897: "'Ye shall reap if ye faint not.' This promise has been most bountifully fulfilled on this work. I have just closed a meeting of two weeks' duration, in which the power of God was wonderfully displayed. Rev. J J Smylie did the preaching, and it was owned of God in the conversion of sinners. Each service seemed to receive a special baptism of the Holy Ghost. Forty-seven have been received into the church, and four more are to follow on next Sunday evening. The whole church has been revived and the Spirit of the Lord has been poured out on this people. Bro. Smylie has a way of saying things that go to the heart; the will is controlled, and men act not from excitement, but from conviction. We praise the Lord for what he has done for us; take courage for the future, knowing that all things work together for good to those who put their trust in God."

Member, Vernon, La., May 10, 1897: "Harmony, brotherly love, peace and quiet prevails throughout the bounds of the Vernon work, with but one slight exception, and we believe that under the ministry of Bro. Johnston that that will be cleared away before the close of many more days. Bro. Johnston has seven appointments on the Vernon charge—three evening appointments—and at each of these seven appointments there is always an anxious, waiting crowd eager to hear and receive his messages of love and godly counsels. He has and is accomplishing much, not by enlarging the membership, but by strengthening and building up and placing the church upon a higher plane of religion. His walk, as he goes in and out before the people, bespeak much more than he professes. It is such living that wins the confidence, love, and respect of the world for Christ. We predict for him a grand and glorious year. The outlook is promising indeed. With the blessings and smiles of a kind Providence upon our labor, we hope to meet all of our assessments. May the good Lord keep us as under the hollow of his mighty hand."

Rev. M. M. Black, Gloster, Miss., May 14: "We closed a ten days' meeting at this place on the seventh instant. The membership has been greatly revived and strengthened. Several who were drifting have renewed their vows. Christians of the various churches united with us, and were brought closer together. The pastor of the Presbyterian Church preached for us the first night of the meeting, and the pastor of the Baptist Church the night following. These brethren attended most of the services, and very kindly suspended their own services at night during the continuance of the meeting, for which courtesy we are deeply grateful. There were no additions to the church. Two or three persons, however, will probably join in the near future as the result of their awakening. Bro. B. F Lewis, of Woodville, was with us nine days, and did us much good. His sermons were strong and stirring. Our Sunday-school is increasing in efficiency and in punctuality. A Children's Missionary Society has been organized, and is progressing finely. We revived the Epworth League recently, and hope soon to have it in good working order. We rejoice that our lot has been cast among so appreciative and cordial a people. There is much to encourage us."

J L Moore, Stovall, La.: "The second quarterly meeting of the Gansville circuit, Arcadia district, Louisiana Conference, was held with the Gansville Church, May 6; Rev. B T. Crews, P. E., in the chair. The circuit was tolerably well represented, and a fairly good audience considering the time of the week and year it was held. Bro. Crews did not find fault with the stewards for the way they were feeding their preacher. Bro. Crews preached a logical and soul-stirring sermon from the first five verses of the twenty seventh Psalm. It was feast to the soul to hear such words of wisdom and comfort. Bro. Crews captured his hearers. The next quarterly meeting will be held with Siloam, at which time we are going to have a camp meeting if we can get everything in readiness. Come up, Bro. Black, and be with us. Allow me to thank Bro. W. A. White, of Lake Providence, for $5 25 for Bro. W. F. Sanders' children, and Bro H. S. Alford, of Smithburg, Miss., for $3 from Chapel Hill Sunday-school. While I do not wish to enter a controversy with Bro. W. W. Magruder on the 'point of law,' I just want to ask him if the governor did not, a few years ago, have a man arrested and lodged in jail who had gone into another State to solicit aid for the overflowed people of his district without the governor's consent."

DR. BENJAMIN F KITTRELL.

Dr. Benjamin F Kittrell, son of Wm. J. and Elizabeth Kittrell, was born in Greensboro, Ala., Dec. 24 1836, and died in Black Hawk, Miss., April 22, 1897.

He was endowed with a fine mind which was trained and highly cultivated at home, in the common schools and in Irving College, Tennessee, where he graduated with honor in 1855 For some years he taught school near Mobile, Ala., where he formed an intimate and lasting friendship with the principal of the school, an Episcopal minister, long since dead.

Dr. Kittrell graduated in medicine in 1861, and at once entered the military service as surgeon in the Confederate Army. Here he won for himself a name and fame as a skillful physician and a safe and expert surgeon. At the close of the war he settled in Black Hawk, Miss., then the seat of a flourishing female college, and entered upon the practice of his profession. He was a man of one work, devoting all his time and energies to the work of a "beloved physician."

On the twenty-fourth day of April, 1866, he was happily married to Miss Maud, daughter of J D. Pate, Esq., of Carroll county, Miss. The issue of this marriage was two daughters—one dead and the other a widow with three children, still living.

Dr Kittrell was a man of fine literary taste and cultivation. He read the best books and magazines to be found in this country and in the old world. This made him a full man on nearly all subjects. The extent and accuracy of his information on all lines where he thought made him the oracle of wisdom to a wide circle of country. He was a modest, retiring man, reticent and inclined to be meditative, but when fully aroused he was a brilliant and charming conversationalist. His words were few, but choice and very expressive.

Few men surpassed him in the power of condensed and clear statement. He had the gifts and graces of an orator and the careful training of an elocutionist, hence he wrote and spoke with great unction and power. A few times he was induced to appear in public, and his speeches and addresses attracted wide attention and produced a profound impression. Some of them were put into type and they possess the merit of strength and beauty on the printed page.

As a physician Dr. Kittrell stood among the first in this State. He kept himself fully abreast of all the latest discoveries in medical science and the improvements in the practice of this noble profession. This gave him prominence in and great influence with the medical societies and Boards of the States. His views and opinions were entitled to consideration.

He also kept himself fully informed on the political issues of the day, and he was deeply interested in all public affairs, as every good citizen should be. Few men knew more of the parties and policies in existence since the foundation of the government—specially since the war.

He was prominent and influential in masonic circles, and his body was laid to rest with the honors of this ancient order.

Dr. Kittrell's home life was bountiful and very beautiful. Husband and wife lived for each other, and each spared no pains to make the other happy. Self-sacrifice for the joy and comfort of the other was a pleasure and a privilege to each.

The sick, the poor, the needy and orphan children always found an open door and big hearts of love at Dr. Kittrell's. The wife was impulsive, sympathetic and expressive. The Doctor said nothing, only he smiled when his wife became an angel of mercy to some needy soul.

Dr. Kittrell was a moral man, sober, honest, honorable and high-toned. He literally despised little or low acts. A high sense of honor and of strict integrity controlled all his dealings with men.

He made no profession of religion, and yet those who were with him at the last have good hope that he came to personal salvation through faith in Christ. To his wife he said, "It is all right, all right." The writer of this memoir talked with him often on this subject last Fall. He was anxious to know the way of salvation. Salvation by simple faith in Christ was a puzzle and profound mystery to him. It had become the habit of his life to know things by reason rather than by faith. He agreed to seek daily and earnestly the help and guidance of the Holy Ghost in seeking the salvation of his soul. Spiritual discernment of heavenly and divine things comes of enlightenment by the Holy Ghost. The faith faculty is at its best at the first, and it grows by early and constant exercise. The writer has good reason to believe the blessed Spirit led this honest and earnest man to saving faith in the Son of God. GILDEROY.

Unto the Dawn

A POEM.

BY HORACE M. DUBOSE, D. D.

16mo, pp. 53. Heavy Paper Cover. 25 cts

This tiny volume, dedicated to Bishop Galloway, contains a poem of musical lines amounting to XXXII considerable divisions, arranged somewhat after the form of those in Tennyson's "In Memoriam." Mr. DuBose has fine imaginative feeling, a full sense of word color and of melodious phrasing, and a high regard for poetical seriousness.—The Independent, New York.

Barbee & Smith, Agents,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Women whose faces are disfigured by unsightly eruptions, pimples and blotches too frequently fail to understand that these are but the outward symptoms of inward disorders. They resort to various cosmetics, ointments and powders, not knowing that all the while the trouble is not in the skin, itself, but in the system. It is sometimes absolutely dangerous to use outward applications, for if the skin alone is cleared, the real disease is likely to attack some internal organ of the body, where it may prove fatal to life itself.

In the majority of cases these unsightly skin diseases are due to two things, weakness and disorders of the distinctly feminine organism, and impurities of the blood caused by them. The woman who suffers from disease in a womanly way will soon suffer in her general health. Her stomach, liver and other organs will fail to perform their proper functions, with the result that the blood becomes impure. Left to herself, she will probably resort to cosmetics and ointments. If she consults a physician he will tell her that the stomach or liver only is at fault. Her distinctly womanly ailment is really the first and only cause. For this she should resort at once to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It acts directly and only on the delicate and important organs concerned. It makes them strong and well. Then a course of Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will purify and enrich the blood, and make her a new woman. Medicine dealers sell both remedies.

"I cannot say too much for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Miss Clara Baird, of Bridgeport, Montgomery Co., Penna., "for the good it did me. If any one doubts this give them my name and address."

Sure, safe and simple ways to cure all manner of skin diseases told in Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser. For a paper-covered copy send 21 one-cent stamps, to cover mailing only, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.; cloth binding, 31 stamps.

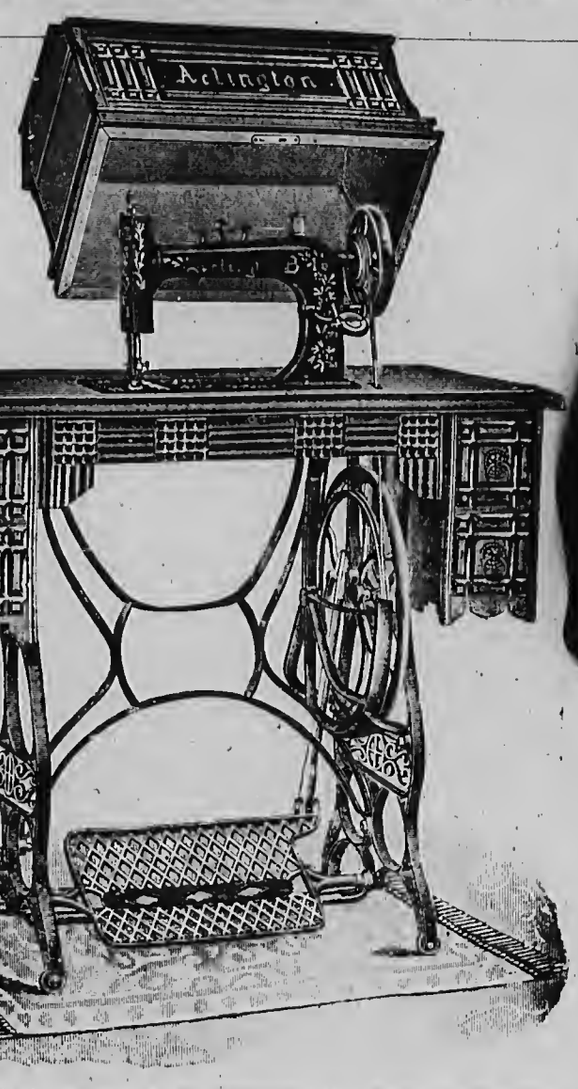
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine



A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, inserting great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change of adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

THURSDAY, MAY 27, 1897.

There is one thing that never dies of old age, viz.: a bad habit.

If you are no better at night than you were in the morning, count it a day lost.

It is very easy for a man to lose his temper when he knows he is in the wrong.

Even a very stupid man can find a plausible reason for doing any mean thing he wants to do.

Some people find their greatest enjoyment in making other people miserable; and yet they call themselves Christians.

How often the memory of what others have done for us is embittered by the thought of how little we have done for them!—Selected.

It is remarkable how much bad spirit some men can display in professing to be filled with the Holy Spirit.—Baltimore Advocate.

The Bible is not a casket of jewels, upon which to feast our eyes, but a basket of heavenly fruits upon which to feast our souls.—Exchange.

Referring to the numerous good resolutions formed on New Year's Day some one has proposed to change the name of it to All Liars' Day.

The bereavement which looks into the grave is leaden; the bereavement which dares to look toward the stars with hope is goldon.—G. H. Hepworth.

It is a good thing to cultivate the habit of readiness for emergencies. Call it presence of mind, keeping your wits about you, or what you will, just so you attain the real thing.—Selected.

Blessed is the man who has the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things, but, above all, the power of going out of one's self, and seeing and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another man.—Selected.

The church in Jerusalem seems to have been frightened when they heard that the Gentiles were coming in. Possibly there are churches now which would be greatly alarmed if a revival should break out among their poor neighbors which should seem likely to fill the church with them.—Exchange.

If you will take the yoke of Christ and count upon God at your back, I do not mind what happens, your heart will be at rest. Like the shell which, taken from the ocean, repeats the murmur that she learned in the ocean depth, so your heart will repeat the deep sweet music of the heart of God, out of which you have come.—Meyer.

Regularity in the Realm of Religion.

No man can hope to achieve a high degree of success in any business or profession unless he is regular and systematic in the performance of his duties. The merchant who has no regular time for opening and closing his store, who is as likely to be found fishing or pleasure seeking as in his place of business, is not the one whom customers seek. No aspiring physician can afford to produce the impression that he has no regular hours for consultation. People who seem to think that one time will do as well as another for attending to their tasks are by no means uncommon, but somehow they are not much in demand. If railroad trains and schools were run as irregularly and unsystematically as many professing Christians attend to their religious duties, the public would soon pronounce them unworthy of support and continuance.

Had John Wesley labored without method or regularity, the immense amount of writing, preaching and traveling which he did would have been utterly impossible. By regularity of habit and wise use of time he maintained a religious experience Pauline in its type, and accomplished tasks nothing short of marvelous. Benjamin Franklin, whose name has become the synonym of method and industry, would never have risen to such prominence in the world, had it not been for his methodical habits and perseverance. One writer tells of a man beginning business who opened and shut his shop regularly at the same hour every day for weeks without selling two cents' worth, yet whose application attracted attention and paved the way to fortune.

What business man does not recognize the importance of regularity and perseverance in the conduct of his affairs? Who wants to employ laborers that work only when they feel like it, and stop without warning or reason? The famous musician, Malibran, said of herself that if she neglected her practice a single day, she could see the difference in her execution; if for two days, her friends detected it; and if for a week, all the world knew of her failure.

Nowhere is the absence of regularity more marked than among church people; nowhere is the effect of its absence more disastrous. With the exception of a faithful few, young and old attend to every other matter with more constancy and zeal than to the affairs of the soul. Business men go to their stores, workmen to their shops, railroad men to their trains, hot or cold, rain or shine, whether weak or strong; but if the weather is a little unfavorable, or if they are feeling somewhat out of sorts, what multitudes of Christians stay away from the prayer meeting and the other services of the church! Young folks who would not think of letting anything short of an earthquake or a cyclone keep them away from a circus, a theatre or a reception are afraid to venture out to the house of God if the sky looks a little threatening, or if they think Bro. So-and-So is likely to preach.

Of what countless hosts may it be said "they run well for a season," but soon "grow weary in well-doing." Piety of the spasmodic type is the bane of Christendom to-day. Where is the church that has not its dozens and scores who are as unsteady in their religious life as is the course of the winds and waves? Church members often allow the most trivial things to interfere with the discharge of their religious duties, but if it is a matter of business or pleasure, hindrances and difficulties are soon disposed of. The indifference and lack of steadfastness which many churchmen exhibit in spiritual matters, if carried into industrial and governmental affairs, would speedily bring ruin and suffering.

Transports of joy serve a good purpose, but the man who depends upon the state of his emotions, and fails to take up his cross and walk daily in the path of self-denial, will ere long have an experience that is but a mocking memory. Ecstacy can never take the place of the unremitting practice of the duties and the cultivation of the graces enjoined by Christianity. All over the land there is the same distressing lack of that type of religion which exalts constancy above profession, and loyalty above convenience and self-interest.

Many people can not be said to have habits of piety at all, so frequently do they allow worldly concerns to interrupt them in paying their vows to the Lord. Is it not astounding that so many believers who are as regular as a clock in attending to social and commercial matters are as uncertain as the wind when it comes to serving the Lord? How frequently church members will attend every service held by an evangelist, or by some free-lance preacher, who takes delight in abusing the church and its authorities, and yet are seldom seen at a religious service on an ordinary occasion!

No man expects one plowing to make a crop of corn. Yet do not some people act as if one camp meeting, or protracted meeting, of prayer and consecration is sufficient for a whole year? How few bear in mind that God has said, "He that endureth unto the end, the same shall be saved."

No doubt in not a few charges in our Zion the stewards during the first month or two of the year labored regularly and earnestly to raise their pastor's salary, but ere long they relaxed their efforts, and from now on until about Conference time they will labor spasmodically, or perhaps not at all. The consequence is that many a pastor will fail to receive what he needs and ought to have, and some on account thereof will of necessity become involved in debt. Greater regularity and perseverance in this matter would in many instances bring about a wonderful change.

It is greatly to be deplored that so few church members give regularly of their substance. Not many are rich enough to contribute much cash at a time, but they are able to give a small sum weekly or monthly, which, in the aggregate, would be a goodly offering.

It is folly to expect enjoyment of religion or growth in grace where there is not regularity in prayer and Bible study and in attending upon the ordinances of God and in doing good. Irregularity in worship and service may seem of little consequence, yet if God were a hundredth part as unsteady in his love and care for us as many of us are in our service to him, we would miserably and speedily perish.

A teacher instructing his class on "Thy will be done" in the Lord's Prayer asked, "How are the angels to be our patterns?" One said, "They do God's will immediately." Another: "They do it cheerfully." A third said: "They do it with all their hearts." The answer of the fourth showed that he had caught the meaning of true obedience, for he said: "They do it always." Can we believe that God is pleased with anything less than uniform, zealous and thorough obedience? In order to be genuine Methodists, we must live by rule, and so far as we are able perform every duty and task at the appointed time. But will not this make our piety stereotyped and lifeless? Nay, not if we serve God from the heart, not if we are Methodists in the true sense of the term—that is, "Christians in earnest."

"O ever earnest soul!
Unwearied in thy work,
Unhalting in thy course,
Unlingering in thy path,
Teach me thy earnest ways,
That mine may be a life
Of steadfast work and praise."

Sectionalism Run Mad.

At the recent encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Richmond, Ind., a committee reported adversely as to the continued use of a certain history in the public schools of that State because of a footnote in the book saying that after he was wounded at the battle of Shiloh Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston sent his own surgeon to care for the wounds of the Federal soldiers, while he himself bled to death for lack of attention. In their report the committee declares that "this statement we believe to be pure fiction, and if true we insist that it is of no value as history; and is an indecent attempt on the part of the publishers to neutralize the effect of such revision as they had made in the book."

The above clipping, from a recent issue of the Times-Democrat, gives evidence of the existence of a spirit which we would like to believe prevails to a very limited extent in the regions north of Dixie. The first item in the report is, of course, unobjectionable. If the statement concerning Gen. Albert Sydney Johnston is mere fiction all sensible people will agree that it should have no place in a school history. But when these ex-United States soldiers say that if the statement is true, it has no value as history, they forfeit the respect of the civilized world. We heartily endorse the following editorial utterances of the Times-Democrat:

The idea that no heroism of the enemy, no good act or self-sacrifice on the part of your opponents is to be told, but that you must be taught to hate them and to believe that they are incapable of any virtue, is one of the most malignant and depraved ideas that were ever given currency. Such a doctrine has never been taught in any civilized country, and must not prevail here. The idea that no history taught in the North should contain one complimentary allusion to the Southern soldiers, or say one word about their heroism, and that the Southern youth should be similarly taught—for this would be the legitimate sequence of this doctrine—that no Northern soldier was capable of any honorable or heroic act—would breed hatred for all time in this country, and assure its dissolution sooner or later.

The United Confederate Veterans, at their Nashville reunion, will take up this matter of Southern school histories. We hope that in the discussion of the matter it will show that broad spirit which the Indiana G. A. R. lacked at its Richmond conference, and that it will recommend those books which—while doing full justice to the Southern people and the Southern soldiery—will not refuse recognition of acts of heroism and sacrifice on the part of those who wore the blue.

There are many broad-minded people in the North protesting against sectionalism. Let the South join hands with them, show that it wants a non sectional history, one that will do equal justice to the soldiers of either army, and which will recognize and praise courage of self-sacrifice, without first asking the color of the uniform worn by the hero.

At Magnolia.

On Sunday, the twenty-third, we had the privilege of preaching the commencement sermon of Magnolia High School. We were greeted by an audience that exceeded the seating capacity of the chapel. Under the administration of the present efficient principal, Prof. W. N. Hardee, this institution is enjoying great prosperity, the enrollment for the session being considerably in excess of two hundred. At night we dispensed the Word at the Methodist Church to a very large and attentive audience. We regretted that we could not remain long enough to hear the annual address by our friend, Prof. Hardy, of Jackson, Miss. Magnolia has recently taken on new life, a number of handsome stores and residences having been erected within the last twelve months.

We were pleased to meet our friend, Rev. J. W. Sandell, of the Mississippi Conference, who resides here. During our stay we were most hospitably entertained in the palatial home of Bro. and Sister L. L. Lampton. We were sorry, however, to find Bro. Lampton in bed with slow fever.

We had a delightful visit with friends to the elegant home of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Enochs, of Fernwood, Miss. We also enjoyed the generous hospitalities of the genial occupants of the Methodist manse, Bro. and Sister J. A. B. Jones. Bro. Jones is in the midst of a very prosperous pastorate. He is in high favor with his flock, who manifest their interest in their pastor and his family, not in words only, but in deeds as well. Both substantials and delicacies find their way to the parsonage pantry with frequency. Very recently a fine Jersey cow was presented in a handsome way. There are frequent accessions to the membership of the church. All the Conference claims are secured, and some of them are overpaid. Eighty-one dollars in cash has been contributed to the Orphans' Home, and a pledge has been given to furnish one of the rooms. Bro. Jones has both a new church and a new parsonage in his programme for the near future. The church will come first. En route home we spent a few very pleasant hours in the parsonage home of the Bishop of McComb City, Rev. J. M. Morse, who, in keeping with his previous record, is flourishing like a green bay tree. He is much beloved by his flock. He has a large and growing membership, and preaches regularly to a packed house. His Sunday-school and his Epworth League are in fine condition. The church is entirely harmonious and in fine spiritual condition.

At Ellisville.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. F. M. Keen, we lectured on Wednesday night, the nineteenth, at Ellisville, Miss. Ellisville has undergone little change since our visit last year to dedicate the new church. It is a thoroughly live and progressive town. Our parsonage here having been burned last year, and there being no suitable vacant house in the city, the pastor found it necessary to make headquarters at Laurel. This arrangement is only temporary, however, as Bro. Keen contemplates the erection of a new parsonage at no distant day. We were delightfully entertained by our good friends, Bro. and Sister H. S. Gunn.

Save Your Work.

Take the advice of a tolerably old man; save your work. Some preachers seldom or never take notes, and must necessarily lose much of their work. Others write more or less extensively, but throw away their manuscript. This is wilful waste. What is worth preaching is worth saving. You will need sermons for emergencies. You will often have to preach without time to make a new sermon. If you do not die young, you will be an old preacher, with failing memory and lack of strength for protracted thought. If you save your notes, you will have something to fall back upon. We don't advise to this course because we would have you to feed the people on stale bread; no, the materials of your notes can be worked over and made bran new. The best originality has the spring board of a fund of knowledge on hand.—Holston Methodist.

The fault of the pulpit to-day is flippancy—treating the Bible and the great truths of religion as though they had comical aspects, and as though these were of surpassing interest. In the twentieth century it will be seen that a man who deals with the gravest questions of the hour and of the ages must be grave himself—a man of tremendous earnestness. Something more than gilded gabble, finent chatter, is demanded by the needs of the human heart.—President C. J. Little, Garrett Biblical Institute.

Giving money to the Lord is just as much an act of sacred service as offering a prayer, or singing a hymn of sacred praise, or teaching in a mission school, or coming to a sacramental table. In the Bible the consecration of our substance is not made a mere incidental, it is put in the forefront of our religious duties.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

Some time since the students of Central College, Mo., invited ex Senator J. J. Ingalls to deliver the annual address at the approaching commencement. The invitation was accepted. On account of his connection with the recent prize fight the faculty have vetoed the invitation. Good for the faculty of Central College!

He who refuses forgiveness breaks the bridge over which he must pass, for all need forgiveness. Are there any of us who can look back on wrong and injury done to us by our fellow-men? This, if we were wise, we would not wish to forget. For more noble is it to remember in full, and yet forgive; to retain our sensitiveness unimpaired, and yet to take the offending brother to our hearts as if he had done us no wrong.—A. P. Peabody.

From a private letter from Rev. W. J. "The man or the woman who does not believe in missions is wholly outside the pale of Christianity." The Son of God was a missionary—from heaven to earth. All the apostles were missionaries—the very word "apostles" mean missionary. The Bible is saturated with the spirit of missions. Christianity is a missionary religion. No man can be a true follower of Christ—a Christian—and not be a missionary in spirit and practice.—Baptist Standard.

It is hardly fair to assume that the people who are not interested in the special form of Christian work which appeals most powerfully to you are denying the faith. Perhaps these very persons are interested in something else equally Christian, the importance of which you do not clearly recognize. Christian charity demands that we should let people work for the things they are interested in, without nagging them or criticising them because they do not work with us.—Exchange.

A short time since Lula Karr, an Algiers girl eleven years old, rescued a boy who was sinking for the third time in the Mississippi river. A very few days afterward J. J. Burns, a one-armed workingman, also a resident of Algiers, rescued another boy from a similar fate. In both cases remarkable coolness, nerve and heroism were displayed. On last Friday, in the Pythian Hall at Algiers, in the presence of an immense crowd of the best citizens of Algiers and New Orleans, the Times-Democrat presented a medal to each of these heroic personages. The hall had been appropriately decorated and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. The presentation address was made by Dr. Beverly Warner.

On June 1 Luther Manship will give his famous "Evening of Song and Story" at the Y. M. C. A. Hall in this city. As we have stated before in these columns, Manship is a genius. He is thoroughly unique. He has received the highest encomiums from the press wherever he has appeared. The following from one of our exchanges gives an idea of his style: "Mr. Manship possesses that genius that can never be taught. If you wish to be entertained, to laugh, to cry, to forget yourself and the carping cares of life, go to hear the inimitable Luther." Another says, "As an entertainer he has no equal; and as a portrayer of correct dialect regardless of the tongue he imitates the nation furnishes no counterpart." We bespeak for him a full house when he appears in the Crescent City. Don't miss him.

Mississippi Epworth League.

The third Annual Epworth Leagne Conference for Mississippi met at Water Valley on April 29-May 2, 1897. The faithful and efficient president, Rev. T. B. Clifford, was in the chair, and presided with his accustomed grace, dignity and ease.

That the League work was growing and spreading in size, fire and enthusiasm was undoubtedly proven by the four hundred delegates in attendance, representing seventy-three Leagues and a membership of five thousand, and the whole soul earnestness, interest and enthusiasm displayed by them.

Water Valley threw wide her doors and demonstrated to the Leagners of Mississippi that she was hospitable beyond peradventure, as well as enterprising, energetic and aspiring in business affairs. Many of the most spiritual and consecrated ministers of the church were present, with many of the most faithful, earnest and devout laymen to cheer, encourage and instruct the Leagues in their great work. Among these were Rev. J. A. Bowen, whose presence was a blessing to all; "Cyclone" Clifford, who is an indispensable factor in League work; Dr. H. M. DuBose, whose address upon "The Starting Point" was soul-stirring and inspiring; Rev. W. M. McIntosh, who demonstrated the great benefit of the League to the Revival; Rev. T. W. Lewis, who told of the close relationship of the League and the pastor; Joe M. Ramsey, the blind Leaguer from Tennessee, who thrilled the Conference with his inspiring eloquence and earnest consecration; Dr. R. W. Jones, who, in his earnest and gifted way, told of the possibilities of consecrated manhood in the Church and State; Judge L. H. Estes, the noble minded, indefatigable worker, always ready and anxious to advance the cause of Christ; C. B. Ames, who treated the Conference to an intellectual feast upon the building of character after the divine plan; Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Rev. H. C. Morehead, Rev. T. L. Mellen, Rev. W. S. Shipman, Rev. J. A. Randolph, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, Rev. B. P. Jaco, Rev. A. F. Watkins, Hon. F. G. Lowis, Dr. Rosa Weiss, Dr. J. C. Ballard, and a host of others, who contributed largely to the pleasure and interest of this grand conference of our young people.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President: Rev. A. F. Watkins, of Vicksburg; first vice president, L. P. Brown, of Meridian; second vice president, Mrs. T. J. Brown, of Grenada; third vice-president, C. B. Ames, of Macon; recording secretary, Garland M. Jones, of West Point; corresponding secretary and treasurer, Dr. Rosa Weiss, of Meridian.

With all the earnestness of young Mississippians let us, with our efficient president, Dr. Watkins, leading, take on renewed life and energy, and push forward in this great work.

GARLAND M. JONES, Secretary.

Gilt-Edge Investment.

For the purpose of enlarging their plant and business, the Lafferty Complete Flour Company offer a limited amount of 7 per cent. bonds, secured by a first mortgage. Each bond is for $30, and the owner, in addition to the interest of 7 per cent., is entitled to share in the business of the mill to the amount that makes the bond the most remunerative security on the market. They will be sold at par.

The denomination of the bond was fixed at a minimum sum of $30, so as to furnish an investment for many persons, and gain the widest interest for this accredited Food-cure—the "Complete Flour." Address John J. Lafferty, President.

Richmond, Va., March 1st.

To Preachers.

To the preacher who sends the largest number of new cash subscribers between now and the first of July we will present either an Arlington B Sewing Machine or a gold-filled watch guaranteed to be a perfect time keeper and to look as well as a gold watch for twenty years, whichever one may be preferred. To the preacher sending the next largest number and also to the one sending the third largest number we will present a set of Clarke's Commentaries, latest edition, with modern additions.

Should the successful contestant prefer it, we will pay him cash instead of the premium.

Under this offer no commissions will be allowed until the premium has been awarded. Those who wish to compete for these premiums should notify us at once.

Bro. Ellis' Experience.

I do not see anything strange or startling in Bro. D. G. W. Ellis' experience as recorded in the ADVOCATE, of the thirteenth instant. We have scores of preachers in the North Mississippi Conference who have this "joy and peace within, and a consciousness of the abiding presence of the Spirit." Some four or five of these claim that, like Bro. Ellis, "they received it at a certain time and place." Many more as good men as they say they did grow up into Christ and enjoy this rich experience, whatever Bro. Ellis may have done.

We do not question the facts as stated in Bro. Ellis' experience, neither do we question the testimony of thousands of others who claim to enjoy this "abiding peace," who never believed in, sought, or received this instantaneous second blessing. Among them are such men as the late J. H. Brooks, of our Conference, who had this testimony for more than forty years and died with it on his lips. On last Sunday I heard the Rev. S. A. Ellis bear this testimony in strong language. Yet he has never sought the second blessing, so called. A dozen others have similar testimony. The strangest fact recorded in Bro. Ellis' experience is that a Methodist preacher will live forty-six years in this unsatisfactory, or childhood state, of the divine life.

Bro. Ellis would, perhaps, say if many others enjoy this "abiding peace," they should profess it in so many words and say to the world, "I am sanctified;" but we think it safer to follow the inspired writers of the New Testament, John Wesley and Lovick Pearce, who never said, "I am holy, or I am sanctified." In fact, no angel in heaven, as far as we know, ever dared to make such an assertion; but it has only been done by some good men who seem to think that to profess high attainments in Christian experience is to profess Christ.

We do not so understand the inspired writers, and must be excused from making such professions. If our brethren of the "second blessing" persuasion feel that it is their duty, they have their own consciences to keep. "Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind, and not condemn his brother for that which he feels to be his duty."

Millsaps College.

Messrs. Teat and Scott, two of the advanced students of Millsaps College, will conduct during the Summer in the college building a Summer Training school. There are many young men who need special coaching to prepare them for entrance into college classes. It is sometimes the case that a few months given to review will enable an applicant to enter a year higher in the college than he otherwise would. So all who feel the need of reviews or of making up studies in which they are deficient, the faculty take pleasure in recommending the school of Messrs. Teat and Scott. A pupil who passes the final examinations of this Summer course will be admitted into corresponding college classes without further examination. For circulars address W. H. Scott, Jackson.

An Appeal.

To Subscribers to the Mansfield Female College Fund—

DEAR BRETHREN: The Committee on Repairs and Improvements will be very seriously embarrassed at the meeting of the Board of Trustees, on the eighth of June, unless you remit to me the amount of your subscription without delay. We have gone forward with improvements and repairs, depending on you to pay these small amounts which you subscribed, which, in the aggregate, is considerable, and which could not be paid at a better time than now for grand results. Please make an extraordinary effort to relieve us just now. Your prompt response is confidently expected by

Yours fraternally,

Notice.

All funds raised on Children's Day will please be sent to the treasurer of the Conference Board of Sunday-schools, Bro. N. S. Cornell, postoffice, Knox Point, La. Under no circumstances is any to be sent directly to the Nashville Board. We have called attention to this numberless times on the Conference floor; but for fear some may not understand it, we insert this notice. Please remember this and not do as many have done in former years. Respectfully,

JNO. F. FOSTER, President.

Moreau Street Revival.

We commenced a series of services at Moreau Street on the third Sunday in April, and closed on the second day of this month. We commenced with Easter Sunday, with the quarterly meeting, and with a good foreign mission collection. The pastors of this city did most of the preaching. We had four conversions, and three applications for membership—two of whom have been received into the church. Others are yet to be received. The members who took an active part in the services were quickened and strengthened. Spiritually, as a church, we have been able to take higher and more advanced ground. We are looking for a greater outpouring of God's Spirit.

An Appeal to North Mississippi Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: The Orphans' Home can not be furnished and opened until Orphans' Day is more generally observed. Not quite half of the charges in our Conference have reported anything this year. Please permit me to say that if every congregation and every Sunday school and Epworth League in our Conference were to make an offering to the Lord for the Home, the treasury would be supplied. Surely you will not permit the doors of this beautiful new Home to be closed against the many helpless orphans who apply for admission! The Home will be opened soon as money enough is contributed. We will not go in debt. Send money to the agent, Mrs. T. B. Clifford, Water Valley, Miss.

On account of failing health, I requested the Board to elect another treasurer for our Conference. Bro John M. Taylor, of Water Valley, was elected. No better man could have been chosen. Let everybody help at once, and the Home will soon be ready for occupancy. I believe you will respond, and that right early. The secretary of the Joint Board will soon give to the Advocates a full report of the recent meeting of the Board at Water Valley.

Yours in behalf of the orphans,

J. A. BOWEN.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-sixth annual Camp Meeting at Seashore will open (D. V.) on Wednesday evening, July 14, next, and continue for about eight days.

Arrangements have been made for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit this delightful spot. A handsome and commodious two-story lodging-house—Keller Lodge—has been erected and comfortably furnished for visitors, in addition to the other accommodations supplied by the trustees.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until August 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of 1,400 feet; fanned by the refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico. The sea-bathing afforded is unsurpassed by any resort on the coast. A fine artesian well supplies the grounds with excellent drinking water, which is now "piped" over the entire encampment. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure and exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued and overheated visitor from our smoke enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the camp meeting should address W. B Thomson, New Orleans, chairman Lodging Committee. Questions concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.; Dr. M. F. Tucker, Mobile, or J. H. Lakin, Montgomery, Ala.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge. Board will be furnished them at the restaurant at half rate.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

IN THE ORGAN LINE

No competition with us is possible, as we have the BEST to be had.

PHILIP WERLEIN. Lim, 614-616 Canal, New Orleans, La

"Everything in the Music Line at Werlein's," is an adage.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

College Songs

And Glees, including the Most Popular Songs, New and Old, used in American Colleges.

EDITED BY

THOMAS G. SHEPARD,

Instructor of Glee Clubs for Twenty-five Years.

TWO EDITIONS:

Mixed Voices. Male Voices.

PRICE OF EITHER EDITION 50 CENTS.

While all books of this class before have included, beside the songs supposed to be found in them, many not at all to be classed as college songs, this contains only those that have been adopted for use in some college or university, either by its students as campus songs, or by its Glee Club as concert pieces, or both.

It includes the present songs of a larger number of different colleges than any book yet offered. Among them are several very popular glees that have never before appeared in print.

Both editions contain a complete and easy piano accompaniment to every song, so that a player not accustomed to reading from vocal parts, may be in a position to accompany the voices without difficulty.

YET LOVE CAN LAST.

BY ALFRED AUSTIN.

Yet love can last, yet love can last,
The future be as was the past,
And faith and fondness never know
The chill of dwindling allegiow,
If to familiar hearth there cling
The virgin freshness of the spring,
And April's music still be heard
In wooing voice and winning word.

If when autumnal shadows streak
The furrowed brow, the wrinkled cheek,
Devotion, deepening to the close,
Like fruit that ripens tenderer grows;
If, though the leaves of youth and hope
Lie thick on life's declining slope,
The fond heart, faithful to the last,
Lingers in love-drifts of the past;
If with the gravely shortening days
Faith trims the lamp, faith feeds the blaze
And reverence, robed in wintry white,
Sheds fragrance like a summer night,
Then love can last!

Hearing and Telling.

One of the most useful women whom we ever knew in society was a dear old lady who spent her life in extinguishing the ignited matches which more careless or more designing persons are forever throwing. To her sympathetic ear young and old, men and women, brought not only all their joys and troubles, but even their sins and those of their neighbors; perhaps sometimes an undue share of the latter. She listened to all with earnest, warm-hearted attention, she gave wise counsel, and there the matter ended, for she never repeated aught that by any possibility could wound or harm, and always admonished those who had brought such matters to her knowledge to remember that "he that covereth a transgression seeketh love; but he that repeateth a matter separateth very friends."

One of the most innocent old creatures in the world was a perfect firebrand in the church membership, to which she gave a whole-hearted devotion. She lived happily, devoutly, self-sacrificingly to a good old age, blissfully unconscious that three-fourths of the dissension which she so sincerely deplored in her church was caused by her own heedless chatter. She invented nothing, and never told anything with an idea of harm, but she heard everything, and repeated all she heard with serene impartiality to the next person she met, never ceasing until the current of her thought was changed by something new, which in its turn was only banished by another novelty. Where she had been enjoined "not to tell," the old lady was careful to maintain silence; but unless such a prohibition was distinctly made, it never occurred to her that it was a duty not to impart to others all that she had heard. Her own insatiable appetite for hearing and telling some new thing was innocent enough, for she never put harsh or ill-natured constructions upon words or acts. She accepted them all as simply as she would have done the statement that a and b spell ab, and never connected any resulting ill feeling with aught that she had said. But all repeaters are not so unconscious.

As a general rule, our conscience tells us when it would have been both wiser and better had we refrained from telling the little remarks inspired by temporary contrarieties and transgressions which will not again occur.—Harper's Bazar.

Literature as a Resource.

The great books refresh and restore our idealism. You can not read the great books without having strongly brought back to the horizon those dreams of your youth in which you once believed, but to which you may have proved faithless. Young men and women, you will hear all sorts of judgment on life as you go out into it. You will read all sorts of judgment upon life from all sorts of people. Let me say to you what I believe is true: The only man or woman who has anything to tell you about life that has any authority is the man or woman who has dealt with life nobly from the divine point of view. There is no other way of interpreting it, and any other interpretation is misleading and false. Great books have the power of nobly interpreting life. They restore to us the ideal. People speak of the ideal as if it were a dream or vision of the poets, something iridescent and fading, something delightful to amuse oneself with, but not the food for daily human life. Everything else may go and the world be saved; but when the ideal dies, then the world dies, because the imagination will fade, and all that is great and heroic in the possibilities of the human race will vanish with it.

Books are full of beautiful and varied characters, more real to us than those persons who live next to us, whose hands we take and whose voices we hear. They represent in one form or another what is noblest and best in us. Then there are the great interpreters of life—life as Homer saw it, Dante, Shakespeare, Browning saw it. It is a continual renewal of our faith in what is highest and greatest and noblest—idealism.—Hamilton Wright Mabie, in The Chautauquan.

College or Society.

Mrs. Grace Livingston Hill believes that college training is better than society training. She writes:

"It is sometimes said that a college life gives a girl tastes that unfit her to be a home-maker, yet you do not hear it often urged that a society life does the same thing. Surely, in society she will acquire tastes for being out late at night, dancing, flirting with other women's husbands, spending her energies over bits of paste-board while the household accounts run riot, dropping her tears for the dressed up children on the stage, while her own little ones are crying at home for their mother. Why should not college graduates make as good home makers as the graduates from a hundred other different courses of training in life, and better, too? Surely the girl that has had the earnest purpose, patience, and perseverance necessary to pass creditably through a college course will have formed habits of thinking and acting that will be most helpful to her in the strain and care of making a home. Surely a mother whose mind has been led into the higher realms of thought in the world of science and literature and history can not but be better able to lead and train her little ones that God has given her, for all higher, better things, and must and best of all to understand God, whom to know is life eternal. Surely such a woman would be a helpmeet for her husband."

Obedience in the Home.

The first and fundamental thing that the home has to do for the child in the way of education is to help to make of him a little moral vertebrate. There needs to be developed an osseous shaft running up and down him that shall form the axis around which his growing personality shall gather itself in compactness and fixity. That will make the boy mean something, and make him mean more and more till the end of time, and clear on into eternity. It is the only thing that will make him worth calling a personal integer. To learn to obey is the hardest, even as it is the most valuable, lesson a child can ever acquire. It is not only valuable for what it is in itself, it is also valuable for what it serves as the basis of. One of the first things told us of Jesus has to do with this same matter. It is related to us that he was subject to his parents, and the narrative immediately goes on to remark that he grew in wisdom and in favor with God and men. The close juxtaposition of the two seems calculated to teach that obedience was the seed kernel out of which his intelligence and holiness waxed.—C. H. Parkhurst.

Very Sensible.

One of our lady friends is a sensible woman. This is the way she talks concerning the ups and downs of life; and she is right in her views. We wish every woman had the same independent ideas. She says: "It matters not whether my dress is silk or cotton, so long as it is clean. I prefer a clean cotton gown to a dirty silk. Sometimes I have a visitor—a real live, heavy 'swell.' He or she finds me in a cotton gown, a shady one at that, whose only merit lies in its cleanness, but what care I? My gown is cotton. My hands are red, because I do lots and lots of housework, but my brain is just as it always was, and I can hold my own, in spite of the cotton gown and red hands. If a visitor has any idea that I am not the proper person to be on friendly terms with, because I open my door in a cotton gown, it is the privilege of that visitor to walk down the steps and never ascend them again. If my matted rooms do not seem good in the eyes of my acquaintances who possess body Brussels carpets, they need not call. If I can not hang up Landseer's pictures upon the wall, I am happy to get a handsome chromo in lieu thereof, since it would be worse than folly to go without some sort of ornamentation because the finest could not be obtained."—Steuben Signal.

Wait for the Mud to Dry.

Father Graham, as everybody in the village called him, was one of the old-fashioned gentlemen of whom there are so few left now. He was beloved by every one, and his influence in the little town was great, so active was he.

A young man of the village had been badly insulted, and came to Father Graham full of angry indignation, declaring that he was going at once to demand an apology.

"My dear boy," Father Graham said, "take a word of advice from an old man who loves peace. An insult is like mud; it will brush off much better when it is dry. Wait a little till he and you are both cool, and the thing is easily mended. If you go now it will only be to quarrel."

It is pleasant to be able to add that the young man took his advice, and before the next day was done, the insulting person came to beg forgiveness.—Ex.

Willie's Lesson in Politeness.

"I was so ashamed, Willie, when I had to remind you to thank Mrs. Foster for the book she sent you on Christmas," said a lady to her little son just after a visitor had taken her leave.

"Why, mama," was his reply, "you always said you wanted me to be honest and truthful. I don't like the book at all. It is too babyish for me."

"I do want you to be honest and truthful," said his mother, "but you can be so without being rude. Mrs. Foster hasn't any boys, and perhaps she doesn't know very well the kind of reading a boy likes; but the book is bound very prettily, and it certainly was kind of her to think of you and send you a present. Don't you think so?"

"Yes, mama," said Willie.

"Well, then, don't you see how you could honestly feel grateful to her for the gift just because it showed her kind feeling toward you, even though you don't care for the gift itself?"

"I see now," said Willie. "If I had thought of that, I would have thanked her as soon as I had a chance. But I didn't know how I could be polite and honest, too."

"I am glad you are trying to be truthful," said his mother, "but you must remember that although God says lying lips are an abomination to him, he also tells us to 'be courteous' and to 'be kind one to another,' 'speaking the truth in love.'

"There is a little rhyme I would like to have you learn, for it is a very good definition of true politeness:

"'Politeness is to do and say
The kindest thing in the kindest way.'"

—N. Y. Advocate.

"In Spite Of."

All great achievements are accomplished in spite of impediments. There is such a thing as waiting for the opportune moment in war, in parliamentary tactics, in reforms, and in all manner of dealings with our fellows; but the opportune moment is not one devoid of difficulties and risks. One charged with a great commission does not say he will do this thing because no one objects and nothing obstructs. He rather says he will do this in spite of unfavorable circumstances. The man of deeds never folds his arms because he has no capital at his back, nor closes his lips because his name is not sonorous with honorary titles. He will prove himself superior to mere external prestige, and will accomplish his mission because it is his.—Sunday-School Times.

Demoralizing Literature.

Systematic corruption of the youth of the country by means of the demoralizing publications and the sale of articles for immoral purposes made necessary the work of the Society for the Suppression of Vice. Corrupt literature has caused the harvest of crime, squalor, misery and death which we are considering to-day. The corrupt literature of to-day is practically the devil's kindling wood with which he lights the fire of remorseless hell in the soul. The receptive mind of youth drinks in the sensational foul or criminal story with an avidity that is fearful to contemplate.—Anthony Comstock.

Physical Culture.

The world has yet scarcely shaken itself free from the suspicion that strength is allied to grossness and immorality; that the flesh and the devil are two portions of the same entity, and that to despise the one we must disdain the other. Something unholy still attaches to the superb development of the human form, as if its perfection were a menace rather than a promise of the divine soul upon which it has been grafted. The senses are regarded more as allurements to evil than to good, more as wary assailants than as faithful sentinels through whose outposts light and joy may enter the citadel of the spirit. We confuse the turmoil of passion with the heyday of health, and the scriptural texts which denounce the first are supposed by implication to condemn the second. It is for this reason that so many well-meaning people withhold their consent, or at least their co-operation, from the spread of the doctrine of physical culture. Even those whose conscience has forced upon them a conviction of its harmlessness can not accept the theory of its efficacy in any form beyond that of wholesomeness. It is sufficient concession to modern ideas to allow that the young may indulge in hygienic measures without brutalizing their higher nature, or losing hold of moral force in the same ratio in which they gain command of nerve and sinew. They are prepared to grant no more than that it is better for the material purposes of life that the race should be sound rather than infirm, and that the new methods may further this result.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Things to Remember about Sleeping.

Sunlight is good for everything. The best number of persons to each bed is—one. Away with heavy hangings, either above or below the bed. Beware of a dusty, musty carpet—better sweetness and a bare floor. Do not fail to provide some means for ventilation during the night. Keep the head cool while sleeping, but not by a draught of cold air falling upon it. If a folding bed must be used, contrive some way to keep it aired and wholesome. Let the pillow be high enough to bring the head in a natural position—no more nor less. Thoroughly air the sleeping-room every day; air the beds and bedding as often as possible. A dark, out-of-the-way, unwholesome corner is no more fitted for a sleeping-room than for a parlor. A feather bed which has done service for a generation or two is hardly a desirable thing upon which to sleep.—New York Ledger.

A GREAT deal of nonsense has been written—and believed, about blood purifiers. What purifies the blood? .. .. ..

THE KIDNEYS PURIFY THE BLOOD

AND THEY ALONE.

If diseased, however, they cannot, and the blood continually becomes more impure. Every drop of blood in the body goes through the kidneys, the sewers of the system, every three minutes, night and day, while life endures.

Warner's Safe Cure

puts the kidneys in perfect health, and nature does the rest.

The heavy, dragged out feeling, the bilious attacks, headaches, nervous unrest, fickle appetite, all caused by poisoned blood, will disappear when the kidneys properly perform their functions.

There is no doubt about this. Thousands have so testified. The theory is right, the cure is right and health follows as a natural sequence. Be self-convinced through personal proof.

OBITUARIES.

BATTLE. Mrs. NANNIE BATTLE, whose maiden name was Ann Maria Beattie, was born Sept. 1, 1825, and entered into rest Dec. 13, 1896, in Shreveport, La., leaving to mourn her loss an only sister Mrs. Susan Johnson —ad family, and a host of friends.

Mr. Battle was a polished gentleman and a most agreeable conversationalist. His young wife was full of brightness and sweetness; gentle, winsome, and guileless. As a hostess, she dispensed a hospitality so charming that the aged and the young regarded it as a rare privilege to be numbered among her guests. That these years, so full of present happiness and bright anticipations for the future, should have been succeeded by the loss of health, the early death of her husband; and confinement to her room with pain and prostration for nearly forty years, could be known only to Him who plans our lives, but in mercy leaves the dark passages thereof to some upcast of the unknown.

The courage of Sister Battle was subjected to such a test as seldom falls to the lot of human beings; yet, in a protracted experience as pastor, the writer cannot recall an instance in which serene patience, unquestioning submission to the divine purpose, and unwavering faith, have been more conspicuously exemplified.

Perhaps there are no more fruitful forms of Christian teaching than those which illustrate the beauties and stress the virtues of meekness and fortitude. The lamp of Christian light, joy, and love, hedged about by a form bowed in physical weakness, is brighter, by contrast, amid the shadows of suffering and misfortune. From the standpoint suggested by these reflections we must estimate the type of Christian character presented in the subject of this memoir. She was forgetful of self, but ever mindful of the distress of others. She was pious without bigotry, benevolent without ostentation, and devoted to her church without sectarianism. Thus she lived, loving, cheering, and shedding the sunlight of joy on that large circle of friends attracted to her chamber. The happy expression of her face, the serene courage, the tranquility, the gentleness, the thoughtful courtesy to all, reflected as the flawless mirror of a blameless life, are pictures of brightness when set in the dark background of human suffering that will never be forgotten.

Sister Battle was devoted to God's Word, a copy of which was usually within her reach; and to have her pastor or a Christian friend read aloud from the sacred pages was a cherished privilege. She reveled in the rich treasures of its beautiful truths. The love of friends seemed to increase with years. The visits of her pastors gave her great pleasure, and the pastor was blessed with no mean privilege who numbered her as one of his flock. She was a counselor and friend of the young, who were charmed with this affectionate and joyous phase of Christianity. Late in life her prayer was that she might be raised above the depressing influence of suffering, and her experience verified the truth of the promise, "As thy days shall thy strength be." When near the end she seemed to fear that the clinging affections and persistent prayers of friends might detain the spirit now ready to drop its mantle and mount to its chariot, and requested her pastor, Dr. LaPrade, "not to pray that her life be prolonged."

STEELE. Mrs. CHARLOTTE STEELE (nee Atkinson) was born in London, England, May 9, 1809, and died in perfect peace at Shreveport, La., Feb. 23, 1897, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Enders.

In 1849, ten years after her marriage, Mrs. Steele came to Shreveport, which has been her home since that date. Left a widow in 1852, she reared her children with wonderful wisdom, inculcating in them the same confidence in God and the same love for humanity which characterized her own life. Firm, hopeful, helpful, faithful in all the relations of life, her presence was, for forty-eight years, a benediction to the city of her residence, and a priceless boon to her children and her children's children. Her sympathies were not limited by family bounds, but went out to all who were in distress. In seasons of epidemic no hand was more skillful, no heart more responsive than hers, and many owe their lives to her tender and intelligent nursing. During the war between the States she ministered constantly to the wants of those whose husbands or fathers were at the front, and cared for sick and wounded Confederate soldiers. An earnest Christian, she, like her Master, "went about doing good." She knew Christ, she loved him, she strove to be like him. No one was more honored than was she in the hearts of all who knew her, and when, in ripe old age, she went home to God, the community felt that a rare example of Christian fidelity and helpfulness had been taken from us. WM. H. LAPRADE.

COX—BETLAH ERNESTINE, daughter of Dr. T. B. and Nannie E. Cox, of Learned, Miss., was born Nov. 20, 1893, and died April 14, 1897, after an illness of fifteen days.

The hand of God has been let down to earth, and plucked this precious, tender flower from the home of our brother and sister, and transplanted it in the home above, there to grow in beauty and loveliness, and await the coming of father and mother.

Heaven should be nearer and dearer to them now that this joy of the earthly home has gone above, and looks lovingly upon them, and her beautiful hands beckoning them from the other shore.

Whether or not she realized that she was going away from earth to rest in the bosom of the Savior, we do not know; but twice when her mother asked, "Won't you get well and be mama's baby?" twice she answered, "No." No, she could not get well, for God had need for this child in the kingdom above.

The Savior's words, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter," should bring comfort to the hearts of the sorrowing parents, on whom we pray God's blessings and the comfort which he alone can give.

JAS. G. HALLOWAY.

COTTINGHAM Died in New Orleans, April 9, 1897, Mrs. ALICIA COTTINGHAM, wife of Mr. R. Cottingham, of Bellvue, La.

It is meet to drop a tear and offer a tribute in memory of our dear friend. Mrs. Cottingham went to New Orleans for treatment by the eminent physician, Dr. Lewis, hoping to return in a month restored. All nursing and medical aid was afforded her, while we prayed and asked the Father's will be done. She was uncommonly gifted with rare good sense. She was an every-day Christian, always seeing and appreciating the good, and ever ready to throw the mantle of charity over failures and mistakes. She was a member of the Baptist Church, but always accompanied her husband to his (Methodist) when there was no service at her own. Her friends and the bereaved family will miss her thoughtful ministrations, but we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for, though the summons ware sudden, it found her ready. Let us emulate her virtues, and be ready to meet her in the home "where there shall be no more death." A FRIEND.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

There is no life so humble that if it be true and genuinely human and obedient to God, it may not hope to shed some of his light. There is no life so meagre that the greatest and wisest of us can afford to despise it. Phillips Brooks.

Life is a mission. Every other definition of life is false, and leads all who accept it astray. Religion, science, philosophy, though still at variance on many points, all agree in this: that every existence has an aim.—Mazzini.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teachers' Bible

Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

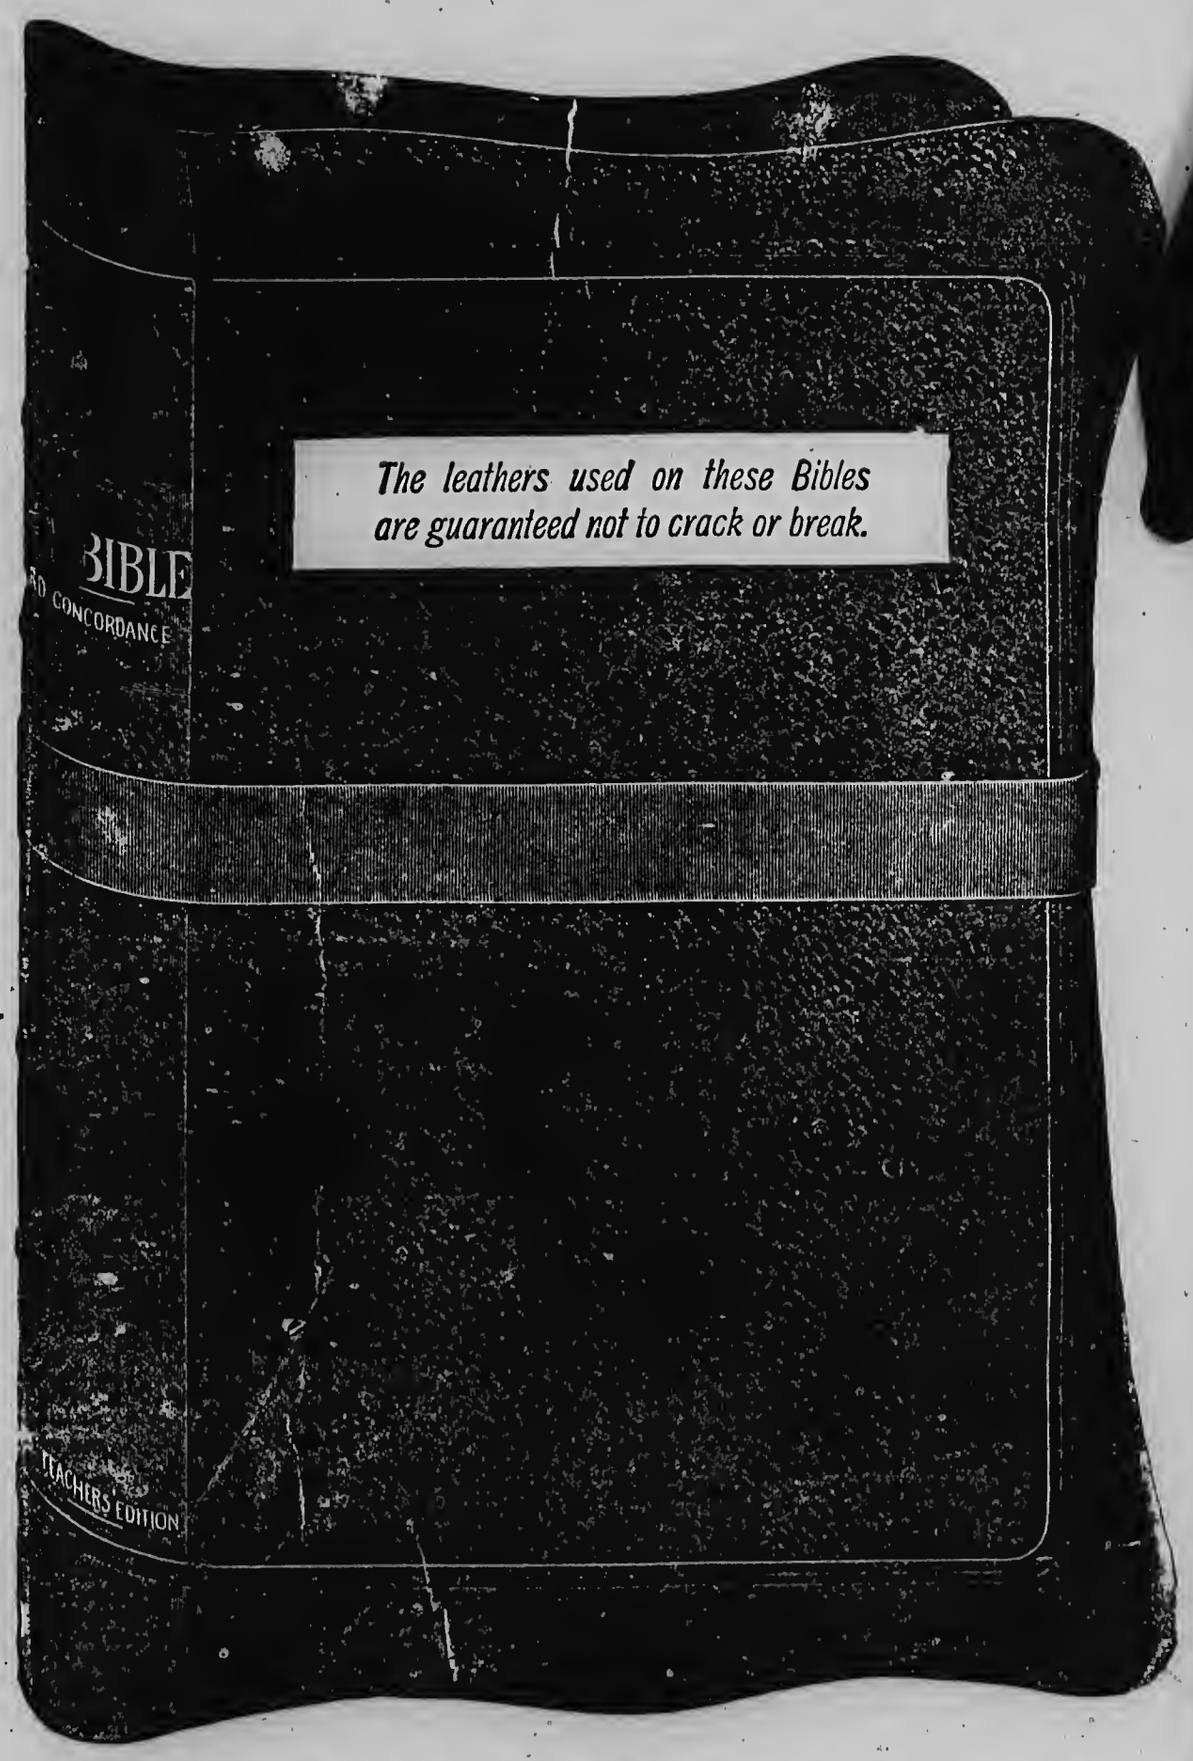
Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"



The large-type (Bourgeois) edition sells to persons who are not subscriber for $5. Our subscribers get it, on conditions specified below, for $2.35. The same Bible in Minion type, which is somewhat smaller than Bourgeois, we offer to our subscribers, on conditions named below, for $1.55. To those who are not subscribers we sell it at $3.15. We also handle an edition in still smaller type (Emerald). Our subscribers get this for $1.00.

In order to get anyone of these at these rates it is necessary to pay your subscription one year in advance, viz., to June, '98. (A little later it will be July, '98.)

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Sugar Trust has bought control of a beet sugar factory in California.

Last week's attendance at the Tennessee Centennial was over fifty thousand.

The Mississippi river is falling very slowly, and the levees give scarcely any anxiety.

The statue of Stephen Girard, the great philanthropist and founder of the famous Girard College, was unveiled in Philadelphia, on May 20, with imposing ceremonies.

A wealthy widow of Chicago has purchased land in Indiana upon which she intends to erect a club house for women. No man will be allowed to enter it in any capacity.

At the Presbyterian General Assembly, now in session at Charlotte, N. C., Rev. Sheldon Jackson was elected Moderator to succeed Dr. R. Q. Mallard, of this city, who was elected at the last General Assembly.

The finished portion of the new Congressional Library at Washington has about forty-four miles of shelving. The ultimate capacity of the building for books will be upwards of 4,500,000 volumes, or nearly 100 miles of shelving.

Mississippi is to have a new capitol, costing $750,000, on the site of the present capitol. The commission having supervision of the work of construction is as follows: Ex-Gov. J. M. Stone, chairman, R. A. Dean, of LaFayette and C. Y. Young, of Clay.

Last Thursday was Cuban day in Congress. The joint resolution appropriating $50,000 to relieve the necessities of American citizens in Cuba passed the House and goes to the President, and the Morgan resolution, declaring that a state of public war exists in Cuba, was adopted by the Senate.

The spot on the balcony of the State Capitol, in Montgomery, Ala., upon which Jefferson Davis stood when inaugurated, thirty-six years ago, as President of the Confederacy of Southern States, was marked, on May 20, with elaborate ceremonies by the Society of Daughters of the Confederacy. A handsome 12-inch silver star was imbedded in the stone flooring of the veranda as a permanent record of where Mr. Davis stood.

Despite the ill-natured opposition of certain people the United States is to be fittingly represented at the forthcoming celebration of Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee—the sixtieth anniversary of her accession to the throne of Great Britain and Ireland. In addition to our ambassador at the court of St. James, the country will be represented by Gen. Miles, the commanding general of the army, and by Rear Admiral Miller, of the navy.

The Constitutional Convention of Delaware will probably adjourn this week after a session of five months. It has given the State a new Constitution, the present one having been in existence unchanged since 1831.

It is reported from Washington that the President and his advisers do not favor pressing the Morgan belligerency resolution, because the President himself is preparing a scheme for the settlement of the Cuban problem in a way that would avert war, and at the same time secure liberty for the Cubans. Just what this scheme is is not divulged, but it no doubt involves mediation and friendly intervention.

FOREIGN.

The Graeco-Turkish trouble is now fairly entered upon its diplomatic bargaining stage, and the negotiations are expected to last some time. Many important differences are to be settled.

Cambridge University, on May 21, by a vote of 1713 to 662, rejected the proposal to confer degrees upon women.

A trolley line from Cairo to the Pyramids is in the course of erection. In addition to this the Anglo-Egyptian government is considering plans to lay down a steam railway from Cairo to the Red Sea.

It is reported that the Countess Castellane, formerly Miss Anna Gould, intends to devote a million francs to the purchase of a site and the erection of a building in Paris, to be used for all kinds of charitable purposes. It is to be in memory of her mother.

After being twice chased by Spanish gunboats and passing through a perfect storm of shot, which splashed in the water across the vessel's bows, the British fruit steamer "Ethelred" passed through the exciting ordeal unscathed and arrived at Philadelphia, after a five-day run from Port Antonio, Jamaica.

The recognition of Cuban belligerency by the United States is likely to lead to similar recognition by the leading Latin-American countries, with the exception of Chili. The pro-Cuban sentiment in Central America is very strong, and the governments there are only awaiting the initiative of the United States.

An armistice has been concluded between the Greek and Turkish troops. The indemnity which Greece will pay to Turkey will be in proportion to the resources of Greece and her financial position. The cession of territory is out of the question. Greece can not accept a modification of the strategetic frontier, which would render easy the landing on Greek territory of armed bands, which would compel Greece to maintain a numerous army in order to prevent such incursions.

Dist. Secretaries.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement, in another column, of Potter College for Young Ladies, Bowling Green, Ky. This is one of the best furnished and equipped schools in the South. It has had wonderful success from the time it was first established, drawing patronage from twenty-six States. The teachers are selected with great care. The Department of Music is unusually fine, every teacher being an artist of the highest order. Parents wishing to select a good college for their daughters would do well to send for catalogue and examine the advantages of this school.

THE OBSTACLE AHEAD.

There's always a river to cross,
Always an effort to make,
If there's anything good to win,
Any rich prize to take.

Yonder's the fruit we crave;
Yonder the charming scene;
But deep and wide, with a troubled tide,
Is the river that lies between.

For rougher the way that we take,
The stouter the heart and the nerve;
The stones in our path we break,
Nor e'er from our impulse swerve;

For the glory we hope to win
Our labor we count no loss,
'Tis folly to pause and murmur because
Of the river we have to cross.

Communications.

From the Interior.

Well, the preachers and the leading laymen have begun to consider and to discuss what ought and what ought not to be done by the next General Conference. This is a favorable indication. It shows an interest in the church, and in the progress and prosperity of our Zion. I believe it is pretty generally agreed that the present panel of Bishops, even if one or two should die or become superannuated, is sufficient to meet all the necessary demands on the episcopacy for the next quadrennium. However, men will differ in judgment on this subject, and, no doubt, it will be ably and largely discussed in the next eleven months. For my own part, I am decidedly in favor of having only enough Bishops to do the work required of them.

It is a good thing that all these matters are discussed and practically settled in the papers before the General Conference convenes. It allows time and opportunity for careful and prayerful consideration, and the conclusion arrived at will be safer. Of course, the presiding-elder question will be discussed again. This has been a bone of contention for long years, and, perhaps, will be for years to come. I know of no one, preacher or layman, who thinks of doing away with it. It is essential and indispensable in our economy. Some are strongly in favor of enlarging the districts and having fewer presiding elders. I think this would be a wise thing to do. We do not need a large corps of Bishops and sub-Bishops to supervise the affairs of the church. All this work can be well done by fewer men. Our great need is more and better field hands.

One of the chief complaints against presiding elders could be effectually stopped if the stewards would abide by the law of the church as defined by the college of Bishops, and if the presiding elders would have them to go by that law. In many sections in the interior the collections for the support of the ministry are small. It often happens that Boards of Stewards pay the presiding elder up in full at each quarterly meeting and allow the shortage to fall on the preacher. There ought to be a pro rata division of the funds on hand at each quarterly meeting, and the stewards and presiding elders ought to see that this is done. In some cases preachers in charge have been put in close corners by this action. I find that many stewards and some preachers have never read or noted paragraph 558 on page 305 of our Discipline. If that rule were faithfully carried out, one complaint would be dead. The presiding elder gets to a quarterly meeting every week—sometimes to two or three a week—and gets his pay by the week, and the preacher gets his once in three months, and, in some instances, not that often. It would seem that presiding elders ought to say to Boards of Stewards: "No, brethren; it is not right for you to give me any part of that preacher's money." Few men, comparatively, have the moral courage to refuse money when offered to them. This discrimination against the pastor is not calculated to make him feel good, specially if his needs are pressing.

The evangelist question is discussed, pro and con, in nearly every neighborhood. Some think the church ought to provide for an order of evangelists, and others think not. In the range of my travels I think the great majority of our more intelligent preachers and laymen are opposed to the church providing for an order of ministers to be known as evangelists. In this I think they are right. An itinerancy within an itinerancy, or over or around an itinerancy, will be a little too much of a good thing. What we have has worked wonderously well for more than one hundred years, and it is working efficiently now, and I am in favor of sticking to it as it is. I think this is the mind of the great body of our people, both preachers and laymen.

There are a few persons, both lay and clerical, male and female, who would have the next General Conference to define holiness, sanctification, perfection, and such like. Indeed, they would have an "Article of Religion" adopted setting forth the "second blessing" as the doctrinal belief of the church. Creed making is slow, hard work. It requires a fund of information that few individuals possess. Most of the creeds have been the growth of ages and the condensed result of many hard-fought battles. We have had some mushroom growths in the way of creeds—a kind of Jonah's gourd—that were mashed all to pieces before the ink with which they were written was good dry. The General Conference will not change, nor provide to have changed, a single one of our "Articles of Religion," either by amendment, elimination, or addition. There is no need for it, no demand for it. I would like to see specimens of an article on holiness drawn up by those who think we ought to have an article on that subject. I doubt if a world-wide convention of "second-blessing" people could agree on the wording of it. I am perfectly certain that they would want an article on "Original Sin," and one on "Conviction," and one on "Repentance," and one on "Regeneration," and one on "Justification," before they got ready to formulate an article on "Sanctification." Before they got done with it, they would have a creed as long as the creed of the Cumberland Presbyterians. Making a creed is hard work, and having it adopted by everybody is still harder work. I don't wonder that creeds stand so long, stand even after they fail to express the doctrinal beliefs of those who accept them. When a form of sound words has once been adopted it is dangerous to tinker with it, or to attempt to change it. A word is a sign and not a substance, and yet not a few people think the signs they use to express their idea of holiness are the real substance of the thing itself. To question the sign is to deny the thing. The General Conference will say nothing on this subject.

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

Thousands of people in this so-called Christian land seem to have entirely forgotten the Sabbath day.

Let every Leaguer in Mississippi rigidly observe the Christian Sabbath, and seek to influence others to do the same.

Some time ago a preacher in Mississippi who was riding on the train on Sunday, asked the conductor why they did not discontinue the running of trains on Sunday. "We have to run them to carry you preachers," was the reply. What a rebuke!

Be sure you don't go to the post-office for your mail on the Sabbath day, and by all means refrain from reading the secular newspaper on that holy day.

The Epworth League stands for a strict observance of the Christian Sabbath, and no Leaguer should vote for a man for any position of trust who lightly esteems this "one day in seven" which has been specially set apart for worship.

To the young men and women of to day America looks for the perpetuation of all the civil and religious principles which have made her the greatest country in all the world.

We have just mailed copy of Constitution, By-laws, etc., for organization of a League to a religious doctor at Red Banks, Miss. This medical practitioner is interested in the work, and writes for hints and helps. God bless this brother, and may he not only alleviate the suffering of the bodies of men, but may he lead many souls to Christ!

Our friend and brother, Dr. Featherstun, of Central Church, Meridian, writes inviting us to Meridian to give them a talk on the work of the Epworth League. He expects us during our stay to represent the Orphans' Home. The Doctor is an aggressive man, and is in sympathy and close touch with every movement of the church. From the first he has taken much interest in the League.

We are in receipt of a copy of the Centenary News, a paper published in the interest of our church at McComb City. It is edited by the pastor, Rev. Joshua M. Morse. Of course, it has an Epworth League column.

How many Leaguers in Mississippi take the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE? It is the official organ of our church in Mississippi, and contains many notices and announcements from time to time that ought to be read by every member of the church. Besides this, it is filled with other valuable facts and always contains editorials that are sound in doctrine and good to the use of edifying.

The Epworth League is, of course, an Anti-Saloon League. Let every League pledge to work and pray until there shall not be found a dram-shop anywhere upon the soil of Mississippi. The saloon must go.

Rev. A. F. Watkins, of Vicksburg, the newly elected president of the State League Conference, will shortly publish the names of the district secretaries. One person in each presiding elder's district to correspond and in other ways to look after the work of the Epworth League.

"Onward, Christian soldiers! marching as to war,
With the cross of Jesus, going on before."

Water Valley, Miss.

YE BISHOP'S TUMBLE—A TALE OF YE TENTH CENTURY.

BY A BISHOP OF THE OUACHITA.

I.

"Ye climber climbs, and ye headpiece dilates."

Oh, have ye read the latest screed?
Have ye beheld the doughty deed,
And seen unleashed the brand-new creed
Upon ite frolic?
And did ye recognize the breed—
High Apostolic?

And all the world was keeping Lent,
The way the good old Romans went,
And Prayer Book days were eloquent,
Its leaves a-flutter;
Meat market fell full ten per cent.,
And bread and butter.

The forty days were nearly through;
The fasting but intenser grew,
With many a foible brought to view,
Each life reviewing;
With body, soul, and spirit, too,
Etherealizing.

The mind was now prepared to soar
And touch the naughty earth no more,
Full-fledged with theologic lore
And learning fraught;
Big brains galore and running o'er
With modern thought.

Thus far outstripping you and me,
Like Evolution on a spree,
The magnate he did climb a tree,
Seductive o'er him,
Where Evolution ancestry
Had climbed before him.

A tree most pleasant to the eyes,
A tree desired to make men wise,
The tree of knowledge with its prize
Of good and evil;
Whose luscious fruits would appetize
The very Devil.

High in the boughs, and posing well,
He had a message for to tell,
Superior, grave, majestical—
A churchly figure,
His headpiece slightly on the swell,
And growing bigger.

II.

"Ye quotation marks show what discourse fell from ye heights."

"The age," he said, "advances fast;
Each saint's supremer than the last;
While hell-redemption sure and vast
Hastes on to meet us,
And sin, by science downward cast,
Gets its quietus.

"To save the soul is no great feat;
Atonement's long since obsolete;
And sin's no harder now to treat
Than baby's colic;
We have a nostrum good and sweet,
Pure Apostolic.

"There is no need of saving blood;
There is no straight and narrow road;
The sinner is a part of God,
If you but know it;
Just turn him loose and pet him good,
And he'll outgrow it.

"The old religion's got askew;
We'll trick it out in language new;
The same old chestnuts not a few
Will serve to run it;
While we, the consecrated crew,
Hold patents on it.

"Poor Bishop Meade is out of date,
And Bishop White has shared his fate,
And Cranmer's gone the same old gate
Of dead Apostles;
And Bishop Polk and all that set
Are buried fossils.

"The Bible, too, has had its day;
You see how I have had my say
And kept its chapters all at bay;
That mystic story
Has evolved all away—
A transient glory.

"We are the wise men of the ages,
And pampered self gives ampler wages—
Sainthood advanced to glorious stages
By leaps elastic;
We are the scholars, we the sages
Ecclesiastic.

"The grand old Evolution craze,
Though it has had its better days,
And men of learning cease to praise
Its myriad blunders,
We preachers now its banners raise
And land its wonders.

"Though earth has failed to prove it true,
Though science owns it will not do,
We'll add another world or two—
Profound abysm—
And make all right by help of U-Ni-ver-sal-ism.

"The Unitarians, too, shall get
All they have ever asked for yet,
And Arius also be our pet,
Though bigots hoot;
Just start the soul along and let—
Her evolute!

"We'll all be gods before we're through,
Divine in chancel and in pew,
Surcharged with Pantheistic dew
Forever flowing;
Yes, all be little Christs, if you
Just keep a-going!"

III.

"Ye collapse and ye scatteration of ye 39 Articles."

Alas! the worthy dignitary,
All erudite and literary,
A little dizzy-fied and airy,
High in the branches,
Lost balance, slipped and fell, unwary,
Upon his haunches.

Like Adam, of a former day,
He evoluted t'other way;
His mitre lay in grim display,
In spots and spatters;
The Prayer Book creeds in disarray,
All torn to tatters.

And then the doctors of the place
Whitewashed his surplice and his face,
And gently diagnosed the case—
Forbidden fruit;
But then they rather hoped his Grace
Didn't go to do 't!

IV.

"Ye ancient legend sighs among ye magnolia bowers."

Thus in the long-forgotten lore
That flitters from the days of yore,
Far back in time unsung before
Of ancient story,
The legend floats to our bright shore,
Sublime and hoary.

There's nothing new beneath the sun,
Said old-time Bishop Solomon;
The self-same tricks since time begun
Till time is ended;
Stale horses still on the run—
Rehashed and splendid!

The Sunday Law in Biloxi.

ITS ENFORCEMENT DEMANDED BY THE LAW-ABIDING CITIZENS.

The following is copy of an open letter addressed to Hon. Thad. A Wood, circuit judge of the Second Judicial District of Mississippi, sent to the Democrat-Star by Rev. C. F. Emery for publication:

To Hon. T. A. Wood, Circuit Judge of the Second Judicial District of Mississippi:

"In view of the open and flagrant violations of the Sunday law, particularly in the city of Biloxi, we, the undersigned, ministers of the gospel and officers in our respective churches, would respectfully represent:

"1. That certain stores and shops are habitually kept open on Sunday and goods and merchandise sold in violation of the statute prohibiting any store, shop or place of business to be kept open or goods and merchandise sold, drug stores alone excepted.

"2. That games of ball, particularly that known as base ball, are played here on Sunday, which games are advertised by placards on the streets and in certain newspapers, and are participated in by clubs from New Orleans, Mobile and elsewhere. It is suggested that a "subpœna duces tecum" for files for the various newspapers published in Biloxi will give full information as to occasions and names of parties.

"3. That crowds of men are to be seen on Sunday about dram shops, and entering into and proceeding from the side or rear doors of said dram shops, and intoxicated men are seen on the streets.

"4. That hunting and fishing are indulged in on Sunday in violation of the statute in that behalf.

"The premises considered, we would respectfully request your Honor, at the ensuing term of the circuit court, to give in special charge to the grand jury sections 1225, 1226, and 1291 to 1295 of the Annotated Code, and they be charged to make diligent inquiry into this state of affairs, and to ascertain the cause thereof.

"That you charge them specially as to the law regulating the sale of liquors and the licenses of keepers of dram shops.

"We would request that in every instance where proof can be had of the sale of liquors to minors, or to intoxicated persons, or on Sunday with doors open or closed, that forfeitures be taken of the bonds of said keepers of dram shops; and also in each and every case of conviction for any of the offenses aforesaid that each and every such convict be required to give bond provided by section 1489 in order to prevent subsequent violations of the law.

"In this behalf we pledge you our hearty co-operation, and humbly pray that the blessings and benediction of the Omniscient Judge of all may crown the labors of yourself, the district attorney, the juries, and all others in authority."

Respectfully submitted,

Correspondence.

Letter from China.

MR. EDITOR: I can scarcely realize that it has been over three months since I wrote to you. I did not expect to let so long a time elapse. The days are so full with me now that they pass by almost without my notice.

I just returned yesterday from a week's trip on the work. First, I went to Nansiang, where I held a kind of Preachers' Institute. Nearly all of the native preachers of the Shanghai district were present. We spent three days there very profitably, I think. Bro. R. A. Parker, pastor in charge at Nansiang, was with me to help instruct the native brethren. We had started out to hold these meetings every two months, but it seemed best at this meeting to make a change. At the beginning of each Chinese year a meeting continuing ten days or two weeks will be held. It is a great help to the natives to get them all together for a time to give them some help in Bible study. They lack the many fresh books that are our treasure, so we take this occasion to get good thoughts into them. Would that some one was raised up to translate good, fresh books into the Chinese colloquial. Our native preachers and members will never enjoy reading until they have their books in something beside the classic language. While I would not have the work that is being done for the scholars in the classical language abated one iota, yet I wish this other could be done, too.

On Saturday morning Bro. Parker and myself started for Kading, where his Quarterly Conference was to be held. We were to have gone by wheel-barrow, but though we had the wheel-barrows, we walked at least six miles out of the eight. We had a good Conference that afternoon, and then waited for the Sabbath. We lodged with Bro. Li, the native pastor, and he treated us right royally. We had our bedding along with us, and spread them on the beds that he had prepared for us. Mine was an old spring mattress set on boxes, and Bro. Parker's was a common Chinese bed. We slept well the first night, but on Sunday night an old dog got under our window and serenaded us nearly all night. Dogs in China are a nuisance. . . . I preached for them twice—on Sunday morning and afternoon. In the morning we also had the Lord's Supper. In the afternoon my audience was made up largely of little boys, about sixty; so I made my talk to them.

After a Chinese breakfast, Monday morning, we started about six o'clock for a ten-mile wheel barrow ride to Lieu-'oo, an appointment on Bro. Parker's circuit. We reached there about half-past nine, and after paying our respects to the preacher and his family, we went into the chapel and preached. After service, not being tired enough, we undertook to walk a distance of about four miles to see the Yang-tsi-kiang. However, after going two long miles, we found we were sufficiently worn out for two fellows who had an eighteen-mile wheel-barrow ride to take before bed-time; so we wisely decided to return without satisfying our curiosity. It was well we did, for I was never more worn out in my life than I was when I reached Bro. Parker's home that night. Some good foreign food and a good warm bath restored me, however, and I felt little worse for the trip the next morning. In fact, I was ready for a fourteen-mile wheel barrow ride to Shanghai. Bro. Parker was on his horse this time and fared better than I did. However, we reached the metropolis of the East in a fair condition. It is needless for me to say that I was slightly stiff. I came to the conclusion that so far there was no traveling in China equal to the boat. I was glad when I was aboard mine that night and on my way home to Sung Kiang. I got rested up and felt quite well when I arose the next morning.

This is my last round for the second quarter. There has been nothing phenomenal this quarter, but the reports showed some growth for the district. Enough for this time.

Yours fraternally,

W. B. BURKE.

Sung Kiang, China, April 15, 1897.

A LOOKING-GLASS

BY PRISCILLA LEONARD

This world is like a looking glass
And if you want to see
People frown at you as you pass
And use you slightingly,
If you want quarrels, snubs and foes,
Put on a fretful face—
Scowl at the world—you'll find it shows
The very same grimace.

This world is like a looking-glass,
And if you wish to be
On pleasant terms with all who pass,
Smile on them pleasantly.
Be helpful, generous and true,
And very soon you'll find
Each face reflecting back to you
An image bright and kind.

Is Faith a Gift of God?

Bishop Keener's article on "The Constitution of Faith" reminds me of an unpleasant experience I had with my committee on the second year's course of study. In my sermon on Justification by Faith, I used about the same language that Bishop Keener does in reference to faith as a gift of God. The committee considered me unsound in doctrine, and refused to pass my case until a satisfactory explanation had been given. So, knowing that the statement that faith is a gift of God is liable to misconstruction, I will endeavor to give a few thoughts on the subject.

All saving faith must be subjective and objective. Objective faith must precede the subjective, and it comes from God, who is the only object of true faith. Hence it is the gift of God. Subjective faith is not an entity, but an act of the mind predicted on objective faith. So it can not be a gift. All knowledge presupposes natural faith. Man apprehends all reality, not of himself through faith, a faith born of the soul.

Psychologically, faith is the faculty grasping evidence, with a disposition to admit it, when duly presented to the mind. Faith is that act of the mind in which we are convinced of the existence of what is not before us and of what is not under our sense, or any other direct cognative power.

It is as truly an energy of the mind, as conception, feeling, imagination. Every one has and must have faith of some kind. He who insists on immediate knowledge before he will believe, must get out of this world, for he is not fit for it; and can he believe any other? Certainly not. It is in consequence of possessing this general capacity that man is enabled to entertain specific forms of faith. So by a native principle he is led to believe in that of which he can have no adequate conception—in the infinity of space and time and on evidence of his existence being presented, in the infinity of the great God. Now this is the natural level by which man is raised to a faith in all the great divine truths, which God has been pleased to reveal to him.

We now reach the question, and by reason and revelation we see how faith is the gift of God, and at the same time the free act of man.

So far as faith is the voluntary act of man, it is psychologically the same in the theological sense as in common life. So the difference must lie in the object, and not in the act, which is of the creature.

In order to venerate or love our fellow-man, we must believe in his worthiness, we must trust and confide in him. So for the fear, reverence, obedience, and love of God, which are fundamental principles of Christianity, faith must pre-exist. But this tendency of the soul toward God is not natural, and does not spring from the natural action of the mind, but must be superinduced by a supernatural power; and is wrought in the heart by the Holy Ghost, and the pure word of the gospel and the free grace of God. "He that believeth shall be saved." Belief here implies all that faith can. It means to trust implicitly in, and rely wholly on God; which trust and reliance will evoke love and obedience. "He that believeth not shall be damned," because he can not love and obey.

Now, if faith is the abstract is the gift of God, then he who believes is saved, because God gave him faith, and he who believes not is damned, because God did not give him faith. This would make God just as much the wilful destroyer of one as the Savior of the other; which is contrary to the justice of God and the free agency of man. From the foregoing we arrive at the following conclusion:

1. Faith is not only a due recognition of what is supernatural and incomprehensible; but an acceptation of and a full trust in Christ as a present Savior and Redeemer.

2. It is the power of faith that is the gift of God and not the act of believing.

3. Faith invariably produces good works.

4. The faith that appropriates the merits of Christ to the saving of the soul must be a living faith.

5. It is not the faith nor the power of faith that saves, but the object of faith. The atoning merits of Christ Jesus the Savior and Redeemer of all men.

How Did John Baptize?

The question, "How did John baptize?" has been a subject of controversy for those years without so much as agreeing to disagree. Not half so much would be said if some would-be modern apostles would quit going up and down the land ostracizing from the kingdom of grace and glory all those who do not believe all they say.

If we will take a "Thus saith the Lord" for it, and not confound the "where" and "what" John did with the "how," this question can be settled. The Scriptures so much referred to as so definitely teaching immersion as the only mode of baptism only state what was done and where, and not how it was done.

If John the Baptist and the apostles had never baptized anywhere else except in the river Jordan, even this would not prove that immersion was the mode. The Scriptures show very clearly how John baptized, and that he baptized "in" and into without a river, lake or pond.

In Matt. iii, 5 and 6, it is said: "Then went out to him Jerusalem and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins." We are told here what was done. He "baptized," and where it was done—"in Jordan"—but not how. But it is said the inference is that it was by immersion because it was "in Jordan." So it is said in Mark i, 4: "John did baptize in the wilderness." Did he immerse in the soil of the wilderness? If baptized "in Jordan" means immersed in the river, then baptized "in the wilderness" means immersed in the soil. But John tells us how he baptized "in Jordan" and "in the wilderness." In Matt. iii, 11, he says, "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance." In Mark i, 8, he tells us how he baptized in the wilderness. "I indeed have baptized you with water, but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost." Take another text—John i, 28: "These things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing." This tells us where John was and what he was doing, but not how. In John i, 33, he tells us how and by what authority. "But he that sent me to baptize with water the same said unto me." Again in John x, 40, it is said, "And Jesus went away again beyond Jordan into the place where John at first baptized and there abode." Here, again, we have only the "where" and the "what," but not the "how." We are told that Jesus abode "unto the place where John at first baptized." Was that in the water of Jordan? No; John first baptized in Bethabara beyond Jordan, and John i, 31, tells how he did it—"Therefore am I come baptizing with water."

Peter tells us in Acts i, 15, how John baptized. "For John truly baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence." Who told Peter John baptized with water? The Lord. Acts xi, 16, "Then remembered I the word of the Lord how he said unto me, John did indeed baptize with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost." Is it reasonable to suppose that if immersion is the only "how" to be baptized, that our Lord and John the Baptist always, in speaking of the element to be used, would always say "with water" and never "in" or "into." John did baptize in Jordan, in the wilderness, in Bethabara, but always "with water."

Our Lord said "with water;" John the Baptist said "with water;" Peter said "with water;" and not a single text says "in" or "into" or "under" the water. It is passing strange to us that some people never see anything but a river, lake or pond in connection with baptism, when the truth is out of the thirteen cases of baptism mentioned in the New Testament a river is only mentioned twice. He is a good prosumer who will continue to say "in water," while the Scriptures say "with water."

Song Books and Singing in Our Churches.

There are song books and song books! The country is flooded with them, of all titles, styles and characters; and in the publication of most of them there is an eye more to business than to religious worship.

The song writing of the day is more a profession than the outgrowth of religious feeling—more sentimental than experimental. The making and vending of the books is more for pecuniary profit than spiritual edification. This is evident from the character of the matter of which most of them are made. A great many of the songs are but namby-pamby doggerel, and much of the so-called music is merely nonsensical jingle that caters to ears itching for the fanciful and sensational rather than for the real and wholesome. Many devices are used to introduce into our churches and Sunday schools song books regardless of their merit or adaptability and of the better judgment of those whose duty it is to provide for and direct in the worshiping exercises.

Almost every evangelist and music leader has a new song book which is impertinently thrust upon the people regardless of their wishes or of the supply of books that may be on hand and in use. This entails endless expense and produces confusion in the song services of our churches, for by this means one congregation has one book, and another a different one, and so on, ad infinitum. Thus our beautiful uniformity of worship is marred, our connectional spirit is broken, and our carefully compiled and long tested church hymnody is depreciated and displaced by books the circulation of which is prompted more by selfish gain than a desire to promote the worship of God.

It is time for us, as a church, to seriously consider the evil of this state of things and to take a firm stand against this impudent foisting upon our people of professional and irresponsible matter for use in our religious services, some of which is unsound in doctrine and of doubtful propriety for use in divine worship. In order to prevent the working of this leaven in our congregations the preachers must observe their ministerial vows and duties and maintain the order for public worship, especially that which relates to singing, as prescribed in the Discipline, paragraphs 222-227, also 120 and 447.

The pastor is to be recognized as master of ceremonies in all services conducted by him, and the superintendent as the same in the Sunday-school, and they should not be expected to relegate the selection of songs for the occasion to anyone else. The Hymn Book authorized and prepared by the church should be used as the standard in all our church services, in the Sunday-school, Epworth League and prayer meeting as well as preaching services. This, of course, does not debar the occasional and judicious use of others as supplementary. But no song book should be introduced by any person for use in any of our church services without the approval of the pastor. He has control of all the services in his churches and is responsible for what is taught in song as in any other way. He, therefore, has the legitimate right to say what books and which songs are to be used. Let the people be taught that our song service is an important feature of divine worship and not for mere entertainment, and should, therefore, be engaged in with thoughtful reverence. If our preachers will act their part in this matter, and study our Hymn and Tune Book, and so use it that the people, old and young, will see what it is and why we use it, they will learn to appreciate its merits, and we will have great improvement in our congregational singing. If other song books are needed or desired as supplementary, be sure to procure such as are endorsed by the church and bear the imprint of our Publishing House.

The Young People's Hymnal has recently been issued in accordance with a resolution passed by the General Conference in 1894. Being, therefore, published under the auspices of the church, it deserves and should have our hearty patronage in the use for which it is designed.

If the above suggestions are heeded by all concerned, we shall doubtless be rid of some troubles and difficulties that environ us, and will have improvement in the quality and quantity of our congregational singing, by which God will be glorified and the people edified.

DEAR SISTERS: Some time has passed since you received any message from Sung Kiang; but I have often thought of you. You have been working and praying all this time for the various parts of the vineyard over which many of us are scattered. You are nearing the close of another Conference year, too. It hardly seems possible that nearly a twelve-month has gone into the past since I was with some of you; but it is true, and I hope this has been a year of growth and enlargement in your borders.

Spring is trying to robe Nature in a new dress, but Winter stays the hand that would touch the fields and flowers with delicate tints. Starting leaves on vines and trees, however, and springing grass show that Winter's reign is almost over. With early Spring comes the "Tsing Wing," or festival of ancestral worship. This festival is but two days distant now. China New Year is a very busy time with the Chinese, but this festival likewise claims much attention and hours of hard work.

"Why are you so late?" asked the teacher of a little girl coming into school. "Because I had to sit up so late folding paper money," is the answer. And this paper money is to be burned by the basketful at the coming festival for the use of ancestors, great ancestors, and great, great ancestors as far back as ancestors extend. Not only so, but tables of food must be prepared for the same ghostly assembly, albeit the hands that prepare them know that the living, and not the dead, will ultimately devour the whole.

"We are too busy," is the answer to invitations to come to our meetings for the seasons mentioned above; but when all these vain ceremonies are over, then we shall have more opportunities to talk to them about the true God, and how we are to worship him; and by the time this festival again rolls around, doubtless many will have learned a new and better way.

The Tupelo Bible woman, Kwe-Tata, had a long conversation a short time ago with a Taoist priest and his mother. Two sons in this family had been priests of this sect. One died several months ago. All the usual ceremonies had been observed, but the beloved son died in spite of them. "So," said the mother, "I do not believe in them. I like to hear your doctrine." The other priestly son was in an adjoining room, and, coming in, joined in the conversation, saying our doctrine was good. His occupation was referred to as a business, and he acknowledged it was; but then he remembered himself, became somewhat angry, and said to the Bible woman: "What are you doing? Yours is also business." She explained and talked awhile longer, and gave him a copy of the Ten Commandments. He read them, and again admitted it was all true and good. She left this bit of Moses' God-given law with him, and went on.

Many, many in Sung Kiang are persuaded that the "Jesus doctrine" is good, but "Ephraim is joined to idols." They sadly lack moral courage; but God can, by the power of his Spirit, imbue them with strength that shall enable them to break the chains that bind them, and acknowledge God to be the true God. Pray for them. Pray for us.

The Foreign Missionary and P. and H. M. Societies, Columbus district, held a joint meeting in Mayhew, Miss., on May 18 and 19. The delegates were met with cheery words of welcome and offers of generous hospitality.

The business of the Foreign Missionary Society was taken up and dispatched the first day. A "Welcome" was recited by seven girls (one representing each letter) from the Juvenile Society in Mayhew. Dinner was served on the grounds, and in the afternoon Miss Annie Lizzie Bergen, one of Mayhew's most accomplished young ladies, delivered the address of welcome. Mrs. Saunders, of Starkville, responded.

On Wednesday morning, at 9:30, the W. P. and H. M. Society met, with the district secretary in the chair. Devotional exercises were conducted by Bro. Ramsey, after which he gave us a most thrilling talk on the necessity of providing homes for our pastors, and gave us his experience in parsonage building without the aid of the W. P. and H. M. Society, after which we were led in prayer by Bro. Spraggins. The house was called to order, and Mrs. Battle Bell appointed recording secretary, who makes an efficient secretary as well as a charming hostess. Only two of the nine societies had delegates, Starkville and Macon, the former being the banner society in foreign work, the latter in the P. and H. M. work. We had reports from several societies through Mrs. Featherston, our able Conference secretary, who is posted along every line of the work. We had a recitation from Addie Hearon, which was appropriate and well rendered, and also a recitation from Lulie Eichholtz, of Columbus. Mrs. King, our delegate from Macon, read a very interesting paper on "The Work: Its Progress and Success," and Mrs. Featherston prepared one reporting all branches of the work on which the societies were not well informed, reporting rapid strides in this branch of mission work. The statistics report the Foreign with 48,000 members and $75,000 paid, and P. and H. M. Society with 15,000 members and $24,000 paid. This is very encouraging, and inspires us with fresh zeal in this branch of the Master's work.

MRS. D. A. SAUNDERS,
Dist. Sec. Columbus Dist.

I am very glad to have the foregoing very satisfactory report of the Columbus district meeting in time for this number of the ADVOCATE, and trust other district secretaries will send me reports of their meetings promptly, so that they may be published during June, while I have control of our P. and H. M. column. Remember, you who wish articles published by this editor, that North Mississippi after this month will not have control again until September.

MRS. H. W. FOOTE.

The death of Mrs. Annie B. Thrasher has left vacant the office of district secretary of Corinth district, North Mississippi Conference, W. P. and H. M. Society.

After correspondence with our dear Annie's mother, Mrs. Joseph M. Bynum, she has kindly consented to take up the daughter's work, and fill the place until the annual meeting in October. She has accordingly been duly appointed district secretary, and we are confident will meet the hearty sympathy and co-operation of all her co laborers. May the blessing of God rest upon the district!

Selections.

Be lazy in your worldly matters, if you will; you will soon feel the effects of it; but don't be lazy in your Christian work. Let it be done promptly. Keep up to time with it. It must not lag behind. Don't be late in the house of God. Don't come in five minutes after the service begins, to disturb pastor and the worship. Don't be late at the prayer meeting. You lose much by it. It is the disadvantage of others also. Don't neglect the evening service because you are weary, or it is too warm. Don't let your class believe you are a lazy laggard, because they are there and you are not. Be on hand, be up to time, be energetic as one determined by the grace of God to succeed, and you will know no failure. The sluggard is the man who says: "Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep."—Christian Instructor.

James Martineau says: "High hearts are never long without hearing some new call, some distant clarion of God, even in their dreams; and soon they are observed to break up the camp of ease and start on some fresh march of faithful service." High hearts are God's noblemen. They breathe rare atmospheres. They always keep in touch with God. They stand ever ready to serve him. They do not wait for orders to serve; they ask for them. They do not consult convenience, nor dodge difficulties. They are a standing interrogation point: What can I do for God? Where can I best serve him? How shall I magnify him?

The good man is a useful man. He is not all ornament. He has his work to do, his place in society to fill, his influence to exert. He is fruitful. Others share in his goodness. Homes are blest, communities improved and the church benefited. He scatters blessings all along his pathway. He is no cumberer of the ground. There is neither a human nor a divine demand for his removal as useless. He is spared year after year on account of his productiveness. By his prayers, his instructions, his counsels, his example, his spirit and his deeds he improves and benefits all who come within his reach.

To apologize for ill-doing or harsh speech is not ignoble. It is the offended isolation, it is the selfish sulkiness, which is unworthy of man or woman. The apology may be difficult at first, but difficulties of this kind we are bound to overcome if we seek to rise with Christ.—S. A. Brooke.

When the air is filled with sunlight there is no opportunity for the deeds of darkness. Where the soul has tasted of the bread of life it can not hunger for the stones of the wilderness. Where God is all to us the world is nothing.—Canon Farrar.

I would not even ask a Hindu to give up the religion that he has, so great is the sacrifice, unless I could supersede it by a more comforting, a more glorious religion, the religion of light and liberty, of life and truth.—Dr. Cumming.

Vigilance in watching opportunity; tact and daring in seizing upon opportunity; force and persistence in crowding opportunity to its utmost of possible achievement—these are the martial virtues which must command success.—Austin Phelps.

Scholars may quote Plato in their studies, but the hearts of millions will quote the Bible at their daily toil, and draw strength from its inspiration, as the meadows draw it from the brook.—Conway.

Hope never hurt any one, never yet interfered with duty; nay, always strengthens to the performance of duty, gives courage, and clears the judgment.—Macdonald.

Education begins at the mother's knee, and every word spoken within the hearing of little children tends toward the formation of their character.—H. Ballou.

Perfect valor consists in doing without witnesses all we should be capable of doing before the whole world.—Rochefoncauld.

Difficulties are God's errands, and when we are sent upon them we should esteem it a proof of God's confidence.

Trials and afflictions are but tests of our faith, and if we successfully withstand the ordeals, we shall be the gainers.

A man is great just in proportion to his superiority to the conditions of life in which he is placed.

A true life is at once interpreter and proof of the gospel.—Whittier.

Make your life a ministry of love, and it will always be worth living.

To Whom it May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. Black,

FROM THE WORK.

GREENWOOD, LA.

My work is developing nicely. Am planning to build a good church in South Shreveport. Hope to be able to convert the chapel. We now worship in into a parsonage. Had a good meeting two weeks ago at Jordan Street Church.

Harry W. May.

MONTROSE CIRCUIT, MISS.

Bro. R. W. Burton and myself are getting on very nicely. Our congregation are large and appreciative. We hope to accomplish great good this year for our Lord. The Brandon District High School has just closed a very prosperous session under the presidency of Bro. Geo. W. Burton. The people here are delighted with him. He will remain with us another session. The prospects for this school is brightening.

M. L. White, P. C.

ARCADIA, LA.

I am in the home stretch of my second round of Quarterly Conferences. Only five more to hold to finish this round. Have met them all, and am thankful that the outlook is somewhat brighter than it was in the Winter. I have not spared myself; have traveled twice over this large district and preached eighty-five times, and can eat and sleep well. Some precious good meetings. I believe that preachers and people are looking forward for a year of gracious renewals in every pastoral charge. I thank God that all the preachers have been able to do full work. B. T. Crews, P. E.

COLUMBIA, MISS.

The work at Columbia is doing well. We have a Sunday-school, large and attentive, ably superintended by W. E. Lampton, a consecrated Christian. Children's Day will be observed next Sunday, and it is sure to be a success, as there has been enthusiastic preparation. One feature of the work is not encouraging, and that is the non-attendance of the members who are settled, and to whom the preacher looks for spiritual assistance at the weekly prayer meetings. There is a fine high school here and the students compose three-fourths or more of the prayer meeting congregations.

H. B. Trevilion.

WINNSBORO, LA.

For the first time in the history of the Winnsboro Church we are able to say we have a parsonage, and we are very proud of it. Inspired by the efforts of the pastor, Rev. I. L. Bronson, the people took a lively interest in the undertaking and responded liberally to his call for help. But it is mainly to his untiring energy and zeal, and that of his estimable wife, that we are indebted for the cozy, home-like appearance the house has gained under their efforts. They have been retiring in their exertions to fit it up, and the result is a pleasant home from rather unpromising materials. The house is small, but susceptible of enlargement, and the grounds are spacious, with all necessary outbuildings. I think I may safely say that few would have worked as hard as they have, and the whole work owes them a debt of gratitude and love.

C. M. Ramage.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT FAYETTE, MISS.

The anniversary of Children's Day was observed at the Methodist Church on May 16 and a very interesting programme was presented to an exceedingly large congregation, the old-time honored edifice being crowded. There was excellent music and a number of appropriate and well rendered recitations. A very timely address was delivered by the pastor, Rev. R B Rayner. The edifice was tastefully decorated by the ladies. Supt. W. W. Ellis and L. W. Carradine deserve credit for their interest in getting up such a pleasant programme. Everyone seemed delighted. J. M. Jackson.

CENTRAL ACADEMY, MISS.

The Burgess Mission is moving along smoothly up to this writing. We have not made any great strides, but are expecting to reap a great harvest for the Lord. I do not believe that he is going to disappoint us.

Our second Quarterly Conference was held May 13. We had a good time, though our presiding elder, Dr. Wier, was not with us. He was thrown from his horse some time ago and did not get to this appointment, but sent Dr. W. S. Shipman, who showed us some of the sign boards from earth to heaven on the subject of tithing. He presented his subject clearly, and I hope that his effort may bring forth an hundred-fold. We thank Bro. Shipman for his labors, and when Dr. Wier's time is out on the district, if I do not go with him, I hope the Bishop will give us Shipman. J. R Wilson.

ESCATAWPA, MISS.

I have not been well enough to preach since the first Sunday in April. My people have been very kind. I will ever cherish in my heart the love and sympathy shown me and my family. How we enjoyed the visits and kind words and the sweet, earnest prayers of C. A. Powell, Beall, Cooper and Howell! How these prayers encouraged us and lifted us beyond the shadows and sorrows of the sick-room!

At one time I could not see my precious wife and little ones. My room was flooded with heavenly light until I thought the angels had come for me. Peace and joy flood my soul. Dr. McLeod, of Moss Point, is treating me. I am compelled to give up my work for several months. Rev. W. T. Beall, of Moss Point, will supply my work temporarily. I ask my friends to remember me in their prayers.

THOMAS POPE FULLILOVE.

Thomas Pope Fullilove was the eldest child of James G. and Tabitha Fullilove; born in Talbot county, Ga., Oct. 29, 1832; died April 16, 1897, at his home near Shreveport, La. He was married to Elizabeth J Samford, Jan. 20, 1859, at the home of her father, Wm F. Samford, LL.D., in Auburn, Lee county, Ala.

He received his collegiate education at Franklin College, Athens, Ga., finishing the course in 1853. He joined the church early in life, and was a consistent member for over fifty years. His choice was the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, whose doctrine and tenets he conscientiously and intelligently believed; but he had the broad charity which recognizes brotherhood in Christ for all men of whatever denomination.

His rule of action was to "serve God in spirit and in truth," and "to do unto others as he would have them do unto him." Few men could record so many deeds of mercy and Christian love, performed unostentatiously, falling like the dew from heaven, as silent and as beneficient. Passing through life with the gentle, considerate dignity and kindliness of the Christian gentleman, he scattered about him, and upon all the needy in his path, timely aid and loving sympathy. It was as natural as the air he breathed "to do good and communicate."

His friends were numbered by simply counting all who knew him, and the inner circle embraced those who knew him best.

As an epitome of this noble life, a single remark may serve, made at his funeral by a business man who had been intimately associated with him in various relations for nearly forty years: "I do not believe there is a man, woman, or child, who can put his hand on an act of his life and say 'he was unjust, or even unkind.'"

There were no brilliant achievements, perhaps, to be recorded from a worldly standpoint, for the weapons of his warfare were not carnal. His nature was modest and retiring, claiming nothing from men but the privilege of loving them, and his victories are written in lines of light above.

He was fond of literature, and during his whole life kept in touch with the best minds of the day, in Church and State.

To his family he filled the measure of their ambition, in the Christ-like attributes which ranked him a son of the King. To his children he has left a royal heritage; and in the atmosphere of the serenely beautiful home-life have grown up sons and daughters who exemplify the principles daily inculcated in fairest object-lessons by father and mother. No one has passed the lintel of that home, or entered its wide open doors, without a sense of benediction, a friendly heart-glow, following.

Bodily affliction for many years prevented his regular attendance on the public services of the church, but his heart was there; and his home was in every sense the home of God's ministers. No greater pleasure ever came into his life than the congenial companionship of the preachers who visited him.

It has been said of him that "he was generous to a fault," but as his life neared its close he often said, if he could live it over again, he "would do so much good."

His fatal illness was caused by grip, terminating in bronchopneumonia. During the long three months of intense suffering his patience never faltered nor his faith. He became not only reconciled, but so rejoicing in the realization that "fellowship with Christ comes through suffering" that he exclaimed, "Nail me to the cross; nail me to the cross!"

His last hours were a verification of his earnest and beautiful life. Surrounded by his children, all six of whom have attained maturity, and ministered to with tenderest devotion by his faithful wife, all that could alleviate the crucifixion of pain and the darkness of the valley was present. In answer to prayer his sufferings ceased toward the end; his mind was clear, his faith strong; and, as his best beloved knelt close to him whispering words of love, and the unfailing promises, seeking to follow him to the uttermost verge of the boundary line, he continued to testify, as he went down into the chill waters, that "there was no pain;" he "saw the light ahead" sending back such notes of glad assurance, until almost the last soft sigh said he was gone.

On Good Friday he died, on Easter Sunday he was consigned to the tomb, in joyful hope of a glorious resurrection. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord!" E. B. Foster.

George Francis Train, the famous sage of Madison Square, who has for thirty years declined the companionship of any one but children, says, "I am a child myself."

If a man will live rightly and take proper care of his health during youth and maturity he may live to a green old age, and still be able to say with absolute truth, "I am a child myself." Youth is not a matter of years. Happiness is not a question of experiences. Youth is happiness and health is youth. The healthy person, young or old, will be a happy person. It is a simple matter to get the body into a healthy condition and then to keep it there. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the greatest of health makers and health savers. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It makes the appetite keen, the digestion and assimilation perfect, the liver active, the blood pure, the muscles strong, the brain clear, the nerves steady and every vital organ in the body healthy and vigorous. It makes firm, healthy flesh, but does not make corpulent people more corpulent. It does not make flabby flesh like cod liver oil. It purifies the blood and drives out the poisons of malaria and rheumatism. It is the best remedy for blood and skin diseases. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption. Grateful patients, who had been given up to die, have permitted their experiences, names, addresses and photographs to be reproduced in Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. The sufferer who wishes to investigate may write to any of these. The 'Golden Medical Discovery' is sold by all medicine dealers, and only unscrupulous dealers will try to induce a customer to take some worthless substitute for the sake of a few pennies added profit.

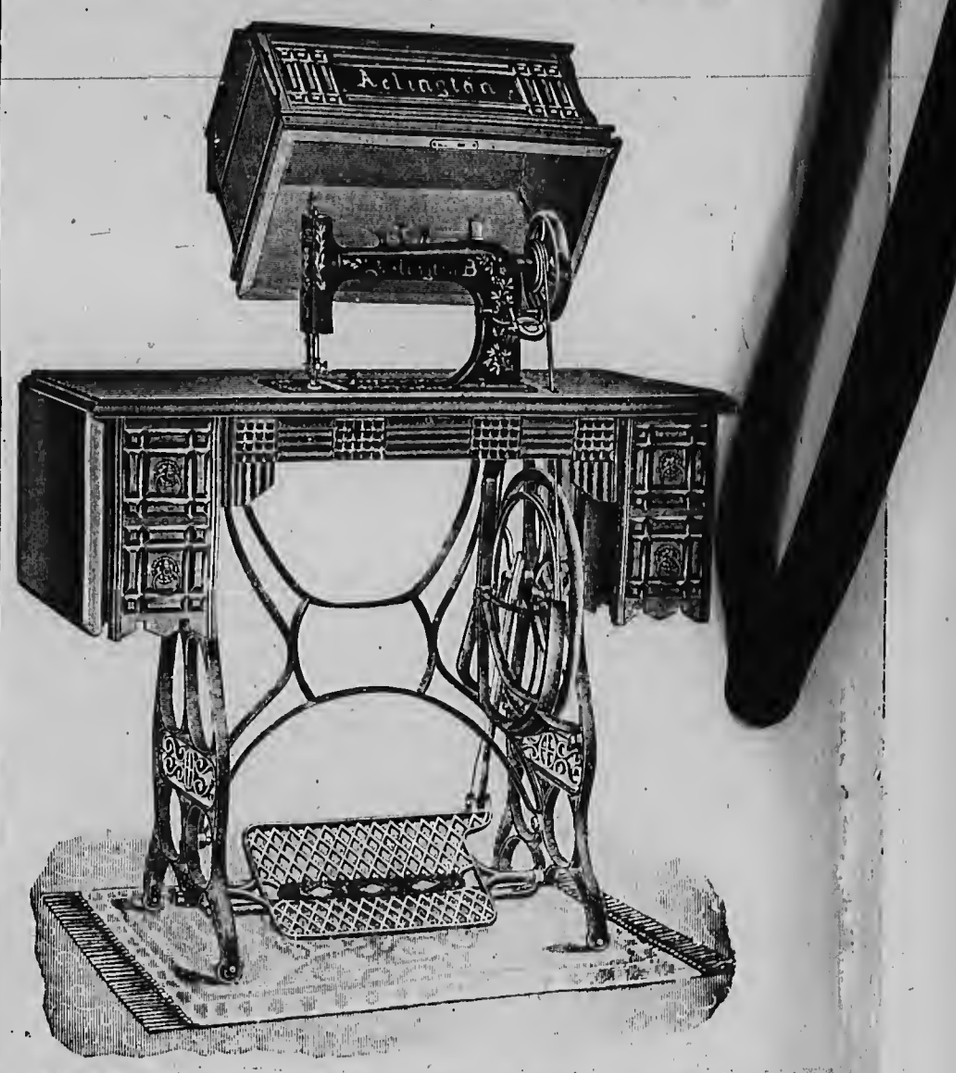
Our Machine Offer.
New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine



A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanism is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

The Head is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

Needle Bar is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

Improved Automatic Bobbin Winder which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

Self-Threading—The "Arlington B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

The Needle is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

Self-Threading Shuttle—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

Loose Pulley for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change of adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

Parts Subject to Wear are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the New Orleans Advocate one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to December, '98, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

To resent an injury is man-like; to forgive it is God-like.

Your arrow is not apt to strike higher than the mark you aim at.

The best cure for sorrow is to do something for some one else who is in trouble.

Satan can tempt you against your will, but he can not conquor you without your consent to be conquered.

"Calamity leaves fully half your life untouched." That is true only of a thoroughly consecrated Christian.

I would not undervalue the culture of the intellect, but would exalt the culture of the heart.—Frances E. Willard.

It is hardly worth while for you to go through the Bible if you are not going to allow the Bible to go through you.—Exchange.

Don't call every duty and every petty annoyance "a cross," and then imagine yourself a rival of our Savior in self-abnegation.

I never knew a child of God being bankrupted by his benevolence. What we keep we may lose, but what we give to Christ we are sure to keep.—T. L. Cuyler.

One of the paradoxes of the Christian life is that the nearer to God we are the more unworthy we feel, and the farther we are from God the higher opinion we have of ourselves.—Exchange.

What an inconsistency! To seek reconciliation with God, while we ourselves are unreconciled to our neighbors! to seek to have our own sins remitted, while we retain the sins of others!—Tertullian.

Most people dread far more the social frown which follows the doing of something conventionally wrong than they do the qualms of conscience which follow the doing of something intrinsically wrong.—Herbert Spencer.

It is very well for a man to "quit his meanness," but the mere fact of his doing so does not prove him to be a saint. Many a rascal quits certain kinds of meanness after he has gotten rich. He is as mean as he ever was, but he wants respectability.

All that I have taught of art, everything that I have written, every greatness that there has been in any thought of mine, whatever I have done in my life, has simply been due to the fact that when I was a child my mother daily read with me a part of the Bible, and daily made me learn a part of it by heart.—John Ruskin.

Sheep and Shepherd.

Numerous volumes have been written upon the relation and duties of pastors to their flocks, but the other side of the subject has received but scant attention. The common notion is that the whole responsibility devolves upon the pastor, while the people are free to do as they please, being under little or no obligation to respect his authority and follow his leading. Is it not, however, as clearly the duty of the flock to follow the shepherd and heed his voice as it is his duty to feed, guide and protect them? No Christian who gives the subject due consideration can fail to perceive that upon each member of the flock rests grave responsibility growing out of the relationship sustained to the shepherd.

One of the first duties which church members owe to their pastor is that of co-operation, which has a wide application. As has often been said, no general does all the fighting. Without obedience and co-operation on the part of the private soldiers, he is powerless before the enemy. The same thing is true in the church. It is a sad fact that in many communities the people expect their spiritual shepherd to look after everything, from having the house of worship cleaned and ventilated up to raising his own salary. Ministers certainly have enough to do without being troubled with things of secondary importance that ought to be attended to by the membership.

Many a preacher's hands are tied because the officials and leading members of his charge manifest the most shameful indifference toward both the spiritual and the temporal affairs of the church. It goes without saying that growth and fervent piety will be looked for in vain where the pastor is expected to do all the exhorting, praying, collecting, visiting and soul-saving. It matters not how gifted and earnest a minister may be, he can accomplish but little where there is lack of sympathy and co-operation. We are told of the city of Nazareth that our Lord could do no mighty works there because of their unbelief. Many Methodists are willing to see the church prosper, provided the pastor and other members do all the work, having somehow imbibed the unwarranted and dangerous notion that they are exempt from service. If every member were to be as negligent as many are, the church would soon go to pieces. That so many are faithless is the more reason why the few should never falter. It is folly to talk about helping the pastor when you wantonly criticize him in the presence of your family and before the outside world. Ministers are but men, and it would be miraculous if any of them were faultless; but to magnify their faults, and then parade them before the world, is to undermine their influence, and do the cause of Christ incalculable injury. Many a youth who has drifted off into infidelity and wickedness dates the beginning of his downward course to his loss of confidence in the ministry, produced by thoughtless criticism. If your pastor has any fault that ought to be corrected, or is making a mistake in some course of action, go and talk with him kindly about the matter; but, above all things, say nothing to others about his defects and shortcomings. One of the things expressly forbidden in the General Rules is "speaking evil of magistrates and ministers."

Frequently, when a preacher thunders against the special sins of which some of his flock are guilty, they become indignant, and raise the cry that, instead of feeding the sheep, he is beating them. It is all right for the man of God to denounce the sins of the Turks or the Chinese, but when he hits close home he is charged with being personal. Take care, brethren, that none of you raise such a cry unjustly. "If the cap fits you, wear it." What is the pastor for but to tell you of your duty and warn you of your sins? To continually prophesy smooth things is to be unfaithful to God.

Occasionally, churchmen get out of temper and refuse to have anything to do with the church because their plans and suggestions are not carried out. If the pastor acts contrary to your notions and advice, do not sulk like spoiled children, but defer to his judgment, and make the best of it. Give heed to the Scripture injunction: "Obey them that have rule over you, and submit yourselves: for they watch for your souls as they that must give account, that they may do it with joy, and not with grief: for that is unprofitable for you."

It is passing strange that many are so ready to ascribe extraordinary courage to evangelists and "come-outers," who have everything to gain and nothing to lose by making sweeping charges of corruption in the church and resorting to wholesale abuse. If the regulars were as insolent and uncharitable, and were to throw out as many hints about money for themselves as do some ecclesiastical tramps that are now roaming the country, people would desert them as rats do a sinking ship. Despite the charges sometimes made against the ministry, the fact remains that in no other calling are there so few defections, and nowhere else is there so great self-sacrifice.

Some of the sheep complain loudly when their pastor does not visit them as often as they think he ought, or if he fails to come when they get sick. Oftentimes a pastor is censured for not visiting a sick brother, when he really knew nothing of the sickness. If ministers were to visit as much as some brethren demand, study and sermon preparation would be out of the question. Give your pastor time to read and store his mind with the treasures of knowledge. Remember that every other member has as much claim upon his time as you have.

The duty of every charge to support its pastor is too plain to require more than passing notice. Many seem to think that a minister ought to preach the gospel and be at his own charges. The illiberal and the disaffected are ever ready to give ear to the false charge that preachers are preaching for money. "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel." "For the laborer is worthy of his hire." Without doubt the majority of the clergy could make far more money in some other calling. Nothing but the grace of God and a deep sense of responsibility could nerve them to undergo the sacrifices, hardships and sorrows which the work of the ministry involves.

Contributing to the support of the ministry is but the discharge of a just debt. It is not charity, and should never be so regarded. Yet how frequently an assessment is paid as if it were the bestowment of alms.

In some charges there is such a spirit of illiberality and disloyalty that the pastor finds the work of raising the various Conference assessments like pulling eye-teeth. If the stewards would make an earnest effort to help the pastor meet these claims, a great burden would be lifted from his shoulders, and he could do far more effective work. Money, though essential, is not the only thing a pastor should receive. He needs your love, encouragement and prayers no less than your money. Many people who are not lacking in loyalty to the church manifest a very cold, unappreciative spirit towards their pastor. Many a faithful minister has been disheartened and led to relax his efforts by reason of the lack of proper sympathy and appreciation. If your pastor preaches a sermon that helps you, it will do him good to tell him so. Talk with him about his work and share his burdens, for he has many. Though a comforter, he himself sometimes needs comfort. Forget not in your daily devotions to invoke God's blessings upon your spiritual leader. The divine benediction is sure to rest upon that church whose members regularly supplicate a throne of grace in behalf of their pastor. "We beseech you, brethren, to know them that labor among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you; and to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake."

The Bible and Modern Criticism.

In view of recent publications as to the attitude of the Protestant Episcopal Church towards the question of the authority of the Scriptures, we present below a deliverance published some time since in the London Times with the signatures of thirty-four clergymen of the English Church attached:

"1. It must be evident to thoughtful persons that there are now current certain impressions that Holy Scripture has been discovered not to be worthy of unquestioning belief, and the faith of many Christian people is thereby unsettled.

"2. These impressions are manifestly a dishonor to God, as discrediting his faithfulness and truth, and are full of peril to the eternal life of those affected by them, seeing that they undermine all faith in the mystery of Christ, and, indeed, in the supernatural itself.

"3. And although such impressions might appear to originate in various learned speculations in theological and physical science, yet they are in great measure derived immediately from the popular literature of the day, and therefore no sustained argument can reach the mass of those affected by them, even if it were true (which it is not) that the tribunal of human reason, to which such argument must be submitted, had jurisdiction and competency to deliver judgment on the authority of the Holy Bible.

"4. It is, moreover, evident that the effects of these speculations survive and accumulate to the general lowering of the popular estimation of the Holy Bible, though individual speculations may have but a transitory influence, or even be utterly refuted on their own ground.

"5. The synods of the church have not spoken with authority to guide us in matters of such grave importance, but it can not be right in the sight of God that when his honor is so directly assailed, and the salvation of his people so seriously hindered, the whole matter should be allowed to drift, and that only isolated voices should be raised here and there in the church in defense of the truth of God's Word.

"6. Under these circumstances we, the undersigned messengers, watchmen and stewards of the Lord, who have received the Holy Ghost to be faithful dispensers of the Word of God, being sorely distressed at these things, and deeply feeling the burden and shame of sitting still, can no longer forbear (1) to deliver our joint testimony herein before God, and (2) to attempt by the only united action in our power to settle the minds of those to whom our testimony may seem to be of value in a good and comfortable reliance on the absolute truth of the Holy Scriptures.

"7. We therefore solemnly profess and declare our unfeigned belief in all the canonical Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, as handed down to us by the undivided church in the original languages. We believe that they are inspired by the Holy Ghost; that they are what they profess to be; that they mean what they say; and that they declare incontrovertibly the actual historical truth in all regards, both of past events, and of the delivery of predictions to be thereafter fulfilled.

"8. We believe these Scriptures because they have the authority of divine revelation, and wholly independently of our own or of any human approval of the probability or possibility of their subject matter; and wholly independently of our own or of any human and finite comprehension thereof.

"9. And we believe that any judgment either for or against them formed on the ground of such approval or comprehension, or of the want therof, is inapplicable to matter of divine relation.

"10. And we believe the Holy Scriptures to have this divine authority on the testimony of the universal church, the sponse and body of Christ, the witness and keeper of the Holy Writ. So that no opinion of the criticism of the Scriptures themselves can be admitted to interfere with the traditionary testimony of the church when that has been once ascertained and verified by appeal to antiquity.

"11. It is far from our purpose to undervalue or depreciate the employment of the highest powers of the human intellect, when sanctified through prayer, in diligent and reverent searching the Scriptures, and in such studies as help to the knowledge of the same, provided that the object be the meaning of the living oracles, and not their genuineness or their authenticity; and while we believe that the seal of the spirit of the truth of the living God, we especially repudiate and abhor all suggestion of fallibility in the person of our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, in respect of his own use of the Scriptures of the Old Testament.

"12. We earnestly pray that the clergy and laity of the church of England may never acquiesce in rejecting any portions of the one volume of God's Revelation, as hard sayings, causing stumbling, but, on the contrary, may hold fast their confidence in the faithfulness of God, who will not suffer us to be deceived in humbly believing that to which he hath set his seal, and may wait patiently, knowing only in part, for the time when we shall know even as we are known, and shall be filled with all the fullness of God."

Our Japanese Training-School.

The fourth annual commencement of the Shuge (Industrial) Gakko of the Southern Methodist Mission occurred this (Friday) morning at the Methodist Church, on the Hill. The exercises were of the usual character, and were of evident interest to the audience. Rev. J. C. C. Newton D.D., Dean of the Biblical Department of the Kwansei Gakuin, delivered the annual address. There were five graduates.

The Shuge Gakko, as its name indicates, is not an ordinary girls' school; but has as its object the training and development of Japanese girls in all those lines which go to fit them for their future positions as wives and mothers. The Japanese have objected—and, perhaps, not without good reason—that the general run of mission schools of Japan tend rather to unfit girls for their future than to prepare them for it, in that they educate their pupils away from Japanese home life, its duties and cares. There certainly seems to be reason in the contention that a Japanese girl whose head has been filled with science, history, literature, music and art, and who knows little or nothing of the practical duties, such as devolve upon a Japanese wife and mother, is not prepared for the difficult position that awaits her. If any part of her training has to be omitted, surely most will agree that it should not be the latter. In accordance with this view—to give Japanese girls and young women a thorough equipment for the domestic duties of their sphere the Shuge Gakko was established.

The curriculum of the school covers such subjects as plain sewing, knitting, crochet work, embroidering, fancy sewing, applique work, household duties, cooking, arranging of flowers, music, high tea, etc., with all those nicer and finer touches which enter so largely into the etiquette of those people. Invalid cooking, care of the sick, home sanitation, the care of children, etc., are also embraced in the course of study; in fact, everything that a Japanese woman should know that pertains to household duties—that will help her to fill her position and tend to make her home happy. The Bible also is used as a text book, and daily lessons in it are given. Such ordinary branches as letter writing, the soroban, Chinese characters, etc., are also taught; but no effort has been made to furnish those literary branches that are generally taught in most girls' schools.

The school was established about six years ago by the late Dr. J. W. Lambuth and his wife. It has had an excellent list of pupils and numbers twenty or more graduates in its alumni who have taken the three years' course. A year or so ago, in honor of Dr. Lambuth, the name of the school was changed to "The Lambuth Bible Training and Industrial School," and by this it will be known in the future, although the original name, Shuge (Industrial) Gakko, still clings to it. Mrs. Lambuth is principal of the school, being assisted by Miss J. M. North and an efficient staff of Japanese teachers, chief of whom is Mrs. Kenta Oka, who has been with it from its inception.

At the close of its graduation exercises, after distribution of refreshments, the audience was invited to the school near by to inspect the handiwork of the pupils. Our reporter availed himself of the opportunity, and while he does not put himself up as a judge of the finer kinds of Japanese needle-work, yet he must say he has never seen anything to equal it. Neither is he prepared to describe or to name everything that was seen; but when mention is made that the display includes hakama, Japanese ladies' wedding robes, table ornaments, embroidery, etc., some idea of the character of the exhibition can be had. Mrs. Lambuth stated that the exhibit would be open to-day and to-morrow to the general public. The school is located on Shimoyamatedori, Rokuchome, No. 106, about eight or ten doors east of the large Kobe Church.

The school is now in a rented house; but will be moved to a building especially erected for the purpose just as soon as some final details are arranged.—The Kobe Herald, April 9, 1897.

NOTES.

Rev. A. E. Clay has been invited to deliver an address at Chautauqua.

East Mississippi Female College has enrolled during the session just closed 257 pupils.

Rev. Percy Knickerbocker, of the Louisiana Conference, is visiting his parents in the city.

Dr. Sutherland, of Canada, is booked for a course of theological lectures at Vanderbilt University.

Dr. H. W. Featherstun preached the commencement sermon at Harperville College and also at Cooper-Huddleston College.

Dr. J. P. McFerrin, pastor of Broad Street Church, Louisville, Ky., has undertaken the task of building one of the finest churches in Southern Methodism.

Mississippi will not have a new Capitol for the present; Gov. McLaurin having vetoed the Capitol Bill, and the Legislature having failed to pass it over his veto.

***

The University of Nashville last week conferred the degree of LL.D. upon Rev. D. C. Kelley. This is a high honor worthily bestowed. An honorary degree from this institution means something.

We invite special attention to the open letter from Bro. Emery and others on our first page. It treats of a matter of very grave importance. The proper enforcement of law is one of the great needs of our day.

We hear very gratifying reports from Hazlehurst station. Rev. T. W. Adams, as was to be expected, is making full proof of his ministry. His people speak of him as diligent in the pastorate and strong in the pulpit.

The annual address of Louisiana Industrial Institute, at Ruston, will be delivered Saturday, June 5, by Dr. W. C. Stubbs. The commencement sermon will be preached on Sunday, the sixth, by Rev. E. N. Evans, of the Louisiana Conference. A sermon will be preached at night by Rev. J. R. Edwards.

Miss Clara G. Baer, of Sophie Newcomb College, will lecture on physical culture at the several Teachers' Institutes in Louisiana this Summer, viz.: at Lafayette, Boyce, and Baton Rouge. She will then go to Milwaukee, as she is on the programme of the National Education Association, which meets there July 6-9.

Mrs. Mary J. Green died at her home in Jackson, Miss., on the twenty-eighth, after an illness of several weeks. Sister Green was one of the oldest members of our church in Jackson, and was prominent in every good work. She loved the church, and was always willing to do what lay in her power for the advancement of its interests.

The Rev. H. C. Morrison, D. D., of Georgia, the Missionary Secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will preach the baccalaureate sermon at Converse College, Spartanburg, S. C., on the first Sunday in June. The college is partly controlled by the Methodists. Four hundred and thirty-one students have been enrolled this year, and about 75 of these belong to the Methodist Church.

A news item a little out of the ordinary comes from Hot Springs, Ark. Upon application of an official of the M. E. Church at that place, Judge Leathermau, of the Chancery Court, recently issued a temporary injunction restraining the pastor, Rev. J. B. McLaughlin, from preaching in the church. Last Sabbath McLaughlin occupied his pulpit in defiance of the injunction, whereupon the judge sentenced him to a ten days' term in the county jail for contempt of court. We do not know enough about the details of the affair to make any comments.

The Religion of Christ.

It is quite strange that anyone who has been reared in this Christian land should have a false conception of the religion of Christ, our Savior; and yet we are sorry to say that this is the case with many. This is sadly the case with many of advanced years as well as those of more youthful ones. Some seem to think that it is confessions; some, professions; some, feelings; some, works; and others one thing, then another; and hence we can see without much effort how liable a person who has been in the heated rebuffs and conflicts of life is to be misled by his experience after retirement from the same. He has more time for meditation, secret devotion, and reading. It is like a man who has had a mighty struggle for years to live, and finally is heir to a fortune. Now he can sit at leisure, sleep as late and as much as he desires. He is a different man in feeling and surroundings. Anyone can see this; but what is the religion of Christ? The briefest summaries that we are able just now to give of the religion of Christ are the following: A proper recognition of God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit; a change of heart, and a life according to the Bible, or supreme love to God and proper love for everybody. Our blessed Savior includes all in the new birth when he says, "Except a man be born again, he can not see the kingdom of God." (John iii, 3.) And again he includes all in repentance when he says, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." (Luke xiii, 3.) Paul includes the same in belief, and hence he said to the jailer, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." (Acts xvi, 31.) John includes all in sonship when he says, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." (I. John iii 2.) Again, Paul makes love include it all when he says, "Love is the fulfilling of the law." (Rom. xiii, 10.) When we stop to consider, as we should, the question really arises, What is the religion of Christ more than repentance, the new birth, faith, love, sonship, as they are used in the Bible? Can a person be anything more than a son of God? How can one? Is not a child of God heir to all that he has? Certainly he is, for Paul says, "All things are yours." (I. Cor. iii, 21.) Is not everyone who is born again a child of God? St. John says he is; at least it seems to be that he does when he says, Whosoever is born of God, doth not commit sin: for his seed remaineth in him, and he can not sin, because he is born of God. In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil" (xiii, 9, 10). What distinguishes the children of God from those of Satan? Their new birth. There are but two classes of children in this world, and they are the children of God and the children of the devil, and, therefore, a person is either a child of God or a child of the devil: and if a person is a child of God, he is heir of all things, and what more can he be? Having briefly seen what the religion of Christ is, let us now notice its signs or manifestations, or rather the character of him who has it.

1. He does not boast about himself, or his goodness or his blessings. With him it is just as Paul says about the religion of Christ when he says, "It vaunteth not itself." (I Cor. xiii, 4.) If he speaks of himself, it is with the greatest humility, and the feeling of his heart and the estimate of himself are expressed in Paul's words when he said, "By the grace of God I am what I am." (I. Cor. xv, 10.)

2. He is not vainglorious. He does not study, plan and work to get men to brag on him. His interest in the Savior's work is such that he has no time for such foolishness. He heeds the advice of Paul when he said, "Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory." (Phil. ii, 3.) "Let us not be desirous of vain glory." (Gal. v, 26.)

3. He does not strive to make the goodness of his brother small and to make his own goodness great. He had rather die unknown than to do so un-Christly an act. He is more like Christ when the young ruler called him good. Christ said to him, "Why callest thou me good? none is good save one, that is God." (Luke xviii, 19.) Or as Paul expresses it, "Unto, me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given." (Eph iii, 8.)

4. He reads the Bible, not in order to prove how good he is, but to see how faulty he is, as well as to learn more and more of his blessed Savior, etc.

5. He works because he loves his Lord, and when he has done all that he knows he feels just as Christ commanded his disciples when he said, "When ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you say, We are unprofitable servants: we have done that which was our duty to do." (Luke xvi, 10.) He is so unlike the Pharisee who stood and said, "God, I thank thee that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican." (Luke xviii, 11.)

6. He is holy in heart and life, but he is far from the holiness of the hypocrites of the time of Isaiah who said to others, "Stand by thyself, come not near to me; for I am holier than thou." (Isa. lxv, 5.) He much prefers that people shall see by his life that he is holy than to be always telling them that he is.

7. A person who has the religion of Christ is like his Lord. There is a sweetness of temper, words and actions just like Christ, and, therefore, no room for the affected holy look, the holy snigger, the switching and frisking of the body.

In conclusion, I will say everyone born again is a child of God, and he knows it, and, therefore, he is entitled to every blessing his Holy Father has for him as long as he remains a child. Let everyone get the religion of Christ and live it, and there will be no end to the blessings.

Read It.

'Tis to be hoped that all the Leagnors, and others, will read what has been published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE from the pen of that intelligent and pious young lawyer, C. B. Ames, of Macon, Miss. A paragraph or two may stimulate your desire to read on. See this: "Let the Literary Department of the League be a University Extension in every church where it exists; let every boy and girl in the State of Mississippi learn the overwhelming importance of intelligent piety and pious intelligence; that ignorance is a sin, and that knowledge is a virtue." Also this: "Let the League proclaim the truth everywhere that character after the divine plan consists in having a body like God's, a mind like God's, a soul like God's—in action. Then the Church need have no fear; then the State need have no fear. Then, indeed, will the young people of the church grow into a generation of kings and priests unto God."

I do not call special attention to this paragraphs because they are more striking than many others, but because they happen to catch my eye as I write. W. S. SHIPMAN.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The reunion of the United Confederate Veterans will take place in Nashville, June 22-24.

Hon. Whitelaw Reid will be special ambassador of the United States at Queen Victoria's jubilee.

Secretary Long has given Lieutenant Peary five years' leave of absence, so that he may continue his search for the North Pole.

President McKinley will visit the Nashville Exposition on June 11. The President will be accompanied by Secretary Alger and at least one more member of the Cabinet.

The action of leading New England mills in shutting down for several months so soon after the report of Mr. Sanford and the other manufacturers sent into the South to examine the condition of the cotton industry in this section is a frank confession that they can not compete successfully with the South in certain lines of goods.

The Kentucky Legislature has passed a law to suppress mobs. It applies to those mobs that are destroying the toll-gates and to those that attack prisons. It makes it a felony to conspire to form a mob, gives a jailer whose prison is threatened power to arm his prisoners, and authorizes the governor and the county court to employ detectives to find out who the mobbers are.

A crevasse at Conrad's, on the east bank of the river, about ten miles below Baton Rouge, was the startling event of Sunday in this part of the State. The break grew to a width of two hundred feet, submerging several valuable plantations. The governor, immediately on receiving the news, at once hurried to the scene of the trouble, giving not only the encouragement of his presence and example, but also sending thither a large body of the State's convicts.

FOREIGN.

The Argentine government has commissioned Colonel Calazza to visit the United States for the purpose of studying the latest improvements in the methods of preventing and extinguishing fires in large cities.

United States Consul Mohun, at Zanzibar, has informed the state department that the Sultan, Hamand Bin Mahomed Bin Said, on April 7, last, issued a proclamation abolishing the legal status of slavery in the islands of Zanzibar and Cemba.

According to the British consular reports just presented to Parliament, the new railroad from Jaffa to Jerusalem has proved a far greater commercial success than was anticipated even by those who were most sanguine about its future.

From a Russian source comes news of a conspiracy against King George of Greece far more deeply rooted than was supposed. There is indubitable evidence that Premier Ralli and his colleagues in the cabinet are gravely implicated in a plot to overthrow the dynasty.

Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota, is to preach the sermon in Salisbury Cathedral, England, on June 3, commemorating the 1300th anniversary of the baptism of Ethelbert, the first Saxon king. Bishop Whipple will be the senior Bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States at the approaching conference at Lambeth.

The canonization at St. Peter's church, Rome, on May 27, of the Blessed Zaccaria, founder of the Order of Barnabites, and of the Blessed Fourier de Mataincour, surnamed the apostle of Lorraine, was the most impressive ceremony witnessed at St. Peter's since the abolition of the temporal power of the Pope, the only difference in this ceremonial and those which occurred under the sovereignty of the Popes being that the external gates of St. Peter's were closed and that tickets of admission to the cathedral had to be obtained. The huge basilica was thronged. According to estimates 40,000 persons were present.

For one dollar you may buy a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which, if taken in time, and according to directions, may save a great many dollars in doctors' bills, and thus exemplify the truth of the old maxim, "Prevention is better than cure."

Gilt-Edge Investment.

For the purpose of enlarging their plant and business, the Lafferty Complete Flour Company offer a limited amount of 7 per cent. bonds, secured by a first mortgage. Each bond is for $30, and the owner, in addition to the interest of 7 per cent., is entitled to share in the business of the mill to an amount that makes the bond the most remunerative security on the market. They will be sold at par.

The denomination of the bond was fixed at a minimum sum of $30, so as to furnish an investment for many persons, and gain the widest interest in this accredited Food-cure—the "Complete Flour." Address John J. Lafferty, President.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-sixth annual Camp Meeting at Seashore will open (D. V. on Wednesday evening, July 14, next, and continue for about eight days.

Arrangements have been made for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit this delightful spot. A handsome and commodious two-story lodging-house—Keller Lodge—has been erected and comfortably furnished for visitors, in addition to the other accommodations supplied by the trustees.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until August 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of 1,400 feet; fanned by the refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico. The sea-bathing afforded is unsurpassed by any resort on the coast. A fine artesian well supplies the grounds with excellent drinking water, which is now "piped" over the entire encampment. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure and exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued and overheated visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the camp meeting should address W. B. Thomson, New Orleans, chairman Lodging Committee. Questions concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.; Dr. M. F. Tucker, Mobile, or J. H. Larkin, Montgomery, Ala.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge. Board will be furnished them at the restaurant at half-rate.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

IN THE ORGAN LINE.

No competition with us is possible, as we have the BEST to be had.

PHILIP WERLEIN, Lim, 614-616 Canal, New Orleans, La.

"Everything in the Music Line at Werlein's," is an adage.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

HOME CIRCLE.

ON THE DEATH OF AN INFANT.

A host of angels flying,
Through cloudless skies impelled,
Upon the earth beheld
A pearl of beauty lying,
Worthy to glitter bright
In heaven's vast hall of light.

They saw with glances tender,
An infant newly born,
O'er whom life's earliest morn
Just cast its opening splendor;
Virtue it could not know,
Nor vice, nor joy, nor woe.

The blest angelic legion
Greeted its birth above,
And came with look of love,
From heaven's enchanting region;
Bending their winged way
To where the infant lay.

They spread their pinions o'er it—
That lit le pearl which shone
With lustre all its own—
And then on high they bore it,
Where glory has its birth—
But left the shell on earth.

The Habit of Thrift.

Longfellow's honest blacksmith under the spreading chestnut tree, who can look the whole world in the face because he owes not any man, is a charming picture of lowly, yet honorable independence. The man who keeps up one share of stock in a building association, or the working girl who deposits a dime a week in a savings bank, is on this high and safe road of independence, and will be morally the better for it. No one is poor whose income exceeds his outlay; and no one is rich who spends more than is coming to him. Let me repeat it, that a habit of thrift is a moral aid in one's life. An extensive business man bears this testimony: "Those individuals who save money are better workmen. If they do not better work, they behave better, and more respectable. I would sooner have in my trade one hundred men who save money than two hundred who would spend every shilling they get. In proportion as individuals save a little money, their morals are much better. They husband a little, and there is a superior tone given to their morals, and they behave better for knowing that they have something at stake in society." Undoubtedly this is true. Some one has said that "economy is the parent of integrity, of liberty, and of ease, and the beautiful sister of temperance, of cheerfulness, and health." This leads me to name another of its great blessings, the power of doing good. In fact, this should be the supreme aim of gathering up the fragments—save them that we may devote them to higher uses. I was in a home where the mother saw a crust of bread in the coal-bucket. It was liable to be burned with the coal. She said to her daughter: "Throw that crust out; some bird or animal can eat it." That was true Christian economy. It was the spirit of Christ, who said, "Gather up the fragments that nothing be lost."—Rev. J. C. Jackson, Jr.

How to Help Your Pastor.

A church wrote to Mr. Spurgeon to send them a preacher who would fill the house. Mr. Spurgeon replied that he did not know of any such preacher; and that it was all any preacher could do to fill the pulpit, and that they, the church, should fill the house. This is the true relation. Let the preacher have no concern about his own popularity. If he is a good preacher the people will find it out, and blaze it abroad and there will be no trouble about a congregation. Let the preacher fill the pulpit and the people fill the church; they will make known his gifts. The Samaritan woman advertised the sermon of Jesus Christ far and wide; and the result was that a whole city came to hear him and very many were saved. Andrew listened to the wonderful words of Jesus and went and told what he had heard and seen; and the result was that his brother Peter came to Christ and became a disciple, and the world has the untold result of Peter's life. Don't be afraid of spoiling your preacher by advertising him. It won't hurt him. If advertising spoils him, he is not worth saving, and would be spoiled any way. If he is a real, genuine man, the advertising will help to develop his strength and bring out his good qualities. It will give him courage, a quality very much needed by the majority of preachers. It will increase the joy and zeal of the preacher. It was wise, judicious advertising that made Beecher, Simpson, and Spurgeon. It never hurt either of them in the slightest degree.

The Pill that Will.

"The pill that will," implies the pills that won't. Their name is legion. The name of "the pill that will" is Ayer's Cathartic Pill. It is a pill to rely on. Properly used it will cure constipation, biliousness, sick headache, and the other ills that result from torpid liver. Ayer's pills are not designed to spur the liver into a momentary activity, leaving it in yet more incapable condition after the immediate effect is past. They are compounded with the purpose of toning up the entire system, removing the obstructing conditions, and putting the liver into proper relations with the rest of the organs for natural co-operation. The record of Ayer's Pills during the half century they have been in public use establishes their great and permanent value in all liver affections.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

In all probability much, if not most, of the power and usefulness of these truly great and good men would have remained undeveloped but for the fact that they were advertised. And no doubt there are multitudes of men with equal talent, unknown outside of a very small circle, who, if properly appreciated and brought to the front, would make as brilliant record as ever marked the history of the church. We do not wish to be understood as advocating the unguarded, reckless foisting of preachers to the front, regardless of true merit or genuine success.—Temple Magazine.

"Abused" People.

Of all disagreeable people to live with, the "abused" man or woman is the most trying, and the lot of one doomed to such association is anything but enviable. Always on the alert for slights or neglect, so very sensitive as to imagine the condemnation of any act or circumstance an indirect thrust at themselves; crushed if their friends presume to look through other spectacles than theirs, and jealous if their full confidence is not in all instances bestowed, although they think nothing of betraying that confidence.

Sadly enough, this trait is sometimes fostered in the most unexpected places, even in the Christian home, where selfishness and distrust should find no resting place. There is a certain mother who thus makes her home almost unendurable for herself and family. Although there is no doubt of her love for her children, yet, possessing and indulging this unhappy disposition, and demanding the respect and confidence of which she has never shown herself worthy, she blights her home by unceasing laments over imagined slights. The remarks of the members of her family are so frequently twisted into a different meaning from that intended that they almost fear to express an opinion on any subject, lest it in some way conflict with mother's views and prove the usual source of "abuse," and thus their lives are, to a great extent, dwarfed, as well as made wretched.

Then these complaints are poured out to friends and neighbors, and the children, rather than betray mother's shortcomings, silently bear the blame; for they have enough respect for her to shield her, and it is only by observation that the truth is known. Perhaps her love and excellence in other characteristics explain their respect, in spite of the evil influence of her training in this particular, which would seem enough to ruin the disposition of any child.—Housekeeper.

What Is the Kingdom.

One can not read the Gospels with any care and not be impressed by the thought that the pre-eminent theme of Christ's preaching was the kingdom of God. Yet when asked to say what that kingdom is, we are not always ready with a clear answer. Certainly it is a moral kingdom, not a physical. Jesus took great pains to make this plain; yet even at this point he was, and still is, misapprehended. It pertains both to the present and the future—to the present in part, to the future in fullness. It will have completely come only when God's will is done on earth as it is in heaven. So it is both a realized fact and an endless hope. It is in this world, though not of it, and also in the next. To be included in this kingdom one must be in character like the King. It consists, then, of regenerate individuals, whose law is the divine will. It embraces all the truly good, who have the spirit of Jesus, whether the historic Christ has been revealed to them or not. World-wide and age-long this realm—the realm of purity, unselfishness, humility, and love. It cometh not with outward observation; its throne is set up in human hearts.

Small Things.

Living to Christ in small things, and living for Christ every day, is the secret of large fruitfulness. A peach or an orange tree does not leap into a bounty of fruit by one spasmodic effort; an orchard does not ripen under a single day's sunshine. Every raindrop, every sunbeam, every inch of subsoil does its part. A fruitful Christian is a growth. To finish up a godly character by a mere religion of Sundays and sermons and sacraments and revivals and special seasons is impossible. A man can be converted in an instant, but he must grow by the year. The tough fibre of the slender branch which can hold up a half bushel of oranges is very different from a little willow switch. It is the steady compacting process that makes the little limb like a steel wire. Such is a healthy and holy believer's life. Every honest prayer breathed, every cross carried, every trial well endured, every good work for our fellowmen lovingly done, every little act conscientiously performed for Christ's glory, helps to make the Christian character beautiful, and to load its bread boughs with "apples of gold" for God's "baskets of silver."—The Examiner.

"I Can Keep from Swearing."

A lad in Boston, rather small for his years, works in an office as an errand boy for four gentlemen who do business there. One day the gentlemen were chaffing him a little about being so small, and said to him: "You never will amount to much; you never can do much business; you are too small."

The little fellow looked at them. "Well," said he, "small as I am I can do something which none of you four men can do."

"Ah, what is that?" they asked.

"I don't know that I ought to tell you," he replied.

But they were anxious to know, and urged him to tell what he could do that none of them was able to do.

"I can keep from swearing!" said the little fellow.

The four gentlemen did not question him any further.—The Sign.

No Apology Necessary.

The following pleasant story is told of Lady McDonald, wife of the late premier of Canada, who has long been an abstainer. Another lady of high position met her at dinner one day, and was surprised to see that she took no wine, and at length asked:

"Did you not set out wine when you entertained the Marquis of Lorne?"

"Never," was the prompt reply.

"But did you not feel that you must apologize?"

"Certainly not. Wine is not a natural beverage, and so should rather come in than go out with apology."

This answer and that example led the other lady to become an abstainer also.

If you prepare a dish of food carelessly you do not expect Providence to make it palatable; neither if, through years of folly, you misguide your own life need you expect divine interference to bring round everything at last as if you had done right.

Frank explanations with friends in case of affronts, sometimes save a perishing friendship, and even place it on a firmer basis than at first; but secret discontentment always ends badly.

Unbelief puts circumstances between the soul and God; faith puts God between the soul and circumstances.—Dean Stanley.

HYGIENE.

Physical Endurance.

Physical endurance is a quality which varies remarkably with different individuals. The performance of feats of great physical strength depends for the most part on condition to which the muscles have been brought by previous exercise. The power of endurance, on the other hand, is largely a question of inherited constitution. Persons subjected to the same strain, such as a long walk or a long boat-race, "play out" at greatly different stages, though the course of training and manner of living may have been identical.

In every-day life the same thing is observed. Men following the same occupation, and living in practically the same manner, perform the same work with decidedly differing degrees of ease. It is a matter of common observation that as a woodsman, huntsman, or an every-day, toiler, he who has the quality of physical endurance in greatest measure will excel. The same is true in professional life. Ordinarily it will be found that the man who outstrips his fellows has the ability to labor long hours together without exhaustion.

Most men who have been distinguished for great physical endurance have inherited or acquired a state of mind which is doubtless one secret of their ability, namely, freedom from worry. Worry distracts the mind, so that its energies, instead of being concentrated, are divided between two or more trains of thought. To the extent of avoiding worry—needless dwelling upon matters that can not be helped—the power of endurance may be acquired.

Every man's strength has a definite limit, a limit not determined by that of others. His physical endurance may be above the average; it may be below it. He should not go beyond it, whatever it is. Before the physical powers are exhausted, not afterward, he should rest and recuperate. Each individual must of necessity learn his own limits.

The best work is perhaps accomplished by long continued application, but not to the point of exhaustion.

Exhaustion may often be avoided by changing one work for another, just as difficult, perhaps, but involving another set of faculties.

Mental labor consumes the vital properties of the blood just as muscular labor does, and hence it is as important to avoid exhaustion in mental as in physical employment.

Wonderful as the power of endurance appears to be in certain men, it must be remembered that everyone is fettered by the law which rules all organized beings. Life moves in a series of circles, and part of each circle must be devoted to recuperation. Great powers of endurance are for the most part the gifts of a vigorous ancestry, to be used in reason and not abused.

Beauty Is Wealth.

Beauty is as essential to a woman as any other quality; with beauty of form and feature comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you find that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty, losing your strength, if you feel that your face, which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "MASSAGE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAGE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

Unto the Dawn

A POEM.

By HORACE M. DuBOSE, D. D.

16mo, Pp. 53. Heavy Paper Cover. 25 cts

This tiny volume, dedicated to Bishop Galloway, contains a poem of musical lines amounting to XXXII considerable divisions, arranged somewhat after the form of those in Tennyson's "In Memoriam." Mr. DuBose has fine imaginative feeling, a full sense of word color and of melodious phrasing, and a high regard for poetical seriousness.—The Independent, New York.

OBITUARIES.

NEWSOM—Mrs. MARIA L NEWSOM, whose maiden name was Williams, was born Oct. 26, 1820, and died Jan 31, 1897. On July 31, 1849, Liberty, Miss., she was married to H. C. Newsom, with whom she lived very happily until her death. She joined the Methodist Church at the Dry Church, in St. Helena parish, La., in 1817; was converted at the same church in 1852 under the ministry of Rev. Thomas Clinton (of precious memory). She was one of the best Christians I have ever known.

It has been my privilege in the last eight years to spend a great part of my time in her home. Many times I have felt greatly strengthened by her Christian character.

For a number of years she has been a great sufferer, but through it all she was the personification of fortitude and patience. When-ever she spoke of her sufferings she did so without murmuring, and with a calm and sweet resignation that was an inspiration, which made one feel nearer to God. No one could associate with her in her daily life without feeling the influence of that sweet Christian spirit which was always so prominent in her character. She was truly a woman of prayer never undertaking anything without seeking God's guidance, even in her household duties, such as sewing or baking.

She was a true friend to all ministers of the gospel. In her home she always a "preacher's room," and they were always gladly received. They will miss her kind sympathy and prayers.

She was the mother of six children, all of whom lived to be grown and married. Two of them preceded her to the "glory land" and leaves a devoted husband (who is just awaiting the summons to follow her to that blessed land), four children and a large number of grandchildren to mourn because of her absence. She is greatly missed by us all, but would not have her back, for we know she is at rest. She will suffer no more pain, won't have to cough any more (as she has done for years) in that "beautiful home over the river."

May we all live so as to meet her in heaven! Dear one she will be waiting and watching for us.

A DAUGHTER-IN-LAW.

UNGER—Mrs. MAGGIE E UNGER died at her home in West Point, Miss., April 23, 1897. She was born in Sharon, Madison county, Miss. She was a graduate of Sharon Female College, under the presidency of Dr. W. L. Cornett, on July 15, 1867. She was happily married to J. W. Unger, Jan. 25, 1877.

During her early life she made a profession of religion and joined the Methodist Church, and was a devoted, consecrated Christian life, living in usefulness and love for the kingdom of Christ to the day of her death. She was a faithful and efficient Sunday-school worker; as a teacher, she had few equals.

She was the president of the Women's Missionary Society, under whose leadership new life and interest had been awakened until in membership and efficiency it is now one of the best in the Columbus district.

She had endowed her with a strong mind. This she consecrated to the service of God and the church. She was by nature modest and retiring, but where duty called she was ready to go. She was a worthy example after which any young lady might well take as a pattern as a model of all that it takes to make up true womanhood.

Her death is a great loss to the church and community. Her life was one of usefulness. When the summons came she was ready. It was a triumphant death.

The funeral service was conducted by the pastor in the Methodist Church in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends. The pastors of the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches took part in the services. Papers were read by Mrs. E. L. Sherrod and Mrs. Jas. Trotter, of the Woman's Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid Society. The body was laid to rest in the churchyard at Pleasant Hill.

W. S. LAGRONE.

JEFFERSON—Whereas, The Ladies' Aid Society of Jefferson Street M. E. Church has been called to part with one of its loved and honored members, Mrs. ELIZABETH PATTERSON, who died in Natchez, March 26, 1897; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the following resolutions of our high appreciation of her many virtues, and the sorrow with which we contemplate her departure, be placed on record. Though we feel that words are inadequate to express the love that has grown out of her labor with us, especially in the years past before the ill-health rendered her active service an impossibility, yet we still had her prayers and sympathy.

Resolved, When death has removed her from us, our thoughts backward when in the beautiful womanhood this gentle, kindly, loving Christian sister, in her wise, though unassuming manner, did much to strengthen and encourage us in the work of this society, and in good works; and while her departure is sad to us, we are yet able to lift our hearts in thanksgiving to our Father in heaven, and say: We thank thee, Father, for the help of this sister whom thou hast called up higher. We thank thee for her help when we most needed it. Though many trials fell to her lot during this life, her Christian light was not extinguished, but ever pointed heavenward. While it is with sadness that this society places this tribute of our affection upon its Minutes, we drew encouragement from her life, for she, "though dead, yet speaketh."

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family; also to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

MRS. M. A. PARSONS, for Com.

Natchez, Miss.

CROWE-PEARMAN.—Two of the saddest deaths ever witnessed in our little town, Cleveland, Miss., occurred Thursday afternoon, May 6, about 5 o'clock: LEE, the only brother of Rev. H. P. Crowe, and WILLIE, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Pearmen.

Lee was in a boat with several others, coming across the bayou. The boat capsized, and he, not knowing how to swim, was drowning, and Willie, standing on a bridge, jumped in to aid him, and they both drowned together.

It was hard, almost unbearable, to see those noble boys cut down by the fell destroyer in the bloom of their youth; but God, in his wisdom, saw fit to take them home, where there is no pain or sorrow.

Can it be possible that we shall nevermore hear their footsteps, never behold their manly forms, never see the sparkle of their bright eyes, or hear the voices that were music to our ears?

Is it not sweet to think hereafter,
When the spirit leaves this sphere,
That love with deathless wing shall waft us
To those we long hath mourned for here?
Hearts from which 'twas death to sever,
Eyes this world can ne'er restore,
There as warm, as bright as ever,
Shall meet us and be lost no more.

A true friend, IVA.

WEISSINGER—MARY L. WEISSINGER, daughter of G. J. and S. A. Weissinger, was born Jan. 24, 1883; was baptized by Rev. J. C. Woodruff, Aug. 18, 1894, and fell asleep May 4, 1897.

Such is the brief record of a fair young life. The best summing up of her life is that "she loved everybody." Could more be said of what the world calls a ripened life? That she also loved the Lord was manifest in her daily life and her interest in church affairs. She expected to join the church at the first opportunity, and had given evidence that her heart was changed and her young life given to God. So much for being reared in a Christian home.

Mary was an intelligent, affectionate child, and her gentle influence is felt in the home and community in which she lived. Almost the entire population of the neighborhood attended the burial service, after which we laid her body to rest to await the first resurrection. May God comfort the bereaved family!

JNO. R. COUNTISS.

McGEE—ZELLE, daughter and only child of R. H. and Anna W. McGee, passed from a home which she filled with light and joy to her home where there are no accidents, pain, nor death.

Zelle was little over seventeen months old, but she had endeared herself to all those who knew her. She died from a burn which at first was not thought to be so fatal; but, like many of our hopes relating to this life, this hope soon vanished, and darkness and sorrow filled the once happy home. But amid this sorrow and grief the words of our Lord are kept in mind: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Blessed thought of meeting in the sweet by-and-by!

G. H. JACOBS.

PERKINS—The following resolutions were passed by the Sunday-school of the M. E. Church, South, Batesville, Miss.:

Whereas, It has pleased the Divine Father to call to her great inheritance above our sister, friend and neighbor, Mrs. MOLLIE JONES PERKINS, who departed this life in the full assurance of faith in the precious promises of her Lord, April 5, 1897; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who worketh all things together for the final good of all who love Him.

Resolved, That in the death of Sister Perkins our Sunday-school has lost a faithful teacher, our church a devoted member, her husband and children a most affectionate wife and mother, and our town and community one of its best women.

Resolved, That we tender her afflicted family our sincere sympathy, and by our prayers commend them to Him whose grace is sufficient under all circumstances.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on our Minutes, and a copy sent to the Batesville Parollen and to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

To Grocers.

We have direct proof that peddlers of washing-powders say that the stuff they're selling is "made in the same factory" as Pearline—and that buying from them will save going to, or ordering from, the grocery store. Do you want people "saved" that. You have these same washing-powders in stock. Possibly you are giving them out, whenever you can, in place of Pearline. You are trying to push them into notice; they are trying to crowd you out. You think you are "making" more money on them." But will it pay you, in the end?

THERE is no getting away from the fact that Pure White Lead (see list of brands which are genuine) and Pure Linseed Oil make the best paint.

Properly applied, it will not chip, chalk or scale off, but will outwear any of the mixtures offered as substitutes. It is, therefore, by far the most economical.

FREE By using National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, any desired shade is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to palat.

VOL. 44.—NO. 23. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JUNE 10, 1897. WHOLE NO. 2129

Rev. W. C. BLACK, D. D., EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. } PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH. { ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER

THERE IS A GOD.

At a socialistic meeting, recently held in the city of New York, one of the speakers, a young man scarcely twenty-two years of age, commenced his address by proclaiming to his hearers, "There is no God!"

There is a God! How dare you stand
With brazen front, uplifted hand;
Look o'er his mighty works abroad,
And then proclaim, "There is no God."

Who gave the power to yon bright star
To shine upon us from afar,
And when its glorious work was done
To pale beneath the rising sun?

There is a God! 'Twas he unrolled
Above the earth 'n spangled scroll;
And threw o'er all the glorious sky
A gleam of immortality.

There is a God! The passing breeze,
The howling storm, the raging sea,
The deep toned thunder, lightning's glare,
Proclaim to us, that God is there.

Who made the mountains, tall and grand,
Where sturdy trees majestic stand?
Who, when the fierce wild tempest beat,
Gave to the dove a safe retreat?

The little birds that sweetly sing,
The lovely mornings of the Spring,
In fact, all seasons of the year,
Reveal to us, that God is near.

Go out beneath the stars at night,
Or in the morning's early light,
And then, ungrateful, wretched man,
Deny your Maker if you can!

"Know Them That Labor among You."

(1. Thess. v, 12.)

There is no more sacred relation in human life than the relation of pastor and people. Out of this beautiful and sacred relation mutual duties and obligations accrue. The apprehension and performance of these mutual duties by pastor and people lead to eminent success along all lines of church enterprise; therefore, let us prayerfully consider: 1. The duties of the pastor; 2. The duties of the people.

The pastor is pre-eminently a man of labor. He is in no sense a man of leisure. However, the idea has obtained in some circles that the preacher's vocation is a sinecure; that the preacher receives good pay and does but little work. How much soever the pastor may neglect his duty, the fact still remains that the pastor who meets his obligations must, in the very nature of the case, be a man of labor, a man whose every wakeful moment is filled with earnest, thoughtful labor. But few people have ever thought how much labor it costs the pastor to prepare himself for the pulpit. Now, there may have been a time when preachers did not have to study in order to edify and instruct the people. There may have been a time when the Lord gave his ministers sermons that could deliver themselves through his servants. If so, we are not living in that age. Those good old days for the ministry are gone. In this age the preacher who fills the pulpit to the glory of God and the edification of the people must be a man of research and thoughtful investigation. He must be a man of broad culture and wide information. He must, as far as possible, intermeddle with all knowledge. The gathering of materials for sermons is no small task. Then, after the materials are gathered, comes the classification of his material and the building of his sermons, which requires no small work. When the sermon is prepared, then comes the delivery. But some are ready to say: "There's no work in the delivery of a sermon. Why, that is as easy as floating down stream." Certainly, to those who listen to well-prepared sermons nothing seems easier than preaching. Nevertheless, it is not such an easy task, for, to preach a sermon as one should, his soul must live in the sermon, and must breathe in every word as it falls from the preacher's lips.

Ah, me; who but a preacher knows the labor involved in the preaching of the Word! The minister must be a pastor as well as a preacher. He must care for the flock in his daily ministrations. It is his duty to visit from house to house, so that he may learn the spiritual wants of his flock. This part of a minister's labor is a severe drain upon his time and strength; therefore, know your pastor as a man of labor worthy of his hire. We have thus far considered some of the duties of the pastor; let us now notice some of the duties of the flock.

The word "know" expresses the whole duty of the people to their preacher. The word "know" does not imply simply a passing, personal acquaintance with the preacher. It means, first: Know him so as to sympathize with him in his labor of love, and so as to co operate with him in his plans and efforts to build up Zion. Unless the church thus know their pastor, he will be powerless to further the cause of Christ. Second: Know him so as to attend upon his ministry. If it is the duty of the pastor to be in his pulpit every Sabbath with a well-prepared sermon, then it is the duty of every member of his flock to be in his pew every Sabbath ready to hear the Word read and expounded. It would be unpardonable for the pastor to stay away from his pulpit, unless providentially detained. So, also, no member can be held excusable who, without just cause, absents himself from the stated services of his own church. Methodists have no right to leave their own church to attend the services of other churches. The Methodist pastor expects his flock, to a member, to attend his church, not the Presbyterian or Baptist pastor's church; and the Baptist and Presbyterian pastors expect the same of their flock. Methodists should be true to their own colors; should fight under their own flag. So, also, should Baptists and Presbyterians. Suppose, on a given Sabbath, a Methodist congregation assemble at the given hour for worship, and the pastor fails to come. Upon inquiry, it is ascertained that he has gone round to preach for the Presbyterians. Now, what would be the feelings of that Methodist congregation? Why, of course, they would feel that they had been fearfully mistreated, and rightfully so. No pastor has the right to thus neglect and mistreat his own flock; and, on the other hand, no member of the church has the right to neglect and mistreat his pastor by vacating his pew on the stated service of his own church.

But you ask, "Are there no exceptions to this rule?" Oh, yes; there are exceptions to all general rules. There are circumstances that would justify the members of one church attending other churches occasionally. However, it is the rule, and not the exceptions, that we are considering; therefore, know your pastor, so as to attend regularly upon his ministry.

Thirdly: Know your pastor so as to know his temporal wants, and make him easy in pecuniary matters. How often has the work of the Lord been hindered by the people neglecting to supply the pastor's temporal wants! Often the pastor is forced to go in debt because of the backwardness of the church in paying his salary; and often his salary is not paid at all, and his debts, made upon his faith in his charge, go unpaid. The unpaid pastor, unable to pay his debts because he is not paid, is denominated a dishonest man, a man who doesn't pay his honest debts. Know your pastor so as to make his salary sufficient to cover his wants, and so as to see his salary paid.

Fourthly: Know your pastor so as to give him occasional tokens of your appreciation of his labors. These little tokens may not be of much value, yet they come to the pastor's family like refreshing showers to withering flowers. They impart fresh courage and renewed strength for his many duties.

Fifthly: Know your pastor so as to pray for his success. He needs your prayers. In that way, if you are a true Christian, you can be of great service to your pastor. Ask God to baptize him for his work, and to help him fulfill each duty to the glory of God.

Lastly: Know him so as to speak encouragingly to him about his work. Tell him occasionally that you enjoyed his sermon, and that it did you good. Your words of encouragement and commendation will inspire him with new aspirations, and nerve him for yet greater conflicts. Let pastor and people thus co-operate, and success will crown the labors of each succeeding year, and pastor and flock will at last hear the glad welcome, "Come thou blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you."

L. S. JONES.

"The Evidential Value of Experience."

Our beloved brother, Rev. W. B. Lewis, has, in the ADVOCATE of May 27, an article on the above theme. He begins with this statement: "It has been said, There is no evidential value in experience." I have read the writings of infidels and other errorists all my life, and I never before heard of any man who would dare to make such an utterly absurd statement, unless we except the insane followers of the would-be sage of whom Butler sang:

"When Berkeley says, There is no matter,
'Tis no matter what he says."

Will Bro. Lewis tell us where we can find a man to-day insane enough to say that experience has no evidential value? Is the man who said it still outside of a lunatic asylum? Charles Wesley but sang a truism when he said:

"What we have felt and seen
With confidence we tell;
And publish to the sons of men
The signs infallible."

Christian experience has a tremendous evidential value; who dares to deny it?

Bro. Lewis drops into error exceedingly dangerous when he more than intimates that some men, by accepting a certain dogma generally known as the second blessing dogma, come into possession of a certain inner light denied to all other men, by which these select few may discover meanings in the Word of God hidden from all others. He certainly does not see the drift of his logic. It is true that "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God;" but is the regenerate man, who, as a child of God, has received the Spirit of God, "a natural man"? Has the "second-blessing" brother a different light showing to him the things of God hidden from other children of God, other Spirit born men and women? Is there in the Word of God a hint of anything like this? In what is this theory different from Swedenborgianism—aye, even Mormonism? Does not Bro. Lewis see that his logic would support either of these ridiculous and hurtful errors? I know of no notion that would produce greater harm to the cause of truth and the work of our Lord, were it to become prevalent, than this: that some men, by accepting a certain dogma, may, with impunity, read into the Word of God interpretations contrary to all the canons of exegesis, and then claim infallibility for their strange notions born of their strange inner light. God save us from such a calamity!

Christian experience, within its own sphere, is the very best of evidence; but when any man turns his back on every law of logic, every canon of exegesis, and every principle of common sense, and pleads his inner light of experience, and his secret revelations denied to other children of God, as proof positive of strange dogmas "hard to understand," we must put limitations on the evidential value of his experience. When a second-blessing brother urges me to "reason not," as Dr. Carradine puts it, and to believe that I can not form any correct notion of the truth or error of the dogma until I accept it, he preaches a doctrine as dangerous as ever Swedenborg, Joe Smith or Madam Blavatski uttered. Must a child of God believe a dogma in order to find out whether it is a true one or not? Suppose it be a false one? When he once believes a dogma, he is committed to it; he is in no condition to examine it; he is its slave at once; and when once in slavery to a dogma, he can and will believe it, however absurd. History bears abundant evidence to this fact of psychology.

I am sure my Bro. Lewis did not see the awful drift of his logic.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS H. CLIFFORD.

"Tempus fugit."

The leafy month of June has come.

Next comes hot July and the great International Epworth League Conference at Toronto.

We are in receipt of the "Convention" number of the Christian Guardian. This paper is the official organ of the Methodist Church of Canada, and is published weekly in Toronto.

The issue above referred to is an expensive production, containing views of Toronto, cuts of the principal churches, and photos of prominent speakers. It is brimful of information containing the Conference.

Our Canadian friends say that the coming "Conference" will be called a "Convention," as the word "Conference," in connection with League work, is unknown in Canada.

The souvenir badge bears the inscription, "Third International Epworth League Convention, Toronto, 1897." At the head of this inscription is the palm leaf (the Canadian emblem), and on either side the English and United States flags, and at the foot the Maltese cross, with motto, "Look up, lift up."

The badge can only be obtained by purchasing the "souvenir programme." The two go together, and can be obtained by sending twenty-five cents to Dr. W. E. Willmott, 37 State street, Toronto.

The "souvenir programme" will also be on sale at the armory, which is convention headquarters. It contains two hundred pages of valuable information. The full programme of services will appear in this book, together with several pages of the music to be used at the meetings.

The official badge will be recognized as a ticket of admission to all the "Convention" meetings. Up to within fifteen minutes of the time for commencing each service, badge holders only will be admitted, after which the general public will be allowed to occupy whatever space may be left.

We see it stated that Rev. Dr. Horace Reed, presiding elder of a district in the Illinois Conference, M. E. Church, proposes that every preacher in his district (about 30 in all) shall go to Toronto. He offers to deliver his lecture on the "Golden Young Man" to every chapter that will use the proceeds to send their pastor to Toronto. Many have already accepted the proposition. The pastors will no doubt appreciate the scheme.

We think it possible that we can assist many of the Leaguers in their efforts to go to Toronto. To this end we would be glad to correspond with any energetic Leaguer who has a little spare time and some business qualifications, and it is just possible that we can suggest a plan whereby the money necessary for the trip can be obtained.

This proposition refers to those who may reside within the bounds of either of the Annual Conferences of which this paper is the official organ, thus including the States of Mississippi and Louisiana. Those who reply early will embrace the opportunity, as it will be possible for only one in the same town or community to accept the proposition.

Many have written asking the expenses of the trip. One fare for the round trip is the rate named by the railroads, which will not exceed $35 from any part of Mississippi. The average fare in Mississippi will be about $27. We think the entire cost of travel, board, etc., will not exceed $50.

Some of the Leagues and congregations in Mississippi sent their pastors to Chattanooga in '95. What about the same plan in some quarters for Toronto in '97? The Leaguers in the bounds of the Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, have already subscribed the necessary amount to send their presiding elder.

In a recent letter received from Bishop Galloway, he says: "I very much regret that my appointment to Brazil will compel me to forego the engagement at Toronto. I will sail for South America the last of June."

This will be a great disappointment to many, especially to those of us who expected to accompany the good Bishop on that delightful journey to "the land beyond the lakes." Let us pray that he may have journeying mercies, and may return safe and sound from his extended episcopal tour in that country of the Andes and Amazon.

Five of the Bishops of the M. E. Church, and four from the M. E. Church, South, have places on the programme of the Toronto Conference. Rev. Dr. Carman, general superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada, will deliver the address of welcome on behalf of Toronto Methodism.

We received a few days since an invitation from the Hermanville Epworth League to attend their annual picnic Saturday, June 5. We thank them for their thoughtfulness and for the kind expressions contained in the letter of invitation. We hope to spend a pleasant day with them en route to Port Gibson to fill a "commencement" engagement.

Water Valley, Miss.

Correspondence.

To the Members of the North Mississippi Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: Your committee appointed to visit Grenada Collegiate Institute beg leave to report that they have visited the institution, and it affords them great pleasure to report it in a highly prosperous condition. The session just closed is the most satisfactory in the history of the college. One hundred and ninety-seven pupils were enrolled, ninety-three of whom were boarders—eighty in the college and thirteen in town. Fifteen young ladies received degrees and one certificates in English, French, and elocution. The committee carefully examined the papers prepared by these young ladies, and found in them evidences of careful training and of superior insight into the studies pursued. The work done in music, art and elocution also deserves special mention.

Your committee inspected the building from the handsome new dining-room in the basement to the elegantly equipped art-room in the fifth story. We found the rooms occupied by the young ladies comfortably furnished, and the whole building in good sanitary condition.

The financial agent reported collections to the amount of $754.55, to which the president added $574.70, all of which, except a small amount, has been used for improvements on the college building and grounds. The future of the institution is most promising. The Board of Trustees elected Dr. J. W. Malone president for another term of four years, beginning June 1, 1898. Dr. Malone agrees to keep the property insured, do all necessary repairs, and pay $1,500 rent; the rent to be immediately available for putting in waterworks, sewerage, bath-rooms, electric lights, etc., and for fitting up scientific and business departments.

This improvement will equip Grenada Collegiate Institute for increased usefulness, and make it the equal of any institution of the land for the education of our daughters. The various departments, except elocution, will remain under the management of the present efficient teachers. The department of elocution will be under Miss Lillie O'Daniel, of Nashville, Tenn.

The Board of Trustees passed resolutions commending the faithful work of the president and financial agent. Bro. McIntosh will continue in his present relation to the college at least until Conference.

We take pleasure in commending this institution to our people, feeling that any young lady taking the prescribed course at Grenada Collegiate Institute will be well equipped for the duties of life.

Respectfully submitted.

R. M. STANDEFER,
J. A. RANDOLPH,
Committee.

Selections.

The New Crawford Street Church.

Mr. W. A. Cann, architect from St. Louis, the successful competitor for furnishing plans for the new Methodist Church in Vicksburg, is considered a man of fine ability in his profession. He is one of the architects for the Church Extension Boards of the M. E. Church, the M. E. Church South, the Southern Presbyterians and the Cumberland Presbyterians. His specialty is church architecture, and he has made a good reputation for the perfect acoustics of the churches whose erection have been entrusted to him. His plans for the Crawford Street Methodist Church include every desirable feature for the religious and social enjoyment of the congregation. There will be a handsome auditorium for the usual church services; and on the same floor, separated by a roller curtain, which will be raised when it is desired to throw both into one, will be an elegantly appointed Sunday-school room, with small class-rooms conveniently arranged around for the retirement of classes during recitation, all of which will be in easy reach and in full view of the superintendent's desk, with which they will all be connected by electric call bells. Just above these class-rooms, on another floor, will be others for committee-rooms and Bible classes.

The pastor's study is conveniently located back of the pulpit, with plenty of light and air, and easily accessible from the parsonage, which it is contemplated soon to build on the church lot.

On the ground floor will be ladies' parlors and an entertainment hall and also a kitchen, pantry and store room, properly fitted up.

The matter of ventilation and a free circulation of air through the whole building has not been neglected. Besides being one of the handsomest, it will be one of the most comfortable churches in the Southern States.

The committee in their deliberations have had the assistance and sympathy of Rev. A. F. Watkins, pastor in charge, and of Dr. Weems, the presiding elder. They have devoted a great deal of careful attention to the merits and conveniences of all the plans laid before them.—Exchange.

LITTLE KINDNESSES

BY SUSAN COOLIDGE.

If you were tolling up a weary hill,
Bearing a load beyond your strength to bear,
Straining each nerve untiringly, and still
Stumbling and losing foothold here and there,
And each one passing by would do so much
As give one upward lift and go their way,
Would not the slight protected touch
Of help and kindness lighten all the day?

If you were breasting a keen wind, which tossed
And buffeted and chilled you as you strove,
Till, baffled and bewildered quite, you lost
The power to see the way, and aim, and move,
And one, if only for a moment's space,
Gave you shelter from the bitter blast,
Would you not find it easier to face
The storm again when the brief rest was past?

There is no little and there is no much;
We weigh and measure and define in vain.
A look, a word, a light responsive touch
Can be the ministers of joy to pain.
A man can die of hunger, walled in gold,
A crumb may quicken hope to stronger breath,
And every day we give or we withhold

From the Interior.

The Epworth League is a great institution for the interior, for the rural sections, for country churches. It will promote the religious life and stir the intellectual ambition of our young people in the country. The need of this is apparent to any observing man who travels in the interior sections of our country. If possible, the Epworth League is more urgently needed in the country than in cities, towns, and villages. Just where it is most needed it is the hardest to organize and to keep a-going. This is self-evident to any thinking man, and yet the profit is worth more than the cost. In most places in the interior our young people are timid and backward in all church work, and in many places they are almost entirely destitute of intellectual ambition. Whatever will promote one or both of these ends is a good thing, and ought to be encouraged and pushed along. An active religious life is every way better than a passive religious life, and young men and women, boys and girls, without intellectual ambition, or hungering, are doomed to ignorance all their days. Once get them stirred up and realize the inspiration of mind, they will grow hungry for mental food, and they will go along and accumulate a vast fund of information. So let Epworth Leagues be organized in every neighborhood, and in a few years we will have a brighter, stronger and better class of men and women and an host of trained workers to carry on the operations of our beloved Zion.

In some places it is impossible to get an efficient superintendent for a Sunday-school, or men suitable for stewards, trustees, or secretaries of Church and Quarterly Conferences. We have been here long enough to have grown and trained active and efficient men for all these places. This lack of efficient men for these positions is often found where one would not expect to find it. The best way to learn how to do any kind of work is to lay hold and do it. In some charges the pastor is both president and secretary of the Church Conference, and in other charges the pastor is actually the secretary of the Quarterly Conference, and does all the work of the recording steward. This happens often where there are men perfectly competent to do the work, so far as writing is concerned; but they are not familiar enough with the Discipline and church work to fill up the blank Minutes when laid down before them. There is often a lamentable ecclesiastical ignorance in the case of Methodist men of fine general intelligence. This is to be greatly regretted and deplored. It will not be so after the Epworth League has had time to train up workers for the church.

In the matter of family worship our Methodist people in the interior have greatly backslidden, and some of them have entirely fallen from grace. It is a great thing for all concerned to keep the fire on the family altar always in a steady glow. Nothing in the world makes such a deep and lasting impression on the minds of children. They never forget it. No matter how long they live, nor how wild they grow, nor how long a journey they may take into some far country, they always recur to home and the family altar with feelings of tenderness. In my time I have visited not a few criminals in prison, attended a few on the scaffold, and stood by some who were to be shot for desertion in the army, and I have found some of them hard to touch and move; but I have never seen one so far gone that did not break down at the mention of the childhood home and the family altar—if he came from a home where there was a family altar.

Parents who do not keep up family worship rob their offspring of one of the sweetest and most sacred recollections that can possibly bless the after life. More, they sin by not leading their children in the worship of God.

My work and travels are mainly in the interior, in the rural sections, among farmers and the common people. I rarely ever see a city, and do not often get to town, but, occasionally, I spend a few days in town. My conviction is that for real content, for genuine virtue, for true nobility of character, and for substantial piety, one must go among the people known as the middle class, those who have work to do and are removed from the temptations and frivolities of fashionable life. Society begins decaying at the top, or what some people call the top. This has been true of all the great nations of antiquity. They grew rotten at the top. Society has always been rotten at the bottom, and likely will be till our Lord comes again.

Lately, even just now, the governor of one great State visits another great State to inspect her prison system. He comes in a private palace car, and is attended by a retinue of notables. Along the way they have a high time. Brandies, liquors and wines flow freely. An inspection of the governor-inspector and his attendants would show them all to be full and red-hot with liquor. It takes a vast quantity of liquor to run the ship of State—some States. No wonder it so often runs aground. A governor on a tour of inspection, with a view to reforms in his own State, ought to have a cool head, a clear eye, and an unclouded judgment. This no man can have while brimful of red liquor. Governors of States looking to prison reforms and to the care and keeping of criminals ought to keep themselves free from the most potent cause of crime. I do not like for the governor of another great State to pass through my State and paint the thing red as he goes. Society is drinking, drunken and rotten at the top. Drinking and drunken governors do more to debauch society than a thousand sots in the gutter. A State with a drinking and drunken governor is fast rotting at the top.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Sarah Catherine Brelaud, wife of Rev. R. A. Brelaud, and daughter of Wm. Claiborne and Sarah Ann Smith, was born in Perry county, Miss., Feb. 6, 1869, and died in Roxie, Miss., May 5, 1897.

She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early life, and with more or less consistency remained a member of the same until death. In June, 1886, she was married to Rev. R. A. Breland, of the Mississippi Conference, and of this union were born unto them five children, four of whom she left to the care of their father, urging him, in her last hours, to rear them for God, assuring them that she had gone to heaven.

Being of a reticent nature, her Christian virtues and womanly traits of character were most appreciated by those who knew her best. She died just at that time when she could leave to loved ones the brightest hope of her eternal reward. We rejoice in the belief that the husband with the children, who are old enough to realize their loss, have grace enough, largely, to overlook their present loss and to join in with her in the shouts of her glorious triumphs.

May God's grace attend husband, children and all bereaved ones until a glorious reunion at God's right hand!

Her brother, E. T. BRELAND.

Correspondence.

From Dr. J. B. Fearn.

We spent last week on our trip to Chang Chow, and we believe God was with us all the way. The Sunday before leaving was spent in prayer and fasting, waiting before God with the one desire that he would lead us, not only this first trip, but in all our future work there. I felt as though we were entering a place where God's name was not known, but where Satan reigned, and to have a heart where only Christ was known was even more essential than ever before in our lives. After calling at Suchow to get a full supply of medicine, we started up the Grand Canal with a head wind. We passed Wu Sih, our half-way station, on Tuesday, still working against a head wind, which changed in our favor early Wednesday morning. Our splendid little boat, the "Epworth," spread her sail, caught a full wind, and passing all other boats filled my heart with delight and Mrs. Fearn's with terror. We are blessed in having this boat with its many comforts, which are not to be had on a native boat, and we think so often of the kindness of those who gave it. In a very few hours we were anchored outside the small South Gate.

Bro. Marshall told me he had been on a trip there many years ago; since then the place has been visited many times by members of other missions, and each time an effort has been made to rent. It has proved futile, until Dr. DuBose succeeded in renting a house for holding clinics, which house has been lately given up. One day while Mr. Woodbridge (S. P. M.) was selling books on the street he was accosted by a company of young men of the highest and most influential families who wished him to teach them English. Believing God's hand to be leading, he made an agreement with them, and is now there doing the work of our Master, restricted, it is true, but work which God is blessing. Bro. Woodbridge gave us a hearty welcome, and in our boat with Bro. Ng we held earnest consultations, all the while praying that God would be glorified. Our hearts burned within us as we laid out plans before God and begged him to let us have this city, of some two thousand souls, for Jesus. We thought at first to send out handbills and have a big clinic would be the best plan; but God gave us to see that this plan had its faults and had not yet opened Chang Chow, though often used. The Mandarines are the greatest opposition in Chang Chow, the people being only too glad for us to come; so we decided to try and keep the good-will of the officials and escape their opposition. We saw who came, but sent out no notices, and, so far as we know, we caused no apprehension on the part of the official by gathering a large crowd together, which makes good fuel for a riot, as has been proven in this place before. Through Bro. Woodbridge I met some of his scholars, and from one both Mrs. Fearn and I received invitations to visit them in a social and professional way. You know how the Chinese are. If the influential receive you, the people are sure to follow, and we do believe we have made a beginning that will at last give us Chang Chow for Christ. Our idea is not to go at first and enter, whether or no, winning the people afterward, but to trust in God to have the people won as we go. Rather than make a sore and then heal it up, we will, with God's help, cure all the old ones and present a healthy member to our Lord.

We were very much impressed with the place—fewer opium dens, less loafing in the tea-shops, which is a good indication to my mind that the people are busy and have no time to squander. The streets are wide and clean, for China, and everything seems to be in good condition. The people are very courteous, and we heard little that was unpleasant, "foreign devil" being conspicuous by its absence. Bro. Ng was hindered in his search for a house by the rain, but I think we will be able to get one out of the many, he saw. We are much in prayer about a house, and we feel that God is not going to disappoint us.

We are in love with Chang Shuh and the work here, but are glad we can be sent out into greater usefulness. To-day we had an awful heavy, driving rain which beat through upon us. I know you would have laughed to see all around the house vessels with water dripping or pouring into them. Our stove-pipe runs up through the roof, and through the hole water came in in streams, striking the hot stove and pipe and making us feel as though we were in some engine room from the amount of steam that was generated. We have to move part of our groceries on account of a big leak which came through an improvised sky-light made to give some light on our otherwise dark staircase.

We are very happy in our work up here, and each day we praise God as we think of the many blessings that lighten our pathway. Mrs. Fearn has begun teaching the girls in the day-school how to knit and crochet, so they will have some better means of support than making "ghost money," etc. J. B. FEARN.

Winona District Conference.

The Winona District Conference, North Mississippi Annual Conference, met in twenty-eighth annual session at Acona, Holmes county, May 28, 1897. Rev. J. B. Stone, P. E., presided.

The Sunday-school Conference was called to order by Rev. J. B. Stone on Thursday, the twenty-seventh, who proceeded to organize the Conference and perfect the roll. This done, on motion of Bro. Stone, J. B. Streater was unanimously elected president of the Conference, and presided with grace and dignity, and brought forward the business in a manner highly satisfactory to all present.

Acona is in the bounds of Black Hawk circuit, where Bro. Streater has been steward, Sunday-school superintendent and factotum since the time when the memory of (some) men runneth not to the contrary. And while not a prophet, neither is he without honor in his own country. And he is in great favor with his pastor and presiding elder.

The presiding elder had prepared a program, which was observed with the exception of the subjects assigned to preachers and laymen who failed to be present. Several addresses were made and papers read, and, altogether, the day was a success.

On Friday, at 9 A. M., the roll-call disclosed the presence of a few preachers and the absence of a great majority of the lay members of the District Conference. Several charges were not represented at all; however, before the Conference closed all the preachers showed up except four, two of whom were sick—Bro. Jno. Ritchey and Bro. J. T. Howell. These brethren were tenderly remembered, and earnest prayer was offered for them. The reports showed the work throughout the district to be in good condition and prospering. There has been substantial advancement in several instances over last year.

The visitors were: Revs. W. W. Mitchell and A. T. Buck, of Durant district; Rev. T. W. Lewis, representing Grenada Collegiate Institute, and Rev. M. S. Williams, of the North Georgia Conference.

It was regretted that the editor of the ADVOCATE was not present, and we also missed Bro. Bachman and a representative from Millsaps College.

The preaching, which was exceptionally good, was done by Revs. J. F. Evans, M. S. Williams, T. W. Lewis, T. W. Dye, K. A. Jones, and J. W. Price.

The social feature of the occasion was delightful, and the spirituality marked.

On Saturday afternoon, at the close of the five o'clock preaching service, there was a shout in the camp and general handshaking, which was greatly enjoyed, as it was a spontaneous outburst, and not the result of manipulation. The large congregation remained for an hour singing the songs of Zion, and seemed loth to leave. None present will soon forget this hallowed occasion,

"When heaven came down our souls to greet,
And glory crowned the mercy-seat."

Some doubted the wisdom of carrying the Conference to a country neighborhood; but the attendance of members of the Conference was better than at Vaiden last year. And such congregations as attended the business sessions this scribe never saw. The people came and filled the spacious church, which is one of the largest in the district.

Acona is one of the finest communities to be found anywhere. The church is substantial and commodious, and, situated in the midst of a beautiful grove of native oaks and other forest trees, is beautiful for situation. It is supported by the McGees, McRaes, Belford, Herberts, Johnsons, Baileys, and others equally devoted, who sustain their pastor, are loyal to their church, and extend delightful hospitality with unaffected simplicity and bountiful cordiality. The lands are fertile, the people prosperous and happy.

Here lived and labored Rev. Stephen Johnson, strong in native intellect, of great usefulness in Church and State. He sleeps in the beautiful cemetery adjoining the church, awaiting the resurrection of the just. His descendants are pillars in the church here and in other places to which they have gone. This place was the scene of the labors for a number of years of that eminent servant of the church, the dignified, genial gentleman; the able, scholarly preacher; the devout Christian, W. P. Barton.

This circuit was the first pastoral charge of Bishop Chas. B. Galloway, whose absence from this Conference was cause of universal regret, and for whom "journeying mercies" were invoked in his trip across the seas, soon to be entered upon.

J. R. Bingham, J. B. Streater, A. H. George and W. T. Johnson were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, with F. A. Howell, Rowan Thayer, J. M. Johnson, J. L. Cain, alternates.

The next session of the Conference will be held at Winona.

We had the pleasure of attending and participating in the exercises of the district meeting held at Flora by the efficient and faithful secretary of Jackson district, Mrs. R. R. Parker, May 14-16, 1897, which was one of the most fruitful of all our gatherings, for there were clusters of blessings that crowned each day's labors.

Attention being called to the time appointed for fasting and prayer, and special prayer being made at the opening service for the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit at this meeting, as well as the meeting of the Woman's Board, to be held in June at Birmingham, Ala., the district secretary emphasized the importance of complying with the request, which is as follows:

"The last Friday in May, the twenty-eighth, is hereby designated as a day for special prayer, with fasting, that the meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions in June may be under the control and inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

"Let our daily prayers in this behalf prepare us for this united, earnest supplication, that we may be guided, instructed, strengthened by our divine Counselor.

"Dear sisters, God has been gracious to us in the past, and he will hear us again when we plead for his work and for each other."

We most heartily extend this to each member of the entire Conference, especially the delegates, remembering, in connection therewith, our annual meeting, that we, too, may be thus blessed.

We regretted that pressing work at another part of the district prevented the helpful presence of the presiding elder, Rev. R. D. Norsworthy; also that we did not receive the telegram sent to us by our efficient and faithful co-worker, Sallie Smylie, secretary of the Meridian district. There are twelve auxiliaries in the district, six of which were represented by delegates, and others by written reports, except Millsaps; but the district secretary furnished the lacking information.

The secretary pro tem., Miss Eva Jones, of Terry Auxiliary, prepared a full report; but, owing to the nearness of the annual meeting, we will close with the report of the Resolution Committee:

Realizing so forcibly the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit that pervaded every meeting of the session; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we acknowledge our indebtedness to the source of this power for blessings received, invoking His continued presence on the work and workers.

Resolved, That grateful thanks are extended to the pastor, Rev. J. G. Cammack, for his excellent sermon, which indelibly impressed us with the duty of Christian giving from the law of love, which should far exceed that of Jewish tithing; and as worthy of special mention, we deeply appreciate the visit and encouraging words of Rev. J. W. Brown, who came in his buggy eighteen miles across the country to be with us.

Resolved, We treasure in loving remembrance the ministries of the ladies who welcomed us so warmly to their hearts and homes, not forgetting the delightful reception given by them at the home of Mrs. Charlie Hinton. The brightest and sweetest memory of the occasion was furnished by the young people in their beautiful rendition of the missionary entertainment by Mrs. R. R. Parker, and we rejoice that she shared with us the pleasure of enjoying "the fruit of her hands," all of which betokens rich harvesting, for it has been said, and universally admitted, that "the world's progress is marching on the feet of little children."

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be given the editor for our column in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and the recording secretary of Flora Auxiliary.

Encouragement for Workers.

It is a good thing to "walk by faith," and it is a blessed thing to be able to render loving, faithful service without impatience for large results, feeling sure that the Lord of the harvest will take care of the seed sowed for him; but when our Lord mercifully grants us a share in the fruition, there is cause for abundant gratitude. A psalm of thanksgiving should go up from the heart of every member of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society who reads the report of the last annual meeting of our Central Committee, as published in Our Homes, for June. This report alone is worth a year's subscription to the paper, showing as it does, even in its necessarily abridged form, what a wonderful work has been accomplished by the society since the last meeting of the committee.

The number of parsonages aided, the steady onward progress of the mission and industrial schools under our care, the vast good accomplished by the steadily increasing city missions, and "the rapid success of the mission among the Chinese and Japanese on the Pacific coast," all show how the Lord has blessed these enterprises undertaken for his sake. The treasurer reports an encouraging increase in dues—a greater increase than in any previous year. Mrs. Tigert, who has charge of the Baby Roll, reports splendid growth in that department; and the reports from Mrs. Wiley in regard to the Home and Industrial School for Orphans, at Greenville, Tenn., and from the superintendents of our other mission schools are so full of interest that they would amply repay one for a subscription to our valuable P. and H. M. S. organ.

There is much wisdom in the following kind comments on the unwisdom of some of our Conference societies in sending special donations otherwise than through the regular channels—that is, through the Conference treasurers to the General Treasurer, specifying distinctly in every case for what the donations are intended:

"The greatest drawback to winning recognition of the true and real force of the society is the fact that our funds are so scattered—bits retained in the various Conferences and in local work—that it is well nigh impossible to get full reports of all the society has raised and the work it has accomplished.

"This is to be regretted, as a society's power for good is almost universally judged by the amount of funds it has received; and such is human nature that men and women want to give where much has been given, because the giving of many to one cause empowers the society receiving to accomplish the purpose in view, and no one likes to place his gifts where there is a possibility of failure.

"Now, if all of the funds raised by our society could be massed, temporarily, in the hands of the General Treasurer, one could at a glance see the force of the society; and the purposes, either local or for the Conference, for which the funds were raised would not suffer, for the constitution would positively require that they should go back and be used as the donors had directed. We who love the cause, and wish it largest success, must put our wits together and work out this problem, the solution of which is so vital to our full success as a society."

We of the North Mississippi Conference Society will do well to ponder this carefully.

To Whom it May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,

Gilt-Edge Investment.

For the purpose of enlarging their plant and business, the Lafferty Complete Flour Company offer a limited amount of 7 per cent. bonds, secured by a first mortgage. Each bond is for $30, and the owner, in addition to the interest of 7 per cent., is entitled to share in the business of the mill to an amount that makes the bond the most remunerative security on the market. They will be sold at par.

The denomination of the bond was fixed at a minimum sum of $30, so as to furnish an investment for many persons, and gain the widest interest in this accredited Food-cure—the "Complete Flour." Address John J. Lafferty, President.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. L. J. Jones, May 28, 1897: "We are having a sad time in Raleigh. This morning Sister J. B. Childre died about seven o'clock, and at ten young Bro. Eddie Martin died—two good Christians gone home to rest. A few days ago we put the remains of Bro. E. P. Anderson away in the cemetery—all of Raleigh."

Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, Morgan City, May 31, 1897: "Yesterday being the fifth Sunday, and Edgar Bass furnishing a tug and house-boat, we went down the Atchafalaya into the oystermen and fishermen's country, and held a meeting. The first sermon that was ever preached in that part of St. Mary parish. Out in the open air, under a grand old live oak, we told the story of the manger and Calvary. The Holy Ghost came down, and men and women believed. Eighteen joined the church, and ten children baptized."

CHILDREN'S DAY AT PORT VINCENT, LA.

Children's Day was celebrated at Port Vincent, La., Sunday, May 23. The occasion was one of exceeding interest, and rendered doubly enjoyable in the occupancy of the new M. E. Church, which by united efforts of members and friends succeeded in lifting the encumbrance of debt. The exercises were excellent and entertaining; precious flock gathered together to sing the praises of their gentle, loving Savior. May they ever continne in his love, trusting and "leaning on the Everlasting Arms."

MRS. JULIA LEFTWICH,
For Sunday-school Com.

Rev. Ira L. Bronson, Winnsboro, La.: "We held our second Quarterly Conference, May 15 and 16. On Sunday the church would not seat the people who attended. Our presiding elder, Rev. B. F. White, preached an excellent dedication sermon. The house was then presented by Bro. A. D. O. Moore. After about three hundred people had taken dinner on the ground, several children were baptized, and we then listened to a heart-searching sermon from the text, Mal. iii, 8, on 'Robbing God.' Our Quarterly Conference passed the following resolutions: 'Resolved, By the second Quarterly Conference of Winnsboro charge, Delhi district, Louisiana Conference, That we hereby express our most sincere thanks—First, To Mrs. J. Bradley for her generous contribution of lot and building. Second, To Mrs. S. H. Cordill for her indefatigable and successful efforts in raising moneys for the repair and finishing of our church at Magnolia; and we heartily approve the manner in which the work is completed. Third, To Miss Wilmina Osborn for assisting Mrs. Cordill by writing over three hundred letters."

Rev. G. A. Guice, Oak Ridge, May 25, 1897: "On the fourth Sunday in this month we had Bro. A. F. Watkins with us, on the occasion of the dedication of our new church at this place. He preached us two sermons to the delight and satisfaction of all. We now have one of the best country churches in this part of the country. It is finished and paid for, and right nobly have the good people here done their part. We have not resorted to doubtful means to raise the money. We have had no grab bags, cake walks, nor anything of the kind. The people went into their pockets and paid it, and some of them had to practice economy to do it. A Jew in Vicksburg gave us $25 without being solicited for a contribution. We have had Children's Day at two points—Phœnix and Oak Ridge. Both were delightful occasions, and the collections were good. We have one Epworth League which is the best country League I know of. It has a membership of 75 and is doing some good work. We expect to see good result to the church at Phœnix from the League work in the near future. We have two Parsonage and Home Mission Societies on the work—one at Oak Ridge, and one at Bradly. Oak Ridge was organized in April, last year, and Bradly later on. Both have done good work. Oak Ridge, with less than a dozen connectional members, raised for all purposes last year more than $140. Port Gibson must look to her laurels, as Oak Ridge will have the banner for the D. S. the first thing she knows. We believe that we are moving slowly upward along all lines here. We ask the prayers of the brethren, that the work may prosper."

CHILDREN'S DAY IN KOSCIUSKO.

One of the most beautiful, interesting and inspiring exercises ever held in the Methodist Church of Kosciusko was on Sunday, May 16, the occasion being Children's Day. Those who attended enjoyed a rare spiritual treat that will manifest itself in a higher and more consecrated life in them, for scarcely could the human heart become so depraved that it would refuse to respond to the Christian sentiments uttered by the little ones from mere tots to those in their teens. The children had been thoroughly drilled by Mrs. Tennie Peebles, than whom there is none better for such work. There was not a mistake to mar the exercises. Mrs. Niles and her excellent choir simply outdid themselves in furnishing music. The Methodist choir of Kosciusko is a spiritual power. Our earnest and efficient superintendent, Bro. M. T. Boswell, is to be congratulated upon the growth of interest in the Sunday school work here. It is becoming a power for spiritual good.

But with every success of the church our beloved pastor, Bro. J. C. Park, shares largely. He is in high favor, not only with his own church, but with the people generally, and under his ministry great advances have been made within the last eighteen months. We are proud of our pastor, our superintendent, our choir, and our little folks trainer, and praise God that the Holy Spirit is touching the hearts of all of them which gives such effective work to the church. CHILDREN'S DAY AT LAKE, MISS.

Last Sunday Children's Day was observed at the Methodist Church by the Sunday-school. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion with rare and beautiful flowers. Addresses and recitations were delivered by the following persons, all of whom acquitted themselves creditably: Miss Emma Campbell, Miss Rubie Simmons, Master Percy Holmes, Mr. Gadi Campbell, and Mr. Frank Simmons. An able talk was then made by the pastor, Rev. Ira B. Robertson, in his usual happy and interesting style. The entire programme as prepared by our Publishing House was nicely carried out by Supt. W. M. Thornton and his well-trained Sunday-school.

On Sunday night the regular meeting of the Epworth League was held, presided over by the enthusiastic president, Miss Willie Scott Wilkins. The carefully prepared program was unusually interesting. A chapter was then read by Miss Katie Campbell, followed with prayer by Dr. Campbell. Mr. W. M. Thornton was called upon to tell us of his recent trip to the League in Water Valley, to which he responded. From his talk we learn that the League is growing and doing a great work for the church. A selection, "The History of a Drop of Water," was read by the pastor, Rev. I. B. Robertson, upon which he made some very appropriate remarks.

Beautiful and effective recitations were rendered by Misses Bernard Cotten and Ula Burge. All who were present seemed to enjoy the exercises, and felt that "it was good to be there."

RED STICK SPLINTERS.

The capital (Baton Rouge) is a city set on a hill, and, of course, can not be hid. It is the most inviting field of labor in the State. All classes of society are here, from the governor on down to the convict, which affords a post-graduate course of study in that fascinating, never-wearying subject, human nature.

Such public institutions at the Penitentiary, National Cemetery, University; Deaf and Dumb, the Blind, Institutes, are of much interest to the wayfaring man. This is a splendid focal point for Methodist light and heat, if the proper ministerial lenses are brought to bear. Powerful influences can be irradiated all over the State that will make for righteousness. There are many excellent people within the pales of the church, but men full of faith and the Holy Spirit—aggressive, courageous, personal workers—who will do and dare for the cross, are the most conspicuous need of our respective churches. To this end we are bending our prayers and efforts, that the energizing Spirit may thrust out more workers into the great field God has opened to us.

We had a stirring revival at the Second Church, with Revs. R. H. Wynn and F. N. Parker as worthy co-laborers. The first week persistent rain and crevasses at the river front interfered, but we held on, and the second week 20 accessions were made, a number of conversions were professed, and last Saturday night at a gracious love-feast seventy testified that God had wrought a great work in their hearts. A number prayed and testified who were never known to do so before. The faithful work of these two brethren was blessed of God.

Our Sunday-school had its Children's Day on last Sunday, and $5.50 was netted on the collection. Supt. C. E. Ives by his patience, tact, sympathy and executive ability has wrought out of crude materials a very effective Sunday-school. His Teachers' Meeting has been a factor in producing better teaching and more conscientious effort.

Bro. Parker had the difficult and delicate task of fitting into a place made vacant by the removal of a universally beloved predecessor. Evidences appear that he has struck a record-breaking pace, if heart and flesh do not fail under the great pressure of work.

Was there ever a women in the wide world who did not yearn to be the mother of a bright faced, happy, healthy, laughing, rollicking child? If there ever was such a woman, she was a bad one, and while there are many thoroughly bad men, there are very few thoroughly bad women.

It was God's and Nature's intention that every woman should be the mother of healthy children. Tens of thousands of women defeat this beneficent design by their ignorance and neglect. They suffer from weakness and disease in a womanly way, and take no measures, or the wrong measures, to remedy it. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a sure, speedy and permanent cure for all disorders of this description. It acts directly and only on the delicate and important organs that are the threshold of human life. It makes them strong, healthy, vigorous and virile. It heals ulceration, allays inflammation, soothes pain and tones and builds up the nerves. It banishes the trials of the period of impending maternity and makes baby's entry to the world easy and almost painless. It does away with the dangers of motherhood and shortens the period of weakness and lassitude. It insures the little newcomer's health and a bountiful supply of nourishment. It transforms weak, sickly, nervous invalids into happy, healthy wives and mothers. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits. A dealer is not a physician, and has no right to suggest a substitute for the prescription of an eminent specialist like Dr. Pierce.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser sent for 21 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only. Cloth binding 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

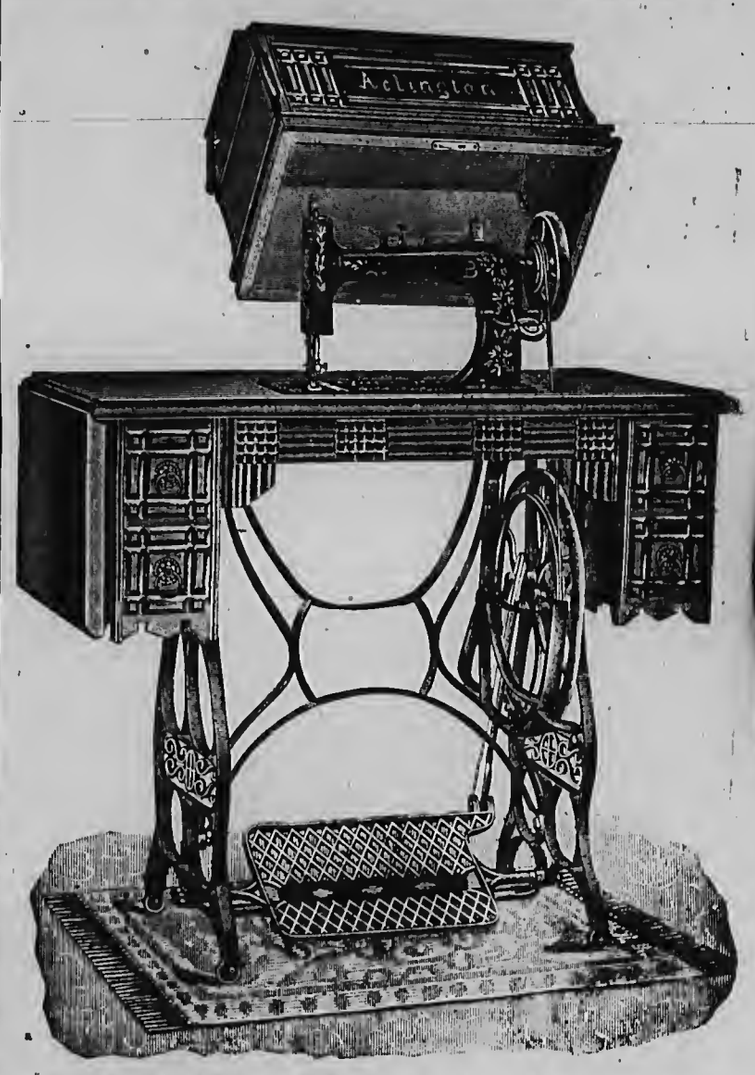
We specially invite the patronage of those whose circumstances demand a service at once inexpensive and refined. Our large and varied assortment affording ample opportunity for judicious selection of tasteful material of very moderate cost.

Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.



A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without displacing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOCAL PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20.50, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to December, '98, and send us $18.50 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

If yon want to be on the winning side, get on Christ's side.

The only way to save the masses is to save individuals. Selah.

It was a genius who said, "Don't pray cream, aad live skim miik."

The service with which God is pleased is that which springs from love.

The most eloqnent and effective preaching in the world is beantifni living.

A church letter in the bottom of a trunk is just where the devil wants it to be.—Ram's Horn.

If yon are passing throngh the shadows, remember that it takes both the darkness and the light to make a perfect day.

A preacher's repntation has become a snare to him whenever he begins to feel that he can afford to dispense with careful preparation for his ministrations.

If you want to find a hypocrite, jnst wait until you hear some one counting the hypocrites in the church. Generally speaking, he stands at the head of the list.

About the most dangerous form of lying is that which a man does to himself about himself, and it is very common these days. Self-flattery; who has not seen its victims?

How few there are willing to go down the lanes and alleys and talk to one person or one family and bring them to Jesns Christ. That is the kind of work we have got to do. —Moody.

There will be no climbing the hill of the Lord without effort, no going to glory without the violence of faith. I believe that the ascent to heaven is still as Bnnyan described it—a staircase, every step of which will have to be fonght for.—C. H. Spnrgeon.

When Saint Theresa was langhed at because she wanted to bnild a great orphanage and had bnt three shillings to begin with, she answered: "With three shillings Theresa can do nothing, bnt with God and three shillings there is nothing that Theresa can not do."

There is no good reason why a preacher should whine or sing his sermons. There are some preachers who are good conversationalists, and yet as soon as they go into the pulpit they affect a nasal, sing-song whine that sonnds worse than the bleat of a dying calf. A preacher should be natnral in his preaching and never spoil his sermon by the pulpit whang or the holy tone.—Texas Baptist Standard.

The Superabundance of God's Gifts.

If we reflected more upon God's all-sufficiency and his readiness to bestow out of his infinite fnllness all that we need, our faith would be stronger and onr lives fuller of beanty and power. Mankind are so sordid and selfish that at times we measnre onr heavenly Father's willingness and ability to bless by the feeble response that the world makes to the cries of need. The contrast between darkness and light is scarcely greater than that between man's parsimony and God's ready lavishness.

In natnre what marvelous expressions of God's power and fulness are exhibited! On every hand what manifold evidences of liberality and wealth of resonrce! What countless forms of beauty, what inexhaustible snpplies for man's need! Profnsion marks the gifts of God both in natnre and in grace. He never gives barely enough, bnt always there is superabnndance. The snn sends ont millions of times more rays than are sufficient for our little planet, or the other planets of the solar system. The trees in the Spring-time are all glorious with countless blossoms, scarcely a tenth part of which develop into frnit. The leaves appear, not only in qnantity sufficient to hide the nakedness of the limbs, bnt also in snch number and color as to clothe them in the richest dress. "He giveth snow like wool: he scattereth the hoarfrost like ashes. He casteth forth his ice like morsels: who can stand before his cold?"

A nnmber of years ago, when the world depended upon sperm oil for night illnmination, it began to be a question as to what wonld be done when the snpply of whales shonld run short. Then, as we know, came the discovery of the vast stores of petrolenm, and now, when the snpply of this highly nsefnl article is rapidly diminishing, we see electricity taking its place. As civilization advances, and the wants of man increase, we see the most striking evidences of snperabnndant provision for these changing wants. Science teaches ns that thus far we have only been gathering a few gems at the entrance, while the great mine of material resonrces provided by an all-wise God lies nnexplored beyond ns. The richness of his gifts can never be measured.

Emphatic as is the teaching of nature respecting the snperabnndance of God's gifts, we learn a far more encouraging lesson of trnst from the history of his providential dealings with men as revealed in the Scriptures. Says the Psalmist: "Many, O Lord, my God, are thy wonderful works which thon hast done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward: they can not be reckoned up in order nnto thee: if I wonld declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered." Those who ask of the Lord in sincerity and in faith are overwhelmed at the readiness and the fnllness of his response. Solomon prayed for wisdom, and the Lord gave him also riches and honor above all that were before him. The Lord gives more than we have capacity to receive, more than we expect, more than we prepare for. How little do we consider that giving doth not impoverish him! The widow whose sons were about to be made bond-slaves in settlement of a debt, having obeyed the instructions of the Prophet Elisha, fonnd that the oil stayed not until every vessel he had borrowed was fnll. How freqnently God deals with his children in like manner! When the Savior wrought the miracle of feeding the five thonsand, the loaves and the fishes were so mnltiplied that after the hnnger of all had been satisfied, more than twelve baskets full of broken portions remained, thus exhibiting the measurelessness of his power and care.

To a man who was overwhelmed by his generosity, Alexander the Great said, "I give like a king." Far more gloriously trne is this of him who holds the wealth of the world in his hands, and who has said that "he will not withhold any good thing from them that walk uprightly."

In the gospel plan of salvation, in the scheme of redemption provided through Christ, we see most clearly the exceeding riches of God's grace, the infinitnde of his love, the lavishness of his gifts. Though sin hath abounded, grace doth much more abound. "Now, being made free from sin, and become servants to God, we have our frnit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." Who shall pnt limits to onr dominion over sin, to onr development in the image of Christ? "Shall we continne in sin, that grace may abound?" Are we to believe that grace can not enable ns to overcome the sins that so easily beset ns, that we must perforce yield to some temptations, that peace can not abide? Nay. Is it not written that onr Lord is "able to do exceeding abundantly all above that we ask or think?" We ought to feel as Paul felt when, writing to the Corinthians, he said: "Now, thanks be nnto God, which always causeth ns to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savonr of his knowledge by us in every place." Why shonld we be so weak and dispirited, why shonld we let circnmstances master ns, when God is so ready to impart the power and inclination to do his will? Though we be beset with difficnlties and temptations, and, like the servant of Elisha when the Syrian host encompassed the city where they were, see no chance of escape, the Lord can open onr eyes that we may see horses and chariots of fire round about ns. "If God be for ns, who can be against ns? He that spared not his own Son, bnt delivered him np for ns all, how shall he not with him also freely give ns all things?" Let ns reflect much npon the fact that God's grace is snperabnndant; that his care is unceasing.

School Histories.

The Department of Wisconsin, G. A. R., met at Ean Claire last week; and it adopted the following preambles and resolntions:

Whereas, The war between the North and Sonth ended nearly a third of a centnry ago—ended to the honor and glory of the best government ever vonchsafed to mankind; and,

Whereas, There has not yet been prepared for nse in the pnblic schools of the United States chapters on that great war for a school history that do exact jnstice to States, armies, battles and leaders, and are satisfactory to both North and Sonth; and,

Whereas, Snch chapters in a school history are most desirable, and wonld be of incalcnlable benefit to the country in proper instrnction of the yonth; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the belief of the Department of Wisconsin, Grand Army of the Repnblic, that the surest, quickest, easiest and best way to secnre snch chapters for a national school history is to select for the work a commission of distingnished edncators from the ranks of the contending armies in the contest from 1861 to 1865.

Resolved, That onr representatives to the national encampment, which meets at Bnffalo next August, be requested to present this matter to that honorable body.

This proposition is receiving very great attention in many of the leading papers of the connty, both North and Sonth; and the amonnt of approval the proposition is obtaining is at least twenty times the amount of disapproval it obtains. Coming generations will want mainly to have the principles at stake in that momentous drama trnthfnlly set forth, and the varying phases and incidents of the war accnrately related. They will certainly not want to have the animosities and bitterness of the war-time perpetnated in histories; nor will they care to have a highly-tinted and ex-parte statement of the causes and events of the unpleasantness taught to their children, whether from Federal or Confederate sonrces.

If the Confederate veterans at Nashville fall in with the proposition to have a joint Federal and Confederate commission of edncators to write a resnme of the war that will be adopted both in Northern and Sonthern school histories, it is almost certain that their example will be followed by the Grand Army of the Repnblic at its annnal encampment two months later on; and thns amicably and satisfactorily will a very ugly little sectional qnestion that has caused much bad blood and bother for years be disposed of.—Times-Democrat.

The Preparation of Sermons.

When this general preparation is thorough, the specific preparation will be comparatively easy. When the preacher has the material of his sermon at his fingers' ends, its preparation consists chiefly in arrangement. Bnt even this must be done with care, if the very best results are to be obtained. It is not enough for the preacher to have something to say, and something that is worth saying, bnt to be able to say it in such a way as to best answer the end he has in view. This will depend very largely upon the arrangement of his matter, as well as npon the lucidity of his statement, and the pertinency of his illnstrations. But, above all, he must both see and feel the trnth that he proclaims in order to its being effective. This preparation, however, can not be attained without earnest and prayerful thought. Bnt how much time or labor shonld be bestowed npon the preparation of a sermon is a matter upon which no hard and fast rules can be laid down. —Christian Guardian.

Millsaps College Commencement.

The exercises of the fifth annual commencement of Millsaps College began Friday morning, June 4, at 11 o'clock, a declamation contest by representatives from the Freshman class being the first thing on the programme.

Following are the names of the participants and their respective subjects: J. E. Alford, "The Trne Orator;" M. H. Brown, "The Cavalier;" C. N. Gnice, "America towards Immigration;" E. H. Galloway, "Mississippi Contested Elections;" J. S. Hammack, "Pyramids Not All Egyptian;" J. A. Hammack, "The Bnrning of Chicago;" W. O. Sadler, "The Unknown Confederate Dead." These declamations were well rendered. The winner of the medal will not be made known nntil the last day of commencement.

On Friday afternoon there was a Scriptnre and hymn-reading contest for the Gnnning medal, participated in by the following young ministers: W. E. M. Brogan, L. E. Alford, W. O. Sadler, H. P. Lewis, A. H. Shannon, and Robt. Webb. Contests of this kind are directing the attention of young licentiates to a much-neglected matter, and will tend to marked improvement in the manner of reading the Scriptnres in public. The decision of the committee was reserved nntil Tuesday.

The debate Friday night between representatives from the two literary societies would have done credit to older heads. The speeches evinced careful preparation and investigation, and considerable argumentative ability. Messrs. W. E. M. Brogan and R. L. Cannon, from the Galloway Society, spoke on the affirmative, while Messrs. C. G. Andrews and H. B. Watkins, of the Lamar Society, argued on the negative, the qnestion discnssed being, "Resolved, That the establishment of a national nniversity by the United States government is desirable." The decision was rendered in favor of the affirmative, and the medal for the best speech of the debate was awarded to Mr. W. E. M. Brogan.

The exercises Saturday morning consisted of an oratorical contest for the Oscar Kearney Andrews medal by six speakers from the Sophomore class. The programme was as follows: H. T. Carley, "Onr Civilization;" G. L. Harrell, "Spoils in Politics;" J. H. Holloman, "Silent Forces;" T. M. Lemly, "A Striking Campaign;" J. T. Lewis, "Oratory." All of these young collegians acquitted themselves well, their speeches showing both art and pains in composition, some originality of thought, and a fair degree of attention to elocntion. Some of the speakers displayed oratorical talent of no mean order, and made the house ring with applause by their happy hits, well-rounded periods, and employment of beantiful figures.

The commencement sermon was preached Snnday morning in the College Chapel by Dr. John J. Tigert, of Nashville, the anditorinm being filled to overflowing. The choir of the First Methodist Church had charge of the music, which was most excellent and enjoyable. The Doctor's text was Matt. v, 29, 30. The sermon was full of strong meat, clear, and earnestly delivered. It produced a profound impression.

At night, in the First Methodist Church, Dr. Tigert preached another commencement sermon, this time for the Belhaven Female College.

At 3:30 o'clock Snnday afternoon the College Y. M. C. A. held a missionary service, the sermon being preached by Rev. T. L. Mellen, of Canton, his subject being the "Destructive and Constructive Effects of Mission Work." It was a strong and stirring sermon, bristling with points and replete with information.

The literary address Monday morning by Prof. C. Alphonso Smith, Ph.D., of the University of Louisiana, was brilliant, scholarly, and inspiring, and charmed everyone who heard it. His subject was, "Southern Oratory before the War," and, as the speaker proceeded, the glow and sparkle and matchless power of the orators of by-gone days were made real once more. The proper study of Southern history, as he clearly brought ont, involves a more thorough consideration of the moulding influence and commanding personality of that wonderful galaxy of gifted speakers who lived and wrought among us in ante-bellum days.

The gymnastic exhibition given by the College Athletic Association, on Monday afternoon, was greatly enjoyed by those present. The young athletics performed a number of dextrous feats, and elicited many rounds of applause. Judging by the performances and general appearance of the participants, one would infer at once that in their pursuit of knowledge the physical man is not being neglected.

Following is a list of the graduates: Bachelor of Arts—L. E. Alford, W. W. Catching W. H. Fitz Hugh, W. B. Jones, D. G. McLaurin, G. B. Power. Bachelor of Science—Monroe Pointer.

The total enrollment during the session just closed was 206, there being 178 matriculates in the Literary Department, and 28 in the Law Department. The health of the students has been remarkably good, and be it said to the credit of the student body, that no cases of gross misconduct were reported.

The college library now contains 4,243 catalogual volumes, and over 3,000 pamphlets and magazines, some of the latter being very rare and interesting.

During our stay in Jackson we were generously entertained by our friends and former parishioners, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Key. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of Bishop Galloway, Rev. R. W. Bailey and Bro. R. Griffith, to whom and to their families we are under many obligations for their courtesies.

A New Book.

WHEN, WHERE, WHY; OR, A STORY OF THE LIFE OF CHRIST. By Allen Nicholson. The Editor Publishing Co., Franklin, Ohio.

The author undertakes the difficult task of transposing the four Gospels into a continuous story. He freely harmonizes the four histories, arranging the incidents and discourses according to his own views. The applications of the parables are neither striking nor original. The attempt to simplify the Gospels by putting the life of Christ in a narrative form has always proved a failure. This work is only a confirmation of the fact that the testimony of three or more witnesses can not be combined. So with the four Gospels; they were never intended to be united. They are individual in their character, clear, transparent. Why, then, these abortive attempts to do that which God never intended should be done? This work averages well with others in the same line. The mechanical make up is good—type clear, binding good. S. S. K.

Enthusiasm.

There is no true work done without enthusiasm. The artist whose heart is cold is a mere artisan. The student of science who works with no great human enthusiasm for knowledge is only a mechanism more delicately organized than his microscope or his magnetic battery. The statesman who is simply a calculating player with human pawns on the chess-board of a nation or a political party, is less a man than the humblest citizen whom the impulse of patriotism urges to the daily discharge of civic duty or pushes on to the battle's front in the hour of his country's peril. The deepest secret of life as well as the mightiest force of life, is love. Without love there is no enthusiasm, and without ideals there is no enthusiasm. We freeze our hearts by selfishness, and stifle them by sordidness. We fix our eyes upon the little field circumscribed by our day's activities and ends. With no wide-reaching affection and no uplifting ideal, we make of our life a treadmill, and of our duty an unwelcome drudgery. We disclaim the highest endowment of the soul and deny our sonship to God. Narrow faiths and narrow hopes put fetters on the spirit, and small affections keep small the heart and low the temperature of life.—Rev. Philip S. Moxom.

A wholesome fear of authority lies at the foundation of all right personal character. Without it, it is impossible for a man to become morally great. The highest order of love does not exist without it. Reverence for God, for his Word, his church, his ministry; reverence for parents, for teachers, and for seniors, especially the aged, and for the authority of the State should, therefore, be inculcated in every child among us. It is the only atmosphere in which the faculties of mind and heart can grow normally and reach a robust development. Nothing so effectually kills selfishness—narrow and degrading selfishness—as to have something higher than ourselves to which to look.—Sunday-School Magazine.

NOTES.

Bishop Keener and his family have gone to Ocean Springs for the Summer.

Rev. J. W. Menefee, agent of the Alabama Methodist Orphanage, died at Selma on the twenty-ninth.

Rev. R. M. Blocker, of the Louisiana Conference, has gone to Sour Lake, Texas, for his health.

Rev. Lewis Alford spent several days in the city last week visiting his brother, Rev. J. M. Alford. He occupied the pulpit at Tchoupitoulas.

A Summer School will be held at Gibson Hall, Tulane University, for a term of six weeks, beginning July 1. The purpose of the school is to prepare students for entering college.

Rev. J. W. Harmon called at the ADVOCATE recently. He is in good health and spirits, and, as usual, is full of zeal in the Master's cause. He is always ready to preach the everlasting gospel.

Prof. A. M. Muckenfuss, of Millsaps College, was married on the first, at the First Methodist Church, in Jackson Miss., to Miss Margaret Galloway, the ceremony being performed by the bride's father, Bishop C. B. Galloway. The bridal party left that night for a visit of about a week to the groom's relatives in Charleston, S. C., after which they will spend the Summer in Europe.

Miss Mattie Linfield died on May 29. She was a sister of Rev. W. L. Linfield, of the Mississippi Conference. She was a woman of fine abilities and a thoroughly exemplary Christian. Her highest ambition seemed to be to do good in her modest, quiet way. Though the messenger came for her with little premonition, it found her ready. She was buried in the cemetery at Hazlehurst by the side of her sainted father and mother and other loved ones.

Dr. J. H. Barrows, of Chicago, has been in India for several months. Since his return he has been lecturing before the University of Chicago. The following epitome of one of his lectures is of special interest:

The results achieved by Christian missions, especially in southern India, are characterized by Dr. Barrows as a modern miracle. He made careful investigation of the work of many societies, English and American, studying it from both sides, listening patiently to the pointless criticisms of un-Christian Europeans and unperceiling Brahmins, as well as to the testimony of native converts and missionaries. Considering the character of the environment of the natives, their wretched surroundings, the centuries of degradation, the lack of the physical and moral stimulus that is enjoyed by people of cooler lands, the consistent Christian lives of thousands of converts are simply marvelous. Dr. Barrows met many high-caste converts, and said there was no word of truth in the assertion that only the peasants accept Christianity. While the missionary problem still appears to him immeasurably vast, it seems the reverse of hopeless. The cities, with their educated, but atheistic populations, are the most difficult field for missionary advance. It is exceedingly fortunate, said Dr. Barrows, that this movement proceeds from America, toward which country the people of India have a kindly feeling; and that the Christianity so proclaimed is that of American Protestantism rather than the ecclesiasticism of the Anglican Church, which will never rouse much love in the breasts of England's conquered subjects.

Centenary Commencement.

Our commencement ball—such as we have at Centenary—was set a-rolling on Sunday, May 30. Under the powerful logic and ponderous sentences of Dr. H. M. Dubose, who preached the sermon, it was given a good impetus in the presentation of a theme of utmost importance to students—"God's Plan in Individual Life." This motion was accelerated on Sunday night by the earnest words of Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker in his address before the Y. M. C. A., in which he elaborated the necessity and rationale of a true faith in God. The Board of Trustees were not on hand Monday morning (owing to the Conrad crevasse) to add their quota of energy, but that evening a quorum was obtained and the business affairs of the college began to gain attention.

Monday night was given to the Preparatory Department. The attendance was the largest seen in recent years. A very enjoyable programme was rendered. One of the features of this was the contest for the Pharr medal in declamation. After a very spirited contest, which showed careful preparation and a good deal of talent on the part of those participating, the medal was awarded to Master Charlie Holcombe.

Tuesday was devoted to the literary societies. Both the Union and Franklin Halls were filled with friends who came to witness the farewell ceremonies held in honor of this year's graduates. Impromptu speeches were made by visiting well-wishers; and if any deduction can be drawn, the grand old art of eloquence is not yet lost in the land.

Owing to the delay in trains, the alumni address was postponed to Tuesday evening. It was then delivered by Rev. R. H. Wynn—than whom Centenary has no stancher friend nor more loyal son. His words were replete with suggestive thought for the times, and breathed forth an ardent love for his alma matter, and glowed with fervent hope for her ultimate uplifting. After his address a meeting of the Alumni Association was held. R. H. Wynn was elected president, and means were set on foot for the enlisting the sympathy and co-operation of all former graduates in securing money for the endowment of a professorship. A fair subscription was started at once, and this important move will be pushed to ultimate success.

Tuesday night will never be forgotten. The literary address before the societies was delivered by Dr. W. H. LaPrade. His subject, "Some Phases of Modern Thought," was handled in that felicitous manner particularly his own. The fields of literature, science and religion were each in turn surveyed, the danger signal hoisted in its proper place, and the young men were once more given the opportunity of getting their true bearings with regard to these great issues. After the address the McGehee medal was contended for by Messrs. Frank Singleton, D. F. Turner, A. S. Lutz, and F. N. Garrett. The speeches were all good, and evinced careful work. Mr. Garrett, of Monroe, La., was awarded the honor for his oration on "The Distress of Nations."

The graduating exercises were held in the College Chapel on Wednesday morning, and were largely attended and very interesting. The graduates were two—one A. B., A. R. Holcombe, and one B. S., J. M. Daniel. The speeches of these gentlemen reflected credit on themselves and their college. The records they have made in the past prophesy success for the future. May their life work be crowned with the same distinction that their student days have brought them! Aside from the honors already mentioned, two medals were delivered on commencement day. The Freshman medal for scholarship was awarded to Mr. J. H. Cline, and the Drake medal for English was won by Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburgh.

One of the most attractive features of the commencement occasion was the music. This was rendered by the band from the Institute for the Blind at Baton Rouge. This band, under the leadership of Prof. Clark, more than satisfied the expectation of the people. Their work is of the highest order, and they well deserve the sympathy and aid of all true lovers of music.

Some important changes were made by the Board in the administration of the affairs of the college. To begin with, the time for opening has been set forward two weeks, and our next session will begin the third Wednesday in September. This will, of course, put our commencement the third Wednesday in June. A second item is the reduction of tuition in the Preparatory Department. From now on this will be $30, while in the College it still remains $50. A still more radical advance was made in the management of the Preparatory Department. From now on the work in the preparatory classes will be done by the college professors under the supervision of the president. This will effect two much needed improvements: First, it will insure far better preparatory work, and, secondly, it will at once identify the students with the college, and they will be far more likely to complete the full curriculum. By this co-ordination and correlation we expect to build up a strong Preparatory Department. This is the need at present. During the past three years the grade of the college has been constantly advancing along all lines. But we have no need of a college unless we can feed it with students thoroughly prepared to compass the courses. This is the view the Board took of the matter, and this is the solution of the problem they offer. The college faculty accept it in good faith and pledge themselves to carry out the scheme to the best of their ability.

And so we make our appeal to the people, who in the last analysis have in their keeping the weal and woe of this institution. Let all the friends of Centenary—if they be not dead—awake! She is not dead! She has vitality that will respond to a proper environment. Let her catch the invigorating breeze of many ardent prayers and the delightful perfume of a few thousands of greenbacks, and her lungs will begin to inflate with their old-time lustiness, the mighty currents of life will be set in motion anew, and strong pulsations of ever-increasing energy will throb throughout her grand old frame!

SECRETARY OF FACULTY.

Cure Catarrh in Summer.

Rev. J. W. Blosser, M. D., who has devoted twenty-one years to the study of Catarrh, says that Summer is the best time to make a speedy and thorough cure. He has discovered a remedy which is smoked in a pipe, but contains no tobacco, and cures the worst cases permanently. He will mail a three-days' trial treatment free to any sufferer who will address Dr. J. M. Blosser & Son, 11, 12 and 13 Grant Bulding, Atlanta, Ga.

Notice.

We have one of the best Epworth Leagues here at Hermanville, Miss., it was over my privilege to be connected with, and I believe one of the best in the State. You ought to be in one of their devotional or literary meetings. They are certainly very entertaining and instructive, and will be a very great blessing to the young people and some of the older ones that attend. God bless them in their good work!

Gone Home.

The Batesville Baptist Church, Batesville, Miss., mourns the death of Sister Mary Jane Van Voris, mother of Sister Ritchie, the wife of Bro. John Ritchie, D. D. Sister Van Voris was born Sept. 9, 1824; married Bro. Van Voris Dec. 14, 1843; professed faith in Christ in 1844, and died at the home of Bro. Ritchie in Winona, Miss., May 14, 1897, aged seventy-two years eight months and five days. She was a ripe Christian, full of years and many acts of Christian fruitage.

One of the best has gone from our midst, and we feel the poorer. Her end was peace; her future—who can tell! We must wait till we get there! But we know it is with Jesus, and that is enough for us now. Three children, all Christians, and three grandchildren, also Christians, with us mourn her death, and yet rejoice in her eternal gain.

ALEX. A. LOMAX, Pastor.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-sixth annual Camp Meeting at Seashore will open (D. V. on Wednesday evening, July 14, next, and continue for about eight days.

Arrangements have been made for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit this delightful spot. A handsome and commodious two-story lodging-house—Keller Lodge—has been erected and comfortably furnished for visitors, in addition to the other accommodations supplied by the trustees.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until August 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of 1,400 feet; fanned by the refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico. The sea-bathing afforded is unsurpassed by any resort on the coast. A fine artesian well supplies the grounds with excellent drinking water, which is now "piped" over the entire encampment. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure and exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued and overheated visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the camp meeting should address W. B. Thomson, New Orleans, chairman Lodging Committee. Questions concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.; Dr. M. F. Tucker, Mobile, or J. H. Lakin, Montgomery, Ala.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge. Board will be furnished them at the restaurant at half-rate.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

IN THE ORGAN LINE

No competition with us is possible, as we have the BEST to be had.

PHILIP WERLEIN. Lim, 614-616 Canal, New Orleans, La

"Everything in the Music Line at Werlein's," is an adage.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

THANKFULNESS.

To-night there's not a shadow
To fall across my way,
For not one single sorrow
Has darkened all the day.
From early morn till evening,
I have been light and free,
And though all undeserving—
O, Lord, my thanks to thee!

There have been friends to love me,
There have been friends to cheer,
The sunshine all around me,
No thought of any fear.
No sickness has befall'n me,
No pain has cast its dart,
Father, I kneel to thank thee,
With humble, grateful heart.

How many, oh! how many,
On beds of sickness pine,
Whose joy has been to serve thee,
Far better, Lord, than mine!
And many kneel in anguish,
Around the loved one's bed;
With bleeding hearts and broken,
Gazing upon their dead.

But thou hast kept close by me,
Hast let no evil come;
With grateful heart, oh! help me
To say, "Thy will be done."
Should heavy woes oppress me,
No earthly helper nigh,
Thou wilt look down in pity,
And soothe my bitter cry.

W. D. Howells on the Home.

I fancy that the home was always much rarer than we think, and I do not believe that it is rarer now than ever. Indeed, if there are more comfort and more widespread ease and leisure among us, the conditions for the home are more favorable, for it is useless to deny that where there is great poverty, as where there is great luxury, the conditions for the home are bad. The home flourishes best in that middling environment where the family is held strongly together by a common feeling of its supreme value. But where the habitation is bare and squalid there can be no sense of home; and where the social and material circumstances are full of invitation outside of it, the home can not seem the first good of life. It is the family, however, that makes the home; it is often, if not usually, one temperament, the temperament of the mother, that makes it; and this will have more effect in great poverty than in great luxury. We have all seen some woman-nature holding a wretched household together, and shedding its own inner loveliness upon everything in it; and we have all seen some such woman-nature clogged with superfluity, denied its function of giving and blessing, and thrown back upon itself, in circumstances where want could not be imagined. Love expresses itself in help, and where the help is hired there must be less sense of love than where the help is given. Probably, then, there are more who look back tenderly to the house of poverty than to the house of luxury; but one can not deny that it is possible to look back to a palace home with fond regret. I never heard of such a case, but it is possible to suppose it.

We need not deal long with these extremes. They are commoner among us than they once were, however, and perhaps that is what makes us think that the home, which does not flourish in them, is in decay. Yet if it were the kind of fact that the census could reach, I should not be at all surprised if the home in the best sense were found flourishing more vigorously and abundantly than ever before.

The whole effect of our conditions is to create and foster a vast middle class, and with the middle class, as I have expressed, I believe the home is more than with the highest or the lowest class. The house where there is neither want nor surfeit is peculiarly the shelter of the home. Its inmates, especially the womankind, are dedicated, but not sacrificed to the care of it; they are its votaries, not its victims, and their love of it makes it beautiful and precious to all who dwell in it.—Harper's Weekly.

Christian Growth.

Lay down, therefore, as a sure, a blessed truth, for which you are to give thanks, and on which you are immediately to act, that both in the catalogue of duties and in that of privileges there remain before you, awaiting your approach to them, and your apprehending and appreciating and appropriating them, many things which are yet to enrich and adorn you as a servant of Christ, as a child of God in the midst of an evil generation. Arise and seek. Follow earnestly the best gifts. Let progress be your watchword. Let pride be your abhorrence. The proud look much to the things that are behind, and see little and gain less of the things that are before. The humble, with all their goodness and all their progress, are yet in their own eyes so imperfect, that to the last they have no peace, no hope, save in being found in Christ; their attainments never appear a substitute for Christ's righteousness; they feel fresh joy and gladness in being continually justified in him; and, in being so justified, they see their right to the prize at last, and to immeasurable blessings in the meantime. The progress which, on the ground and merit of Christ's righteousness, they are entitled to expect, appears to them large and limitless, as that very righteousness which they plead as their title to daily grace, and their hope of future glory. The capacities of Christ's righteousness and intercession—for his intercession is the prevailing and continual efficacy of righteousness—are to the eye of quickened faith beyond all that it can think or conceive. The inheritance of things that are before expands and enlarges, accordingly, to the ardent and obedient believer's view; and glad to know that his redemption draweth nigh, and glad that no bounds are placed to the progress he may make in likeness to Christ, in service to him, in joy in him, in fellowship with him, even here; this one thing he does—forgetting the things which are behind, he reaches forth to those that are before.—Foreign Evangelical Review.

The Hasty Word.

To think before you speak is so wise an axiom that one would hardly think it needful to emphasize it by repetition. And yet in how many cases the hasty temper flashes out in the hasty word, and the latter does its work with the precision and the pain of the swift stiletto! Singularly enough, the hasty word oftenest wounds those who love one another dearly, and the very closeness of their intimacy affords them opportunity for the sudden thrust. We know the weak points in the armor of our kinsman and our friend; we are aware of his caprices, and ordinarily are tender and compassionate even of his vanities and his small fancies and whims; but there dawns a day when it is written in the book of fate that we shall be as cruel as we are loving. We are cold, or tired, or hungry. We are anxious over unpaid bills, or our expected letters have not arrived, or one of the children is ailing, and we dread the outcome of the malady. Our politeness fails us, fortitude is vanquished, philosophy is in abeyance, and we may say that which we repent in sackcloth and ashes. But though the hasty word may be forgiven, it is not at once forgotten. It has flawed the crystal of our friendship: the place may be cemented, but there is a shadowy scar on the gleaming surface. Oh, if the word of haste had but been left unspoken; if the strong hand of patience had but held back the sword as it was about to strike!—Margaret Sangster.

He Saw Himself.

"You must excuse me, gentlemen, for I can not drink anything," said a man who was known to the entire town as a drunkard.

"This is the first time you ever refused a drink," said an acquaintance. "The other day you were hustling around after a cocktail, and in fact you even asked me to set 'em up."

"That's very true, but I'm a very different man now."

"Preachers had hold of you?"

"No, sir, no one has ever said a word to me."

"Well, then, what has caused the change?"

"I'll tell you. After leaving you the other day, I kept on hustling after a cocktail, as you call it, until I met a party of friends. When I left them I was about half drunk. To a man of my temperament, a half drunk is a miserable condition, for the desire for more is so strong that he forgets his self-respect in his effort to get more drink. I remembered that there was half a pint of whisky at home, which had been purchased for medical purposes. Just before reaching the gate, I heard a voice in the garden, and looking over the fence, I saw my little son and daughter playing. 'Now you be ma,' said the boy, 'and I'll be pa. Now you sit here, and I'll come in drunk. Wait, now, till I fill my bottle.'

"He took a bottle, ran away and filled it with water. Pretty soon he returned, and entering the playhouse, nodded idiotically at the girl and sat down without saying anything. The girl looked up from her work, and said:

"'James, why do you do this way?'

"'Wizzer way?' he replied.

"'Gettin' drunk.'

"'Who's drunk?'

"'You are, an' you promised when the baby died that you wouldn't drink any more. The children are almost ragged, and we haven't anything to eat hardly, but you still throw your money away. Don't you know you are breaking my heart?'

"I hurried away. The action was too life-like. I could think of nothing during the day but those little children playing in the garden. You must excuse me, gentlemen, I can not drink again."—Iowa Endeavorer.

Breadth of View.

There are few things that most people need more than they do this illuminating touch. Most of us lack perspective. We see the near, but not the distant. Our horizon is very limited. We decide the issues of life on the ground of present appearances. Few lift their eyes to see the larger and deeper things that lie beyond. But it is always the best that lies concealed. The sticks and stones are on the mountain side, but the veins of gold are in its heart. He who wants ore must mine beneath the surface. Apocalyptic visions are caught only on mountain tops. He who deals with the petty present walks amid the merest commonplace. But he whose eyes have been opened sees the hills filled with the horsemen and chariots of God. Life has little purpose and little meaning till the scales have fallen from our eyes. When that is done we see, as Mrs. Browning tells us,

"Earth's crammed with heaven,
And every common bush afire with God."

Every place on which we stand is holy ground, if we only have vision enough to see it. Every trifling present interest relates itself to the future and to destiny. Lightning is always in the skies waiting to be captured, if we learn how to sail our kites so as to reach it. We live and move amid infinities, and there is nothing that is "common or unclean." God has set everything on the largest scale, and the seer can see a world in a dewdrop. Most lives, we repeat, need more perspective. They need vision of intellect, that God may be seen walking among his suns and stars. They need vision of purpose, that the end of living may not terminate in mere present temporal advantage. They need vision everywhere, that the meaning which God has attached to things may become apparent, and that life in its real significance and compass may appear. We lead little lives. We are swayed by petty motives. We are controlled by trifling considerations, when the infinite and eternal crowd closes upon us. It is all because our eyes are holden that we can not see. Even the Savior himself walks with us and is unrecognized.—Epworth Herald.

The Full Account.

A prosperous liquor-dealer was boasting to a group of men standing near his saloon of the amount of money he had made.

"I have made $1 000 in the last three months," he said.

"You have made more than that," quietly remarked a listener.

"What is that?" was the quick response.

"You have made my two sons drunkards. You have made their mother a broken-hearted woman. You have made much more than I reckon, but you'll get the full account some day!"—Selected.

Character Is Capital.

"Character has a market value" was the epigrammatic remark of a brainy young preacher to the writer the other day. The saying set us thinking. Character is capital. It is coin that never depreciates, but passes current in all lands. It may suffer an eclipse through misfortune in business or the effects of an evil tongue, but in due time it will come forth bright as the sun, and will then shed forth a more brilliant light because of the fiery ordeal through which it has passed.

If you want knowlege, you must toil for it; if food, you must toil fer it; and if pleasure, you must toil for it. Toil is the law. Pleasure comes through toil, and not by self-indulgence and indolence. When one gets to love work, his life is a happy one.—Ruskin.

HYGIENE.

John Wesley and Exercise.

John Wesley, the great Methodist divine, although not an educated physician, was possessed of so great a fund of common sense and of such remarkable powers of observation that he became almost as noted among the common people for his instructions in relation to health and the treatment of disease as for his theological teachings. He even wrote a medical work which, although it contained many things of which we could not approve, was, nevertheless, in its recognition of rational and natural remedies, more than a century ahead of the times when it was written.

Mr. Wesley recognized fully the value of exercise as a means of preserving health. He was always a man of active habits, and declared that he owed his excellent health to the fact that when he went up to London to school, his father charged him, in his parting instruction, that he should run three times around Charter-House Square every morning before breakfast. This practice he adhered to during his whole school life, and with the result that he was thereby kept in excellent health, and a good physical foundation laid for the busy life which he afterward led. By request, a friend recently measured the distance around Charter-House Square, and reports it to us to be 445 yards, or a little more than one-fourth of a mile. Three times around the square would be three fourths of a mile. A vigorous run of three-fourths of a mile, if practiced regularly for six months, would convert many a pale, puny, listless school boy or girl into a rosy-cheeked, bright-eyed, vigorous youth or maiden. Exercise is the best of all tonics, and is worth even more than a schoolmaster as a means of sharpening the wits.—Selected.

Hot Milk as a Nutriment.

If any one doubts the nourishing properties of milk, let a test be made of the following preparation of it. When any one is very weary or weak from exhaustion, heat some milk to the scalding point, until a thin skin begins to wrinkle upon the surface, and then drink it as hot as possible. It refreshes almost instantly, and restores the exhausted vitality to a surprising extent as soon as it is taken. It is more nutritious than any of the beef teas made from meat extracts or that made from fresh beef which is carefully strained, as many of the recipes direct that it shall be.—Green's Fruit Grower.

Beauty Is Wealth.

Beauty is as essential to a woman as any other quality, with beauty of form and feature comes beauty of mind and character. Physical beauty is a rounded form, the brightly tinted cheek, the vivacious eye, a certain ease and grace of manner, which indicates a superabundance of physical strength. Very few women possess these qualities, but very many more might possess them who do not. If you feel that you are losing vitality, losing your beauty losing your strength, if you feel that your face which once was plump and rosy, is becoming thin and sallow, that wrinkles (which are the terror to all pretty women) are beginning to appear, take our advice and try that greatest of discoveries, the "MASSAGE FACE CUP," which is the only means known to science to convert a thin and sallow expression into a plump and rosy face. It will transform a face with plain or homely features into an expression of grace and beauty. Physiology teaches us that if we would be strong, we must exercise the muscles which need the developing. Exercise causes the blood to rush to that part of the body called into action, the muscle is fed and strengthened by the fresh blood and will, therefore, develop.

The Massage Cup will do for the face, when properly applied, by contracting and relaxing the muscles, what exercise will do for the other parts of the body.

If you would have a pinkish complexion, if you would like a face plump and rosy, if you would like to remove that "horrid" wrinkle, send One Dollar to us and we will mail you the great "MASSAGE FACE CUP," with full directions for its use. Remember, you can have your money back, if you say so.

OBITUARIES.

KENNON—Died on April 17, WOODSON H. KENNON, JR., son of W. H. and S. V. Kennon.

A beautiful boy of three years, so perfectly formed that an artist pled for the privilege of transferring his loveliness to the living canvas. At three a child of infantile sweetness, whose reasoning faculties, as well as the muscles, were fast developing, when, alas! God, in his infinite wisdom, saw fit to afflict him, through which the dear little invalid lived and suffered fourteen beautiful years. Beautiful were they because of the pure spirit of the dear little sufferer, the tenderness which he lavished on all around him, and because of the light of his large soul, which irradiated the lives of all those who came within the circle of its brightness. Attended only by his nearest kin, he was never deceived in the least thing; hence he knew not the meaning of falsehood, and hearing naught of evil, he was as guileless and as pure as an angel. He was always conscientious, always patient under pain, always loving and lovely, always thoughtful of the feelings of others, always a true Christian. His physician found intercourse with him a benediction. Those professional visits were spiritually refreshing to both healer and patient, for did not the dear eyes often turn to the clock to see if it was time for his doctor to come and bring the sunshine of his presence?

Woodson was methodical in the reading of his chapters every day; nor did he let any ofered pleasure interfere with this sacred duty. He was tenderly guarded from all unnecessary care by his family, and was so dearly and passionately loved that he was prone to childa little lest he be idolized. Nevermore for him will there be Children's Day in his beloved church, or concerts in the soft evening air; but there will be the triumphant songs of the hosts of the redeemed. Never again will Woodson have those delightful drives to Millsaps with brother Willie, but he will watch from the far heights of heaven; will soothe in many a weary, perplexed moment. The sweet influence he left behind may draw Willie away from temptation which will be sure to come. Will not the precious darling be a guardian spirit to father, mother, and dear sandas? And will he not lead their minds to things more lovely, and draw their hearts daily nearer to that heavan which he seemed to see in a vision just before he fell asleep in Jesus? Never having known the sorrow of sin, how natural to him will be the atmosphere of heaven! Its joys will be all the sweeter for the intense physical distress which overshadowed his life here. Joy past compare he walks beside the golden streets. What bliss to be in the light of God's countenance, to bathe in the effulgence of his glory!

JULIA JAYNE WALKER.

LUDEAU—CLAUDIA J. GREENWOOD'S death on April 20 saddened six homes. She was the fifth child of J. J and L. A. Greenwood. On April 11, 1891, she was married to Dr. J. H. Ludeau, leaving her mother's home for that of her husband in St. Landry. On April 21, 1897, she was brought back to her home and cemetery for intermeat.

She is missed by all who knew her, being kind, gentle and loving to all. She was an obedient daughter, a devoted wife, loving sister. She gave herself to God when quite young, and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1888, under the pastorate of L. S. Jones, in Clinton, La., where she was attending school. To the comfort of a broken-hearted husband, mother, brothers and sisters, she leaves a little babe, Claudia. Among her last words were, "Has-mama come yet?" But mother, who was on her way to see her, was too late to minister to her last wants; but with a broken-hearted husband on one side and her childhood playmate, Sister Guiar, on the other, she passed from this earth to heaven. She leaves a mother, Mrs. Greenwood, of Morgan City; Mrs. A. R. Wilkes, of Centreville, La.; Mrs. E. Currie, of Clinton; Mrs. F. W. Smylie, of Patterson; J. T. Collins, John J. and Gaiar Greenwood, of Morgan City.

Through all pain at time she'd smile,
A smile of heavenly birth;
And when the angels called her home,
She smiled farewell to earth.
Heaven retaineth now our treasure,
Earth the lovely casket keeps,
And the sunbeams long to linger,
Where our saluted Claudia sleeps.

CLARK—Mrs. M. A. DANBY CLARK died at the home of her daughter, near Winona, Jan. 30, 1897, in the seventy-seventh year of her age.

She was born on the Bermuda Islands, the only daughter of a wealthy sea captain named Smyth. She was educated at Bethlehem, Pa. Soon after graduating she was married to Thomas Clark. The early years of their married life were spent at Columbus, Miss. Later they moved to Point Leflore, in the Delta. Losing her husband and several children, she and the remainder of her children came to the vicinity of Winona, where she spent the remainder of her life.

She was a lady of refinement and cultivation, and this, with an amiable disposition, made her company pleasant to both young and old. The writer will ever remember the many pleasant visits to her home with his young wife in the sunny days that are passed. She always saw the bright side. In her anxiety to help others bear the hardens of life she appeared to lose sight of her own.

Very early in life she began to trust in God, and became a member of the Methodist Church. Her faith appeared to increase with the lengthening years, until she had grown into a patient submission to the divine will. Not a murmur at the adversities of life ever escaped her lips. She successfully left the impress of her Christian character upon children and grandchildren, and now rests in peace.

A. W. LANGLEY.

MCGEHEE—Mrs. MARY C. MCGEHEE (nee Read) was born June 1, 1851, and died in her home at Zeigler ville, Miss., March 19, 1897.

Sister McGehee gave her heart to God, and joined the Methodist Church at Benton, Miss., when about fourteen years of age. She was happily united in the holy state of matrimony to Dr. James E McGehee, Jan. 8, 1873. She lived a consecrated Christian from the time of her conversion until God called her away.

The writer was at her bedside not long before she died, and if he has any conception of how an angel looks, she reminded him of one. She bore afflictions as a true soldier of the cross, always submitting to the will of the divine Master.

All who knew her were constrained to love her, and were deeply impressed with her sound devotion and strong Christian character. She held family prayers in her home for quite a number of years before she died, and continued it during her last affliction until she became too weak to sit up.

She leaves a husband and four children to mourn her departure. May the Lord help them to follow the example that she set before them! They can be consoled in the comforting fact that if they live as she lived, they will realize a happy reunion in heaven above.

W. A. TERRY.

Free Run, Miss.

CURL—Mrs. MARY E. CURL (nee Shaw) was born Feb. 18, 1833; married to Rev. Dr. E. W. Carl, Dec. 17, 1874, and died at her home in Grenada, Miss., April 30 1897.

She was naturally sweet-spirited and kind. Very early in life she gave her heart to God, uniting with the M. E. Church, South, in which she lived consistently and faithfully until death. On account of declining health she was not able to attend church regularly the last year or two of her life, but she read the Word of God at home, and lived constantly in exercise of faith and prayer, and enjoyed unmolested communion with God. Her home was one of those places that it is not only pleasant, but profitable to visit. Always interested in religious matters, she greatly enjoyed the visits of her pastor, and always spoke of former ones in the kindest words. Her last illness was protracted, but not a murmuring word escaped her lips. When conscious that the end was near her faith appeared to increase. She leaves a husband, to whom she was a faithful and devoted wife; two daughters just blooming into womanhood, to whom she was all that a loving Christian mother could be. She rests in peace.

A. W. LANGLEY.

MARSALIS—Mrs. Lula Marsalis and family are mourning over the loss of their darling, LESLIE MARSALIS, aged nine years and two days. Truly, it may be said of him, "The king of shadows loves a shining mark." He was indeed a bright child; the pet of his aged grandparents, in whose home he lived—Marsalis, La.; the pride of a fond mother, the greatest joy in life of his loving sisters; at school a great favorite with both teachers and pupils. Oh, how we hated to give him up, but the Savior said, "Come home," and Leslie had to go. Weep not, mother, sisters, and relatives, for he is resting safely in the arms of Jesus, "waiting and watching for you." "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

HIS TEACHER.

SELBY—The following resolutions were adopted by the Methodist Sabbath-school, Newton, Miss., on the death of Miss EUNICE SELBY:

Whereas, It has pleased God to remove from our midst our beloved sister and classmate, Eunice Selby, and that in so doing we are deprived of a valued friend and useful member of the Sabbath-school, yet we bow in humble submission to the will of him that doeth all things well; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we mourn her loss and remember her good qualities, feeling that we should imitate her in piety and consecration to God and his cause.

Resolved, That we rejoice that she met death with the calm submission and fortitude of a Christian, and that we pledge ourselves to try to meet her in the glorious beyond, and join again our voices with hers in singing praises to our Redeemer.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the parents and relatives, and trust her example and hope of a better life will still further prompt them to strive to meet her on the golden shore, and to form an unbroken family when God's children are all gathered home.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the parents of the deceased; also spread on the Sabbath-school report, and a copy furnished the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE; also our home papers.

HER CLASSMATES.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A fire in San Francisco on June 6 cost three firemen their lives and entailed a property loss of $100,000.

The Supreme Court of Georgia has recently declared that when a man has reached 68 years of age he is "an aged man" in the eyes of the law.

Under a curfew ordinance in Denver children under 15 years must be indoors at 9:30 o'clock in the Summer months, and an hour earlier during the rest of the year.

The jubilee address of congratulation to Queen Victoria has been engrossed and was ready for signature by British subjects resident in Louisiana at the office of the British consulate on Tuesday and on Wednesday.

The Indian situation in Montana is very grave indeed. Over 200 Indians are off the reservations and scattered in the hills. Their warwhoops can be heard frequently and the dancing continues. Old settlers expect trouble.

At the opening of the Naval War College, at Newport, on June 1, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt made a speech which has attracted a good deal of attention. Mr. Roosevelt holds that the best means of securing permanent peace is to be at all times fully prepared for war. He also holds that a great navy is actually needed to properly protect our ports and coast line, without reference to aggressive action.

SPRING MEDICINE is a necessity which Hood's Sarsaparilla grandly supplies. It purifies and vitalizes the blood and thus gives tone and strength to the whole system.

DON'T be penny wise and pound foolish by buying the "just-as-good mixtures," "so called White Lead," or other substitutes for Pure White Lead.

In painting, the cost of labor so far exceeds the cost of material that the best only should be used. The best is Pure White Lead (see list of brands which are genuine) and Pure Linseed Oil.

FREE By using National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, any desired shade is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application.

The Universal Postal Congress met in Washington, D. C., last week.

Captain W. D. Smith, of the Cuban Army, and said to have formerly been on the staff of General Gomez, was before a sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations last week. He supplied the committee with many details as to the strength of the insurgent forces and of their resources, and also furnished them much information concerning the treatment of pacificos and other residents of Cuba by Spaniards. His testimony was strictly guarded by the committee as private.

The Association of American Women for the Presentation of a Statue of Washington to France, which has been in existence for nine years, was incorporated and organized last week at the home of Mrs. George Hearst, in Washington. It is the purpose of the ladies to give an order to Daniel French, the well-known American sculptor, for an equestrian statue of Washington in bronze, to be completed in time for erection in Paris in 1900, the year of the French Exposition. The cost is estimated at $35,000, of which $22,000 has already been raised.

FOREIGN.

The Japanese ambassador at Berlin, Viscount Aoki, has been dismissed from office in consequence of his conclusion of a commercial treaty with Germany disadvantageous to Japan.

Paris and Marseilles are now connected by telegragh lines entirely under ground. They are placed in iron pipes, and buried four feet beneath the surface with manholes 3000 feet apart. It cost $7,000,000 to bury the wires.

The Queen Regent of Spain has confirmed Senor Canovas, the premier, in his ministerial powers, and the cabinet will remain in office with personnel and policy unchanged. All the leading members of the Senate and of the Chamber of Deputies who were consulted by her majesty, as well as three marshals, have advised the recall of Captain-General Weyler from Cuba.

It is said that a vote for a credit to defray the expenses of President Faure's approaching visit to St. Petersburg will be asked during the last day of the session of parliament, in order to avoid disagreeable discussion. The Figaro adds: "The government is exercised owing to Emperor William desiring to send Prince Henry of Prussia with a German fleet to meet the French squadron and salute President Faure."

The military representatives of Greece and Turkey having signed an extension of the armistice between the two countries for two weeks longer, beginning with June 1, the ambassadors of the six great powers at Constantinople have commenced in earnest the work of formulating peace proposals. As Greece has placed herself unreservedly in the hands of the powers, there will be no difficulty in securing the consent of the Greek government to any arrangement which may be decided on.

A SIMPLE CATARRH CURE

I have spent nearly fifty years in the treatment of Catarrh, and have effected more cures than any specialist in the history of medicine. As I mean to retire from active life, I will, from this time on, send the means of treatment and cure as used in my practice, FREE and post-paid, to every reader of this paper who suffers from this loathsome, dangerous and disgusting disease. This is a sincere offer, which anyone is free to accept. Address,
Prof. J. A. LAWRENCE, 89 Warren St., New York.

VOL. 44.—NO. 24. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JUNE 17, 1897. WHOLE NO. 2130

Letter from California.

MR. EDITOR: It seemed like a foretaste of heaven te sweep in from the arid plains of Arizona to the cool, green regions of California, with its fields of barley and wheat, orchards of various fruits, and mountains softened with grass and shrubs—all bathed in evening light with the peculiar glow in it that rests on the hills and valleys of Italy. Just beyond Beaumont we passed by the canyon of San Timotio, where Helen Hunt Jackson, in her charming story of Romona, had her heroine go to get over to San Jacinto. The Indians are very numerous in that portion of the State. The Coahnillas are the only ones that preserve any tribal life. The Indian Rights' Association have kept a woman physician among them for several years, who not only practices medicine, but teaches the women to sew, and trains them in other arts of civilization. The huts are wholly without ventilation. The inmates fry nearly all their feed, and hundreds are dying with scrofula. No respect whatever is paid to the old among the Indians. The aged are left to get their daily bread as best they can.

My work began and continued for a month in the San Joaquin Valley. The appearance of the country is the same, very nearly, from one end to the other in that district. The Coast Range, on the left, and the Siena Nevadas, on the right, are constantly in view coming to San Francisco. A wide stretch of country lies between, the lower portion covered with orchards, the upper with fields of grain; but in many sections hundreds of acres are lying uncultivated. Irrigation is necessary there, as in New Mexico, except for wheat raising. In some sections farming is done on an astonishingly large scale. It is a common thing to see four plows attached abreast, and drawn by eight horses; and in harvest time as many as thirty-six horses are worked to one reaping machine. The driver does not touch the lines, but walks calmly behind or at the side, and governs the animals by speaking to them. If, with the smaller teams, the horses need guidance, the lines are put around the neck of the plowman, but never held in the hand, as with field laborers in the South. A black face is seldom seen here. The Chinese and Japanese are employed in every department of work. They are cleanly and punctual, and seem to be highly satisfactory from the kitchen to the field.

At Fresno I saw the most beautiful ranch homes on the entire line. A ride of several miles from the town takes one through the midst of olive, fig, peach, pear and orange trees planted on either side of long avenues surrounding vineyards hundreds of acres in extent, rich with bloom. In the centre of these are magnificent residences half hidden in dense tropical plants, flowers, and handsome palm trees. The famous St. George vineyard has 1,200 acres in cultivation. On it is a winery which is one of the largest in the world. The juice from 200 tons of grapes is crushed out each day. The grapes are first placed on a large platform, then thrown off and stemmed by a process of machinery. The stems go one way, the grapes another, the latter falling into a crusher. After the juice is mashed out it empties into fermenting tanks, and is allowed to stay usually about five days, with temperature at 115 degrees; then fermentation begins. One building holds three tanks, each of which contains 50,000 gallons—larger than the Heidelberg tank, which held only 49,000 gallons. The wine made at the St. George vineyard is shipped principally to Japan and Australia. Brandy, gin, and almost every kind of liquor is manufactured at this mammoth winery. Fine brandy sells at $4 a gallon; the cheapest at $1.10. Within the last two years the price of wine has increased. It used to be only twenty cents a gallon. Claret can not be bought now for less than thirty-five cents a gallon, unless sold in barrel lots. The increase in price was caused by the combination of wine-makers at the State headquarters in San Francisco. A paper called the Keystone, run in the interest of the St. George winery, is published on the spot. Beside the printing press there is a blacksmith and carpenter shop and a cooperage on the premises. There is more money in raisins now than in wine. Many vineyards are given up entirely to the culture of raisin grapes. One of the most extensive and beautiful of these is the Lucerno vineyard at Hanford, in Kings county.

Among the many attractions in the vicinity of Fresno is Kearney avenue, which is twelve miles long, perfectly level, and bordered on both sides with immense palms, oleanders, bushes, and eucalyptus trees. The last are famous for two things, viz.: their roots invariably seek water, and find it if it is to be found. They shoot directly, as by instinct, for any neighboring well or spring, boring deep down into the earth. A spiritual lesson can be drawn from this. In the second place, the tree is medicinal in its properties. It exhales a peculiar odor, which drives away malaria; and if its leaves are boiled, the tea made from them is a sure antidote to that trouble.

As a general thing, the people in the San Joaquin Valley are restless and discouraged. The majority are poor and sorely pressed. Nearly all came from the old States, expecting to make fortunes, selling all they had, and investing in enterprises that failed of returns, and they are now too impecunious to return to their original homes. The water rates are high, and the fruit trees die from different causes, and the heat is intense, etc. The best people have to work like slaves. In many places I find educated women going out as cooks and laundresses to put food into the mouths of their children and to have them educated. If the people in the South worked as the people are compelled to do out here, our land would "blossom as the rose," and everybody would be independent. The craze for money is the curse of the American. I have seen lately, more clearly than ever before, how the love and toil for it hardens and narrows and grinds down humanity.

Temperance and prohibition sentiment is below par in California, as one can easily imagine with the wine-growing interest as strong as it is, and with the tremendous money and political power back of it. The churches, the W. C. T. U. and the Salvation Army are holding on by main force; but the fight is a hard one, but it will be to the death.

BELLE KEARNEY.

San Francisco, Cal., June 1, 1897.

The Greenville District.

It is time for the Conference to hear from the Greenville district. The great overflow has come and gone. Another full page has been written in the history of this country. With varying emotion we scan the records. Under dark headlines we run the sombre list of the dead, and mingle our tears with our beloved Crowe and his faithful steward, Bro. Pearman. With other families, white and black, where there is a vacancy, we join in sympathetic tears and earnest prayers for God's help in these great afflictions.

The gloom is almost as great when we observe the scenes of desolation in the fair fields and villages of the land. Homes of elegance, surrounded with every evidence of culture and refinement before the overflow, now force from the heart sighs of sadness. Great farms, once the pride of the beautiful Delta, now torn by gulches and buried under sterile sand-bars, is a sight of frequent occurrence. But from these melancholy thoughts we turn to the deeds of heroism observed in these trying days.

Never did days of war show more determination and intense fortitude for the same length of time than the people who fought against the impending danger. For days and nights successively they stood through rain and mud and cold, without sleep, and often without food. Against odds they struggled and lost. After the danger was realized, it is hard to imagine anything left undone that would in any way have lessened the chances of an overflow. The Levee Boards did their best to save their respective districts, but failed. The railroads were at the service of the levee. The convicts were sent in; the farm owners, hands, mules and tools all fought, and failed. For days and weeks but little else was thought and talked of but the river and levee. The nervousness and excitement grew painful. I verily believe it was a relief when the levee gave way. After the inevitable came the brave people turned their attention, though jaded in mind and body, to the alleviation of man and beast. Out through darkness and storm went crafts of every kind to meet the call of distress. A few of the deeds of those days are worthy to go to record. In a boat, on a stormy night, an old negro with both arms off above the elbows said to his son fifteen or sixteen years old: "Our boat will turn over. I can't swim without arms; let me drown. Take care of yourself." The boy, putting his arms around his father, said, "No; we will die together." The boat capsized, and the father could wade, but the water was too deep for the boy. He was directed to mount his father's shoulders and direct his (the father's) way, keeping his father's face covered from the waves with his hat. When shallow water was reached the father fainted, and was drawn by this sable youth for a good part of a mile to land. We scarcely look for truer heroism among the living. Other scenes of devotion among the darkies are worthy of mention, but space forbids.

The work of rescue developed many heroes and heroines. Four women and eleven children, refugeeing, with little money and food, being caught away from home, the railroads having suspended operations, were piloted two days through cold and storm and flood by one of nature's noblemen.

The Y. and M. V. R. R. deserves especial mention in this review of the deeds of kindness. This writer fell into the company of Capt. A. A. Sharp, and with him passed through that part of the country immediately in front of the Flour Lake break. I suppose I heard twenty requests made of this official, and not one of them was denied. I am reliably informed that this company housed between nine and eleven thousand homeless people during the overflow. It seems to me that with such common interests there should be a closer friendship between railroads and the people. The generosity of this company in this instance is due to the division superintendent, Capt. A. A. Sharp, who knows how to be a railroad magnate and a Christian gentleman at the same time.

The noble band of preachers have stood to their places with scarcely an exception. Brave and consecrated is that little band of brethren in the Greenville district. True men, with true wives, they have displayed a fidelity that God will not forget. Thanks to Bro. Randolph for leaving me such a heritage.

Of the church in that country I will say that their faith is inspiring. Although confused and cast down, they do not waver in their purpose to serve God and his church. They have taken care of their pastors tenderly during this trouble. May God reward them! By the grace of God I have met every engagement by putting them a little further apart. I have profited by these experiences. I am more patient, more considerate of other people, more trustful. From my own experience and that of the pastors, I believe there is a greater desire for the Bread of Life now than before the overflow. This is better than lands and mules and cotton. May God bless the district with a great revival!

Port Gibson Female College.

In behalf of the committee appointed at the last session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, I wish to make the following as my report of what I saw and heard at the recent commencement.

Being a guest of the college during the past session of the Annual Conference, I was ready to be entertained and gratified at the result of a year's hard work on the part of the faculty and pupils of one of the best-organized schools in the State.

The ladies, Mrs. Meek and Miss Park, who have charge of the finances of the college, deserve much credit in the management of affairs, having succeeded in meeting all the demands of the institution. This places them in a better position for success than at any time since their induction into their responsible place. One of the best evidences of the quality of the work done, as well as the management of the school is, that the best citizens of Port Gibson speak in the most favorable terms of the school in every particular.

All the teachers are Christian women, and most of the pupils are interested, not only in mental and physical training, but qualification for the duties laid upon them by the church. As a means of the latter, they have a live Woman's Missionary Society organized and conducted by the boarders in the college.

The girls have an inspiration from the example of the faculty to attend the regular services of the church. Besides these more public demonstrations they have devotional exercises at the opening of the school every morning. Since the college has been under the supervision of these excellent ladies, the curriculum has been advanced, and in this the patrons of the school have the assurance that their daughters will have as good advantages as any school in the State can give.

Miss Park has charge of the English Language, Literature, Science and Expression and Physical Training. Miss Park studied at the Boston School of Expression.

Mrs. Meek, who has charge of Piano and Voice Culture, took a course at the College of Music in Cincinnati. The girls who performed and recited at the recent commencement gave a very creditable rendering of their parts.

Miss Hartwell, who has charge of the department in which pipe organ, violin, mandolin and guitar music is taught, is qualified for her position, having learned under her father's instruction, who has been a teacher of these specialties for many years.

Miss McGill has control of the Art School, and one would judge from the execution of her pupils that she has given much attention to their advancement. The walls of the college hall were beautifully and artistically adorned with the subjects in oil, pastel, crayon, water colors, etc., executed by the pupils of this class.

Miss Person, having charge of mathematics, Latin and history, has and will attend the course at Lake Chautauqua, this Summer, to better qualify herself for the position she has so creditably filled heretofore.

Miss Morris, a graduate of the institution in the class of 1887, has charge of English and the Primary Department. Miss Morris is the leader of the little folks.

The other departments are well filled by instructors in French, German, Spanish, and that which is more practical—dress-making.

Mrs. McCaa, a Christian, has charge of the Home Department, which position she is well suited for.

Rev. T. B. Clifford, of Water Valley, preached the commencement sermon on Sunday, June 6, at 11 o'clock, to a full congregation. The sermon was appropriate and well received, both by the college and community.

The sermon in the evening was delivered by Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., of Vicksburg, one of the Board of Trustees, and a popular preacher in Port Gibson, as he is throughout the district.

Monday evening a very large audience assembled in the college hall to hear the art address, which was delivered in a very attractive way by Miss Russel, of Claiborne county, well known in Port Gibson, having been a pupil of the school some years ago.

Hon. H. C. Monnger delivered the medals and prizes on Tuesday evening, the eighth, the occasion of the annual concert, to the successful competitors, whose names I give in this connection: The first honor scholarship was awarded to Miss Elizabeth Gravitt, of Greenville, Miss.; second honor to Miss Katesie Person, of Port Gibson. The music medal was a tie to be decided between Misses Mary A. Bagnall, of Rocky Springs, and Rosa Marx, of Port Gibson. The medal in art was awarded to Miss Ellenor McClain, of Greenville. The medal for neatness was awarded to Miss Emma Goza, of Ingleside, Miss. Badges were awarded to Miss Mynelle Cook, of Utica, for execution in scales; Miss Alitha Smith, of Port Gibson, in mental arithmetic, and Jno. A. Ellis, the nine-year-old son of Rev. H. M. Ellis, pastor of our church in Port Gibson, for excellence in spelling. John, in addition to the badge, secured his mother's watch as a reward of merit.

There were fourteen boarders in the college, besides a good local patronage. May the Port Gibson Female College continue in increased prosperity.

East Mississippi Female College.

REPORTS ADOPTED BY THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES AT THEIR RECENT ANNUAL MEETING.

REPORT ON THE STATE OF THE COLLEGE.

To the Board of Trustees, East Mississippi Female College:

Your Committee on the State of the College beg leave to report that the condition of the college to-day so much exceeds in all respects our most sanguine expectations that we reverently and devoutly recognize the hand of a superintending Providence in all its affairs. Such growth under difficulties, such improvement over its most successful past years, bring the assured conclusion that naught else but the continuous blessing and guidance of the great Patron of learning could have achieved such a record. To sustain a conclusion so high your committee would refer to the following facts, viz.:

1. The obligation in bank of nearly $1,700, for which the members of this Board were personally bound, has been liquidated, and the college relieved of the incubus. The annual interest on the outstanding debt and all present liabilities have been paid.

2. The boarding capacity of the institution has been increased by the addition of a frame building containing eight rooms. This building, costing $775, was erected by the voluntary offerings of some members of this Board and of some of the public-spirited citizens of this community.

3. New paint and whitewash, the repair of fences and surroundings, the condition of the main buildings, give to the whole college property an air of thrift and prosperity that is refreshing.

4. The enrollment of pupils has been 253, an increase over past years of over 100. The boarders within the college have been 77, an increase of about 37 over past years.

5. The physical wants of the young ladies have been admirably provided for in the wholesome and varied table fare, by the comfortably furnished rooms, and by the home-like administration of President Beeson and his excellent wife.

6. There have been thoroughness and honest work in all the classes, and the young ladies have made exceptional progress in scholarship under the guidance of the skillful instructors in each department.

7. The deportment of the student-body has approximated perfection, each member vying with the others in lady-likeness and in attention to duty.

8. Above all, the high religious tone of the college is most gratifying. All the young ladies, except perhaps four, are professors of religion, and are earnest workers for the Master, the majority of them having been converted since they came to the institution.

Your committee offer for adoption the following resolutions, viz.:

1. That this Board does hereby express to President J. W. Beeson its highest appreciation of the services rendered by him to them, and to the citizens of this community, and to the M. E. Church, South, and to the cause of Christian education universal, by placing this college upon its present high plane of success.

2. To any parent or guardian wishing for his child or ward the most superior advantages in intellectual and artistic culture, and the most devoted attention to spiritual growth and attainments in the divine life, we can most sincerely and confidently recommend to their patronage the East Mississippi Female College.

(Signed) C. G. ANDREWS,
J. C. CAVETT,
W. H. CURTIS,
Committee.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

Be it resolved, As a Board of Trustees, we are more than gratified at the seeming miraculous success of the East Mississippi Female College during the school year just now closing.

Resolved, That while we recognize the liberality and readiness with which the people responded to the call for an extension to the building which was made and paid for during the past session, from present indications we believe a new brick extension will be necessary in order to meet the demands from boarders, larger dining-hall, and chemical and philosophical laboratory.

Resolved, That we urge the Executive Committee to take steps towards formulating a plan raising the money for said extension.

Resolved, That we endorse President J. W. Beesen, and are pleased with his success in procuring the strongest of faculties.

Resolved, That with gratitude to God for past session, we promise President Beeson our support and prayers, trusting that each year of the fifteen years lease may prove increasedly successful.

(Signed) B. V. WHITE,
JNO. A. LEWIS,
L. P. BROWN.

THE BRIGHT SIDE.

There is many a rest in the road of life,
If we only would stop to take it,
And many a tone from the better land,
If the querulous heart would wake it
To the sunny soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust never faileth,
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Though the wintry storm prevaileth.

Better to hope though the clouds hang low
And to keep the eyes still lifted,
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through
When the ominous clouds are rifted!
There was never a night without a day,
Or an evening without a morning;
And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer far than the jeweled crown,
Or the miser's hoarded treasure.
It may be the love of a little child,
Or a mother's prayers to heaven;
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of water given.

Letter from "Gilderoy."

The farmers have a time of it dealing with the labor down in this bottom country. The negroes have fusses and fights among themselves, and frequently they cut and shoot each other, and sometimes one or two are killed. When two of them get to quarreling, and nothing but a fight will do them, these elder farmers disarm them and turn them into a ring and let them fight it out. This, generally, satisfies them, and often they make friends and shake hands before they leave the ring. This old-fashioned way of fighting is not such a bad thing—in fact, it is every way better than this new-fangled way of cutting and shooting on all occasions and for small provocation. It seems that sometimes, and with some men, nothing but fighting will do. In such cases and with such men I am in favor of an open field and a fair fight. It is the quickest and surest way to permanent peace. Fighting, particularly fistcuff fighting, is hard work. It does not take one long to get enough of it. A good bait of it satisfies the appetite for it. I approve of fighting only as a last resort. If nothing else will do, why let it proceed in good order and in fair ways. The higher order of animals, particularly the higher order of men, do not believe in it or practice it among themselves; but among the lower animals and lower men brute force often has to be pitted against brute force. It is a test of muscles and not of morals.

Notwithstanding the rigid laws of Mississippi against carrying concealed weapons, hundreds and thousands of men, both white and black, go around all the time with guns in their hip-pockets. They say the devil invented the hip pocket, and I partly believe it. I carry nothing in mine except an empty pocket-book.

I never carry a full pocket book any where—never have a full one to carry. If an emergency were to arise, it would surprise any man to see how many loaded guns could be produced in a given company of men, either white or black—especially among the blacks. This, too, in a time of profound peace and in companies where everybody loves everybody else, or they say they do. If a show of pistols were made at church on Sunday at eleven A. M., the women would swoon or run home. Now and then weapons are exhibited at church and some one or more persons shot or killed. This is not an infrequent occurrence at the negro churches. Not long ago I was in a pleasant and peaceable company when the cry of "mad-dog" was raised, and straightway nearly every man present pulled his gun. I had no idea there were so many guns of that kind in a circuit of five miles. For a time the bullets were thicker and more dangerous than the dog. These guns were not carried for fear of mad dogs, for the time for mad dogs had not fully come. They were not for ornament, for they were concealed till pulled out from hip pockets, boot-legs and bosoms. In a jiffy they were all out of sight. They were not carried for war, for a state of war did not exist nearer than Cuba and far-off Thessaly. I could not find out why they were carried. One negro man, with a broad grin, said, "I tote mine as a pertection agin my wife." This may have been the reason why all the men, both white and black, carried guns. If so, it is certainly laudable and excusable, for some women—not your wife and mine—are claiming the earth and prospecting for more worlds to conquer. Men, poor, helpless things, need protection against their wives.

Seriously, this gun-carrying habit and propensity is a shame and disgrace to our race, our civilization, our age, and to the religion of our Lord. It is more than a shame, it is a sin, a demoralizing and damning sin. When a man whips out his gun and shoots at his fellow-man he shoots at the heart of God, for every drop of human blood cost the blood, the life of the only begotten Son of God. God places a high estimate on blood, especially on human blood. Blood is sacred in the eyes, mind and heart of God. "Whoso sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed." "Thou shalt not kill." The blood is the life of the being made in the image of God. The gun carriers are at heart either cowards or would-be murderers, or else they are simpletons for following a foolish fashion. We are a set of uncivilized civilians—civil in fact, but savage in practice. Shame on us. GILDEROY.

Notes of Discouragement.

One-half of the Conference year gone, and less than seven per cent. of assessment for domestic missions, and not more than five per cent. of the assessment for foreign missions, reported to Bro. B. F. Jones, treasurer of our Conference Board of Missions, or to the treasurer of the Parent Board. Let us quit adopting resolutions on the subject, or have our consciences quickened.

Not a single presiding elder has sent me his second quarterly missionary bulletin, although several have started on their third round.

Only five brethren have sent me names of Methodist doctors and druggists in the bounds of their pastoral charges, and one of the five has all other denominations included in the list without distinguishing marks, so that the list sent is worthless to me; and another makes the distinction, but says I asked for "the names and postoffices of all physicians and druggists in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference." He is mistaken. I asked for, and still ask for, the name of every Methodist physician and every Methodist druggist, or of every physician and of every druggist who is himself an actual member of our church. There is no trick in this request, brethren, and I will not get you into any trouble if you would comply with my very reasonable request. It is a matter of importance to the cause of Christ our Lord. A postal card only costs one cent, and I am willing to refund that if the brethren will only give me the addresses asked for. Please attend promptly to this matter, my dear brethren, and you will not only greatly oblige me, but you will aid a good cause.

One of the best circuits in our Conference, all railroad towns, has reported less than ten dollars for missions and less than ten dollars for the Conference claimants. "Veterans' Day" was not observed. No missionary sermon preached in the six months, and probably not in six years.

Notwithstanding the apparently unanimous vote of our Conference, one brother says he did not stand up, and, therefore, he is not bound by the action of the Conference, which pledged cordial support and encouragement to Miss Addie Marshall, president of the W. F. M. Society of our Conference, and to Miss Addie Purnell, president of W. P. and H. M. Society, and their co-workers. Queer logic!

Several brethren reported to the last Conference their own salaries paid in full, but a deficit on all other claims except the salary of "our beloved." Selfish.

Correspondence.

Proceedings of the Seashore District Conference of the M. E. Church, South, Held at Lumberton, Miss., June 3-5, 1897.

For the first time in the history of Lumberton the District Conference convened here on the morning of June 3; Rev. C. A. Powell, P. E., in the chair. Rev. C. F. Emery was elected secretary, and Rev. Geo. P. McKeown assistant secretary. Roll was called, and the following answered: Clerical—Revs. I. L. Peebles, W. H. Huntley, H. B. Trevillon, Geo. P. McKeown, C. F. Emery, H. D. Howell, I. W. Cooper, J. L. Jordan, L. R. Roberts. Absent: Revs. G. W. Huff, T. W. Brown, J. R. Ellis, J. P. Drake, W. G. Forsytho, A. P. Cox. Lay delegates present: John A. McLood, J. S. Turner, S. E. Flourry, Dr. W. F. Forrell, W. T. Harkness, Dr. W. T. Beall.

The opening sermon was preached at 11 A. M. by Rev. H. B. Trevillon from Exodus iii, 4, and was listened to with marked attention, and received much favorable comment.

The afternoon session was devoted to inquiry into the spiritual condition of the various charges. Some reports showed an advance in spirituality, while others were not so favorable. On the whole, the average showing was very good. H. B. Trevillon, L. R. Roberts and W. T. Harkness were appointed a Committee on Quarterly Conference Records. The presiding elder spoke encouragingly of the condition of the district, and commended the preachers for the faithfulness of their reports.

At 8 P. M. Dr. I. L. Peebles preached a most impressive sermon to a large congregation from I. Cor. vi, 9.

On Friday the morning session was devoted to hearing reports from the various pastors as to missions within the district, the work of the W. F. M. S. and the W. P. and H. M. S., Sunday-schools and education generally, the financial systems, condition of churches and parsonages, and the work of the American Bible Society. While some reports were encouraging, others disclosed a most disheartening condition of affairs. A few preachers mailed their reports, alleging a depleted pocket-book as the reason for their non-attendance. Considerable interest was manifested in hearing these reports, and occasional humor relieved the tedium of the routine work.

At 11 o'clock Rev. H. D. Powell preached a powerful sermon from I. Tim. i, 15, which produced a profound impression on the hearers.

The chair appointed the following committees:

For License to Preach and Admission into the Traveling Connection—Revs. J. P. Drake, C. F. Emery, G. W. Huff.

For Deacon's and Elder's Orders and Readmission into the Traveling Connection—Revs. I. W. Cooper, W. G. Forsythe, I. L. Peebles.

The names of the following local preachers were called, their characters were passed, and their licenses renewed: R. G. Williams, M. R. Jones, S. E. Fleurry, John Fleurry, J. H. Havens, Wesley Boone, James King, and W. C. Biberon.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: J. S. Turner, L. R. Roberts, L. N. Dantzler, Dr. W. F. Ferrell.

Rev. J. W. McLaurin, district secretary of the American Bible Society, addressed the Conference on the work that is being done by that important body, and urged the preachers to arouse their people to rally to its support.

At 8 o'clock a most interesting sermon from Isa. xl, 31, was preached by Dr. W. T. Beall, of Moss Point, a physician and local preacher, who has been acceptably supplying the place of Rev. G. W. Huff, pastor of Escatawpa circuit, who is incapacitated by sickness.

Friday morning the following resolutions were offered by Rev. C. F. Emery, which were adopted:

Whereas, In certain portions of Mississippi, known as the Seashore district, there prevails a flagrant disregard and open defiance of the laws of Mississippi prohibiting on Sunday certain practices, such as hunting and fishing, games of ball, disposing of liquors, keeping open places of business or selling goods, working in mills, etc.; And, whereas, In these places the officers of the law, county and municipal, are unfaithful in their sworn duty to apprehend and bring to justice such offenders; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we most heartily deplore this condition of affairs, and that we pledge the judge and district attorney of the Second Judicial District our support in the correction of these evils.

Resolved, That we will preach the importance of God's holy commandment, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," and earnestly favor the rigid enforcement of the laws of our State.

Resolved, That we request the press generally to publish these resolutions and to give us their moral support in this behalf.

Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D., introduced the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That, as members of the Seashore district, we heartily endorse the pastor of Biloxi station, Rev. C. F. Emery, in his noble effort to secure the enforcement of laws relating to the Sabbath, and do earnestly pray God's blessing in his labors.

On motion of Rev. C. F. Emery, by a rising vote a resolution was adopted thanking for their Christian hospitality the people of Lumberton, and for appreciated courtesies the Gulf and Ship Island railroad, and the New Orleans and local press.

The closing sermon was preached by Rev. J. H. Winburn, a local preacher, who on this day completes his eighty-third year. The sermon was based on II. Peter ii, 11, and was deeply spiritual.

Conference adjourned with benediction by the presiding elder.

CHARLES F. EMERY, Sec.

Opelousas District Conference.

The twenty-ninth session of the Opelousas District Conference convened, May 25, at the growing town of Jeanerette, on the bank of the beautiful Bayou Teche. Rev. H. O. White was in the chair, and W. Winans Drake was elected secretary. There was about an average attendance of laymen, and all the pastors were present except three.

The sessions of the first two days were occupied with reports by the several pastors, the facts of which were noted and digested by committees appointed for the purpose.

The best account of the Conference may be culled from the reports presented by these committees. The reports on the spiritual state of the church showed several successful revivals since Conference, and an increase of about ten per cent. in the membership of the district since the last District Conference. The congregations were, as a whole, reported as only tolerably good, and the prayer meeting attendance as small. The committee took the pastors to task for their neglect of Church Conferences. The Epworth League report showed the existence of eight senior and three junior Leagues, with a total membership of 389. The committee on the work of the American Bible Society reported the establishment of three Bible depositories and collections in most of the charges. The report on finances developed the fact that the collections were better in hand than at the same time in previous years, but that there is deplorable lack of system and of activity in looking after this branch of the work. The Committee on Church Literature reported about 154 subscriptions to the ADVOCATE, and the supply of religious books very limited. The Committee on Christian Citizenship introduced the following resolution as the summary of its report:

Resolved, That we will take an active and uncompromising stand against the liquor traffic and other evils in our midst, and urge the vital importance of good citizenship upon others.

The Committee on Church Property reported the construction of five churches and two parsonages since the last District Conference, making an increase of $6,500 in the valuation of property in the district. The Committee on Missions reported only four Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies and five Parsonage and Home Mission Societies. The committee further reported at least twenty-three points that might be occupied by us if we had the men and means, stating that we could profitably use at least ten men and $5,000 of missionary money and thousands of dollars for church extension in this territory. The resolutions embodied a recommendation to the Missionary Board to employ as many native Creoles in this work as are available, and also to use special methods for raising funds for this work. It was further recommended that the General Boards of Missions and Church Extension be asked to help this field. Nelson Hoffpauir and Martin Hebert were licensed to preach, the latter being a native Creole who preaches finently in French and English. He was also recommended to the Conference for admission. A Board of Trustees was appointed to hold the property belonging to the Opelousas District Camp Meeting Association, between Opelousas and Washington, and a committee of preachers was appointed to help the Board arrange for the holding of a camp meeting this year.

W. T. Blackshear, J. N. Pharr, Dr. Cushman and Dr. Richardson were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

By request of the Conference Board of Church Extension an address was made on church extension and a collection of $25 taken.

The closing day was devoted to a discussion of Sunday-school work. The report of the committee on the subject showed this interest to be in a healthy condition.

The preaching during the Conference was varied in quality and character. It is to be regretted that no conversions resulted from it.

The Conference adjourned on May 28, to meet at Lafayette next year. It is due the people of Jeanerette to say that the entertainment was generous, hospitable and enjoyable. W. WINANS DRAKE,
Secretary.

Sardis District Conference.

The Sardis District Conference convened in Senatobia, May 29 and 30; our efficient presiding elder, Rev. T. C. Wior, presiding. We had a full attendance, every preacher in the district being present, and the laity well represented. We had a pleasant and profitable session; all the interests of the church were closely looked after. The reports showed the district to be in good condition, and to be on the up-grade along some lines. We had with us Rev. G. W. Bachman, colporteur and Sunday-school agent, who magnifies his office, and is doing a fine work. We also had Rev. J. W. Boswell, D. D., assistant editor of the Christian Advocate, and W. B. Murrah, president of Millsaps College, who both preached to the delight and edification of our people. We had hoped, Mr. Editor, to have you with us also. Senatobia entertained the Conference right royally.

Delegates elect to Annual Conference: P. B. Jones, P. T. Callicott, J. P. Featherstun, and W. W. Perkins.

Next District Conference goes to Cold Water. P. T. CALLICOTT,

Corinth District.

Corinth district is in the most hopeful condition I have ever known it. Corinth station has enjoyed a great revival this year, and the pastor has received into the church about thirty-five members. The contract is let, and Iuka station will soon have virtually a new house of worship, and after modern style. Booneville station has a beautiful $6,000 new brick church, and will be dedicated without a collection. Baldwyn will have her house of worship repaired by the meeting of the District Conference at that place, July 1. Rienzi is furnishing a beautiful new church. New Albany circuit has completed a new church at Union Hill, a building which would be a credit to any community. Corinth circuit has paid a debt resting against her parsonage. Booneville circuit has built a splendid new parsonage near the college in Booneville. We have only four charges without parsonages, and three of these have located parsonages and are pushing to build. The Bishops' fund is nearly all in hand, and will be full by the meeting of the District Conference. The pastors are pressing to report foreign missions in full to the District Conference, and have more than fifty per cent. in hand, and in many charges much has been raised on the advance of last year in ministerial support. In the way of church building and repairing, buying and repairing parsonages, much was done during the last year. All honor to the faithful men who have been the instruments in all this work.

Trust we may see you, Mr. Editor, at our District Conference. Our brethren are loyal and loving, and will give the editor of our excellent organ a cordial welcome.

Sardis District Meeting.

The following report of the district meeting at Senatobia, copied from the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, will be of interest to the society:

The past two days have been filled with much bustle and excitement in Senatobia, occasioned by the convening of the Sardis District Conference here. The good people of Senatobia have opened their homes and hearts to the delegates who began to arrive on the early trains.

At 2 P. M., Wednesday, their labors began with religious exercises, conducted by the local pastor, J. W. Bell. A permanent organization was effected by electing Mrs. W. H. Wall, of Sardis, chairman, and Miss Rosa Taylor, of Como, secretary. On roll-call the following ladies read beautiful, strong and encouraging papers on the conditions of the two societies which are known as the "Twin Sisters in the Vineyard of the Lord." Miss Julia Jones, of Coldwater, read reports for Coldwater and Cockrum; Mrs. K. M. Harrison, for Batesville; Mrs. Mitchell, for Pleasant Grove; Mrs. Shipman, for Sardis.

The sum of the reports is that their efforts have been blessed, and that their fund has increased about 10 per centum. This encourages them to enlarge their plans for further and greater usefulness. The sentiment of the preachers is that these societies assist, instead of retarding, the general church collections.

The night session was inaugurated by the reading of a beautiful address of welcome by Miss Ella Tribble, of Senatobia, and a happy response by Maj. Anderson, of Como, which were followed by a solo by Miss Grace Brown, of Como.

At this session the most interesting paper of the evening was read by Mrs. W. H. Wall, of Sardis, who spoke beautifully and tenderly of this great and still growing sisterhood of co-laborers, prompted in this work by love of humanity and for the Master's cause.

The ladies concluded their labors at 8:30 A. M., Thursday, in a praise meeting, which was well attended and much enjoyed by all.

Senatobia, Miss., May 28.

In addition to the above clipping, I copy a few extracts from a private letter from Mrs. W. H. Wall, district secretary:

"Our meeting opened on Wednesday, May 26, at 2:30 P. M., the day before the W. F. M. S. meeting, which convened on the morning of the twenty-seventh, followed by the brethren in the afternoon. We had a splendid attendance of preachers and visitors, and all societies were represented but three. One new society was reported at Cockrum, and I organized one at Senatobia of twelve members. The officers are consecrated Christian workers, and expect great things from this society.

"The brethren are taking hold of this work with great earnestness. It would have done your heart good to have heard Bro. ———, of ——— circuit, express his gratitude to our society for our help and his good home. He said our donations enthused his people so that they tore down the old rickety building that passed for a parsonage and put up a new and comfortable one. He said his wife and baby always remembered us in their daily prayers."

The brethren requested Mrs. Wall's address for publication in the county papers of the district, as they said, in this way, it would reach many homes that a church paper never entered, and would enlighten them about our work. This was a very wise move on the part of the brethren, and I have no doubt Mrs. Wall's address will accomplish much good; but I hope they will pardon the suggestion that all church members should take church papers and not have to depend upon secular papers (no matter how good those may be) for church news.

MRS. H. W. FOOTE.

A Fatal Example.

The father indulges in a friendly game of cards at night; does it often does it with his boy. The boy becomes a skillful player; by and by he goes to school by train with others of his age, and cards are introduced, at first for friendship, at last for half-pence. He then goes to business, and as his mother wishes him to have the comforts of home, every night he still uses the train, and may be found each day entering a carriage labeled "engaged," which means that your son, and other people's sons, are playing all the way to town and all the way back again. Has he won? He is full of life and animation. Has he lost? He is morose and irritable. By and by you find a sporting paper in his pocket. He desire to get money without working for it has led him into the hands of sharpers. His purse is empty, and his employer's money is taken, and at last he stands in the deck, charged with embezzlement, and is sentenced to the felon's doom.—Charles Garrett.

Your daily duties are a part of your religious life just as much as your devotion.—H. W. Beecher.

To Whom It May Concern:

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of "Mul-en-ol." I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, and all kinds of sores, it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household. W. C. BLACK,
Editor Christian Advocate.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. James M. Martin, Delhi, La., June 5, 1897: "We observed Children's Day on the twenty-third of May. We had an immense congregation. The children had some very appropriate recitations, and rendered them to the delight of the large congregation. The 'Arch of Promise' and the song service was especially beautiful. The success of the occasion was due mainly to the persistent efforts of Mrs. W. S. Buchanan and Mrs. F. A. Wiles. Our collection amounted to $8 75 We have had some repairing done on our church here. I am pleased with this charge, and hope for success in all church work here this year. My senior, Bro. Cassity, and myself have plenty of work to do."

Mrs. T. S. Randle, Dry Creek, La., June 4, 1897: "We have just moved into our new dining room and kitchen. My sick husband can not preach much; but, thank the Lord, with the help of the boys and an efficient committee of young ladies, he can help to make our homes more home-like. We carried out the programme for Easter Sunday and Children's Day with great satisfaction and profit to all. Last Sabbath Mr. Randle preached to a large and appreciative congregation. Ross (preacher in charge) opened the doors of the church, and four of our Sunday-school children joined. After dinner on the ground we organized a Juvenile P. and H. M. S., with 35 members. We have an Epworth League and a real live 'devotional service' each Sabbath afternoon. We have a wide-awake presiding elder, and we are all glad to have him come. His sermons thrill us. Our people are kind and thoughtful. Pray for us."

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, P. C., Pine Grove circuit, La., May 31: "At the last Annual Conference Bishop Hendrix read me out for Pine Grove circuit. On Jan. 4, with wife and three children, I started for my new work, and arrived here Jan. 8. I soon found that we were among a good and kind people. We found no parsonage, but were soon domiciled in a good, comfortable house, and such things that were necessary for the physical man have been abundantly provided for us, and we are contented and happy. Everything looks encouraging for a prosperous year. The Sunday-schools have all been reorganized, and some weekly prayer meetings started. Our beloved presiding elder, Rev. R. W. Tucker, was with us last Saturday and Sunday, and preached us two soul-stirring sermons. He informed me that my financial report was about with the average on the district. We are praying and planning for our protracted meetings. Will begin (D. V.) at Killian's Chapel, June 2, with Bro. J. B. Kent to assist us. Pray for us."

Rev. J. W. Raper, Montpelier, Miss., June 3, 1897: "I write from Sparta circuit, Aberdeen district, North Mississippi Conference. Our second Quarterly Conference was held at Palestine Church this second Saturday and Sunday in May. Our much-loved presiding elder, Rev. S. M. Thames, was on hand and did us much good by his sermon and advice. We all appreciated his coming. As a man, he is entertaining; as a preacher, he is instructive, and as a presiding elder, not surpassed by any we know. We are glad to note the marked improvement on many lines in this charge. Sunday-school work is good, congregations are better, more religious papers are being taken, financial matters are good. We will be able to pay for our parsonage. Our people are, as a rule, kind and generous, and most of them are liberal to the church. All who attend church regular seem to be ready to respond to any claim of the church. We are now making our arrangements for the revival work this Summer. We want a good revival at all the appointments on this charge."

Rev. J. Wilson Brown, P. C., Madison station, June 5, 1897: "The Children's Day service, conducted on the twenty-third of May at Madison station by the faithful superintendent, R. W. Stewart, Esq., and due largely to the efficient management of his wife, was a most delightful occasion. The programme was followed mainly; other good things were added. Each of the many participants was well prepared, and every part was acted with good will. There were beautiful and most tasteful decorations, instrumental music by accomplished performers on the organ, two violins, and a bass viol, and singing with the spirit and the understanding. The memory of an occasion of beauty, pleasure and profit will delight the children and the large audience. Of many pleasant things among others we may write later. Thanks for your editorial of the third instant."

Rev. J. White Davis, Harrisonburg circuit, Sicily Island, La., June 8, 1897: "There is some tendency upward spiritually among us, as we have two regular weekly prayer meetings and two good Sunday schools, which, with the regular preaching services, are well attended. Three accessions by profession of faith and several children and infants baptized. Temporally, we have been 'pounded' very hard with such articles as coffee, sugar, flour, hams, rice, tea, pickles, butter, eggs, cake, and many more nice things—even candy for the children—until we were almost made to cry out, 'When will the end of these things be?' For two or three days the kind people kept it up. In fact, ever since we have been to Sicily Island (since May 11) scarcely a day has passed but what something for the table has been brought to us. May the Lord abundantly bless these people with spiritual food, and make this the best year, so far, that people and pastor on Harrisonburg circuit have ever witnessed!"

Rev. J. E. Buck: "Last Sunday was a high day for Methodism in Abbeville. We had our new church formally dedicated to the worship of Almighty God. No collection was needed—all the bills having been previously settled. Bro. J. C. Park, pastor at Kosciusko, preached the sermon and conducted the dedication service. The whole was very impressive and inspiring. The sermon from II. Chronicles vi, 41, was a forceful presentation of the importance of God's presence and power in his house, the necessity of a regenerated ministry, and of a consecrated membership. While the preacher preached the people waited, and God came. His power was felt in pulpit and pew. The services rendered by Bro. Park in an address before the League in the afternoon and a sermon at night were entirely satisfactory and highly appreciated by the large audiences who crowded the building to hear him. A gracious revival followed the sermon at night. Many backslidden church members pledged to lead better lives and sinners demonstrated their purpose to forsake sin and start upon a better life. In building and furnishing the church, our people have wrought well. Especially do our women and girls deserve credit for the beautiful pulpit, chancel, chairs, and carpet, earned and procured by them. The labors of former pastors, in advancing both spiritual and material things, still abide here. Special mention is made of the untiring effort and unflagging energy and zeal of Bro. P. Jaco, who saw the laying of the foundation and erection of the building to a readiness for the paint. In other parts of our circuit and in other departments of church work we feel that some degree of success is being attained. Our congregations are large at every place, interest good, and the membership developing in zeal and consecration. Finances well up and the prospect of full collections good. We are to soon enter upon our revival season. How much depends upon the efforts of preachers and people in this very important work!"

CHILDREN'S DAY AT ETHEL.

Children's Day, at Ethel, May 23, was a glorious success. The church was filled to overflowing. The church was elaborately decorated.

Rev. J. F. McClellan offered the opening prayer. The service of song was appropriate and well rendered. The address by the superintendent, Mr. W. W. Worthy, on Sunday-schools, was well delivered, entertaining, and instructive.

Recitations, declamations and essays were given by the following persons: Miss Ophelia McKneely, Miss Lucille Sale, Miss Aurelia Dobrowolski, Master John Forbes, Miss May Heitzler, Mr. Joe Young, Malvern McKneely, Ella McCarstle, Annie Miller, Annette Dobrowolski, Nonie Kemp, Joana Taylor, Joe Brown, Lizzie McKneely, Hattie Powell, Mary Pond, and Lillian Whiteman.

Rev. J. F. McClellan entertained the audience with an encouraging talk. A collection was taken amounting to five dollars and five cents.

Great credit is due Mr. and Mrs. Worthy, Mrs. McKneely, and Miss Mary Pond for their untiring energy and zealous interest in training the children and superintending the decorations.

In Memoriam of Rev. R. S. Woodward,

WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE IN MERIDIAN, APRIL 10, 1897.

TO CENTRAL CHURCH.

BRETHREN: Another soldier of the cross has furled his banner and crossed over the river. Bro. Woodward, long a Methodist preacher in the Alabama and Mississippi Conferences, and late pastor of this church, is no more among men. He fought the good fight, accomplished the will of the Master, and has gone to receive a crown in glory! We recognize that the church has lost a strong advocate, the community a good man and citizen, his family a faithful husband and loving father; and while we mourn with them, we rejoice that our brother has gone home.

As Bro. Woodward grew older in years, his faith grew stronger, and his experiences brighter, and when the summons came he was ready to meet his God whom he loved and served so well. A grand life, a triumphant death! Blessed are they who die in the Lord! Our profound sorrow and tender sympathy are with the loved ones in this sad hour of grief. May God keep them and us 'till we all shall meet again!

There is a story of an abbot who coveted a piece of ground. The owner consented to lease it to the abbot for one crop only. The abbot sowed acorns, a crop which took three hundred years to ripen. Jeroboam's one sowing mortgaged the new kingdom for evil through all its history. Satan begs for one crop only, and then sows seeds whose harvest will fill all the life to the end. We do not know what we are doing when we start a wrong thing.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

Woman's Work

Is never done, and it is especially wearing and wearisome to those whose blood is impure and unfit properly to sustain the wasting of nerve, muscle and tissue. The only remedy for tired, weak, nervous women is in building up by taking a good nerve tonic, blood purifier and vitalizer like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Death Pulls the Trigger.

A man doesn't have to pull the trigger himself in order to commit suicide. He doesn't even need a gun or any kind of weapon. All he need do is work hard and at the same time neglect his health. Death will do the rest. Men nowadays are all in a hurry. They bolt their food, and get indigestion and torpid liver. The blood gets impure. When the blood is impure, sooner or later something will "smash." The smash will be at the weakest and most overworked point. In a marshy country it will probably be malaria and chills. A working man will probably have a bilious attack. A clerk or bookkeeper will have deadly consumption. A business, or professional man, nervous prostration or exhaustion.

It isn't hard to prevent or cure these diseases if the right remedy is taken at the right time. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes the appetite keen, digestion and assimilation perfect, the liver active, the blood pure and the nerves steady and strong. It drives out all disease germs. It makes rich, red blood, firm flesh, solid muscle and healthy nerve-fiber. It cures malaria and bilious attacks. It cures nervous prostration and exhaustion. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption, bronchial, throat and kindred affections. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser contains the letters of thousands who have been cured.

"I have been one of your many patients, by taking Dr. Pierce's medicines," writes Mrs. Perlin Cook, of 140 W. 3d St., Covington, Ky. "Your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' have saved my life when it was despaired of."

Send 21 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., for a paper-covered copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser;—cloth binding ten cents extra. A whole medical library in one 1000-page volume.

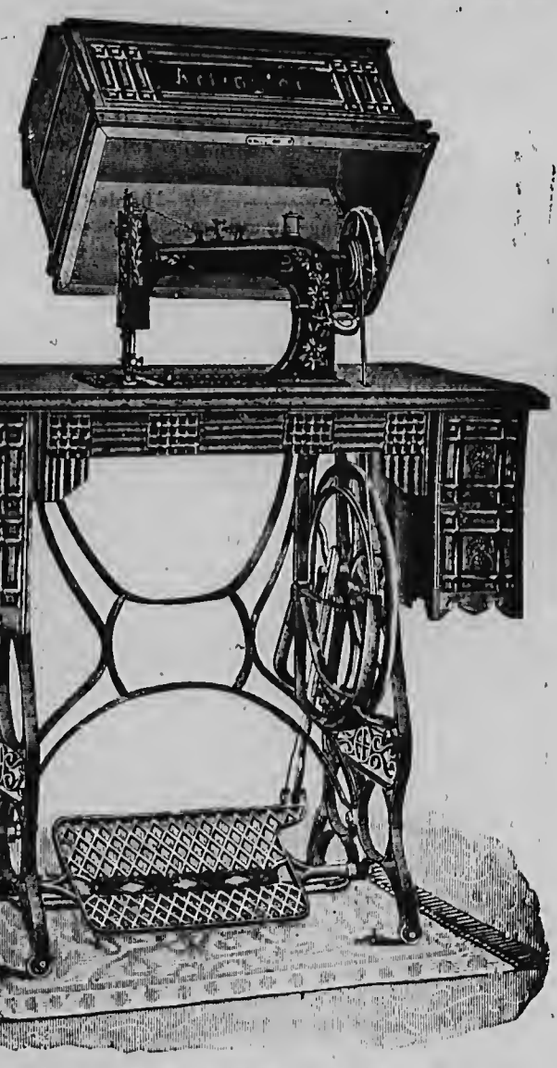
Our Machine Offer.

New Improved High-Arm "Arlington B" Self-Threading Sewing Machine.



A recorded certificate of warranty for 10 years accompanies each machine. The "Arlington B" is complete in every detail, combining all modern and late improvements, such as automatic bobbin winder, self-threading shuttle, self-setting needle, upper spring tension, etc.

The "Arlington B" self-threading sewing machine has a large high-arm, its mechanical appearance is perfect, its adjustment is absolute, positive take up, convenient foot-rest, with the best style furniture, either oak or walnut; in addition to which each machine is furnished with the best steel combination attachments free, as follows: One tucker, one foot ruffler, one set of plain hemmers (five different widths up to seven-eighths of an inch), one binder, one shirring plate and one under-braider, packed in a handsome velvet lined case. It is also furnished with one foot hemmer, one screw driver, one wrench, one oil can with oil, one gauge, one package of needles, six bobbins and one instruction book.

THE HEAD is strong and substantial; has large space under the arm for handling bulky goods, is finely japanned, and protected by a hard finish. Has so few bearings and friction points that it is easily oiled and kept clean.

NEEDLE BAR is round, with adjustable bearings polished and fitted, insuring great wear, and can run a long time without oiling. It has a slack dip motion, relieving the strain upon the thread when the shuttle is passing through the loop. Using the adjustable take-up, controlling the threads perfectly on all grades of work.

IMPROVED AUTOMATIC BOBBIN WINDER which is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is an impossibility. So simple that a child can easily operate it. This valuable attachment renders possible a perfect control of shuttle tension.

SELF-THREADING—THE "ARLINGTON B" is self-threading, requiring no change from light to heavy work. Uses double thread, and makes the lock stitch.

THE NEEDLE is the same as used on the New Home machine, and is self-setting both as to height and position with reference to shuttle, with short blade and long shank, insuring great strength; finely polished.

SELF-THREADING SHUTTLE—A perfect steel cylinder shuttle with delicate and perfect tension, open at one end to allow the bobbin to be inserted without disposing any of the parts; runs loose in the shell without spring centre or point bearings, thus insuring an even tension; can be threaded in the dark, and easily understood.

LOOSE PULLEY for winding the bobbin without running the machine requires no change or adjustment, nor is it necessary to remove the work from the machine.

PARTS SUBJECT TO WEAR are made of the finest steel, case hardened, light and noiseless, and are very durable.

"In all eternity no tone can be so sweet
As where man's heart with God in unison doth beat."

The best way to cure douht is to go to work vigoronsly for God and hnmanity.

It costs hnt little to speak a kind word, hut who can measnre the good results thereof?

A religion without joy is like a flower without beauty or perfume; nobody cares to have it.

The greatest blessing yon can pray for is that state of heart in which you can say cheerfnlly at all times, Thy will, O God, be done.

Let a man resolve and determine that he will advance, and the first step of advancement is already made.—Samuel Smlie.

It is a part of my religion to look well after the cheerfnlnesses of life and let the dismals shift for themselves.—Lonisa M. Alcott.

The true test of civilization is not the census, nor the size of cities, nor the crops, hut the kind of man that the country tnrns ont.—Emerson.

A cold, heartless man will never make friends; but a warm, tender, sympathetic heart, like a magnet, will draw others to itself.—Selected.

It can not be that the people shonld grow in grace unless they give themselves to reading. A reading people will always be a knowing people.—John Wesley.

As a delicate flower does not unfold its petals in a frosty atmosphere, so the Bible does not unfold its beauties in an atmosphere of contentious debate.—Selected.

Some people are in the habit of saying, "Give the devil his dues," who probably have not thonght of what the language implies. If he had his dues, perhaps he would have them.

Let us be content to do little, if God sets us at little tasks. It is hnt pride and self-will which says, "Give me something hnge to fight, and I shonld enjoy that; bnt why make me sweep the dust?"—Charles Kingsley.

The fact that we are not living to snit other people is no evidence that we are living wrong; hut, then, the fact that we are living to snit ourselves is no evidonce that we are living right.—Baltimore Advocate.

In the condnct of life habits count for more than maxims, because habit is a living maxim, become flesh and instinct. To reform one's maxims is nothing; it is bnt to change the title of the book. To learn new habits is everything, for it is to reach the snbstance of life. Life is bnt a tissue of habits.—Amiel.

The Closing of the Schools.

The season for the closing of the schools and colleges has arrived, and in a few weeks more all our institutions of learning, save the Summer schools, will have ceased their operations. Thousands of children and youths of both sexes are now reveling in temporary freedom from the lessons and the routine of school life, while hundreds more, who, for many months, have been off at school or college, are joyful beyond measure at being home again. Some are the proud possessors of hard-earned diplomas, and are eager to test their lances in the great battle of life.

The home-coming of the boys and girls from school after months of separation from loved ones is a glad occasion. How happy is such a family reunion! Who can measure the joy of a mother's heart as she presses her long-absent children once more to her bosom! With what pride the father notes the progress son or daughter has made while at college! How light-hearted and merry are the young folks over the prospect of spending a long vacation with parents and friends, and of being free from the restraints of the school-room! Hundreds of tired teachers, too, are no less glad at the coming of a season of rest for over-strained nerves and weary brains.

The Snmmer vacation gives a much-needed opportunity to teachers and pupils for recreation and rest. There is sound sense in the old saying that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." Young people, not having attained their full development, are less able to endure without injury protracted mental and physical effort than are older persons. Many who toil year after year without stopping to rest would be vastly benefited if now and then they would take a short respite. The need of occasional relaxation is too plain for argument.

It is a fact nnqnestioned that those enjoy a vacation most, be they students or business men, who labor hardest. Many a student neither needs nor deserves a vacation because he has spent the session in dawdling and shirking instead of doing honest work. The same is true of every workman who is afraid of becoming tired.

The vacation will be spent in a multitude of ways. Not all, we are sorry to say, will spend it profitably. Some will employ it in reading and study; some in doing manual labor; some in pleasure seeking, and some in idleness.

It is a sad fact that many young people on getting ont of the school-room abandon themselves to pleasure and selfishness, seeming to think that they have an exclnsive right to enjoyment, and paying small heed to the wishes and rights of others. A little thonghtfulness would save them from unfortunate mistakes, and their friends from wounds and heart-burnings. Whether toiling or resting, we should never be forgetful of the rights and feelings of others, or of the fact that onr condnct can not escape observation. The boy or the girl, who, dnring vacation, is unobliging and selfish, however bright he or she may be, will make a bad impression. The student who in his native place assumes lofty airs of snperiority will soon find himself disliked and without influence. What a pity that a little learning should turn the heads of so many promising youths and render them disagreeable, when if they could be divested of conceit, their influence and usefulness would be incalculable. Unpretentious merit is always admired, and is sure to win in the end.

To aim at nothing bnt fun and frolic is the surest way to become unhappy and discontented. A time of rest and indulgence is a time of special temptation and danger. No collegian who spends his vacation in uninterrupted pleasure-seeking and idleness will return to college without regrets and misgivings. Nothing so soon causes the mental and spiritnal powers to rust as does inactivity. We would not have our young friends become as sober as judges, nor would we advise them to renounce recreation, bnt we do say that in connection with their enjoyment and fnn-making something profitable and useful should be attempted. Reading should not all be fiction. Talk shonld not all be frivolous. Rest should not all be idleness. If the young men and women who are now at home temporarily will only open their eyes, they will see abundant opportunities for service and usefulness. The fact that they have been off to college has a tendency to make them leaders in the communities in which they have been brought up. Younger brothers and sisters look up to them. Fond parents dote on them. Their pastors count on them for service in the Sunday-school and the Epworth League. They should not disappoint those expectations. How great is the sorrow of parents, who, having scrimped themselves in order to send son or daughter to school, receive no words of thankful appreciation, and whose sacrifices are taken as a matter of course. It ought to be remembered that in many cases the father and mother never know the joy and rest of a vacation.

A story is told of a certain young prince who was extremely discontented and unhappy. Though he had almost everything heart could wish for, still he was miserable. His parents and attendants did all they could to make life pleasant for him, but in vain. At last his father, in despair, advertised that he would give a fabulous sum to the man who would cure his son of his malady. A number of persons came and attempted a cure, but to no purpose. Finally an unknown man came with a simple, but, as it proved, effectual remedy for which he said he would make no charge. The king was incredulous, but the man was given a chance to test his power. So, taking the prince aside, he whispered something in his ear, and then went his way. The prince followed his directions, and became the happiest boy in the kingdom. The mysterious secret which the stranger had communicated to the prince was this: "Do a kindness to some one every day." If our young friends and older ones, too, will follow this prescription, both during vacation and afterward, happiness is sure to result.

Some collegians seem to regard manual labor as degrading. Any form of education that fosters such a notion is not only defective, bnt positively injurious. The South is to-day suffering greatly from the prevalence in former days of just such a notion. Christ himself was a son of toil, and by his blessed example has forever dignified manual labor. A Senior (or even a Sophomore) ought not to think himself too polished and intellectual to swing an axe, or hoe, or do other such work that may be needed about home.

All honor to the young collegian who, adjusting himself to circumstances, on arriving at home, goes between the plow handles, enters the work-shop, or teaches a Summer school, in order that he may not be a burden to his self-sacrificing parents. The college maiden who, instead of running hither and thither in pursuit of pleasure, sets to work to lighten some of mother's burdens, though she may not have as much fun as some of her companions, will experience a glow of happiness not found at merry-making.

We wish all our young friends a glad, profitable and restful vacation, and we trust that when it is over they will have no vain regrets, no reproaches of conscience, and that they will return to school or enter upon their life-work with appetites keenly whetted for knowledge.

Commencement Day at Millsaps College.

BY REV. M. M. BLACK.

Tuesday, June 8, was commencement day for the class of '97, and a bright and beautiful day it was. The closing exercises took place at an early hour, so as to give opportunity to any who wished to do so to hear the address of Dr. Bolling at the Belhaven commencement.

After the opening prayer by Dr. Hunnicutt, the audience was treated to two splendid orations by representatives chosen by the faculty from the Senior class. The first speaker was Mr. W. B. Jones, who handled his subject, "Woman in the South Since the War," in an easy, forceful, and masterly way. Mr. George B. Power then followed in a splendid oration on "Poetry in Its Ennobling Influence on Man." Both speakers reflected no little credit upon themselves as well as upon their alma mater, and the committee of judges had considerable difficulty in awarding the prize offered. Mr. J. C. Hardy, the representative from the Law Department, was to have delivered an oration on "Conformity to Law Essential to Progress," but he and the other members of his class had to be at Raymond on that day to stand an examination before Chancellor Coun.

Next came the Baccalaureate address by President Murrah, which, though brief, was elegant, stately, and impressive. He urged upon the young men about to receive their diplomas the importance of being practical, reminding them that nothing can take the place of hard common sense, and quoted Ruskin as saying that one of the most essential elements in education is "the ability to know where we are." "No greater reproach," he remarked, "can be laid upon you than the charge that you are behind the times." He admonished them that they had better not be too far in advance of the times, if they did not want to suffer persecution. He also said: "You are going out into a great world, but it is not a perfect world. Have a mission in life and fulfill it."

The degree of Bachelor of Arts was then conferred upon six young gentlemen as follows: L. E. Alford, W. W. Catching, W. H. Fitz Hugh, W. B. Jones, D. G. McLaurin, G. B. Power. One young man, Monroe Pointer, received the degree of Bachelor of Science.

Next in order was the presentation of the medals, a feature of commencement exercises of never-failing interest. This pleasant duty was discharged by Dr. H. M. DuBose in his usual inimitable and charming manner. The awards were as follows: Scholarship medal in the Preparatory Department, H. G. Brabston; Millsaps medal for declamation, M. H. Brown; Gunning medal for Scripture reading, W. O. Sadler; Faculty Scholarship medal in Collegiate Department, A. G. Hilzini; Oscar Kearney Andrews medal for oratory, J. H. Holloman; Galloway-Lamar medal for debate, W. E. M. Brogan; Ligon medal for oratory, George B. Power; Jones medal for improvement in penmanship, J. H. Holloman.

Bishop Galloway then rose and made a few concluding remarks in behalf of the Board of Trustees. "The session just closed," he said, "has been the most successful in the history of the college." He referred to the absence of the members of the Senior law class, "who," he remarked, "ought to have been here to-day." "Why they are not present you all know full well." He was applauded to the echo when he said: "We propose to make lawyers, not by statute, but on merit." He deprecated the spirit of hostility exhibited by a certain educational institution, and said: "We shall ever strive to maintain and exhibit a policy of friendliness towards all other colleges in the State." He cordially thanked the citizens of Jackson for their deep interest in and hearty support of Millsaps College, observing that usually the people where a college is located are its severest critics.

The moral tone of the student body during the session just closed has been most excellent. No changes were made in the faculty. Prof. J. P. Hanner was elected to the full professorship of Modern Languages. The next session will begin Sept. 15.

The new Science Hall shows up to great advantage, and is admirably adapted to its purpose.

The professor of Latin and Greek during his year in Europe made a fine collection of interesting curios. He has on exhibition in the college over 150 rare Greek and Roman coins, some of them dating back to the era before Christ, specimens of pottery of the Homeric age, marbles from Rome, a number of fac-simile impressions of ancient and curious inscriptions, and also 300 photographs, embracing every classical ruin in Greece and Rome.

We were surprised to see so few brethren from the Mississippi Conference in attendance upon the exercises. The brethren from North Mississippi seemed to be in the majority.

We all live on far lower levels of vitality and of joy than we need to do. We linger in the misty and oppressive valleys when we might be climbing the sunlit hills. God puts into our hands the Book of Life, bright on every page with open secrets, and we suffer it to drop out of our hands unread.—Canon Farrar.

The Mississippi Chautauqua.

The third annual session of the Mississippi Chautauqua, domiciled at Crystal Springs, will begin June 28, and will last four weeks. Among the celebrities who will occupy the platform are the distinguished Baptist divine, Dr. Henson, of Chicago, Miss Isom, of Oxford; Dr. Alfred A. Wright, of Boston, and the great temperance orator, L. J. Beauchamp. The programme is said to be a very fine one.

The South Mississippi Peabody Normal will be held during the session of the Chautauqua Assembly. The faculty of the Normal comprises a number of distinguished educators. The Normal and the Chautauqua do not conflict as to time, certain hours of the day being assigned to each. An artificial lake a mile in circumference now adorns the grounds, and furnishes recreation in the way of boating and fishing. Good board can be had at from $2.50 to $3 per week, while persons of Epicurean tastes can feast to their liking at New Orleans prices. It is said that about three hundred teachers will be present. The Normal will be greatly advantageous to teachers. The attendance upon the Assembly promises to be in excess of any previous year. Reduced rates will be given by the railroads.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

During the past two months this writer has neither been idle or triflingly employed, but constantly in the field and on the wing—only two days at home. Twenty-seven churches in eighteen pastoral charges have been visited. Three Preachers' Meetings, two District Conferences, the State Epworth League Conference and Grenada Collegiate Institute commencement have been attended. Much house-to-house visitation has been done, and many new acquaintances have been made and old ones renewed. Not a few sermons and addresses have been delivered and many good books and papers circulated.

Most of these services were rendered in the rural regions off the railroads and outside the towns, as Bros. Morehead, Langley, Savage, Braswell, Rook, Jaco, Allen, Klein, et al, can testify. These brethren, and others that might be mentioned by name, know how to use and co-operate with a fellow-laborer for mutual good and the promotion of the work.

I had the pleasure of participating in Children's Day exercises at Lewisburg, Pleasant Hill circuit, Eudora, Nesbitt circuit, and Paris, Paris circuit—all of which were very good. The published program was rendered in full at each place, except the substitution of two songs at Paris by which no harm was done to the service. This was as it should be in every case. Nothing can be substituted for the studiously prepared program that will answer the purpose contemplated so well as it does.

Reports of the observance of Children's Day are very gratifying. More schools have observed the day, and the collections are better than ever before. Let not this good work cease until the children of all our congregations have enjoyed the privileges and blessings thus provided for them.

I regretted my inability to be with the brethren of Winona district in their Conference at Acona, there being another one in session at the same time. The same state of things exists this week. How I long to be with the brethren of Aberdeen district at Houston, but I can not divide myself between that place and Pickens—only in spirit. I trust they are having a profitable meeting.

I hope to be at Baldwin and Artesia. Shall have to forego the pleasure of Greenville and Water Valley; but hereby and now I tender greetings to the beloved brethren and yoke-fellows of each district and hope to have a representative at each Conference.

Rev. J. T. Howell, our dear brother at West, has the prayers and sympathy of the entire Conference in his serious affliction. We hope that he may soon be restored to health and to his loved employ.

We are glad to note the convalescence of Bro. J. Ritchey at Winona.

Bro. J. Jo Bowen is in ill health. He is now resting at Castallan Springs, and we hope and pray that he may soon be restored to wonted health and vigor.

Bro. McIntosh is evangelizing in Missouri just now. He has planned a Summer campaign in our Conference which will doubtless result in great good. G. W. BACHMAN.

June 11, 1897.

P. S.—Durant District Conference is in session at Pickens. Most of the pastors and a goodly number of laymen are present, and we anticipate a profitable meeting. G. W. B.

If we were careful not to say of another in his absence what we would not tell him to his face there would be a great deal less talking, and the world would be just as well off.—Baltimore Advocate.

Epworth League Convention.

The Epworth League Convention, in Toronto this Snmmer, will be the greatest gathering of Methodists that the world ever saw. There will be not less than 20,000 persons present, representing the vigor and manhood of the church, gathered from the four quarters of the world. It will be the occasion of meeting some of the men who are now shaping the course of the church, and some of those who are laboring in the dark lands of the earth. Aside from the profit of the convention, there is much profit in the travel, the refreshment that will come to those who go. The following inducements are offered by the railroads: One fare for the round trip, and thirty days limit to the ticket. The shortest line connecting your home and Toronto will fix the rate for that point, and you have the selection of the way you wish to go.

The following arrangements have been made for a party leaving New Orleans, July 13: The round trip ticket, $33.70; limit, thirty days. The party will leave New Orleans, Tuesday, July 13, at 9 A. M., via the L. C. R. R.; Jackson, Miss., 1:58 P. M.; Fulton, 11:50 P. M.; Louisville, Ky., 8:23 A. M., Wednesday, and arrive at Cincinnati 11:55 A. M. Leave Cincinnati, via the C. H. and D. R. R., at 1:00 P. M.; Toledo, 6:40 P. M., and arrive at Detroit, 8:40 P. M. Leave Detroit, via the C. P. R. R., at 11:15 P. M., and arrive at Toronto, Thnrsday, 8:15 A. M. Time on the way, less than forty-eight hours. The return trip will be across Lake Ontario to Point Niagara by steamor, to the Falls, to Buffalo, thence by steamer to Cleveland and Toledo; C. H. and D. to Cincinnati, and via the L. C. R. R. to New Orleans. There will be stop-over privileges at the principal points. Persons coming over the S. P. R. R. will have time to connect with the I. C., Tuesday morning. Those who come over the T. P. R. R. should time their trip so as to arrive in New Orleans, Monday evening. Sleepers can be arranged for in New Orleans, or en route. Sleeper from New Orleans to Cincinnati, $5; from Memphis to Cincinnati, $3; from Detroit to Toronto, $2; from Memphis to Cincinnati, and from Detroit to Toronto, will cover the night time on the trip.

Board while in Toronto will cost, in private families, $1 to $1.50 per day; in hotels, $2 to $3 per day. Two dollars per day will cover the necessary expenses en route, aside from sleeper. A ten days' trip can be made for $65.

Cure Catarrh in Summer.

Rev. J. W. Blosser, M. D., who has devoted twenty-one years to the study of Catarrh, says that Snmmer is the best time to make a speedy and thorough cure. He has discovered a remedy which is smoked in a pipe, but contains no tobacco, and cures the worst cases permanently. He will mail a three days' trial treatment free to any sufferer who will address Dr. J. M. Blosser & Son, 11, 12 and 13 Grant Building, Atlanta, Ga.

Enterprise District Conference.

The Enterprise District Conference will convene at Laurel, Thursday, July 8, at 9 A. M. The opening sermon will be preached, Thursday, at 11 o'clock, by Rev. C. D. Cecil. Friday morning will be devoted to Sunday-school interests. Superintendents and other Sunday-school workers are invited to be present.

We shall be glad to have the W. F. M. Society and P. and H. M. Society represented.

The Examining Committees are as follows:

For Liconse to Preach and Admission on Trial—H. E. Partridge, C. D. Cecil, W. J. Ferguson.

For Deacon's and Elder's Orders—J. T. Nicholson, J. D. Crymes, W. J. Dawson.

Epworth League Echoes.

BY REV. THOMAS H. CLIFFORD.

The postoffice address of Dr. W. E. Willmott, is 37 Shuter street, Toronto, Canada—and not "37 State street," as stated in "Epworth League Echoes" last week. We think the printer will find the mistake is his, and not ours. Let every Leagner get the correct address of the secretary to whom they must send the twenty-five cents for "souvenir programme" and "official badge." Send to Dr. W. E. Willmott, 37 Shuter street, Toronto, Canada.

On Saturday, June 5, we had the pleasure of attending a delightful picnic given by the members of the Hermanville Epworth League. It was held near Clark's Lake in a beautiful grove about five miles from Hermanville. Several of the senior members had reached the spot very early in the morning, and when we arrived they were found to be enthusiastically engaged in piscatorial pursuits. A sufficient number of the finny tribe was secured to furnish "quantum sufficit" for every Leagner on the ground. A slight glance at the heavily laden tables indicated, however, that a feast had been provided without reckoning the fish. Of course, Bro. A. D. Miller, the faithful and efficient pastor, was present. He believes in the League and in the young people, and says "he knows the Hermanville Epworth League is the best in the State." The young people insisted that we address them relative to the work of the League. Accordingly and forthwith we proceeded beneath the bending arch of the azure sky to tell of some of the benefits to be derived from the organization of the League. We are under many obligations to Bro. Jno. F. Weeks and Bro. W. A. Fife for transportation to and from Port Gibson behind their well-bred and well-trained roadsters. During our recent visit in Claiborne county we were informed that at the last election held in that section prominent Jews voted the "dry ticket." We learned further that one of the strongest articles written for prohibition from a financial standpoint was written by a Jew. And this leads us to quote the following, from the Baltimore Christian Advocate, concerning the Georgia State League Conference recently held in Atlanta: "The wildest enthusiasm was aroused under the terrible arraignment of the liquor traffic, made by Rev. George Stuart. His speech was awfully terrific, and almost swept the thousands of hearers off their feet. It will bear fruit all over the State." Sound the death-knell—"The saloon must go."

Money Made in a Minute.

I have not made less than $16.00 any day while selling Centrifugal Ice Cream Freezers. Anyone should make from $5 to $8 a day selling cream, and from $7 to $10 selling freezers, as it is such a wonder, there is always a crowd wanting cream. You can freeze cream elegantly in one minute, and that astonishes people so they all want to taste it, and then many of them buy freezers, as the cream is smooth and perfectly frozen. Every freezer is guaranteed to freeze cream perfectly in one minute. Anyone can sell ice cream and the freezer sells itself. My sister makes from $10 to $15 a day. W. H. Baird & Co., Dept 246, Sta. A, Pittsburg, Pa., will mail you full particulars free, so you can go to work and make lots of money anywhere, as with one freezer you can make a hundred gallons of cream a day, or if you wish, they will hire you on liberal terms.

Notice.

As it is my purpose to spend a part of my Summer vacation in travelling in the interest of Millsaps College, I ask pastors and presiding elders in the two Mississippi Conferences to open the way for me to do this work to advantage. A prompt response to this notice will be appreciated. J. A. MOORE.

Notice.

All persons expecting to attend the Jackson District Conference at Flora, July 8-11, will please notify me by July 1. J. G. CAMMACK.

To Pastors of the Mississippi Conference.

The General Sunday-school Board at its recent annual meeting directed as follows:

All funds collected on Children's Day shall be forwarded by the pastor to the treasurer of Conference Sunday-school Board, and he in turn forward ten per cent. of aggregate to treasurer of General Sunday-school Board, and ten per cent. to treasurer of General Board of Education.

This is plain enough. It says that the Children's Day collection is to be "forwarded," not "brought up to Conference."

Furthermore, in order that our Board might have funds through the Winter and Spring for supplying needy schools, our treasurer obtained permission after our report at the last Conference to retain the $205.39 due the General Board, promising to pay it after the Children's Day fund came in this May. He needs money for this purpose now, and pastors are neglecting their duty in this matter. In some Conferences the Sunday-schools Boards are taking extreme measures to force pastors to attend to this. Is it not enough to say, Please, please, please? Send to Rev. H. P. Lewis, treasurer, Carthage, Miss.

By order of the Board.

H. G. HAWKINS, Secretary.

Notice.

At the last annual meeting of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That each of our pastors be requested to preach in the interest of the P. and H. M. Society, and take up a collection in each of his pastoral charges on or before the first Sunday in July, and forward same to Mrs. T. B. Holloman, Natchez, Miss.

One hundred and twenty-one preachers have been notified of the above resolution, and appealed to for their co-operation. Before passing this resolution we realized the collections and burdens now upon the church, but having struggled, planned and worked for three years, and not our Conference expenses necessary to carry on the work without drawing on the regular dues (which go to help needy parsonages), we have reached the point where it becomes necessary to call upon the church to lift the burden that has been borne by a few. If each brother will send from twenty-five cents to $2 from his people before the second Sunday in July, it will enable us to forward the work more successfully.

Centenary College.

At the recent meeting of the alumni of Centenary College, it was determined by them to endow a chair in the college. A fair sum was subscribed by members present for that purpose. This is but the beginning. We call upon the alumni who may see this notice to send their subscriptions to Dr. C. W. Carter, Jackson, La., or to the treasurer of the Alumni Association. Let us all give liberally and cheerfully. Let our friends help in this good cause.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-sixth annual Camp Meeting at Seashore will open (D. V. on Wednesday evening, July 14, next, and continue for about eight days.

Arrangements have been made for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit this delightful spot. A handsome and commodious two-story lodging-house—Keller Lodge—has been erected and comfortably furnished for visitors, in addition to the other accommodations supplied by the trustees.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 23, inclusive, and be good to return on until August 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. All trains will stop at the camp grounds from July 5 to 24, inclusive.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of 1,400 feet; fanned by the refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico. The sea-bathing afforded is unsurpassed by any resort on the coast. A fine artesian well supplies the grounds with excellent drinking water, which is now "piped" over the entire encampment. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure and exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued and overheated visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the camp meeting should address W. B. Thomson, New Orleans, chairman Lodging Committee. Questions concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.; Dr. M. F. Tucker, Mobile, or J. H. Lakin, Montgomery, Ala.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge. Board will be furnished them at the restaurant at half rate.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

IN THE ORGAN LINE

No competition with us is possible, as we have the BEST to be had.

PHILIP WERLEIN, Lim., 614-616 Canal, New Orleans, La

"Everything in the Music Line at Werlein's," is an adage.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists; price, fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet both sent free by mail. Mention the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The publisher of this paper guarantees the genuineness of this offer.

Are Your Biscuits Like Door-Knobs?

Probably you are not to blame for it. It may be that you use a poor grade of flour. If you are tired of tough bread and hard biscuit, why not try our Igleheart's Swan's Down brand. Every sack will give satisfaction. No two ways about it.

SOME TIME.

BY EUGENE FIELD.

Last night, my darling, as you slept,
I thought I heard you sigh,
And to your little crib I crept,
And watched a space thereby;
Then, bending down, I kissed your brow—
For, O I love you so—
You are too young to know it now,
But some time you shall know.

Some time, when in a darkened place,
When others come to weep,
Your eye shall see a weary face
Calm in eternal sleep,
The speechless lips, the wrinkled brow,
The patient smile may show.
You are too young to know it now,
But some time you shall know.

Look backward, then, into the years,
And see me here to-night—
See, O my darling! how my tears
Are falling as I write;
And feel once more upon your brow
This kiss of long ago—
You are too young to know it now,
But some time you shall know.

Wife and Mother.

BY MRS LILLIAN F. A. MAULSBY, Wife of Prof. D. L. Maulsby, of Tufts College.

There is one calling open alone to women, one profession no one but a woman can fill. Its possibilities can not be estimated, nor its compensation computed. It is the noblest, highest vocation that beckons women, and blest indeed is she who hears in unmistakable tones a call to enter it, and to assume its precious responsibilities with their far-reaching influence.

A tendency prevails with many, even with some who have themselves taken the sacred name of wife and mother, to feel exclusively the commonplace character of this existence, and to chafe under the harness of domestic toil and petty cares. No home-maker can deny a basis for this opinion. Often the mending-basket, the dish-pan, the daily meals, and the countless duties that make up the round of house-keeping, assume large proportions. The seamy side is apparent, the knots and ragged ends emphasize themselves, while the meaning of it all, the beautiful fact of domestic joy which these are all aiding to make, is well-nigh lost to sight.

I should like to be able to show that home life at its best is never commonplace, except as the sun and the moon, the flowers and birds, the glorious spring, are commonplace things. Like them it stands for large results, and she who would enter into its high duties should have large equipment. No education of hand, of head, or of soul, but will find its practice field somewhere along this path of marriage. That wife is the best helpmate who can complement on many sides her husband's nature, with its views and opinions, its character, its limitations.

The key-note of true marriage is together. We are told in the Apocrypha of a bridegroom who prayed on the night of his marriage: "Mercifully ordain that we may grow aged together!" Married life keyed to that note can never be commonplace. The loving wife finds reward for every toil and compensation, for every care in her husband's ever-deepening appreciation, and in the sense of mutual love whose bonds are ever more firmly knit as the years multiply and the experiences deepen of life together. Such guerdons come not from a commonplace realm; they are Heaven's best gifts.

When maternity, the crowning blessing of womanhood, adds its chain of new cares, deeper and more holy grows the significance of every moment and every act. "God could not be everywhere, and so he made mothers," said the Jew of old. The faithful mother is a constant exemplification of the essential truth of the ancient saying. God could not have a better deputy. To such a mother, whose rule and guide is truth, who remembers that what she is, not what she says or does, is the power for influence felt through her children and her children's children, God gives his own unique recompense. Her children, whose love has been her joy, looking back to her patience, her unselfishness, her sacrifices, her boundless love, and her truthfulness of character, will indeed arise and call her blessed.—Zion's Herald.

Sally, the Peacemaker.

Sally was a big black cat. She belonged to the butcher who kept a shop in the middle of the village. At one end of the village street lived a barber who owned a pointer dog, and at the other end a grocer who had a dog known as a setter.

Drs. Maybe and Mustbe.

You choose the old doctor before the young one. Why? Because you don't want to entrust your life to inexperienced hands. True, the young doctor may be experienced. But the old doctor must be. You take no chances with Dr. Maybe, when Dr. Mustbe is in reach. Same with medicines as with medicine makers — the long-tried remedy has your confidence. You prefer experience to experiment — when you are concerned. The new remedy may be good — but let somebody else prove it. The old remedy must be good — judged on its record of cures. Just one more reason for choosing AYER'S Sarsaparilla in preference to any other. It has been the standard household sarsaparilla for half a century. Its record inspires confidence — 50 years of cures. If others may be good, Ayer's Sarsaparilla must be. You take no chances when you take AYER'S Sarsaparilla.

One day these two men met at the butcher's, and their dogs met also. The latter began to scrape acquaintance, dog fashion. This did not prove mutually agreeable. One snapped and then the other snapped; and directly there was a dog fight, with the usual barks and yelps. The hub-bub brought the boys and men, who came running up from all directions to see the "fun," as they called it. The owners of the dogs, instead of pulling them apart in a decent manner, began to set them on, and to bet which would beat.

Meanwhile Sally was lying on a box in front of the store, basking in the sunshine, and she pricked up her ears as cats do when dogs come around. She had too much dignity to run, but she plainly disapproved of the dog fight. Perhaps she thought she would give those men and boys a good lesson. At all events, she did so in good style; she leaped into the middle of the fight, and clawed and spit and cuffed first one dog and then the other, until they stopped fighting and stared at her. Then, quick as a flash, she turned on the pointer so fiercely, and polished him off so completely, that he turned tail and cleared for home, never once looking back to see what was after him.

But Sally did not follow. She turned at once upon the setter, who stood looking on in sheer surprise, and he, having seen what she did to the pointer, took to his heels and made a straight track to his own end of the village. Then Sally reduced the size of her tail and took down the arch of her back, and deliberately returned to the box and lay down again in the sunshine.

The men and boys were thoroughly disgusted. If it had been a saloon instead of a butcher's shop where they met, they would most likely have gone in and got a drink and talked the matter over, and perhaps have gone to fighting about it, themselves. As it was, they bought their meat and followed their dogs home peacefully, wiser and, we hope, better men for the lesson taught them by Sally, the peacemaker.—The Banner.

Early Converted.

The brightest lights in the churches were converted in early life.

Adam Clarke, the commentator, was converted at four years of age. His influence will shine in the moral heavens while the sun shines in the natural heavens.

Alfred Cookman, the great revivalist, was converted at ten years of age. He will shine in the kingdom of God as the stars in the firmament of heaven forever and ever, and thousands will rise up in the judgment and called him blessed.

Isaac Watts, the great poet, was converted to Christ at the age of nine years. The influence of this great man of God, in tuning the golden harps, will be felt through the endless ages of eternity.

A Just Criticism.

A lady of sense and devotion recently listened to a sermon preached by a pastor of some local fame in a large western church. When asked for her opinion concerning the service and the sermon she said: "I was disappointed in the preacher. He was flippant, and used slang. He may have brains and literary gifts, but by his flippancy and his slangy expressions he lowers the standard which a minister of the gospel ought to maintain. I was neither fed nor edified." This criticism, made in candor and good temper, was sane and just, and may afford some ministers a warning, and others a mirror in which to view themselves as others see them. Cheap wit, tawdry rhetoric, and efforts to say pert, smart things in the pulpit may for a little while give a man notoriety, but they make the judicious grieve, they bring the man who uses these mistaken methods in due time into disrepute, they lower the standard which a right minded preacher ought to cherish, and they evince a shallowness of spirit and a mere superficial religiosity which betoken no promise of genuine growth or fruitfulness for the man or his work. A man of earnestness will avoid claptrap.—Central Advocate.

Laugh and Grow Fat.

Milk and merriment have much to do with the plump beauty of the babies. The woman who wants to round out her attenuated anatomy, fill up the hollows in her neck and face and grow musical dimples at her joints must be merry. Worry is wearing and aging. Cross people always look old. Fretting upsets the nervous system and deranges the digestive order. Tell a woman a piece of bad news at table, and she will be ill on the spot. Hurrying keeps people lean and ugly looking. Haste makes more waste than gain. It is better to miss an early train or lose an early worm or two than catch both and lose a sweet disposition. What does it matter if the new dress is a day late? Cultivate a supreme contempt for the little vexations, and laugh and grow fat.—New York World.

Canary Birds.

There is a very pleasing story told in one of the religious journals. A bright boy of South Carolina believes in missions, and believes in them so thoroughly that he must needs do something to help them on to success. He has thought out his plan, probably with the aid of some older head, but he has followed his own suggestion, and last year he sent $100 to the Southern Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, the proceeds of sales of canary birds which he raised himself. His heart ought to be light enough to sing merrily all the time.—Christian Observer.

Don't forget to say, "Good-morning!" and say it cheerfully, and with a smile; it will do you good, and do your friends good. There's a kind of inspiration in every "Good-morning" heartily spoken that helps to make hope fresher and work lighter. It seems really to make the morning good, and to be a prophecy of a good day to come after it. And if this be true of the "Good-morning," it is so also of kind, heartsome greetings; they cheer the discouraged, rest the tired one, somehow make the wheels of life run more smoothly. Be liberal with them, and let no morning pass that you do not help, at least, to brighten by your smiles and cheerful words.

You can't order remembrance out of the mind; and a wrong that was a wrong yesterday must be a wrong to-morrow.—W. M. Thackeray.

There is as much difference between knowledge and intelligence as there is between steel and iron ore, or between a silken fabric and a cocoon. Intelligence is merely raw material; knowledge is the finished product obtained by putting intelligence through the mental, moral and spiritual machinery. In these processes our own native and inherent powers impart new qualities to the raw material operated on, as well as refine it of its own impurities, and thereby render the product—knowledge—a part of our mental condition, and an inalienable possession. Intelligence, on the contrary, we merely hold by our memory; it may be forgotten, and it may be proved to be false and worthless.

The Christian Advocate has investigated and authenticated the following incident: "A large manufacturing establishment in the West, one Saturday, paid out about seven hundred dollars to its employees in new five dollar bills. On Monday about four hundred dollars in these bills was deposited in the local bank by saloon keepers. The employer comments that this does not prove that all his money was paid for liquor, as it is not known how much was received back in change, but it does seem to prove that the men who drink make it a rule to pay the saloon keeper before anyone else gets his pay. It brings out in a striking and unanswerable way the relation of the saloon to the industrial problem."—Christian Guide.

There is anguish in the recollection that we have not adequately appreciated the affection of those whom we have loved and lost.—Lord Beaconsfield.

HYGIENE.

Tilden.

One of the mysteries of his life was the prodigious mental activity and effectiveness in the presence of obstinate and persistent valetudinarianism. It was the triumph of mind and will over adverse physical conditions. Few men of rare ability or genius with the soundest health ever accomplish so much as Mr. Tilden, who never knew the advantages of firm health a day in his mature life. We marvel at his triumphs. In the presence of obstacles which would have discouraged most men, Mr. Tilden became a great lawyer. Few men had such insight into a case, and few were able to study it so exhaustively.

But Tilden was much more than a great lawyer. He was a politician from his youth; he dabbled in the science of statesmanship and made himself familiar with a wide range of intellectual, moral, natural and literary studies; he was a sort of universal scholar. There were few fields he had not entered. He was a great reader. Stanton's sketches were read at a single sitting. During the last two or three years of his life he employed a reader, who gives in an appendix the titles of eight hundred volumes gone through in this way. His private library, containing 15,000 volumes, held many rare books, with most of which he was familiar. The reader will be a little surprised at the biographer's statement that he composed with difficulty and made many revisions. The first draft he hardly ever allowed to go out. His great papers were written and re written again and again. On the smallest matter he was a tireless worker. Bright as were his intellectual parts, he could never have attained the marvelous results of which we have record in these volumes without the capacity for constant and severe application. Work, after all, is the key to his notable life.—Zion's Herald.
